The Essex County district attorney's office argued that a warning against self-incrimination was not necessary because the man stopped was only questioned, not arrested.

"To require the police to warn citizens of [constitutional] privilege in all encounters and all circumstances would severely hamper their ability to serve public safety," Assistant District Attorney S. Jane Haggerty wrote in a brief to the court.

A ruling by the court this month made it more difficult for prosecutors to use the results of police horizontal vision tests. Officers ask a suspected drunken driver to follow an object, such as pen, with his eyes. A suspect's inability to focus or jerky movements of eyes were used as evidence of being drunk.

The court ruled that to use those test results as evidence during trial, prosecutors must call an expert witness to explain the scientific basis for the test to the jury.

Prosecutors say that because of the number of drunken driving cases, it would be too expensive to hire experts, and they predict results of such tests are not likely to be used.

In 1994, the court ruled that a state law requiring judges to tell juries that defendants refused to take breath-analysis tests was unconstitutional because it made defendants testify against themselves.

The following year, the court said drivers can refuse to take such field sobriety tests as placing one foot in front of the other, and said juries should not be told of the refusal.

However, some rulings have favored prosecutors.

The court held that the results of blood-alcohol tests done at hospitals after an accident can be admitted as evidence if the tests were made for medical reasons, and the doctor is called as a witness during trial.

The court also rejected an argument that automatic suspensions of drivers licenses for refusing to take breath tests and later prosecution for drunken driving amount to being punished twice for the same crime.

Boston police investigate weekend rash of homocides

BOSTON (AP) — Days after President Clinton commended city officials for their anti-crime work, police were dealing with one of the bloodiest weekends in years — four killings in three days. Beginning Friday, a man was found fatally wounded with stab wounds, another man was fatally shot, a third man was beaten to death and police say the body of a fourth man was found in a duffel bag in a vacant lot.

The four deaths pushed Boston's number of homicides for the year from six to 10. Police were unable to explain the sudden rash of crimes, and said the violent weekend was unusual. It was the worst spate of killings since six people were slain on a single weekend in October 1992.

"The homicide rate is still real low," said Capt. Edward McNelley. "It has been low for a long time."

Last Wednesday, Clinton proposed a $495 million national campaign against juvenile crime, some of which is inspired by techniques used to fight youth crime in Boston. No juvenile has been killed by gunfire in the city in a year and a half. Clinton praised the city as a national model for cooperation among police, community leaders and residents.

Friday night, police found Garrett Marshall, 35, bleeding from multiple stab wounds about 6 p.m. on Castlegate Road in the city's Roxbury section. He was pronounced dead late Saturday at Boston Medical Center.

No arrests have been made.

Officers arrested Michael Jenner, 20, in connection with the fatal beating of Lee Thompson, 35, of Boston at about 2:20 a.m. Sunday on St. James Avenue. Thompson was pronounced dead at New England Medical Center.

Join the Protest Against Parking Fee Increases!
Student Union Ballroom
12 NOON
Wednesday, February 26, 1997
The University Administration is proposing yet another fee increase to take more money out of your pockets!!
Come to the RALLY to stop it!!!

This initiative is supported by the Graduate Student Senate, the Student Government Association, and the workers of the UMass Community.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Aquatic vegetation
Leafless trees seen here reflected off the campus pond near the Fine Arts Center Gallery.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
1/2 PRICE
THURSDAYS
Starting Thursday February 27, 1997
Students place a classified on Thursdays for only 10c !!!
Call the Collegian Classified Staff at 545-3500
Visit our Campus Center Concourse newsstand, or come down to our office in the basement!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Abmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Hello, Dolly!

Seema Gangatirkar

Picture it:

Armies of genetically identical sheep grazing peacefully in pastures, unaware that their very existence it on the sci-fi side of reproduction.

The first, in what could be dozens of genetically engineered livestock, is a sheep named Dolly. She owes her genetic heritage to an anonymous sheep, who provided the DNA from tissue taken from its udder.

The man who bears responsibility for Dolly's existence is Dr. Ian Wilmut, a 52-year-old embryologist from the Roslin Institute in Edinburgh.

Wilmut took the tissue and an unfertilized egg from another sheep. After removing the DNA-containing nucleus from the egg, Wilmut fused the tissue cell to the unfertilized egg. The combination of cell and egg eventually developed into an embryo. The embryo was then transferred to a surrogate mother sheep and the embryo then developed normally.

Seven months ago, Dolly was born. She is, in all senses, genetically identical to the donor sheep.

Cloning animals with desirable traits, is not a new idea. But this is the first time that a mammal has been cloned. Before, scientists had to content themselves with genetically- identical tadpoles, but now — now they have a sheep. The possibilities are endless.

By isolating those traits which are desirable in an animal, farmers can significantly improve their chances of having a herd of high milk-producing cows or a barn full of meaty pigs. At the same time, scientists warn that if the right virus sweeps through a herd, the entire population may be wiped out.

For a moment, ignore the possibility of a virus.

Instead concentrate on reproduction — the normal way.

Reproducing oneself is important to every species of animal. Healthy and strong offspring are the most desirable.

And keep in mind that reproduction — in the conventional way you're all familiar with — is fraught with uncertainty.

With the new advances in genetics, the uncertainty can be eliminated. You could pick and choose the characteristics that appeal to you and you could stamp out undesirable traits.

There are genetic diseases, like cystic fibrosis, to contend with. With genetic testing and engineering, the possibility of being born with a debilitating disease like cystic fibrosis can be eradicated.

Or if the sex of your child matters to you, genetic engineering can take care of that problem too. If seven boys are too many for you and you are ready for a girl, that possibility can now be addressed.

Genetic engineering can take care of the nitty-gritty of reproduction. Imagine, you no longer have to check out your significant others to make sure that they have the traits you're looking for. With all wild abandon, you can now mate with anyone and know your offspring will have the genetic material you considered desirable.

It sounds all good, doesn't it?

In some ways yes, but in most ways no.

The whole issue of genetically engineering human beings is a bit touchy. For instance, creating ourselves can lead to definite ideas on what genetic traits are superior to others.

We've already seen times in this century, where entire groups of people have been targeted for elimination, because of their genetic heritage. Jews and gypsies were among the victims of Hitler's Holocaust. And today, you only have to glance at the front page of any major newspaper to learn about "ethnic cleansing" in the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda.

Is that what we want? Are genetically similar human beings what we, as a population, are aiming for?

The answer is no.

Genetic engineering, when used to help people is a good thing. When it is used to eradicate disease or fix birth defects, it's a good thing.

When used to promote ideas of genetic superiority, it's a bad thing.

And while most people don't believe in the idea of cloning animals, keep it mind that most times we as human beings go too far, we make mistakes. It only takes one success to open the door for the misuse of technology.

Creating life is wonderful, provided you keep in mind why you are creating that life. Genetic engineering in many ways is a gift and what Wilmut did is truly significant.

But it makes you wonder, how is Wilmut going to explain the birds and bees to Dolly?

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

More than just a diploma

Mark McGrath

Oh how things can change over the course of a few decades.

In 1966, more than 80 percent of students entering their freshman year in college said that "developing a meaningful philosophy for life" was an essential or very important part of the college experience.

Now, that number has fallen to about 40 percent.

These statistics come from a study conducted by the American Council on Education and the University of California, Los Angeles who questioned nine million freshmen on 1,500 different campuses across the country over the course of the last three decades.

According to the numbers, more than half of the students currently entering college think that finding a meaningful life is not very important. Instead, a vast majority seek the hallowed halls of learning as a way of becoming "very well off financially."

I realize that times aren't as prosperous as they were in the 1960s, and that the idea of not being able to find a job weighs heavily on the mind of many a modern day student, but it breaks my heart to hear that education for education's sake may have passed us by.

It is repeated over and over again in high schools across America that a college education is a must if a person would like to do anything with his or her life, and it seems that many students have taken those words to heart. People come to school because society forces them. For most, there exists no other option. Despite the fact that a student may or may not wish to think complicated thoughts and stretch the limits of their imagination, they will show up every semester because it's their only option.

As a result, schools like UMass are loaded with "students" who will spend four years of their life and up to $60,000 doing as little as is required to get their hands on that sacred piece of paper called a diploma. In many cases they are merely taking up space on this campus in exchange for the security of knowing that they might receive an entry-level job somewhere in Corporate America if they happen to be lucky.

Students who are here solely because they have to be seem especially attracted to UMass. First of all, it is inexpensive when compared with universities of its size and quality throughout the state. Secondly, its standards are lower than most other comparable colleges in the area, and therefore will be more willing to accept a student who has the potential of being a waste of space. Thirdly, the reputation ZooMass has received over the years lures those wastes of space who would also like to be wastes of brain cells.

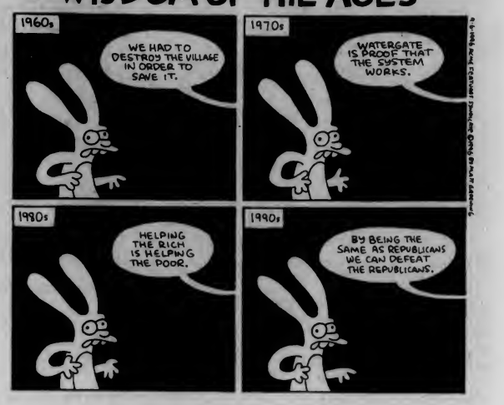
The abundance of these students at UMass is a problem. Students who are just along for the ride dilute and, in some cases, cancel out the efforts of other more driven students to achieve the lofty goals of education for the sake of understanding and making sense of our world.

Our University is currently trying to drive up its academic standards, but year in and year out is faced with an applicant pool full of underachievers and second and third-tier scholars who lack the abilities and/or desire to make any real difference.

My most annoying pet peeve is the defeatist attitude of a large portion of the UMass community. These people seem to have resigned themselves to the very same mediocrity at which they perceive their school, when in reality, UMass is an institution of much higher standard than they are willing to acknowledge.

Education represents more than the diploma you'll be receiving upon graduation. It represents an opportunity for unlimited growth, especially at UMass, where there are thousands of directions in which one can grow. So let's have a little bit of pride here.

I have always contended that UMass is a high quality institution, and that anyone who is willing to put in the necessary sweat and perseverance can reach any goal here, and I still believe that is true. We have a wonderful university, but it would be more wonderful if each and every student were more concerned with "developing a meaningful philosophy for life" instead of becoming "very well off financially."



Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Students' Rights

Stacey Shackford

In the 1960s, students were concerned with problems that tended to be visible and readily susceptible to direct action (Vietnam War and blatant racial discrimination for example). In that time, students were able to influence policy makers into changing positions on both the war and civil rights. However, as some of the original student activist leaders graduated, it became obvious that students wanted to do good works but lacked the organizational structure to translate idealism into longer term constructive action.

In 1972, a group of students decided to pool their resources to create a student-directed, student-funded nonpartisan organization that conducted research, advocacy, organizing, lobbying and educational and media campaigns on a wide range of issues such as consumer rights, social justice, environmental protection, political reform, energy policy and government responsibility.

The students elected their leaders to a student board of directors to hire professional organizers, researchers and lobbyists to support their efforts and to provide continuity and a permanent base. Students selected the projects they worked on as well as the tactics and strategies used.

This organization continues today, 25 years later, as Massachusetts Student Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG). MASSPIRG is an organization made up of over 20 chapters in colleges and universities across the state, the only organized statewide student movement.

The one underlying principle is that students are citizens and that their education should include experience in recognizing and solving society's shortfalls. It is democratic in philosophy and operation. Students vote democratically to form a PIRG on campus and to tax themselves to support it. Student members then democratically elect PIRG leaders, and those leaders democratically choose the issues on which the PIRG will work.

Every two years, this democratic process is repeated. In a few weeks, students across campus will be given the opportunity to vote on whether they want to keep the UMass PIRG chapter on campus funded by the $5 waivable fee on their tuition bill.

I urge all students to utilize this right to vote on an organization started by students, for students, continuously run by students. It is important that students have the right to organize in such a way with the opportunity to work on issues important to them, without the pressure of funding by outside sources and/or administrators who may influence the work they do. Moreover, to have access to a group that is not only an RSO, but instead an organized statewide movement, is a unique opportunity to tap into a student power network.

Students often underestimate their own power. As Ralph Nader once pointed out, "If intimidated by university trustees who deny their democratic or educational rights, they must look for ways to challenge the trustees, uncover their conflicts of interest, and appeal for alumni and community support. They should realize that they can be the statewide experts on an issue, and that collectively they can put together a successful information and legislative campaign... Some people forget that students have been key organizers or backers of the major American social movements of the past two decades..."

It is important that students recognize their power and get involved, whether it be through the UMass chapter of Mass Student PIRG, or SCERA's parking campaign, or any one of the active ALANA organizations. Also I would encourage, once again, students to embrace the opportunity to vote in March to keep up the 25-year-old MASSPIRG tradition which allows students to organize and truly make a substantial difference.

Stacey Shackford is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Don't degrade to entertain

To the Editor:

The Daily Collegian is a paper that aims to keep the UMass community aware of the world and local news events, sports and entertainment. The Collegian prints often amusing and always informative articles and editorials, which serve to expose students to various perspectives on important issues. My one concern, however, rests on what many would say is a trivial issue. I question the purpose of printing cartoons that, although they "entertain," only succeed in doing so because they insult, degrade and humiliate others. I am referring specifically to the cartoon "University2," though there have been other rather ignorant and insulting pieces printed in the past. In an area as progressive as the Valley, I wonder why such cartoons — mostly about various body parts — are considered "light" and funny. Isn't it time we discovered a new way to laugh, without degrading anyone? I am sure there is someone reading this who disagrees with me. To those who see no harm in making jokes at the expense of women, then please read things such as Playboy. This kind of material has no place in our college newspaper.

Elizabeth Barrett Ware

Go to the top

To the Editor:

I am absolutely outraged at Friday's (Feb. 21) version of "Leold." There is no need to slam Christianity and certainly no need to mock Jesus Christ by describing him as foaming at the mouth. You seem to have a personal problem with Christianity or perhaps God himself. This being the case, I suggest you leave it out of the face of the public, and take your problem to God and deal with it there.

Peter McKendree
mckendre@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

Sugar fiend

To the editor:

I am so pathetic — and greedy, too. All it takes for me to shift aside my beliefs that commercial ads do not belong in classrooms, and credit card companies should not solicit students on college campuses, is the all-powerful enticement of "free" gifts. I really do not need a plastic room basketball toy, or another travel coffee mug — but offer me, a cash- strapped, too-busy-to-eat student, a bag of M&Ms or Skittles and bang.

I stand there for five minutes filling out those stupid forms — and none too accurately — just to have that quick fix of those "melt in your mouth, not in your hand" morsels.

Such an amazing sucker am I. Why can't I just pass by the sign-up table, stand in a 15 minute ATM queue, and battle the Bluewall lines for a 12 ounce Java Jolt and one of those devilishly good peanut butter/chocolate chip cookies? I will leave this question for the psychologists of UMass.

I am sitting in my 12:20 class (excuse me, discussion section) eating those free (yeah right — I sold my soul for these babies) M&Ms, asking why... why am I so weak? It turns out that I got what I deserve — I just littered the floor with my brightly-colored sugar balls. Damn! I'll never win.

Trey Shores
Amherst

Anxious

To the Editor:

I would just like to commend you on your selection of Emma, or "Baby Spice," as your Spice Girl of the Week for the week just past. Good work, keep it up, I'm anxiously awaiting your selection next week.

Justin Varricchione
DRTYFRNK@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

A simple thanks

To the Editor:

On Tuesday, (Feb. 18) as I exited the library, my bookbag spilled its contents. The wind immediately scattered them furiously, while I stood there dumbfounded and in shock. My academic life was blowing away before my very eyes. Out of all the busy traffic, five people stopped and scattered to retrieve my papers. One by one, they handed over to me what they had collected with an empathetic smile. My life was saved, my heart soared. A simple, seemingly not newsworthy story, but it was the event of my week. Thanks — heartfelt — to you five people. You know who you are!

Chris Geiling
cgeiling@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

Arts & Living

Tuesday, February 25, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Folk singer Shawn Colvin plays an impressive set at Smith

By Amy Risley and Jamie Sinsheimer
Collegian Staff

SHAWN COLVIN
John M. Greene Hall at Smith College
Feb. 23

On Sunday night at John M. Greene Hall on the Smith College campus, Shawn Colvin played a fierce show with the help of guests Freedy Johnston and Patty Griffin. The show was sponsored by WRSI Radio, with a portion of the proceeds going to the Northampton Center for the Arts.

Among the older, sophisticated crowd were scatterlings of college students mostly there to enjoy Colvin. Although the audience was not particularly responsive to her opening acts, she was surely redeemed when she took the stage.

Opening the show was singer Patty Griffin, whose country-ish twangs and sultry voice were in part thrown away by microphone difficulties throughout two of the five songs of her set. During her short performance, she spoke to the audience in a soft, almost shy tone. Aside from the minor technical difficulties, Griffin's powerful singing awakened the crowd and prepared them for an outstanding evening.

Following Griffin was Freedy Johnston, a singer-songwriter whose style resembles that of Tom Petty on a bad day. The crowd was more responsive to him, probably because they were more familiar with his work. Eventually, the crowd grew tired of his repetitive chords and bland lyrics and, in short, stopped responding to him at all.

Johnston, who at one point forgot his own name, would have been much better off if he left his three-piece band at home and performed solo. In a hopeless blend of tragically similar songs, his generic sound left the crowd tired and eager for Colvin to take the stage.

Performing songs off his latest, critically acclaimed album, This Perfect World, and a few earlier songs, it seemed like an eternity passed before he was finished. One highlight of his set came when he performed "Bad Reputation" and the title song off his album, the only two songs worth listening to both on and off stage.

Following a brief intermission, it was on to Shawn Colvin, the empress of folk music. Colvin stormed the stage with her five-piece band and broke out into a loud version of "Sunny Came Home," the first track off of her most recent album A Few Small Repairs. Following in the footsteps of the ground she laid, Colvin continued with the second song off the album, the rhythmic "Get Out Of This House," a song she once claimed to have written about the anxiety she experienced after purchasing her first home.

After the two opening songs she finally spoke to the crowd, which was more than willing to speak back to her, screaming out titles of songs for her to play and proclaiming messages of love. Moving on with three gentle new songs, Colvin finally decided to delve into the past, the place that brought her to where she is now, appeasing her audience with some older tunes.

The older Colvin gets, the more her music seems to remain the same, a trademark which is both good and bad. She effectively stays true to her original established style. Of the old tunes she played, which mostly revolved around romances both lost and found, she played a few songs that were not about romance at all. One of these was a charming rendition of "You and the Mona Lisa," a song about the birth of her sister's first child.

Colvin's beautiful voice stood out above the other instruments which blended well enough to bring her music pleasantly together. The only thing missing from the show was an acoustic segment which would have focused more on her renowned guitar techniques.

As she was closing out the show, the audience became wild because she left the stage and didn't return soon enough for the encore. Returning solo, Colvin approached the piano and while comparing her stance to Tori Amos, sang a beautiful ballad in a pleasingly soft tone. She and her band then returned to their original positions and blessed the crowd with a generous three song encore.

COURTESY FRANK OCKENFELS

Folk Singer Shawn Colvin played Sunday night at Smith College.

Film Studies Program sponsors festival

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

MULTICULTURAL FILM FESTIVAL
Herter Auditorium
Feb 25 through April 30

The UMass Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies will be hosting their fourth annual film festival now through the end of April. This year's festival is entitled "Emigres, Exiles, and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema." The program offers an opportunity for innovative and independent filmmakers to have their films shown to the public. Many of the directors will also attend discussion groups to allow interested participants to learn more about the films and their contexts.

This year's festival will include 10 feature and documentary movies made on both 16mm film and video formats. The focus of the program is the examination of different cultures and the identities that are shared between them. Such issues include immigration, gender gaps, slavery and Third World economies. The films come from all across Europe and the United States, and will be screened both on the UMass campus and at Mt. Holyoke College and Amherst College.

The first film will be screened tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Merrill Auditorium at Amherst College. The documentary is called When Mother Comes Home for Christmas and is directed by Nilita Vachani. The film follows the experience of a housecleaner in Greece who returns one holiday to her home in Sri Lanka after eight years away. Class struggle and the global economy will be the major conflicts disscussed in Vachini's film. There will be an introduction by the director preceding the film.

On March 5, Herter Auditorium will host Latcho Drom, a French film by Tony Getlif. Described as "the ultimate road movie," the story follows the nomadic tribe of the Roma people from their origins in India westward through Europe and eventually Spain. The film will be introduced by Smith College theater professor Ellen Kaplan.

I Can't Sleep will be shown on March 12 at Gamble Auditorium at Mt. Holyoke College. Directed by Claire Denis, the film chronicles the stories of recent immigrants to Paris. The immigrants include a black drag queen, a Lithuanian actress and a West Indian musician and their experiences with alienation and dislocation.

UMass Communication professor Sut Jhally will introduce Gurinder Chadha's film Bhaji on the Beach. The film addresses the tensions between Asians and other minorities by representing the discoveries made by nine Asian women who span three generations. The screening is on March 26 in the Herter Auditorium.

On April 2, Halving the Bones, a film by Ruth Ozeki Lounsbury, will be screened at Herter Auditorium. The film tells the story of a half-Japenese filmmaker living in New York. Lounsbury recieves the partial remains of her deceased grandmother including a can of bones. The documentary follows Lounsbury's maternal family history from Japan to the United States. The introduction will be presented by UMass Communications professor Carolyn Anderson, and Lounsbury will be present.

Say Amen, Somebody is a documentary featuring prominent gospel artists. The film directed by George T. Nirenburg was the opening event at the 26th annual Black Musicians Conference. Sure to include memorable and inspiring performances by such artists as Willie Mae Ford, the O'Neal Twins, Thomas A. Dorsey and Sallie Martin. UMass professor of music Dr. Horace Clarence Boyer will introduce the film which will be screened on April 7 at Herter Auditorium.

On April 9 at Herter Auditorium, Autobiographical Reflections: Looking at Emigres/Exiles/Sojourners' Lives will be shown. This evening will include a collection of short films by graduate students and faculty members.

Macky Alston's film Family Name is a reflection by three contemporary families on the history of slavery in this country. The family's histories converged in the south over 100 years ago. The director is one such descendent and begins his film with his own story. Family Name was a prizewinner at this year's Sundance Film Festival and will be shown April 16 at Herter Auditorium. Macky Alston will be present for the screening.

The Italian film Lamerica directed by Gianni Amelio will be shown at Hampshire College's Franklin Patterson Hall at 4 p.m. In the tradition of his country's Neo-Realist style of filmmaking, Amelio tells the story of the political upheaval in Albania. The film is an inspiring tale of the ideal of freedom and will be introduced by Professor Eva Rueschmann.

The final film in the festival will be shown at Herter Auditorium on April 30. Frantz Fanon: Black Skin, White Mask is a biography by Isaac Julian. Julian's documentary consists of interviews with Fanon's friends and family, footage and readings by Fanon's work chronicling his life as a preeminent theorist of anti-colonial movements of this century.

For more information contact Catherine Portuges, Director of the Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies at 545-3695.

COURTESY INTERDEPARTMENTAL PROGRAM FOR FILM STUDIES

Halving the Bones is one of many films featured this year at the UMass Multicultural film festival.

Hey Kids!

I know you are all a bunch of opinionated, pretentious, know-it-all college students.

We at the Collegian Arts & Living desk want to give each and every one of you an opportunity to voice your so-called opinions.

Have you seen a nausea-inducing movie lately? How about a book that rocked your world?

Anybody interested in theater, books, art, film, music, or anything else that falls under the category of arts or living can find a niche in the Collegian.

Come on down to the Collegian newsroom at 113 Campus Center and speak with one of our friendly and courteous Arts and Living staffmembers. Do it today. You won't be disappointed.

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families
Wednesday, February 26, 1997
Room 804
6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass

I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?

If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call University Health Services Health Education at 577-5181 or General Medicine 2 at 577-5233

Put the world at your fingertips.

Software Engineering
Systems Engineering
Computer Design
Signal Processing
Electro-Optics
Image Processing

With Raytheon Electronic Systems, you'll create the technologies that define the future of tomorrow's world. You'll maximize your Engineering and Computer Science knowledge and make an impact when you join our team. We currently have over 350 opportunities available in the technical areas listed above.

Raytheon Electronic Systems will be visiting campus soon. To find out more about the complex challenges we have to offer, please contact the Career Placement Office to sign up for an interview.

For additional information, please see our homepage at: http://www.raytheon.com/res

Interested candidates who are unable to meet with us on campus may send a resume directly to: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Professional Staffing, M/S T28L2, 50 Apple Hill Drive, Tewksbury, MA 01876-0901. Fax: (508) 858-1163. E-mail: staffing@res.ray.com

U.S. citizenship may be required for some positions. Equal Opportunity Employer.

Raytheon Electronic Systems

The Huke Lau proudly invites you to the Grand Opening of New England's Finest Nouveau Dance Club
The Club Connection
Say hello and bring your friends to the newest and most exciting Dance Club in all of New England during it's Grand Opening Party
Thursday February 27th 9:30pm
Experience a state of the art intelligent light show and a mega mountain sound system with 20,000 WATTS of non stopping heart throbbing dance excitement. A European Flavor that needs to be experienced.
Huke Lau 705 Memorial Drive Chicopee Ma 413-543-5222 club CONNECTION

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Developing Nations

Tuesday,February 25, 1997

Welcome to the first Developing Nations page of the semester. I'm proud to carry on the long tradition of hard work and insight of the past Developing Nations Desks.

Here at the Developing Nations Desk, we have always tried to maintain the integral relationship between oppression of people of color in the United States and in the Third World. Due to recent events, we felt it only proper to devote a significant amount of the page to one of the great modern leaders of the Third World.

When Deng XiaoPing died, a flurry of American and Western journalists were quick to report him as a great leader who opened up China and created capitalistic reforms but at the same time, served as a dictator who ruled over China.

It is typical for Western journalists to describe leaders or governments of Third World countries, especially those out of favor with the United States government, as "dictators," or "rulers with iron fists." These words create images which advance the world view of Western nations, especially as regards the definition of human rights. The fact remains that Deng was a great ruler, who drastically improved the lives of hundreds of millions of Chinese.

I had a discussion with a student from China recently. He said that when Mao died at the official ruler, people were sad that their leader had died, "but with Deng's death," this student said, "he was almost closer to the people, their hearts really felt him. He really will be missed."

Other editorials which appear on this page include the continued effect of sanctions against Iraq. The World Health Organization issued a report in March of last year that an estimated 567,000 children have died in Iraq since 1991, as a result of the sanctions. Now almost a year later children under the age of 10 are still dying at a rate of 4,500 a month according to the Iraq Action Coalition. Articles on this page also include the African Diaspora and it's affect in the United States.

As Americans we must realize the role we play in continuing American and Western oppression in the Third World. As Americans of color, we must see that the very same government which oppresses here is oppressing our brothers and sisters in the Third World, and since we are privileged to live in a country where a majority of us do not have to worry about products of American intervention such as; sanctions which create hundreds of thousands of starving children, American trained death squads, prostitution camps to serve American soldiers, and countless other oppressive forces. It is therefore our duty to speak in favor of those who cannot.

We encourage anyone who is interested, to come write for the Developing Nations Desk at the Collegian.

— Lisa Chiu, Developing Nations

According to the Iraqi Action Coalition, due to the continued sanctions against Iraq, children under the age of 10 are dying at a rate of 4,500 per month. This statistic was quoted as of January, 1997.

Memoirs of an Iraqi

Syed Mohammed Ali Al-Rida Basrawi

As I sat by the banks of the Shatt-al-Arab (river that the Tigris and Euphrates join), the wind blew gently, soothing the broken heart, the torn hope, the shattered desire and an unwilling spirit. Al Jamhuriyya Al Iraqiya Al Arabiya (the Arab Republic of Iraq), today stood at its bleakest point in history. The birds flew in distress, as if they could sense the sorrow. How many tears were shed? How many women widowed? How many were made orphans. All in the name of Democracy and justice.

How the Shabab-al-Iraq (youth of Iraq) bled at Al Mutla, Basrah, Naiaf and Kerbala. How the women were dishonored in the heartland of purity.

The scent of the martyrs of the land of the two rivers, is strong in the air. The cries of a baby trapped and helpless, can be heard amongst the crashing waves. The date palms swaying in a distance, resemble the countless mothers, sisters, daughters and wives mourning their loved ones.

Where is my cousin Basim? Where is my uncle Qasim? Where is the Nur (light) of Umm-e-Basim (mother of Basim) eyes?

The fires have ceased, yet the heart smolders. The storm has passed, yet the sun refuses to shine. Traitors have thrived, while justice to the union is denied. The war is over, yet peace refuses to arrive. Children have died, yet food is denied.

While the victories of war are celebrated throughout the world, far away, a nation weeps in silence alone.

Syed Mohammed Ali Al-Rida Basrawi is a Collegian columnist

To the people of the world

This is the story that must be told of an Iraqi baby, not very old.

Lying in her crib one star lit night
How could she know of those planes in flight?

She lay there quietly touching her nose,
Watching her mobile, wiggling her toes,

Oohing and cooing, so sweetly is she,
Talking to someone, who could it be?

An angel is standing with her in the room.
The baby is smiling, unaware of her doom.

The crib starts to shake and the mobile goes round,
And suddenly comes a most deafening sound.

The ceiling drops in, in a sec ond or two...
On top of her crib so she ceases to coo.

No one knew how long she lay there
Who thought about it? Doesn't anyone care?

Is she alive? Is she dead? Is she in a.. pain?
Now that you mention it, who knows her name?

Her name is Amal. In English we say Hope.
Crushed between the rubble, her tiny fingers start to grope.

Where is mommy? I love her so dear
Come, get me mommy! It's dark in here!

I'm scared and I'm hungry and I can't see my feet.
There's blood in my mouth! I Give me something to eat!

Where is my daddy? Where's my big brother?
It hurts when I breathe! Where is my mother?!

How long have I been here? Is this just a dream?
I open my mouth, but I can't even scream.

That angel appears once again to my side,
This time with a tear I plead, why have I died?

Am I alone in my sufferings?
No, there are many others,
In our grief and our misery, we are sisters and brothers.

Who are we? I ask you... for what crime did we die?
They're throwing a party!
Doesn't anyone cry?!

Is it true? Am I nothing?! How could it be?
Don't they also have babies, just like me?

It is war they say, of which death is part.
How blind they've become, how hardened of heart.

Did someone say hero? To whom do they speak?
A victory claimed for killing the weak?!

Why are they happy? Why are they proud?
Don't they know that I'm cold in my burial shroud?!

No war has been won; No ifs, but, or maybe,
They've only killed babies!!!

— Courtesy of the Iraq Action Coalition

Deng XiaoPing, paramount leader of largest developing nation and citizen of the world

Lingyan Yang

The last two decades in the People's Republic of China can be called the Deng XiaoPing Era. It is an era of change. As China's paramount leader and the general architect of economic reforms and modernization, he led his people to turn the nation pragmatically from a starving Stalinist regime of 1.2 billion people into a rapidly growing economic superpower. The simplicity of his funeral contrasted to Mao Zedong's in 1976, when ideology dominated every inch of every citizen's daily life. Inconceivable two decades ago, mourning the death of the state leader is a matter of choice today, instead of a political procedure.

The living standard of average people may be the highest in one and a half centuries. Foreign relationships with nations including the United States have been widely normalized and developed based upon the terms of mutual interests way before the Cold War ended. As often agreed in the West, Mr. Deng's global vision was quite unmatched. Within the capacity of his political longevity, Mr. Deng firmly ensured that the young nation of China open her doors to the world, and the worlds open their arms to China.

Born on Aug. 22, 1904, in the Year of the Dragon, Deng died at 9:08 p.m. Beijing Time (9:08 a.m. U.S. Eastern Time) on Feb. 19, at the age of 93, according to the Chinese lunar calendar. From the rural village of Paifang in Sichuan Province to the Forbidden City in the heart of Beijing, the capital of power in China, where he died, the road he travelled and mapped was indeed long. He was eulogized by the country he served all his life as "a great Marxist, a great proletarian revolutionary, statesman, military strategist and diplomat." As short as five feet, his presence in contemporary Chinese history was no less towering than his predecessor, Mao Zedong, or the ancient sage kings who made history.

Mr. Deng was a master strategist in games of every sort: bridge, politics, warring, or international relations. Within the intricate Chinese politics, he was purged three times, in 1932, 1966 and 1976. Each time he fought back. He took every opportunity that history allowed, and turned each toward his advantage, or his party's, or his people's, or his country's.

His career spanned much of the turbulent 20th century in the history of modern China — from the colonial invasions of Western powers, the collapse of the last Emperor's Qing Dynasty, the eight–year long bitter battles against the Japanese invasion during World War II, the throat-cutting civil war with troops of Chiang Kai–shek's Nationalist Party, to the birth of China as an independent Third World nation on Oct. 1, 1949 — Deng outlived most of his enemies or opponents of old times or new.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

邓小平
沉痛悼念

Deng XiaoPing 1904-1997

Deng XiaoPing had no illusion about China or the world. He belonged to the first generation Chinese revolutionaries who fought for liberating their people from the darkness and backwardness of "half–feudalism and half–colonialism" throughout this century, and for establishing a national identity of China in the world of nations. All these started in 1920 when Mr. Deng boarded a ship to France at the age of 16 with 200 other students on a work study program to work in a factory. His first trip to the West changed his life. There, he befriended young Zhou Enlai, who recruited Deng, a Marxist. Zhou later became the first Chinese Premier and Deng's life–long political mentor. Deng came back to China a new young man.

Lingyan Yang

This is why the returning of Hong Kong to China on midnight on June 30 of this year is symbolically crucial. Mr. Deng was firmly determined about claiming the sovereignty of "The Pearl of the East," orchestrating the negotiation processes. The event will be a turning point in local as well as global histories and geography. It will end 155 years of British colonial rule as a result of the Nanking Treaty after the Opium Wars in 1842. It will end the colonial era of Western powers in East Asia. It will take the first step to accomplishing the mission for unity for the nation — a mission that Mao and his revolutionary generation started but could not finish. It will test the effectiveness of Deng's theory of "one country, two systems." In 1999, Macao will return to China from Portuguese colonial rule. These two returns will pave the way for more strategic negotiations between Beijing and Taipei across the strait. In Chinese history, unity of the kingdom has been an indispensable feature, mission and responsibility of a powerful emperor marking a prosperous and long–lasting dynasty. It was a regret that Mr. Deng will not be able to see that moment.

Mao Zedong often compared himself to and even scorned the first emperors of the most powerful dynasties throughout 3,000 years of Chinese history. Yet among his contemporaries, Mao considered only Deng as capable of the strategic vision, capability, leadership and extraordinary wisdom that were similar to his own. As early as 1957, Mao once remarked about Mr. Deng to Nikita S. Khrushchev, the Soviet leader: "Do you see that little man over there? He is very intelligent and has a great future ahead of him." Mao was certainly right.

On the other hand, Mr. Deng XiaoPing was not without contradictions. Though he was no cultist like Mao, in the last two decades, he still had to depend upon the ultimate individual power that he commanded, instead of a healthy system, to implement his agendas by having the final words in almost all the most important decisions.

While as Mao failed to select a successor capable of stabilizing the post–Mao political status quo, Deng carefully selected Jiang Zemin, and provided much support for a smooth transition. Yet Mr. Deng seemed to unlearn his position of authority when his authority is indispensable and unquestioned up to his death.

His initiation and implementation of economic reform was a bold negation of Mao's ideological extremism. His pragmatism is exemplified in his popular saying, "White cat or black cat, it is a good cat as long as it catches mice." However, for two decades it was impossible to draw a parallel of an equally rigorous or bold political reform. This may be because it would try to unlearn the privilege of the massive numbers of already privileged, who dominated the majority of his invincible human network.

Mr. Deng's relationship with intellectuals generated most controversy. He led the 1957 anti–rightists suppression of intellectuals. Yet before the formal normalization of Sino–U.S. relationship in 1979, he proposed and initiated scholarly and cultural exchanges between the two countries. He later was of course accused of standing behind the crack– down of the Pro–democratic movement in 1989. The official excuse was said to be "for the sake of economic stabilization." But to stabilize the economic development at the expense of human rights? The capitalist free market experiments might have continued, but the families of the victims might have lost all that they had. Truth only lies in the eyes of beholders.

Above all, Mr. Deng's theory of "building the socialism with Chinese characteristics" was marked by the difficult ideological correspondence between the political totalitarianism and the multiple systems of socialism, capitalism and postcolonialism. Such reluctance or incompleteness points to the limitation of his radical reforms or negations from within the structure. It was true though, that his negotiation or criticism of the past traditions was never to break from it completely, but to reform and revise it. Perhaps changes in Third World nations are complicated by historical reasons and thus take time. It is up to the third generation of Chinese leaders to renew or revise Deng's legacy by starting to complete this difficult negotiation between the economic basis and the ideological superstructure.

Resembling his political mentor and friend, Zhou Enlai, Mr. Deng, as insisted by his family, wished not to preserve his remains, but to cast his ashes to the sea. For some leaders in the theater of world politics, who were terrified by mortality, their statues can still be broken into pieces, durable memorials may still be torn down. And the guarding warrior–sculptures of ancient emperors, who died in their supreme power, can be stolen out of their tombs centuries later. History is for future generations to narrate.

The Deng legacy, together with the necessity of its negation in the Post–Deng era, would accompany his people to step into the 21st century — hopefully toward wealth, prosperity and crucially, democracy in China, peace and development in the world.

Lingyan Yang is a UMass graduate student.

A death in the family

Hussein Ibish

"It doesn't matter if a cat is black or white — so long as it catches the mice." —Deng XiaoPing, 1962

This most repeated quote from the late Chinese leader Deng XiaoPing is generally taken as representative of the pragmatism characterized in his political style. But it is also noteworthy for its striking use of an image of domesticity, a metaphor for political programs as tools to improve the living conditions in a nation — just as cats are commonly used to drive mice and from humble homes.

This metaphor, along with the many other invocations of domestic order he employed are, perhaps, the best indication of how Deng viewed his role as national leader and his relationship with the Chinese people.

During the years of reformation and the first three decades of communist government in China, Deng and his colleagues in the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) under the leadership of Mao Zedong, liberated China from centuries of foreign domination and disunity. Mao, in effect, erected the national edifice by creating modern China as an independent, sovereign power built on the foundational principles of nationalism and socialism.

The achievements of Mao can hardly be overstated, given that China was liberated, united, made self-sufficient and militarily secure in only a few decades. From Mao, Deng inherited a stable nation, but one still beset with massive problems of poverty and under-development. To these were added the challenges that all the Third World and socialist nations were facing in technological changes and the globalization of the world economy.

Deng addressed these challenges with a series of pragmatic innovations, including market reforms and other economic initiatives, non-ideological mice set loose on the vermin in the national home. Deng's success in combining rapid economic growth with continued socialism and national independence from western hegemony are unique in today's international scene.

The success of these reforms speaks for itself through the economic boom under way in China. But it is also attested to by a comparison to the "perestroika" induced misery and degradation of the former Soviet Union. Madeline Albright (what better example of vermin currently menaces the world?) openly spits in the face of cowering Russian leaders and tours Europe to extend the boundaries of an anti-Russian military alliance to the edges of Poland and beyond. In China, she speaks of improving relations.

His success in combining rapid economic growth with continued socialism and total independence from western hegemony is quite unique in the contemporary world.

It is within this context of success and achievement that Deng's "domestic" style of leadership emerges as all the more remarkable. One of the silliest cliches currently in vogue is to describe Mao and Deng as "emperors," (or even "red emperors"). And, in fact, Mao did affect an imperial style, consciously within Chinese historical traditions.

But Deng just as consciously broke with that tradition and all the trappings associated with it. Rather than emperor, he has seen his role as the homemaker, the head of the national household, a domestic patriarch.

Upon his assumption of power following the death of Mao, for example, Deng declined to take up residence in Zhongnanhi, the "forbidden city" where Chairman Mao held court. Instead, Deng moved his family into a relatively modest bungalow which was "comfortable but not stylish." Countless photos of Deng in the family living room, surrounded by his many children and grandchildren projected an image of domestic bliss. Newspapers reported that "Deng loves the hubbub of a big family. He especially loves children," and printed other evidence of Deng's cherished role as head of a happy family.

Deng vigilantly kept watch against any hints of a developing "cult of personality," and was always dubious about charismatic leadership. Deng was among the earliest and harshest critics within the CCP of Mao's personality cult and autocratic style. In power, Deng was careful to avoid falling into such a role himself, preferring to employ collective decision making structures.

Deng also refused most important titles, and in the final stages of his regime after his formal retirement in 1989, held only one official position in China — President of the All-China Bridge Association, reflecting his passion for card games, as well as his lack of grandiosity. Once again this low-key style served to create an image of Deng as a friendly, ordinary figure, a father in whose wise hands the national family placed its trust for leadership.

While remaining a very private person, the "domestic" leadership style gave Deng an image of intimacy and familiarity with the nation, reflected in a series of casual and affectionate slogans and banners greeting or praising him at public rallies, quite uncharacteristic of those designed for his predecessors. Some were as simple as "Hello XiaoPing."

This familiarity and affection was prompted in part by Deng's lack of pretention and simple lifestyle. Harrison Salisbury noted that "He acquired no villas at West Lake, no Fragrant Concubines, no fancy for lark's tongues or bear's paws." Writing in 1992, he observed "To the end of his days Deng XiaoPing never took on the emperor's clothes."

Even in death Deng has been careful to preserve his image as a simple man of the people without pretention or grandiosity. He has also used his death as a final occasion to instruct his people and lead by example.

In defiance of certain traditions, and according to Deng's expressed wishes, Deng's family sent a letter to the CCP instructing that Deng's funeral be kept simple and frugal; that there be no farewell ceremony for his remains; that a memorial might be held after a cremation featuring a casket decorated only with a CCP flag and a color photo of Deng; that no mourning hall would be established in his home; that Deng's corneas and organs be donated for medical research; and that his ashes be cast into the sea.

This kind of extraordinary gesture again underscores the "domestic" political style of Deng XiaoPing. Far from arranging a vast and elaborate funeral involving hysterical public displays of grief and veneration of the emperor's body, Deng chose to use the occasion to exemplify his materialist philosophy, egalitarian perspective, and commitment to and identification with the Chinese people.

Deng was an remarkable success as a caretaker and developer of the national home, the role he seems to have given himself. Throughout all his attributes and titles, quite uncharacteristic of those designed for his predecessors. Some were as simple as "Hello XiaoPing."

This familiarity and affection was prompted in part by Deng's lack of pretention and simple lifestyle. Harrison Salisbury noted that "He

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Honoring Deng XiaoPing

Tuesday, February 25, 1997

Biography of a Revolutionary

Shyamala Ivatury

On February 19,1997, the Chinese Communist Party announced "Comrade Deng passed away." As politicians and monied interests in the West nervously ponder the fate of their "investments in China," people the world over mourned the death of a great revolutionary leader.

Born in 1904, Deng XiaoPing's life spanned almost a century, from the last vestiges of the Manchu dynasty, through the communist revolution, to the People's Republic of China — the fastest growing economy in the world. Not just the man who liberalized China's economy, Deng XiaoPing is an extraordinary leader who has influenced almost all the historical events that have swept China this century. His life is a testament to a patriotism which valued serving people rather than vacuous symbolism.

He and a few of his comrades made the long journey deep in to the heart of China on foot. They had little experience in guerilla warfare, en route suffered bouts of scurvy, and were repeatedly attacked by bandits. In one such attack Deng almost died due to being stabbed by a bayonet.

In Guangxi, Deng earned the respect of the peasants as he organized them into small military units. Shortly thereafter, he had an army of over 8,000 poor peasants with little equipment. In "Lenin's Cave," Deng lectured his revolutionary troops on nation building, Marxist ideology, and military tactics. He encouraged the peasants to kill wealthy landlords and share the land among themselves. Deng wanted the peasants to realize that they were not fighting in vain and that they had stake in the future of the revolution. He felt that only if people had a material stake in the revolution that they would shed blood for the CPC.

Despite little formal military training, Deng XiaoPing was a key figure in the creation of the Red Army (later renamed the Peoples Liberation Army). Though outmanned and not equipped by Chiang Kaishek's forces, the Japanese Imperial Army, and the rest of their enemies, the Red Army finally succeeded in liberating the country in 1949. Its success lay in the patriotism, discipline, revolutionary zeal, self–sacrifice and dedication of its units. It was Deng's belief that the strength of the revolution depended upon the conduct of the revolutionary army and its cadres.

The Red Army was organized in an completely egalitarian manner with little distinction between the ordinary soldiers and leaders. Officers wore the same uniform as the soldiers. They had no insignias, ranks, titles or practice of saluting. They distributed the limited supplies equally, and shared food from the same rice bowl.

Rape and robbery was strictly prohibited and often resulted in the death penalty. Peasants were paid for food and other services with money and IOUs. A military achievement of particular note was the Red Army's heroic "Long March," their six–thousand mile journey on foot into the hinterland as they were chased by Chiang Kaishek's forces in 1934.

The Red Army enjoyed unprecedented popularity. Army members were loved and revered by the Chinese people due to their impeccable moral conduct. The revolutionary spirit, conduct and actions the Red Army reflected, above all, the personality of one leader — Deng XiaoPing.

During the "Long March" Mao was voted into power within the CPC and the Red Army, while Deng XiaoPing became editor of their newspaper The Red Star.

Deng the nation builder

Deng XiaoPing played a key role in the industrial and economic development of China in the post–revolutionary era. Distrustful of the United States after the Korean War, Mao sought to protect China's critical defense industry by moving it inland to Sichuan, Deng's native province. Deng was summoned to Beijing as Mao's point–person entrusted with the construction of this "Third Line of Defense."

"The project, much larger than Roosevelt's "New Deal" and Stalin's first "Five Year Plan," occupied much of Deng's time and concentration. He spent many months probing the Sichuan mountains and caverns searching for places to hide the factories. The project was completed with speed, efficiency and imagination. Deng's work won him great praise from the Chinese people including Chairman Mao, who said "Deng XiaoPing is capable, and whether it is politics or military affairs, he does it all right."

Within a few years he became the fourth most important man in China after Mao, Zhou, and Lei Shaoqi. Much of the day to day running of the country was left to Deng and Lei Shaoqi, particularly after the disastrous economic consequences of Mao's ill–conceived "Great Leap Forward."

But in the mid sixties, during the "Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution," Deng was ousted by Mao and his supporters on grounds of being a "capitalist roader." At the age of 65 he was arrested and forced to work in a machine shop. He and his family were the targets of repression by the Red Guards. There was mass shoutings against them, and they were spat upon and reviled.

Despite this gratuitous humiliation, Deng agreed to return to government in the service of his country, when he was politically rehabilitated by Zhou Enlai in 1971.

During the Cultural revolution, industrial production had declined, the all important railways had ground to a halt, and most of the qualified professionals from hospitals, universities, factories and schools had been arrested and removed by the Red Guards. Deng spent the next few years rebuilding the infrastructure of the nation. By 1975, both agricultural and industrial output had risen.

Nontheless, after Mao's death, Deng was yet again politically rebuked and arrested. He finally succeeded in coming to power in the late seventies, enacting a series of brilliant economic reforms which sparked a period of unprecedented productivity and growth still under way.

In less than 50 years after independence, China has been transformed from a poor feudal country to a first rate dynamic global economic power. In China, there have been significant increases in life expectancies, literacy and birth rates, and the standards of living of its citizens. All citizens enjoy comprehensive health care and education. Furthermore, after Deng's reforms, prosperity is returning to China as well.

The accounts of his life currently being presented in the Western media focus on Deng either as a great economic reformer or a notorious violator of human rights, but as we have seen Comrade Deng XiaoPing was in fact one of the great revolutionary heroes of this century.

Shyamala Ivatury is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY PEKOMAU PRESS

Deng XiaoPing helping with the planting of trees on February 12, 1979.

Africans & African Americans: a common destiny

Ekra Miezan

Africans and Africans in the Diaspora of the Americas and the Caribbean, are bound together in a common destiny at the inception of Western capitalist expansionism in the 15th century. 500 years ago, their ancestors were driven by the millions out of Africa, to erect the foundations of Western capitalism upon reflecting on this unprecedented and, certainly, most humiliating African tragedy, an old ex–slave, then living on the island of Saint Thomas, a U.S. territory, once remarked to a Puerto Rican friend, "The land [Africa] is still crying for, and never recovered from, the loss of the millions of its children driven out."

The land never recovered from the loss of millions of souls taken away from it. The injury was beyond repair. Weakened by this tragedy, the land could not offer a strong protection to its children who were not shipped overseas. The Africans were to suffer under Western colonialism as did their enslaved brothers and sisters in the Americas and Caribbean.

In nature, colonialism was tantamount to slavery, nothing but slavery. The only difference was geographical: the Western colonialists did not see the need to ship the Africans from the mainland to plantations and mines overseas. They needed the raw materials that Africa could bounteously provide to sustain the industrial revolution in the West that slavery had helped to launch. The Africans in the mainland were forced into slavery to provide these needed commodities. The Belgians in Congo, for instance, would burn entire African villages, mutilate men, women and children by cutting off their hands or feet, and decimate entire African populations if one African failed to pay taxes to, or produced rubber for, King Leopold II of Belgium: it was savagery beyond all understanding of civilized people.

Forced displacements of the African from their local lands to other areas of the continent were frequent. Their land was taken away from them, and divided into European properties and plantations. Their internal economy was smashed into a colonial economy. They produced for the West, not for themselves. Africans were thrust into the world system of capitalism where they provided forced labor and raw materials to the West, and did not accumulate capital for themselves.

Africans and African Americans continue to share a common destiny in their present position in the world system of capitalism. Today, Africa remains a raw material provider to the West. The distribution of wealth in America, between African Americans and white Americans is unequal. On the average, African Americans are poorer than white Americans. More striking is the fact that the wealth of all African American businessmen combined is less than that of the two richest white American businessmen combined. Like a monopoly game, Africans and Africans in the Diaspora entered the capitalist race halfway, after receiving freedom from servitude. By then, that is, halfway in the capitalist race, Westerners had accumulated significant capital to dictate the course of that race. Isn't it startling that after 500 years of presence in the Western Hemisphere, African Americans have no control of the the immense wealth, in terms of raw materials coming out of their mother land into the West? Western companies are in control of the exploitation of valuable ores from Africa. Rarely, if ever, does one see a national diamond marketing chain owned by an African American. It can be quite revealing to seek the percentage of African Americans who own corporations that control the exploitation and exportation of raw materials from Africa to the West.

In the process of reflecting upon their history, Africans and African Americans should have a special cogitation to the gun. The gun was a curse, an element of destruction that sealed the fate of the Africans into subjugation 500 years ago. It was the gun that brought these ancestors into slavery. It was the gun that subdued the Africans into colonialism in the mainland. It was the gun that maintained the oppressive apartheid system for so long in South Africa.

Today, it is the inherited gun from colonial and other Western powers that has been a destabilizing force to the shaky and ready–to–explode social, economic, militaristic, and political system that the former colonialists handed to the Africans before departing from the land. And still, it is the gun that is prematurely sending African Americans by the thousands to the graveyard. The ghettoes, mired in socio–economic pathologies, have become civil war zones. African Americans are more likely to die from gun shots in their own neighborhoods than on battlefields outside the country. Africans and African descendants don't make guns, yet they buy them, wasting their hard–earned money, to destroy themselves. It is high time to reverse the course of this tragedy.

Another sad reality that Africans and their descendants abroad should understand is the phenomenon of prison. In the African social system, before capitalism, the concept of prison did not exist. The Africans understood that human beings were the most valuable assets of development. Prison, as a social control system, was brought to Africa by the colonial administrations.

Today, Africans have inherited this social invention and are diligently making good use of it. African policy makers should revamp the social system to avoid putting their own people away. Here, African Americans pollute the prison system they didn't create. The ancestors were not put in prison, but the descendants now are. It is time to embrace the ancestors' philosophy of social development, and learn to stay away from prison. One cannot develop while rotting in prison.

Ekra Miezan is a UMass graduate student.

The following is an excerpt from a talk delivered by Deng XiaoPing on June 30, 1984, with the Japanese delegation to the second session of the Council of Sino–Japanese non–governmental figures. It was called, Build socialism with Chinese characteristics.

Since the defeat of the Gang of Four and the convocation of the Third Plenary Session for the Party's Eleventh Central Committee, we have formulated the correct ideological, political and organizational lines as well as a series of principles and policies. What is the ideological line? To adhere to Marxism and to Marxist dialectical and historical materialism, or, in other words, to seek truth from facts as advocated by Comrade Mao Zedong. Adherence to Marxism is vital to China so is adherence to socialism. For more than a century since the Opium War, China was subjected to aggression and humiliation. It is because the Chinese people embraced Marxism and kept to the road leading from New Democracy to socialism that the Chinese revolution was victorious.

People may ask: If China had taken the capitalist instead of the socialist road, could the Chinese people have liberated themselves and could China have finally stood up? The Kuomintang took that road for more than 20 years and proved that It does not work. By contrast, the Chinese Communists, by adhering to Marxism and integrating Marxism with actual conditions in China in accordance with Mao Zedong thought, took their own road and succeeded in the revolution by encircling the cities from the countryside. Conversely, if we had not been Marxists, or if we had not integrated Marxism with Chinese conditions and followed our own road, China would have remained fragmented, with neither independence nor unity. China simply had to adhere to Marxism. If we had not fully believed in Marxism, the Chinese revolution would never have succeeded. That belief was the motive force. After the founding of the People's Republic, if we had taken the capitalist rather than the socialist road, we would not have ended the chaos in the country or changed its conditions — inflation, unstable prices, poverty and backwardness. We started from a backward past. There was virtually no industry for us to inherit from old China, and we did not have enough grain for food. Some people ask why we chose socialism. We answer that we had to, because capitalism would get China nowhere. We must solve the problems of feeding and employing the population and of reunifying China. That is why we have repeatedly declared that we shall adhere to Marxism and keep to the socialist road. But by Marxism we mean Marxism that is integrated with Chinese conditions, and by socialism we mean socialism that is tailored to Chinese conditions and has Chinese characteristics.

What is socialism and what is Marxism? We were not quite clear about this before. Marxism attaches utmost importance to developing the productive forces. We advocate communism. But what does that mean? It means the principle of from each according to his ability and to each according to his needs, which calls for highly developed productive forces and overwhelming material wealth. Therefore, the fundamental task for the socialist stage is to develop the productive forces. The superiority of the socialist system is demonstrated by faster and greater development of the productive forces than under the capitalist system. One of our shortcomings since the founding of the People's Republic was that we neglected the development of the productive forces. Socialism means eliminating poverty. Pauperism is not socialism, still less communism. The superiority of the socialist system lies above all in its ability to increasingly develop the productive forces and to improve the people's material and cultural life. The problem facing us now is how China, which is still backward, is to develop the productive forces and improve the people's living standards. This brings us back to the point of whether to continue on the socialist road or to stop and turn onto the capitalist road. The capitalist road can only enrich less than 10 percent of the Chinese population; It can never enrich the 90 percent. That is why we must adhere to socialism. The socialist principle of distribution is to each according to his work will not create an excessive gap in wealth. Consequently, no polarization will occur as our productive forces become developed over he next 20–30 years.

The minimum target of our four modernizations is to achieve a comparatively comfortable standard of living by the end of the century. I first mentioned this with former prime minister Masayoshi Ohira of Japan during his visit here in December 1979. By a comfortable standard we mean that per capita GNP will reach U.S. $800. That is a low level for we, but it is really ambitious for us. China has a population of 1 billion now and it will reach 1.2 billion by then. If, when the GNP reaches $1000 billion, we applied the capitalist principle of distribution, it would not amount to much and could not help to eliminate poverty and backwardness. Less than 10 percent of the population would enjoy a better life, while over 90 percent remained in poverty. But the socialist principle of distribution can enable all the people to become relatively comfortable. This is why we want to uphold socialism. Without socialism, China can never achieve that goal.

However, only talking about this is not enough. The present world is ever changing. China's past backwardness was due to its closed door policy. After the founding of the People's Republic, we were blockaded by others, and so the country remained closed to some extent, which created difficulties for us. Some "Left" policies and the Cultural Revolution in particular were disastrous for us. In short, the experience of the past 30 years or more proves that a closed– door policy would hinder construction and inhibit development. Therefore, the ideological line formulated at the Third Plenary Session of the Party's Eleventh Central Committee is to adhere to the principles of integrating Marxism with Chinese conditions, seeking truth from facts, linking theory with practice and proceeding from reality. In other words, the line is to adhere to the essence of Comrade Mao Zedong's thought. Our political line focuses on the four modernizations, on continuing to develop the productive forces. Nothing short of a world war would make us release our grip on this essential point. Even should world war break out, we would engage in reconstruction after the war. A closed–door policy would not help construction. There are two kinds of exclusion: one is directed against other countries; the other is directed against China itself, with one region or department closing its doors to the others. We are suggesting that we should develop a little faster — just a little, because it would be unrealistic to go too fast. To do this, we have to invigorate the domestic economy and open up to the outside. We must first of all solve the problem of the countryside, which contains 80 percent of the population into full play. We adopted this policy at the end of 1978, and after several years in operation it has produced the desired results.

The recent Second Session of the Sixth National People's Congress decided to shift the focus of reform from the countryside to the cities. The urban reform includes not only industry and commerce by science, education and all other professions as well. In short, we shall continue the reform at home. As for our relations with foreign countries, we shall pursue the policy of opening up still wider to the outside world. We have opened 14 medium and large coastal cities. We welcome foreign investment and advanced techniques. Management is also a kind of technique. Will they undermine our socialism? Not likely, because the socialist economy is our mainstay. Our socialist economic base is so huge that it can absorb tens and hundreds of billions of dollars' worth of foreign funds without shaking the socialist foundation. Besides, we adhere to the socialist principle of distribution and do not tolerate economic polarization. Thus, foreign investment will doubtless serve as a major supplement to the building of socialism in our country. And as things stand now, this supplement is indispensable. Naturally some problems will arise in the wake of foreign investment. But the negative aspects are far less significant than the positive use we can make of it to accelerate our development. It may entail a slight risk, but not much.

Well, those are our plans. We shall accumulate experience and try new solutions as new problems arise. In general, we believe the road we have chosen — building socialism with Chinese characteristics — is the right one and will work. We have followed this road for five and a half years and have achieved satisfactory results. We want to quadruple China's GNP by the end of the century. The pace of development has so far exceeded our projections. And so I can tell our friend that we are even more confident now.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chinese leader Deng XiaoPing accompanied by his daughter Deng Nan, takes a tour of a park in Shenzhen in 1992.

COURTESY MANDALAY ENTERTAINMENT

Depp and Pacino — together at last

Two of America's finest actors are finally featured together in Mike Newell's new gangster film Donnie Brasco which opens this weekend.

A salad lover's guide to finding the best mesclun in the U.S.

By George Bria
Associated Press

POUND RIDGE, N.Y. — What's in a name? A lot of gardening excitement — and money — when the name is "mesclun."

Ten years ago, few Americans had ever heard of this southern French mixture of young salad greens. Then it started showing up in voguish restaurants and specialty seed catalogs. Now, mesclun gets featured in garden catalogs and produce shelves everywhere. So meteorfc is its rise, that the National Garden Bureau, a nonprofit research organization funded by seed companies, has made 1997 the Year of Mesclun.

Like many gardeners, I'm tempted by few supermarket vegetable offerings, but mesclun generally turns out unusually fresh and tasty. It saves a lot of garden work to buy it at the store. The price, however, can stun you; it was $2.56 for a plastic-encased third of a pound this week in my area. A sizable head of lettuce, by contrast, ranged from 89 cents to 99 cents.

The cost, of course, reflects the care required to pick young leaves of lettuces, endives, mustards, chicories, cresses, parsleys, arugula, dandelions and other greens that make up a mesclun package. If money is a consideration, you can save, of course, by growing these things in your own garden. A packet of 700 mixed seeds costs as little as $1.50.

What's more, in the garden you can create your own mesclun from individual plantings of various greens. A simple mesclun salad might consist of early cuttings of vari-colored lettuces, beet greens, spinach, arugula and broad-leaf parsley. You can add a little Asian spin with tat choi leaves. You yourself decide what you want in it.

Gardeners, in fact, had been mixing young salad greens ages before U.S. commercial growers in the 1980s had a smart marketing idea and imported the name mesclun from Provence.

You don't need any special skills to grow mesclun. Greens like cool weather, so early spring and late summer are the ideal planting times. You can make successive plantings, if you want, but in the hot summer it's best to do it in areas shaded by other plants and to harvest promptly. You can also grow it indoors under fluorescent lights in winter.

In a "fact sheet" on mesclun, the National Garden Bureau says "the Provencal tradition calls for chervil, arugula, lettuce and endive in precise proportions."

American mixes, on the other hand, "may include, lettuces, arugula, endives, mustards, purslane, chicory, cresses, parsleys, fennels, escarole and tender wild greens as well."

Looking over the 1997 seed catalogs, I found a wide range of mescluns offered:

The Cook's Garden (P.O. Box 535, Londonderry, Vt. 05148, Tel. 800-457-9703), a pioneer in bringing mesclun to America, is offering mixes not only from Provence but also from the Nigoise region of France and from the Piedmont region of Italy.

The Nigoise version combines endive, chicory, dandelion, cress and arugula. The Piedmont offering, called "misticanza," mixes four lettuces and five chicories for a "variegated carpet of greens and reds."

Shepherd's Garden Seeds, a California company with a Connecticut shipping address (30 Irene Street, Torrington, Conn. 06790, Tel. 860-482-3638), also offers the Piedmontese "misticanza" among numerous mixes and a "Napa Valley Lettuce Mix" combining green, red and bronze lettuces plus a curly endive.

Spreading to the more traditional American seed houses, mesclun has captured the cover page of the W. Atlee Burpee & Co. catalog this year with a dazzling color photo in which even a red pepper appears.

Burpee's (Warminster, Pa. 18974, Tel. 800-888-1447) is offering three mescluns, a spring version comprising chicories, endives and lettuces, a fall version of other lettuces, radicchio and arugula, and what it calls a "classic mesclun" comprising arugula, chervil, endive, mache (corn salad), lettuces, radicchio and cress. Another old-time company, Park Seed (1 Parkton Ave., Greenwood, S.C. 29647, Tel. 864-223-7333) notes in its catalog that "increasingly popular in the best restaurants, mesclun is really nothing more than a mixture of special greens, some tangy and some mild, that are usually harvested young and mixed in your favorite salad."

Nevertheless, in line with the times, it offers two versions, a tangy mix including arugula, peppery cresses and chicories "to liven up milder greens" and a mix specially designed for mild Southern climates for harvest through fall, winter and spring. This includes mizuna (mustard), purslane, red orach (mountain spinach), chervil and three maches.

Thief returns stolen "Cheers" script

By Carolyn Thompson
Associated Press

BOSTON — An autographed script from the final episode of "Cheers," stolen from a charity auction and then mysteriously returned, will be sold Saturday. Organizers intend to see that, this time, it makes it to the auction block.

Their determination was obvious as the Handel & Haydn Society displayed the recovered script for reporters on yesterday. Perched on a gilded stand behind a silver velvet rope at the same hotel from which it was pilfered, the script was guarded by not one, but two, Boston police officers.

The script, autographed by eight "Cheers" cast members, disappeared from the classical music organization's $250-a-plate "A Carnival of Venice" fund-raising gala at the Four Seasons Hotel Feb. 15.

Officials suspect someone crashed the party, mingled with the 200 guests wearing tuxedos or cocktail dresses and Venetian masks, and made off with the script when the hotel security guard had his back turned.

"We know so many of the people who come to this event year after year. We think it's highly unlikely it was a member," said Mary Deissler, the society's executive director.

The "Last Call" script was left, undamaged, on the steps of a church rectory Thursday evening.

"Someone rang the doorbell at 7:30 and left the script in a manila envelope at the door," said the Rev. Robert Fountain of St. Joseph's Church in Medford. "We have a young lady who works here answering the door and phone. When she got to the door, no one was there."

The H&H Society received a telephone call last Tuesday by a man who said he wanted to mail the script back. He called back Thursday to say he would leave it somewhere and then called later to say where.

Deissler said that the society probably would not prosecute the thief, if identified.

"We said, 'no questions asked' when pleading for its return," she said.

The script will be auctioned on WRKO radio Saturday morning by talk show host Andy Moes, who had contacted "Cheers" cast members about signing a replacement script for the society.

The original was donated by George Wendt, the actor who played Norm Peterson on the long-running television sitcom about a Boston bar.

Organizers chose not to ask for a police investigation when the theft was discovered, reasoning that the chances of recovery were too slim to justify the disruptions to their guests, Delsser said. The envelope left on the rectory steps late Thursday contained no note and bore no return address. A society official arrived the next morning and confirmed the script was genuine.

Despite the theft, the auction raised $40,000 for visits by musicians to schools in Boston and surrounding towns, and for apprenticeships for students.

When it was discovered missing, the "Cheers" script had a high bid of $1,000.

TV's popular "Party of Five" tries to examine real life issues

By Jennifer Bowles
Associated Press

CULVER CITY, Calif. — "Do you think Charlie and Grace should stay together?" Christopher Keyser, executive producer of Fox's "Party of Five," slyly asks his interviewer.

"Or are you rooting for Kirsten to come back?" injects his partner, Amy Lippman, eyebrows scrunched together.

Wait a minute here! You guys are the masters of Charlie's fate. Besides, what pressure!

But OK, if you must know — Frankly, Charlie needs to grow up and get his act together so he doesn't leave another woman at the altar. There, you have it.

"Well, he is growing up a lot more with this relationship with Grace," Keyser responds. "It's a lot more mature, and you'll see that as he deals with her issues."

It's here at Sony studios that the partners conjure up the traumas and tribulations of five orphaned San Francisco siblings who have become one of TV's favorite and, dare we say, best-looking families.

The Salinger family consists of stubble-faced Charlie (Matthew Fox, 30), a reformed philanderer who runs the family restaurant and tries to act as a father; Bailey (Scott Wolf, 28), the anguished college freshman who's wrestling with an addiction; Julia (Neve Campbell, 23), a bull-headed high school senior who's already experienced several romantic entanglements; Claudia (Lacey Chabert, 14), a precocious eighth-grader and violin player who's well beyond her years, and Owen (4-year-old twins Andrew and Steven Cavarno), who rarely has any camera time.

In its third season, the show's ratings are nothing to boast about (the Nielsen rating for last week's episode was 63 out of 107 primetime shows). But it draws the kind of demographic — young and mostly female — sought by both advertisers and the Fox Broadcasting Co.

Outside stage 18, where the series is filmed, a group of wide-eyed female fans who met through an online "Party of Five" bulletin board and have flown here from all over the country are spending the day meeting the cast and collecting autographs. They oooed the most over Wolf, a Tom Cruise look-alike who appeared in the movie The Evening Star. Campbell, too, has ventured onto the big screen, appearing in Scream.

Yet much of the show's success comes from the chemistry of the dark-haired cast, who could pass as real-life siblings, and the gritty, emotional storylines.

Just in the last few months, the Salingers have dealt with racism, mental illness, suicide and flagrant affairs. "It is the most realistic, heart-wrenching drama on primetime," said fan Lisa Hemameh, 24, from Roseville, Miss. "Everyone can relate to their problems."

The season's focal point, though, has been Bailey's growing alcohol problem, which led to last week's "Intervention" episode in which the family confronted Bailey. The siblings also were shocked to discover that their father was an alcoholic.

Bailey's addiction culminates at 9 p.m. EST Wednesday with "Hitting Bottom," (rated TV-PG). Immediately after the show, Wolf will appear in a 30-second public service announcement about alcoholism.

Loyal fans may have been shocked that the writers sacked Bailey with the disease, since he was always the anchor in the family. "That's precisely why we chose him," Keyser says. "It was not just a twist on his character but it was a natural outgrowth of all the years and all the pressures he had taking care of everybody else."

"Now he goes off to school to find his independence and he finds in alcohol one of the ways he can have fun and let loose and of course not knowing he has a genetic predisposition to being addicted to it."

The series, some critics say, is too melodramatic at times, and the characters too angst-ridden.

"The truth is we're writing a show that is not a genre show, where drama doesn't come from a patient, someone you've never seen wheeled in on a gurney," Lippman says.

"Because we don't have that, what happens in their (the regulars') lives, to be worthy of dramatizing, means that they go through a lot of stuff."

"Yeah," chimes in Keyser, "you're not going to get excited watching Claudia get a cavity filled."

Scott Wolf the star of FOX's hit T.V. drama "Party of Five"

Radio City Music Hall may be sold

NEW YORK (AP) — Madison Square Garden — seeking to become the city's premier producer of concerts and stage shows — is considering a takeover of Radio City Music Hall, the Daily News reported today.

"It's a historic showplace," Garden President Dave Checketts told the newspaper. "We believe there are real opportunities in the future there."

Checketts said the Garden has not formally bid for the property, but it has held talks with the new owner of Rockefeller, a group led by real estate giant Tishman Speyer.

Other bidders for the 5,901-seat theater reportedly include Walt Disney, MCA and Radio City Productions, the company that has been leasing the property for 19 years.

In recent years the music hall has faced increased competition from the Garden, which has become more aggressive in going after big name acts for its 5,000-seat theater and 22,0000-seat arena. This year the venue snared the Grammy Awards for the first time.

UMass Collegian Graphics
The best in '97

Exercise your mind....expand your lungs
join BIKE-AID
1997
Inspire environmental awareness across America in the adventure of a lifetime!
BIKE-AID IS...
•promoting alternative transportation through action
•supporting environmentally sustainable development projects
•participating in educational exchanges with local communities
•cycling for social and environmental justice
•experiencing life to its fullest!
ROUTES AVAILABLE
from Seattle, WA; Portland, OR; San Francisco, CA
Rides start June 12 ending together August 23 in Washington, DC.
Space is limited, call now for an incredible summer!
BIKE Aid '97
Bike-Aid '97
1-800-RIDE-808
333 Valencia Street, Suite 330
San Francisco CA 94103
415-431-4480
odn@igc.org
www.igc.apc.org/odn/

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Free Info Session
Wednesday, March 5th
7:00pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn. Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!!

The biggest threat to depression is your awareness of it.
UNTREATED DEPRESSION
http://www.save.org

FAMOUS FOR 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
I always get Fish n' Chips at Pete's
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR 'ROUND
http://www.javanet/~mrburger/

Gym takes 8th in a row

Over the weekend, the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team earned its eighth consecutive win, defeating No. 18 Syracuse in at the Curry Hicks Cage. With a win over the Orangemen, the final regular season meet, the No. 8 Minutemen have finished their dual meet schedule with an undefeated mark for the first time in school history.

In Saturday's win, UMass set two school records. Senior Chris Funk, in his last home meet of his career, scored a career-best 9.5 on the parallel bars while fellow senior Gabe Columbus notched a career-high 9.65 on the bars. The team set a school record on the parallel bars with a score of 37.6.

UMass set another school record in routing Syracuse as well. Sophomore Phil Lieberman scored a school record 9.800 on the horizontal bar as the Minutemen posted a school record 38.25 in that event.

On the still rings, Ruslan Shupak took home the first spot tying his own school record of 9.95. Sophomore Tim Wheeler captured the No. 1 spot on the pommel horse with a career-high 9.450.

Freshman Jeff LaVallee took first in the floor exercise with a mark of 9.650 in addition to taking the first spot in all-around competition with a score of 55.650.

Saturday's win follows a 220.700–203.500 victory over Springfield College on Feb. 19.

Columbus led the Minutemen capturing the first spot in three events including the floor (9.350), parallel bars (9.300) and the horizontal bar (9.450).

Next up, UMass will compete in the New England Championships on March 1 in Springfield. The Minutemen enter the contest having won eight straight, and 11 of the last 12 New England titles.

— Chris Stamm

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

The men's gymnastics team was in action this weekend.

Miami missing 'Zo

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

MIAMI — Tim Hardaway began his postgame ritual, placing his feet in a bucket of ice water. Then came a confession.

He's cold.

The Miami Heat guard missed 15 of 20 shots in Sunday's victory over Denver. He misfired 13 of 17 times Friday in a loss to Portland. That puts him at 24 percent shooting over the past two games.

Hardaway's slump coincides with the departure of center Alonzo Mourning, who tore a tendon in his right foot Friday and will be sidelined about six weeks.

"I'm probably putting too much pressure on myself, trying to do too much and thinking about it," Hardaway said.

"We can't rely on one guy," coach Pat Riley said. "Tim felt more of a burden, and I don't want him to take on all the responsibility."

The win over Denver established a blueprint the Heat will try to follow during Mourning's absence. Seven players scored in double figures, including reserves Keith Askins and John Crotty.

"We had balance, and that's what we need," Riley said. With one All-Star out and another All-Star off, the Heat nonetheless retained a two-game lead over second-place New York in the Atlantic Division. Riley figures it may take 60 victories to win the division, meaning Miami would have to finish 18-9. "We're still in first place, and we want to stay there," Hardaway said.

Isaac Austin, who replaced Mourning in the starting lineup, plans to do his part. He has 31 points and 23 rebounds in the past two games.

"I have to respond. That's what they pay me for," Austin said. "I feel that I can do the job and hold the fort until Mourning gets back."

The 6-foot-10 Austin, who lost 70 pounds in the past year, has been a remarkable reclamation project for Riley. But Austin can't completely fill the void created by Mourning's injury.

Although Mourning leads the Heat in scoring, his absence will be felt the most on defense. He's the primary reason Miami leads the NBA in opponent field-goal percentage.

"The starting team isn't intense enough defensively now," Riley said. "We aren't good individually on defense without Zo. He erased a lot of mistakes. He blocks three or four shots a game and changes five or six. People know he's there."

Now he's not.

But the Heat are 3-0 this year without Mourning. They play only seven teams above .500 in the next six weeks, and they expect to keep winning.

"We still have talent," Askins said. "We lost Zo and it's unfortunate, but we're going to keep the ball rolling."

Belle set to play ball

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Albert Belle wants to play for Chicago as soon as possible, so he plans to make his White Sox debut in Friday's exhibition opener against Minnesota at Fort Myers, Fla.

Manager Terry Bevington had said earlier that Belle probably would wait until Saturday's home opener against Texas at Sarasota. But a chat with Belle convinced him otherwise.

"He wanted to go. You know he wants to play," Bevington said.

"Fort Myers isn't that far away," Belle said of the little-over-an-hour trip. "I pretty much want to get in the habit of playing every day. If I can go down there and get a couple of at-bats to get the kinks out, that's what I'm going to do. Toward the end of the spring, I will tone it up and get ready with about a week to go."

One year later, Kenny Rogers almost got hit with a line drive again. This time, the ball hit the screen instead of him.

"I got out of the way," Rogers said after Sunday's near-mishap at Tampa, Fla. "Things are going better."

Rogers had a miserable 1996 after signing a $20 million, four-year contract with the New York. He was struck by a line drive off the bat of Tony Fernandez during spring training last year, nearly demoted from the starting rotation and slumped to a 12-8 record with a 4.68 ERA.

He then failed to get past the third inning of postseason starts against Texas, Baltimore and Atlanta, putting together a 14.14 ERA. He had shoulder surgery during the offseason.

"There's nothing he has to make up for," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "We won last year. The most important thing is he went through everything last year and it didn't cost us anything. There should be no baggage to carry."

Yankees catcher Joe Girardi was hospitalized for several hours Monday with a severe migraine.

Torre said Girardi, 32, was also dehydrated and nauseated. Girardi was taken from his apartment to St. Joseph's Hospital by Yankees trainer Gene Monahan, underwent tests and was released. "They're not sure what's causing it," Torre said. "We'll hopefully know something in the morning."

As the junior member of the best pitching rotation in baseball, Denny Neagle was surprised to learn he would get the honor of throwing the first pitch at Turner Field.

Manager Bobby Cox plans to start Cy Young Award winner John Smoltz in the season opener April 1 at Houston. Greg Maddux and Tom Glavine will follow Smoltz to the mound for the three-game series against the Astros.

When the Braves return to Atlanta on April 4 to meet the Chicago Cubs, Neagle gets to start the first game at the new 49,000-seat stadium.

"It's really surprised me a little bit," Neagle said at West Palm Beach, Fla. "But I guess that's the way Bobby is. He sets the rotations and wherever it falls, it falls."

■ men's swim

continued from page 12

to the meet scored points in it, that's how you win a championship."

All year, the team was led by the strong swimming of sophomore Brian Wisniewski and junior Sean Anderson. This championship was a team event, where everyone stepped up and took a leadership role.

"The captains did a great job," Yarworth said. "They kept trying to motivate the team. Chris Martin came down with us, and he helped motivate the team."

Martin, one of the team's top swimmers and tri-captains, was unable to compete for the team this year due to health restrictions.

"One kid that stepped forward as a leader was B.J. Brannan," Yarworth said. "He spoke to the team about what it meant to be a UMass swimmer, and what it meant to be from Massachusetts, and that was the turning point."

Some notable finishing times are Brian Wisniewski, second in the 100 back (50.53), third in the 200 back (1:50.92) and fourth in the 200 IM (1:54.35). Sean Anderson finished third in the 50 free (20.83), Henry Turner, ninth in the 100 fly (51.65).

Some other notables are Billy Hunter, sixth in the 100 breast (59.00), and David Koritkoski, fifth in the 200 back (1:53.15). Matt Davey, Anderson and Turner finished sequentially two, three, four, in the 100 free at times of 45.90, 46.17 and 46.49 respectively. Senior Michael Shaw finished fourth in the 200 fly (1:53.89).

UMass' 'A' relay team finished second in the 400 free (3:03.88), third in the 800 free (6:47.91), third in the 300 medley (1:33.48), second in the 400 medley (3:22.81) and second in the 200 free (1:23.23).

The divers did exceptionally well. Ed Hefferon finished fifth in the one and three meter events, with a finals score of 397.90 and 413.65. Timothy Church finished seventh in the one meter event and ninth in the three meter jump. His finals scores were 361.70, and 346.35.

"If I was to pick out the two key swims of the meet, it would have to be Wisniewski's (1:50.92) 200 back and Matty's (1:39.77) 200 free. Those were two good swims, but everyone else really stood out and did a good job."

The final scores were UMass–607, St. Bonnies–570.50, G.W.–520, LaSalle–467.50, Fordham–456.50, VA–297.50, URI–269, Duquesne–201, Xavier–150.

"I'm a happy camper again," Yarworth said. "The kids did more than I asked them to. I'm learning more as a coach, which every year is important. They learned more things as swimmers. I think it's time to wear two hats now, since I prepare to defend two championships again."

■ women's gym

continued from page 12

good. We still haven't peaked and everyone is just waiting for that one day at Regionals when we show the nation how really good we are," Laing said.

Their next meet is away against New Hampshire on Saturday evening, which, according to Swartz, should pose no problem for the team.

"We're gonna kill them," Swartz said.

■ women's track

continued from page 12

400m dash (57.76) for UMass, and was a key factor in the first-place 4x400 relay. Kenku ran the third leg that pulled ahead of second- place URI for good. In the 400m, UMass' Michelle Cooper also gave an outstanding performance, finishing directly behind Kenku in fourth (58.87).

Minutewoman Raqueil Shelton gave her top performance of the season, finishing fifth at 7.32, while defeating Irish for the first time this season.

And Melanie Bell placed third in the long jump (18'1"), while finishing ahead of teammate Irish (5th, 17'10.25").

The Minutewomen will next be in action this Friday and Saturday when they head to Hanover, N.H. for the ECAC Championships at 11 a.m.

■ men's track

continued from page 12

lowed by Boston College (55), UMass (51), New Hampshire, Maine (37), Rhode Island (31), Southern Connecticut (30) and BU (26).

The meet wasn't without some controversy. Concepcion, running the 400, was disqualified from the race for stepping on the white line one too many times. The call was questionable. Concepcion's finish probably would have given UMass enough points to place third, ahead of state rival BC.

"It's true, we would have done better as a team had the disqualification not taken place," said Abbott. But we also could have picked up those points elsewhere in the meet, too. Things like that happen."

Price finished third in the 200 with a time of 22.22, and the distance medley did well with a time of 10:03.71.

Next up is the IC4A's, which consists of the best teams from the East Coast. It will mark the last meet for at least most of the UMass athletes. Toye and company will be ready.

"We won't be too concerned with the seedings, because times don't always seed very well," Toye said. "I feel we have a shot at making the final."

■ hoops

continued from page 12

said. "It's going to be a fabulous atmosphere, the final home game for [the seniors], and national television."

UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint agreed.

"It's going to be crazy," Flint said. "I know they've had some great crowds. The one time they played Temple [at Hawk Hill] it was crazy."

As an added bonus — one that re-emphasizes the Hawks will not be an easy obstacle for the Minutemen to overcome — is the fact that St. Joe's has made its first appearance in the AP Top 25 (No. 23 in yesterday's poll) since March 16, 1973 when the Hawks were ranked No. 18.

"All it did was put a bigger target on them," Martelli said.

Regardless of all the outside influences, tonight's game will be special for Flint. A 1987 graduate of the school, the game will mark Flint's homecoming as a head coach.

Even though Flint helped the Hawks to the 1986 A-10 Championship, he does not expect a warm welcome.

"The older people know who I am, but the younger students don't know who I am, so I may get booed a little bit," Flint said.

NEED TO SELL A CAR?
Collegian Classifieds

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS...
We are here !!

The ALANA Lectures Series and The University Chaplains
PRESENT
Rev. Eugene Rivers
GUEST SPEAKER
HE WILL SHARE HIS
VISION FOR LEADERSHIP AND SOCIAL JUSTICE IN COMBATING YOUTH VIOLENCE
THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1997 • 7:00PM
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM • UMASS AMHERST
Sponsored by: Dean of Students Office, Office of ALANA Affairs and The University Chaplains.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way / Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
TOKYO $799 Roundtrip
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Extra/passes available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

LOWFAT DAILY SPECIALS
EAT RIGHT
From Our Lowfat Cookbook of the Month
FEB. Lean & Lovin' It!
Judies
http://virtual-valley.com/judies
134 PLEASANT STREET, DOWNTOWN AMHERST
253-3491

YOU CAN change the world
This spring, join Tour de Cure— one of the biggest diabetes fundraising events in history.
a cycling event of the American Diabetes Association
Tour de Cure
Sign up today, call
1-800-TOUR-888
(1-800-868-7888)
or visit us at www.diabetes.org/tour

ATTENTION STUDENTS!!
GET YOUR TICKET FOR:
UMASS MEN'S BASKETBALL
VS.
TEMPLE (3/1/97)
AVAILABLE ON THURS., FEB. 27 AT 7AM
IN THE LOBBY OF THE CURRY HICKS CAGE
YOU MUST HAVE YOUR VALID ID AND ACTIVITY CARD

Bucci
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256.0733
145 main st. northampton 586.0155

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Are you interested in bringing a speaker to campus? Do you want to gain real-life experience working for a student organization? Come to a meeting for THE DISTINGUISHED VISITOR'S PROGRAM on Tuesday, February 25 at 7pm. in Room 168C of the Campus Center. Call 545-0046 for more info. Food will be served.

SUMMER IN SWITZERLAND First session 5/24-6/27 ALL MAJORS: 6 credits, airfare, Eurorail, Room/board ALL FOR $3299- Contact Chris 545-4411 or Jeff 545-4046

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Hara's your chaece to make UMass feel a little smaller. Come check out IGU. We may be a sprority, but not all sororities are the same! RUSH IDTA GAMMA UPSILON 7:00pm, 3/3, 3/4, 3/5. For more information, cell Sara, 549-6461

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Steaza 5-speed, loaded, power everything. A/C, FWD 110,000 miles. Runs mint. Only $2100 546-1912

1985 Skylark automatic, V-6, FWD, sunroof $850 546-1912

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Plymouth Suedance Excellent body, runs very well. $1800 or B/O. Call 549-4435

EMPLOYMENT

LIFEGUARD- Private beach on Cape Cod Free beachside room. Memorial Day- Labor Day WSI Certification. 253-8819

Summer Jobs for the Environment $2500-$4000/Summer Campaign for clean air and water Protect endangered species Make A Difference Offices in 33 states Campaign To Save The Environment 1-800-75-EARTH

Counselors for co-ed Northeast PA overnight Jewish Federation Camp(3 hours from NYC)- general, sports, drama, H20 and arts. 1-800-973-3866

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT- How would you like to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, and get paid? Call (206)971-3554 ext. C5001B (We are a research and publishing company)

EMPLOYMENT

CRUISE LINES HIRING- Earn up to $2000+/month, plus free world travel(Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. (919)918-7767 Ext. C180. (Member, Better Business Bureau CARE Program)

ALASKA EMPLOYMENT- Earn up to $3000-$6000/month in fisheries, parks and resorts. Airfare! Food/lodging! Get all the options Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180.

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogen" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group. 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N5001? (We are a research and publishing company)

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Pelham 2 bedroom Mobile Home Gas, heat. No pets. First, last and security. $500/month. 253-5413

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washer/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856

One bedroom in a 2 bedroom apt. on bus route. Heat and hot water included. $322/month. Call 546-0262

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-5000

FOR SALE

Mac Classics Style Writers carrying cases. Works/Word Call Sarah (413)585-6208

FOR SALE

KLH 3-Way 350W SPKRS DBL 12" Woofers, $250/Pr. Call 253-6520

STEREO EQUIPMENT Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange, 256-0941

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Three private 1/2 hour lessons $69.95 Call (413)732-8817 In Amherst Tues. and Thurs. eve.

LOST

Black Organizer/Phone Book $Reward$ If found. Please contact Adam at 549-2623

MUSICIANS

Guitarist Wanted Call Rich 253-1527 Original Band Need song writing ability Yea

MISCELLANEOUS

Now Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)666-4793

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 or 2 females needed to share an apt. Fall '97. Call Kim or Karen 546-0617 ASAP

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact the Student Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

HIGH-SPEED Internet Comes To The Five College Area! Unlimited local access, no busy signals, free Web Page with account. Call TIAC at (860)644-6732. Student rates available

PREP COURSES GRE/GMAT 30 hours, $295 American Academy 1-800-808-PREP (Please leave your name and number)

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. F50016. (We are a research and publishing company)

TRAVEL

Party Spring Weekends Price includes Round Trip Motor Coach, 3 days, 2 nights, Luxury Motel Downtown, 1 dinner, 1 breakfast. Departs every weekend- March, April and Memorial Day. Call Select Tours, Hanover, MA (617)871-0490

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T, Europe $169 O/W Fly the world dirt cheap! ONE WORLD TRAVEL

Jamaica-Spring Break from $599. Go with whom you can trust. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen

TRAVEL

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Europe $155; Caribb/Mexico $189 R/T. Worldwide Destinations. Airhitch Tm. (800)326-2009 airhitch@net-com.com or www.isicom.fr/airhitch

Starting this Thursday!

Students place classifieds on Thursdays for only 10¢

Place one this thursday at the Campus Center Newstand!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals this means dorm rooms numbers as well.
5. Personals at a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals at a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Community Calendar

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PSA, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

Film — The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Mother Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

TUESDAY, FEB. 25

Info–social — The LBGA will hold its weekly info–social on the 8th floor of the Campus Center. There will be discussion about upcoming events, dances, and QueerFest. The info–social starts at 7 p.m. and is free.

Lecture — Michael Thelwell, professor of Afro–American Studies, will be lecturing on Civil Rights Activist Kwame Ture, formerly Stoakley Carmichael from 7–8:30 p.m in the Campus Center, room 803. The event is free and open to the public.

Meeting — Anyone interested in bringing a speaker to campus and gaining real–life experience working for a student organization should come to a meeting for the Distinguished Visitor's Program at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168C. Call 545–0046 for more info. Food will be served.

Discussion — Ilan Wagner and Guy Korngold will present "Israeli & American Cultural Differences Today" and "Pro– Israeli Activism on Campus" at 8 p.m. at Hillel Houses. Sponsored by UMass Hillel/ Hamagshimim Group.

Film, discussion — Commuter Area Government presents Final Judgement, a documentary film by UMass alumnus Jonathan Stack.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 26

Meeting — Anyone interested in bringing a speaker to campus and gaining real–life experience working for a student organization should come to a meeting for the Distinguished Visitor's Program at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168C. Call 545–0046 for more info. Food will be served.

Discussion — Ilan Wagner and Guy Korngold will present "Israeli & American Cultural Differences Today" and "Pro– Israeli Activism on Campus" at 8 p.m. at Hillel Houses. Sponsored by UMass Hillel/ Hamagshimim Group.

Film, discussion — Commuter Area Government presents Final Judgement, a documentary film by UMass alumnus Jonathan Stack.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 26

showcasing the last few weeks of Antonio James' life. The true story from which the movie Dead Man Walking was based. The film, which starts at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom, will be followed by a panel discussion with Jonathan Stack (Director/Producer), Burl Cain (Warden, Louisiana State Penitentiary) and Bill Newman (Attorney, Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union).

Lecture – Ross Chambers, Marvin Felheim Distinguished University Professor of French and comparitive literature at the University of Michigan will present a lecture, "Anxious Reading: Eric Michaels' Unbecoming and the Death of the Author" at 4 p.m. in the Front Room of Amherst College Campus Center. Presented by Amherst College and its French Department, the event is free and open to the public.

Lecture — The Wildlife Society presents Robert Leverette, professor at Mount Holyoke College, on "Old Growth Forests in Massachusetts," at 5:30 p.m. in Holdsworth 203. Refreshments will be served.

Meeting — the Biracial/Multiracial Student Association will be holding a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge. Everyone is welcome to join.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Performance — Craig Hickman performs "Portraits of a Black Queen" at 8 p.m. in the Hampden Theatre. Part of the GLBT Cafe Series and co–sponsored by the Stonewall Center and the UMass Arts Council.

Discussion — Biosci will be hosting Anp De and Carolyn Augart, med students from UMass Worcester, in a discussion about what medical school is really like at 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center, room 168 C. Contact Carey at 546– 4465 if you have any questions.

Religious — Learn the cooking magic of the Challah with all of your friends at the Challah Baking Extravaganza. We want you to make and gorge on delicious fresh Challah. All you have to do is show up at the Hillel House at 7 p.m.

NOTICES

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Dance — The UMass Ballroom Dance club invites everyone to come dance with us every Tuesday and Thursday from 5:15–7 p.m. at 101 Totman Gym. Newcomer Waltz/ Chacha class begins Feb. 25. Intermediate/ advanced instruction by a pro every Wednesday, 6:15–7:30 p.m. All instructions are free. For more info, call Kevin Murphy at 549–4036.

SGA nominations — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the nominations for the positions of President and Student Trustee, along with positions for local Area Government are now being held. The nomination forms are available in the SGA office. These nominations close on Feb. 27 by midnight, all forms must be turned in by this date, otherwise the candidates are not eligible to run for office.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in south Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253–0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them, and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Food and Drink 'til 1 AM! Behind Antonio's!

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
28 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
28 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
20¢ mozzarella sticks after 10 tonight!

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 25, 1997

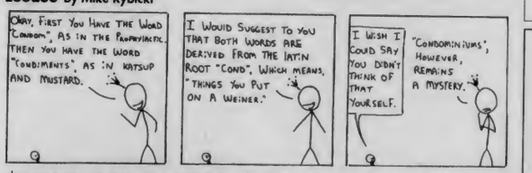
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(2)	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Curse of T Rex"		"Night Sins" (1992, Drama)	Frontline "What Jennifer Saw"	Black America		Record Row: Cradle of R&B
WFSB	3	(3)	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am Journal	Touched by an Angel		"Night Sins" (1992, Drama)	Valerie Bertinelli, Harry Hamlin		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	(4)	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Touched by an Angel		"Night Sins" (1997, Drama)	Valerie Bertinelli, Harry Hamlin		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	(5)	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Roseanne	Drew Carey	Home Imp.	Spin City	NYPD Blue "What a Dump!"	News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Silver Magnolias" (1989, Comedy-Drama)	Sally Field,				Jenny Jones	In Sterici
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		(6)	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	"Carlito's Way" (1993, Drama) Al Pacino, Sean Penn. (In Stereo)				LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT		(9)	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC		(11)	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Scariest Police Chases		When Disaster Strikes		News	Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP		(22)	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY		(A)	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Curse of T Rex"		Frontline "What Jennifer Saw"		Black America
WGGB		(29)	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Roseanne	Drew Carey	Home Imp.	Spin City	NYPD Blue "What a Dump!"	News	Nightline
WSBK			Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	"Carlito's Way" (1993, Drama) Al Pacino, Sean Penn. (In Stereo)				News	Med Abo. You	Real TV
WTBS			Family Matters	Family Matters	Senior PGA Golf: Senior Slam								"The Final Countdown" (1980)
A&E			Quincy "Tissue of Truth"		Equalizer "The Child Broker"		Biography: Hatfields & McCoys		Silent Witness "Long Days, Short Nights" (R)				Law & Order "Profile"
CNN		(23)	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus. Moneyline
COM		(26)	Trick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	Foxworthy	Brett Butler	Gallagher: Overboard (R)		A-List (R)	Dream On	Daily Show TV Nation
DISC			Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Strange Planes "Parasites" (R)		Wild Discovery: The Hunt		Mystery Univ.	World-Wond.	Secrets of the Internet		Wild Discovery: The Hunt
ESPN			Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Illinois at Penn State (Live)				College Basketball: Kentucky at Tennessee (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE			Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		••• "Circle of Violence: A Family Drama" (1986) Tuesday Weld,			Living	Mysteries
MTV			Ren & Stimpy	Road Rules	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)		Unplugged (In Stereo)		Buzzkill	World Tour (R)	Singled Out Loveline
NICK			Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Monsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi Odd Couple
SCIFI			Twilight Zone	Star Wars Tril.	Time Trax "Night of the Savage		Telkwar "The Gate" (In Stereo)		Forever Knight "Killer Instinct"		VR.5 "Facing the Fire"		Time Trax "Night of the Savage"
TLC		(24)	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Treasures	America	History of the Helicopter (R)		Earth's Fury		Treasures America
TNT			In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball: Los Angeles Lakers at Houston Rockets. (Live)					Inside-NBA	"National Lampoon's Vacation"
USA			Renegade "Thrill Kill"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote		Boxing: Phil Jackson vs. Jeramy Williams (Live)				Wings
HBO			••• Murder in Mississippi" (1990, Drama) Tom Hulce. (In Stereo)				"Miss Evers' Boys" (1997, Drama) Alfre Woodard. (In Stereo)					••• "Deadly Voyage" (1995) Omar Epps.	Comedy Hour
MAX			••• "Singles" (1992, Comedy) Bridget Fonda.				•• "The Vanishing" (1993, Suspense) Jeff Bridges.					•• "The Expert" (1994) Jeff Speakman.	"Bad Boys"
SHOW			(5:45) •• "Iron Eagle IV" (1986) Louis Gossett Jr.				On the Set		•• "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley.			•½ "Stonewall" (1984, Horror) Landis Plain.	Women

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick



Non Sequitor By Wiley

First Impressions By Kenneth W.P. Scott

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

University' By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin		Worcester
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Rack of lamb	Pork and Beans	Pizza	Pizza
Potatoes	Smurfs	Burgers	Chicken
Lettuce	Rack of Lamb	Fries	Peas
Stove Top Stuffing	Pastabilities	Subs	Pork Fried Rice

Hampshire		Berkshire
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Chicken	Chicken Tenders	Shrimp	Mandarin Chicken
Hamburgers	Turkey and Gravy	Black-Eyed Peas	Tex-Mex
Fries	Red Lobster	Chicken Wings	Tofu
Pizza	Pastabilities	Potato Chips	Rice and Beans

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Make the most of what you have, including time. Small delays could lead to major losers. Money concerns will ease, and you'll come out ahead. Listen to advice from others, but follow your instincts. Take time for some well-earned relaxation.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Keep in touch with friends and loved ones who are far away and nearby. Keep health resolutions but don't overdo. The slow and steady course works best. A younger person really does want to help, so be willing to adapt, accommodate.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Get thoughts and ideas down on paper for best results. An old friend could come back into the picture. You could be trembling soon, but be careful. Keep problems in perspective and think positively.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Asking the right question at the right time could solve a nagging problem. Try to look at situations and people in a new light but be realistic. Trust yourself to a special purchase but be careful not to overspend for something of little value.

LEO
July 23-August 23
This could be a good time to catch up on things you have let slide, but hold your impulses in check. You can't accomplish everything, so pick and choose your spots to get the best results. Your intuition is on target, so trust your hunches.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Be cautious and play it safe for the best results. Taking extreme positions could leave you vulnerable. Try to see others the way they really are, for better and for worse. Good things can turn up in the most unlikely places, so watch carefully!

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
An offer to travel may be tempting, but staying close to home also has advantages. Don't turn down a friend's and family want to help. Now is the time to be low and let others take the lead. Watch and wait for the right time to make your move.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Don't make snap judgments about people and situations. Things aren't always as they seem. An older person could serve as an adviser. Your bargain hunting pays dividends, and you'll save on a special purchase.

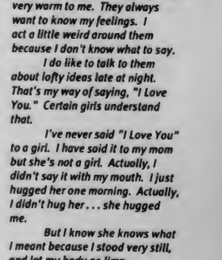
SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Hard work and perseverance pay off, and you'll successfully handle problems at work or home. A person you thought was an ally may have their own agenda. An old friend could come back to offer advice and encouragement.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
You are attracted to a special challenge and will come out on top in the end, but it may take time. Home and family play important roles in keeping you focused. Work for balance in your life and keep your priorities in order.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Take the time to see another point of view, and be willing to accommodate differences. Don't feel guilty about taking time for yourself. Get an overview of health matters, but don't get bogged down in details and unnecessary worries.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
What could be an obstacle proves to be a stepping stone if you look at it the right way. A pet could pose a problem, but it will be resolved in time. Refuse to get entangled in a long-running feud. You can accomplish more as a mediator.

Close to Home By John McPherson



"OK, Doug, somebody's in the bathroom. Let's take it into a dive!"

Quote of the Day

"In this country American means white. Everyone else has to hyphenate."

-Toni Morrison

ACROSS
1. Dale's cowboy hubby
4. Flower-power gesture
7. Cheney of horror films
10. It often follows "once"
12. "Rigoletto" role
14. Monopoly, for one
15. Chronicle
16. Frankincense or myrrh
17. Amos of baseball
18. NY restaurant that's a favorite of Woody Mosier's burden
22. Move with difficulty
23. Allotted
24. Jeeves, to Bertie Wooster
27. Land of ___
28. Fable writer
32. Remotely
33. Rotating machine part
34. Gaudy
35. Bird's beak
36. Like certain shirts
38. Govt. agcy.
39. Worn away
41. Sonja Henie's homeland: abbr.
42. Dootie
43. Ambrosian
44. From ___ Z (2 wds.)
45. Cantered kitten sounds
48. Stimulates
48. Enthusiasm
49. Sign of the future
52. Mayso grain
56. Man from Muskogee
57. Dines
58. French pronoun
60. He played Shane
61. Speak publicly
62. Basketball net holders (2 wds.)
63. Alkali
64. CIA's forerunner
65. Mountain road

DOWN
1. Trick
2. Australian gem
3. Mystical exercise
4. Competes
5. High railways
6. Revised copy
7. What procrastinators often are
8. Pass over
9. Criminal-catcher Elliot
11. Carpenter, at times
12. One of the Brady boys
13. Gray's subj.
14. ___ Gala Brioge
16. Filbert, e.g.
21. Ibex feature
23. Twinklings of an eye
24. Wind indicators
26. Fleming
29. Pregnancy culmination
31. Toddler's timeout
38. 60 Minutes man
39. Playful swimmer
31. Eats chicken-style
33. Scoundrel
34. ___ the fields we go
36. Arizona city
37. Joey's nickname
40. Prepared for the white-glove test
42. Philadelphia parader on I-76
44. Conductor Toscanini
46. Excavation area
47. Loosen
48. Ming Dynasty relic
49. Opinion survey
50. Blengy assent
51. Get a lift
52. Picks
53. Night author Wiesel
54. Donations
56. Tp.'s smaller degree
58. Past partners

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

I don't do too well with girls. But the ones who are my friends are very warm to me. They always want to know my feelings. I act a little weird around them because I don't know what to say.

I do like to talk to them about lofty ideas late at night. That's my way of saying, "I Love You." Certain girls understand that.

I've never said "I Love You" to a girl. I have said it to my mom but she's not a girl. Actually, I didn't say it with my mouth. I just hugged her one morning. Actually, I didn't hug her . . . she hugged me.

But I know she knows what I meant because I stood very still, and let my body go limp.

Bruiser prepares for a Philly homecoming

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

It has been a long time. Rhode Island coach Al Skinner said on yesterday's Atlantic 10 men's basketball coaches' tele-conference, since the top spot in the league has come down to the final week of competition.

But that's what it is down to — at least in the A-10's East Division, where St. Joseph's (19-6, 11-3) stands atop the divisional rankings. Massachusetts, which meets the Hawks tonight at 9:30 p.m. at Alumni Memorial Fieldhouse, is currently in the No. 2 spot with a 17-11 record and a 10-4 league mark.

And while St. Joe's and UMass are the frontrunners for the East's top two spots, the race for the regular season championship also includes Rhode Island and Temple. The Rams boast a 16-8, 10-4 record, and the Owls are at 16-8 and 9-5 in conference.

But tonight the spotlight falls on Hawk Hill, where a clear advantage in the late-season race awaits the much-anticipated game's victor.

Both teams currently have two league games remaining on their regular season schedules. The Hawks are slated to play across town at La Salle in the finale Saturday, while UMass hosts Philadelphia rival Temple. The Minutemen have the tougher road, since the Owls are in the hunt, while the Explorers are bringing up the rear in the A-10 West.

If St. Joe's beats UMass and La Salle, it will claim the East. However, if UMass beats the Hawks, but loses to Temple (and St. Joe's beats La Salle), the East title will be in Temple. And if UMass wins tonight and Saturday and St. Joseph's loses at the CoreStates Spectrum, UMass will hold onto its divisional crown.

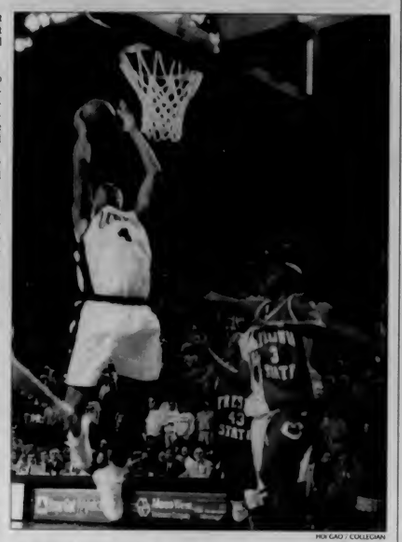
Confused?

If any but the second scenario plays out, the regular season conference record will decide the East winner. But if the two teams end the season with a tie, UMass would get the title and the A-10 Tourney's top seed by virtue of the tie- breaker.

The tiebreaker is determined by season series between the two tied teams. But because UMass and St. Joe's will have split the regular season meetings, the tie breaker would go to the season series against the division's next highest team, in this case, Rhode Island. The Minutemen swept their games with the Rams, while the Hawks split — which means the Minutemen would claim the title.

Whew.

That makes tonight's game very important for both teams involved.



"It's a monster tomorrow against UMass with all the implications that game has," Hawk coach Phil Martelli said.

If the excitement and anxiety already surrounding the game weren't enough, tonight will mark Senior Night for the soon-to-be Hawk alums.

Seniors Dmitri Domani, Terrell Myers, Nemanja Petrovic and Bob Del Vescovo will be playing in their final game at the Fieldhouse.

"Our school newspaper is calling it the game of the century. Of course our students probably consider the century to be 1980-on," Martelli

Turn to HOOPS, page 9

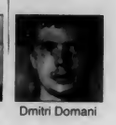
MEI GAO / COLLEGIAN



Lari Ketner looks to make his homecoming a good one tonight when the Minutemen take on St. Joe's.

GAME PREVIEW

Massachusetts Minutemen vs. St. Joseph's Hawks

Edgar Padilla

Dmitri Domani

9:30 P.M. Tuesday February 25, 1997

ON THE AIR

WHMP- Mark Vandermeer, Jack Lehman, Derek Kellogg

Laing, Schwartz sparkle

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts' Women's Gymnastics Team beat then-No. 15 Minnesota, Vermont and MIT last Friday night at the Curry Hicks Cage.

"We did a great job here tonight, the seniors did a great job, we had a great crowd here and we're very pleased with the outcome," UMass coach Dave Kuzara said.

Friday's meet was the last home meet of the season, and the two graduating seniors, Tara Swartz and Lianne Laing were honored and given a farewell.

Both Swartz and Laing gave outstanding performances, receiving shouts of "10" from the crowd after their uneven bars and floor exercise routines, respectively.

"The meet was great. The support we have seen throughout the past few years has been increasing. It's nice to know that when you are going out on the apparatus people are rooting for you and they want you to do well," Laing said. "It feels just great being on home turf and being able to perform in front of everybody."

Swartz tied for the fifth time her own school record of 9.95 on the uneven bars. Laing received a 9.85 on her floor routine. Both women received a 10.00 for their routines from one of the judges.

"I am thrilled for my seniors. They have been here through thick and thin and today they came through just like they always do. We are going to miss them terribly," Kuzara said.

Swartz set a new school record for the all-around with a 39.350, which was previously held by Tammy Marshall with a 39.250 at the 1993 NCAA championships. Swartz also scored career bests on the balance beam (9.825) to finish first and the floor exercise (9.875) to finish second.

"We have been, ever since we got here, knocking Tammy Marshall's scores off one by one. We've taken care of all of them except all-around and finally all-around is gone," Swartz said.

"Tara broke the school record which is really nice to do at home on senior night and you have to be six deep. But I can talk about every single kid. I warmed up Penny [LeBeau] and I warmed up Rokia [Madore] because Denise [Johnson] wasn't feeling well. We have depth and I wasn't going to hesitate to use them, but Denise competed and she did a fine job," Kuzara said.

"Minnesota is a great team but they had a few errors so we ended up being the better team tonight and the difference basically was balance beam, I think," Kuzara said. "Minnesota counted a couple of falls and we were able to not count any falls."

Other career bests for the Minutewoman included sophomore Michelle LoPresti's 9.70 on the uneven bars and her 9.675 on the floor exercise. Freshman Mandy Mosby received a career best 9.775 on the uneven bars.

"I am just psyched that the team is getting this good. For another coach from another team to come up and tell me how good we looked is a pretty big thing," Swartz said.

Laing shared a similar perspective on her four years with the Minutewoman.

"It's nice for the two of us. We've been through all of the years together, seeing the program grow and know that we've been the cornerstone and the program has been evolving since we've been here. It was a great way to end for us," Laing said.

"I think we're going to Nationals — actually, I know we're going to Nationals. We've never been this

Turn to WOMEN'S GYM, page 9

Women's track takes 3rd

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

Thanks to one of its most inspired efforts of the season, the Massachusetts women's track team brought a hard-fought, third-place finish at the New England Championships back home to Amherst this weekend.

Challenged by a series of injuries all season long, the Minutewomen (84 pts.) strolled into Kingston, R.I. as a disappointing No. 3 seed, but did not let this minor setback stand in their way while slamming the door on rivals Boston College (63) and hometown favorite Rhode Island (55), who finished behind UMass at fourth and fifth, respectively. UMass finished behind first-place Northeastern (130) and second-place Connecticut (108) to round out the top five.

The two shining stars in the Minutewomen's highlight reel were sophomore Shelanda Irish and freshman Andrea Comeau.

Irish placed fourth in the 200m at 25.73 and sixth in the 55m dash at 7.32. Irish ran the anchor leg of the winning 4x400m relay. She also ran the anchor leg of the second- place 4x200m relay. Irish was everywhere. Over the course of the day-and-a-half long tourney, including preliminaries, semi-finals, and finals, Irish competed eight different times, and scored in all four final events. Irish was very tired.

"There isn't a more competitive woman on this team," coach Julie LaFreniere said. "You have to realize that she was competing virtually from start to finish Friday and Saturday, and doing very well. She gives a 110 percent effort every time she toes that line."

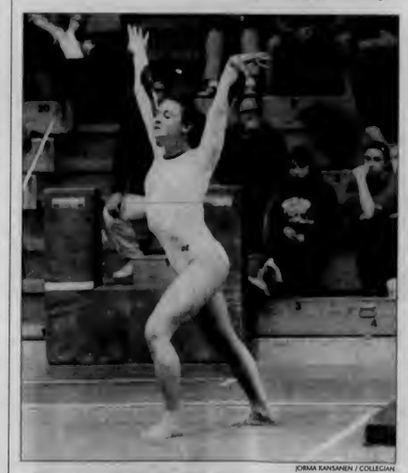
Meanwhile, rookie Andrea Comeau was also making a name for herself.

Comeau placed second in the high jump (5'6") and took third in the 55m hurdles (8.29). She ran the second-leg in the winning 4x400m relay, and also in the second-place 4x200m relay. Like Irish, Comeau didn't have much free time on her hands.

"Andrea was also very busy, but she still gave us super performances Friday and Saturday," LaFreniere said.

UMass started off on the right foot Friday when freshman Melissa Ward headed into a competitive pentathlon field and came out with some points for the Minutewomen in the fourth-place slot.

"This was only Melissa's second pentathlon, and she performed well, with her second-best long jump of the season," LaFreniere said. "She was pretty consistent and did a nice job."



LaFreniere was also very pleased with the performance of junior Christy Martin who set a personal record in the anchor leg of the second-place winning DMR squad by three seconds. It was clear that Martin had put all of her energy and more into securing the DMR for her teammates that she just didn't have enough to score in a difficult 3000m field (9th).

"Christy is a selfless, team player," LaFreniere said. "She wasn't saving herself for the 3000m race. She went all out, and I respect that."

Other Minutewoman standout performances came from senior Katie Greenia who set a team-season best time (18:00.12) in the 5000m race.

Junior Siiifa Keniku took third in the

Turn to WOMEN'S TRACK, page 9

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Betty Colucci and the UMass women's gymnastics team upset then No. 15 Minnesota this weekend.

UMass takes A-10's for second straight campaign

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

It's beginning to become a trend in the A-10.

The Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team won the Atlantic 10 Championship for the second year in a row this weekend in Buffalo, N.Y. After the three day tournament, UMass pulled out a victory over tough competitors such as St. Bonaventure and George Washington, who after the morning trials on Friday, were just behind UMass by a couple of points.

"Obviously, it felt good," Yarworth said. "I worked [the team] hard this year, and to have them peak at the right time just like water polo did, I guess it's self-justification as a coach saying, 'Hey, we're doing the right thing.'"

All year, Russ plugged the end of February, and how important it was to be focused and prepared for what lay ahead in Buffalo from Feb. 20-22. The A-10 Tournament is not where individuals shine, but teams do, and that's what Yarworth uses the dual meets for — tools to train his team to perform as a unit during the A-10 Championships.

"We only won one event in the whole meet which was Matt Getty in the 200 free," Yarworth said. "I've said from day one, that it's the 20 man team that you take: the divers, the swimmers, the kid who swims and dives— Matt Turner. That's how you win a championship, that's how I build a team."

"I did some good things coaching with the swimmers, with the distance swimmers I made some mistakes, and I learned as well as they do, but all in all, to see the team come together and understand that hard work, motivation, team spirit and dedication can result in success and championships. It's a great lesson for them, for me, and obviously a great feeling."

"Matty Turner placed twelfth in one and three meter diving and placed ninth in the 100 back. You don't have many kids who can do that. He's a tremendous little athlete, and a real sparkplug for the team, the team really rallies around him."

After last years' flawless execution by UMass, going 8-0 during the regular season, and then winning the A-10s, the question was whether or not the team would be able to squelch the competition again.

This year, LaSalle and Fordham had each fallen victim to UMass' wrath during the regular portion of the season, so it was safe to say that the Minutemen had the edge over such opponents. Unfortunately for Fordham and LaSalle, they really didn't perform very well, and it was George Washington and St. Bonaventure that posed the biggest challenges.

"Thursday we didn't swim that well," Yarworth said, "Even though they led by 16 points going into the second day of competition. We were kind of tight. [Friday] we came in, and I thought they were ready, but we had a rough morning again. We swam alright, but we didn't swim great."

"We rallied the troops when I had a team meeting where I got a little fired up. I challenged them, and they responded well. Friday night, we just swam incredibly. It set the table for Saturday's morning trials, where we won the meet."

When Saturday's swimming began, UMass' lead had been cut down to just one point. But the team switched into high gear and took the championship all the way home.

"We came in on Saturday, and every kid that swam, except for one, qualified for finals," Yarworth said. "They just answered the call completely. Every kid that we took

Turn to MEN'S SWIM, page 9

Rodriguez A-10's finest

By Sarah J. Kimmel
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team placed fourth with a score of 441 points at the Atlantic 10 Conference, held at the Flickinger Aquatics Center in Buffalo, N.Y. Host St. Bonaventure won the three-day conference finals with a score of 724 points. Virginia Tech (608.50) took second, followed by George Washington University (537).

Junior diver Angelique Rodriguez finished her season with UMass winning both the one- and three-meter diving titles. She also earned the Atlantic 10's Most Outstanding Diver award and All-Championship honors. Rodriguez won the three-meter with 455.50 points and the one-meter with a meet record 422.05 points. She is the second UMass diver to win the A-10 diving award, joining Allison White, who won the award in 1993. Rodriguez will be competing in the NCAA Zone A District I Qualifiers in Princeton, N.J. on the weekend of March 14-15.

Senior Jessica Farley completed her UMass career at the A-10s with a personal cumulative score of 38. In addition, her 200 free relay team (1:39.80) with freshmen Marci Hupp and Andrea Spencer and sophomore Jill Carroll placed third and pulled in 32 points. Farley shared a fifth place and 28 points with sophomore Amy Mullen, junior Barbara Hickey, and junior Karen Sonwald in the 800 free relay (7:47.49). Farley broke her own school record in the 200 individual medley with a time of 2:09.15.

This time was good enough to give her a fifth at the meet. Her sixth place finish in the 200 free (1:54.53) move her into second on the UMass all-time chart. She added an eighth place finish in the 100 free (53.57) that placed her in the third slot on the UMass all-time list for that race. Farley finished her career ranking on eight UMass top performance charts, placing in the top three in four events.

An outstanding performance by freshman Andrea Spencer in both relay and individual events foreshadows seasons to come. Spencer was not only part of the 200 free relay team that placed third, she also finished sixth in the 100 fly (59.90) and seventh in the 200 IM (2:10.53). Sophomore Shana Strothers placed fifth in the 400 IM (4:41.21), junior Barbara Hickey finished sixth in the 1650 free (17:30.99), and freshman Lia Lansky placed third and broke her own record in the 200 fly with a time of 2:08.72.

UMass places fourth

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

Coming off a rather forgettable fourth place finish in the Atlantic 10 championships last week, the Massachusetts Minutemen rebounded by again placing fourth — in the New England Championships.

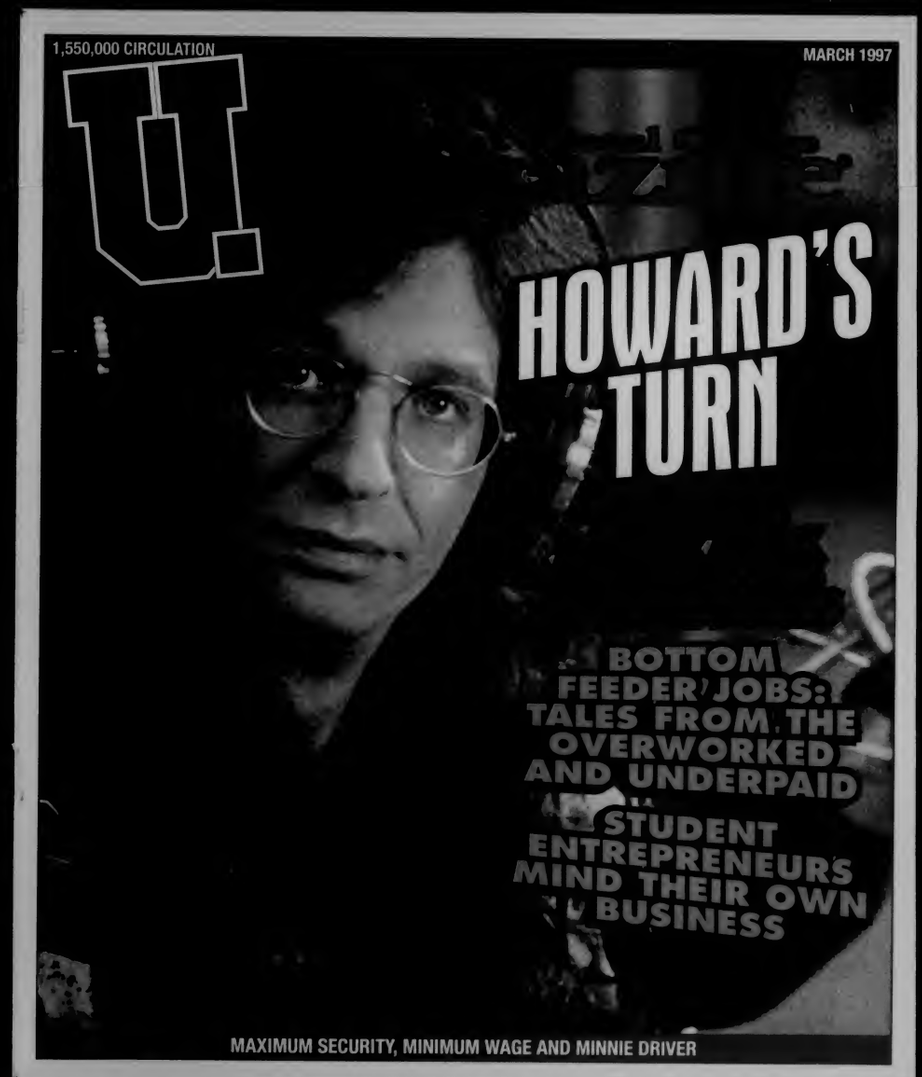
This time around, at Boston University, the standing is much more respectable, however, as times were substantially better than in the previous week.

Athletes such as Ben Baraldi and the 4 x 400 relay team really stepped it up, and the result is UMass has established some respect from within the region. The Minutemen earned their highest finish in the meet since 1986.

"I'm really happy with how well the team performed," captain Christian Abbott said. "Ben Baraldi in particular had an excellent meet. He was so focused. He had two personal bests in three races. He had the best overall performance of the meet."

Baraldi, who runs the 55 meter hurdles, registered a 7.86 in the trials, 7.66 in the semi-finals and a 7.61 in the finals, which was good for second all-time at UMass. Baraldi is New England's second fastest college runner in the 55 meter hurdles.

"I was real surprised with how well I performed," said Baraldi, who will compete in the IC4A's. "In the semi-finals I improved by about two-tenths of a second. It was definitely the best meet I've ever had. But a lot of people did really well, as well. The team did great."



Also not too shabby was the 4 x 400 relay team, which won the New England Championship. Nell Concepcion, Tom Toye, Scott Price and Dave Cahill are actually looking to go deep into the IC4A's, this weekend at Princeton, N.J. They tied their own school record with a time of 3:15.22.

Toye, who broke his own school record time in the 200 meter dash in the trials (21.97) was thrilled with his team's success.

"I was real happy to see us do well," Toye said. "We had a couple of misfortunes, but otherwise we did well. I think we're starting to establish ourselves as a force in New England."

UConn won the meet hands down, and are thus the New England Champions. Their point total was 116. Providence placed second with 71, fol-

Turn to MEN'S TRACK, page 9

Funny how much free time costs these days.

Finally. After working for what seems like forever, you have some time to yourself. To do whatever you want. Problem is, doing whatever you want costs more than you want. Enter the Chevy Cavalier. It can go up to 100,000 miles before its first scheduled tune-up.* Best of all, Cavalier fits your budget. Making it truly easy to own. So even though going out during your free time may cost a lot, getting there won't.

Cavalier

Genuine Chevrolet®
The Cars More Americans Trust.

Call 1-800-950-2438 or visit www.chevrolet.com. Bike rack pictured not included. *Maintenance needs vary with use and driving conditions. Cavalier is a registered trademark and Chevy is a trademark of the GM Corp. ©1996 GM Corp. Buckle up, America.®

QUICKIES

Illustrations by Felicia Chamberlain, State U. New York, Buffalo

PASS THE BUCKY
U. of Wisconsin, Madison

Sure, you've heard of flying squirrels, but how 'bout flying badgers? Wisconsin's beloved mascot, Bucky the Badger, found himself up against a couple of pigs when he was arrested for crowd surfing during a football game. Bucky was passed up to the 48th row of the stadium before he was finally halted by the cops and issued a $141 fine. The incident inspired a ground swell of support from local badger supporters. One radio show even asked listeners to pledge $1 to the "Bucky Defense Fund."

I SCREAM, U. SCREAM
U. of Alabama, Birmingham, U. of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, and Auburn U.

School spirit has never been so sweet since Barber's Dairies created three college-themed ice cream delights. Alabama's Bama-Berry mixes pineapple and cranberry sherbet, Auburn's Tigers Delight is an orange and blue-raspberry combo and UAB's BlazerBlast is a lemon-lime treat. Barber's established a $2,500 scholarship for the school whose flavor sells out first. Apparently sherbet spirit has caught on judging by a reported 25 calls from other universities who want a personalized recipe. On a down note, school health centers have reported an alarming number of cases of brain freeze.

A MAIZE-ING STORIES
Radford U., Va.

Radford has gone corn crazy, and students are all ears. In a year-long program called "Corn and Culture," 40 courses will examine the social, economic and religious significance of the husked vegetable that brings in $40 billion a year worldwide. The event will culminate in a Day of Corn Celebration next April, complete with corn-husk doll making, chair bottoming and corn grinding. Aw, shucks!

GLOVE & SPECIAL SAUCE
U. of Georgia

It seems 33 students are opting for Hamburger Helper over Ramen noodles as a cheap dinner alternative. HH Society founder and grad student Roger Black — who has been seen wandering around in an "I Love Hamburger Helper" apron and beating a box with a wooden spoon — meets with friends every Wednesday to test the limits of HH's 24 flavors, drink beer and watch Party of Five. A Web page is on the back burner and the HH Society's intramural team serves up hot football action. If the four-fingered glove fits…

POULTRY PROTEST
Harvard U.

Some things are worth fighting for. A group of Harvard students staged a campus protest, carrying picket signs and chanting. Their demand? Make chicken parmesan a weekly meal. Between 75 and 100 students signed a petition asking for the entree's inclusion on the menu. "It's great," said one protester. "Chicken parmesan is my favorite meal."

Although the whole charade was actually just an initiation rite, the stunt prompted a change. Dining Services responded within hours, changing that night's entree to chicken parmesan and promising to include more of it in the future.

THE HALL THAT LOVE BUILT
Barnard College, N.Y.

Who says you shouldn't build walls in a relationship? Sam and Ethel Stone LeFrak donated $2 million to the women's college to refurbish the building where they courted 56 years ago. Barnard Hall, which houses the university's gym, will receive a new paint job, marble floor restoration and new doors. Money can't buy you love, but it sure works on contractors.

POTTY BREAK
U. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

When you gotta go, you gotta go. At least, that's the defense of a man campus police cited for trespassing after they watched him cruise several university restrooms. The lavatory lover repeatedly entered and exited the men's room in Willey Hall. Then he moved on to the first-floor, second-floor and third-floor bathrooms in another hall, tapping his feet and playing peek-a-boo over the stalls.

JEDI NIGHT LIFE
Boston U.

Just in time for the 20th anniversary release of the Star Wars trilogy Special Edition, sophomore Craig Noronha used the Force to establish the Star Wars Fan Club. After his freshman year in the dorms, he realized there were a lot of fans of Luke Skywalker, Darth Vader, Yoda and the rest of the Empire, and no formal place for them to gather and philosophize. If there's ever a lack of willing participants, Noronha just uses his Jedi mind trick to increase membership.

PBJAMMY-JAMMY JAM
Ohio State U.

What's eating Goober Grape? Starfish, a student social-action organization, and the Hillel Foundation set up 30 tal' s around the Ohio campus for the PBJAM. They asked choosy students to choose fighting hunger by making an old-fashioned PB&J as they passed by. Afterward, they distributed the sandwiches to local homeless shelters. That's the best idea since sliced bread.

HE'S A BRAINIAC
Columbia U.

Former Clinton confidante George Stephanopoulos left Capitol Hill for the hallowed halls of his alma mater, where he graduated summa cum laude in 1982. Stephanopoulos, 35, will start his new career as a visiting professor of political science in the fall. He cited burnout and being overworked as his reasons for leaving the White House. Sounds like the perfect candidate for tenure.

HAVING A BALL
Texas Tech U. and Montana State U.

Fraternities at Texas Tech and Montana State go balls-out once a year for a good time and a good cause. Texas celebrated the 16th annual Kalf Fry this year with 500 pounds of calf testicles and entertainment by Willie Nelson to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association. Montana chose to top off its fifth annual Testé Feste of beer-battered and deep-fried genitalia with mud football and a Best Butt contest in hopes of helping out a local hospice. That's just nuts!

U.NEWS

Scanned and Delivered

Instead of American Express cards, students at Old Dominion U., Va., shouldn't leave home without their student IDs.

In January, two experimental bar-code scanners that monitor student attendance were installed in one of the campus' large lecture halls. Students are now required to slide their student ID through the scanner when entering and exiting the room.

Right now, the new system affects only those students taking introductory science, psychology and education classes in the lecture hall. Although 11 classes are held in the 400-seat lecture hall, only seven classes will be using the scanner. However, Wayne Edwards, general manager of auxiliary services, says if the pilot testing this semester goes well, the program will expand to other lecture halls on campus.

Ralph Stevens, associate professor of biology, came up with the idea as a way to cut down on absenteeism. "The goal is to build responsibility," he says. "It's not to force kids to go to class — it's to show them there are consequences for not going."

So far, students haven't welcomed the idea of being corralled into the classroom.

"I'm offended by the idea of being a number," says sophomore Jennifer Baise Fischer. "I don't like the idea of electronic tracking. It makes me feel like I'm in a concentration camp."

Other technical difficulties bother students like senior Julie Flavell. "I think it's a pain in the ass to actually have to worry about having my ID card every day."

Faculty support of the scanner is iffy, as well. "I'll support it as long as it doesn't get in the way and become too cumbersome getting students in and out of the classroom," says Robert Ake, associate professor of chemistry

Despite student disapproval, Stevens hopes the new system will reduce the 30 percent absenteeism he faces daily in his classes.

"Students are going to spend hours and hours trying to get around this system," he says. "They should simply spend this time studying."

Getting carded.

By Angelique Lopez, Old Dominion U., Va. / Photo by Will Bassett, ODU

Gordon, P.I.

Sitting in smoke-filled rooms, walking the streets, paying off informants — that's how we picture private investigators. But after Eastern Kentucky U. sophomore Kevin Gordon got his P.I. license, he decided a jacket and baseball cap worked better than a fedora and trench coat.

"Private investigators just need to find the facts," Gordon says.

Gordon's transformation into a private dick occurred after he spent a summer investigating insurance claims. By the time fall rolled around, he was hooked.

"In the state of Kentucky, you only have to be 18 to get a P.I. license," he says. Once certified, Gordon placed an ad in his campus newspaper for his gumshoe services. His price is $5 per hour … plus expenses, of course.

On one case, Gordon recovered stereos stolen from dorm rooms (he found them at a pawnshop). He's also run two surveillances for students who suspected their boyfriends were cheating. "But I don't do that for people I know," he says. "It can get messy."

Gordon says most of his cases involve someone trying to find a long-lost schoolmate or friend. He says the Internet is the best resource for these cases. "If you have a name, you can get any information."

But not all of his clients are strangers. A year ago Gordon told his mom to put a red bow on a jar of change and leave it in their house. When his parents were robbed recently, Gordon found a local bank teller who remembered a jar with a bow. Police watched the bank surveillance tapes, identified the suspects and recovered the stolen property.

Gordon says the world of private investigators is not as glamorous as it is on television and in movies, but he enjoys searching for facts and solving cases. And even what Gordon calls the most boring part of the job — surveillance — can have its moments. Case in point: Remember the students' boyfriends? They were cheating.

By Danetta Barker, Eastern Kentucky U. / Photo by Donald Knight, Eastern Kentucky U.

The P.I.: He sits, he waits, he watches.

U.LOSE

Dead in the Dumps

Burial at sea used to be a practice of the Mafia and the U.S. Navy, but now it appears that a university might have gotten into the act.

UCLA's School of Medicine is being sued for the improper disposal of up to 16,000 bodies donated for educational purposes. A class-action lawsuit has been filed on behalf of the relatives of the donors charging UCLA with fraud, negligence and breach of contract.

The lawsuit alleges that the bodies were incinerated with medical waste, including animal remains, scalpels, needles, blood samples and aborted fetuses. The ashes, some not fully cremated and still identifiable as human tissue, were packaged in trash bags and placed in a dumpster to be picked up by city garbage trucks. Court documents state: "Bags… were left to sit and collect for years, until finally they were taken to the Santa Monica Bay to be dumped."

The allegations first came to light in 1993 when a funeral-at-sea contractor for UCLA found medical waste in a container of human remains.

Since the 1993 scandal, UCLA has shut down its on-campus crematorium and claims to have stopped mixing remains with medical waste. Still, Mike Arias, the litigating attorney in the case, estimates that his firm receives about one phone call a day from concerned family members.

"We do have a model program here," says Linda King, UCLA's director of Health Sciences Communications. Although the university has not formally responded to the charges, the school released a statement ensuring donors that their bodies will be treated with "dignity and compassion."

The lawsuit alleges that UCLA has broken such promises before.

By Hannah Miller, UCLA

The Buzz

• In January, the NCAA passed legislation which allows student-athletes to hold part-time jobs. Athletes will be allowed to earn the difference between the amount of their scholarships and the cost of attending their school. The average difference is $2,000.

• In a case filed by three U. of Wisconsin, Madison, law students, a federal judge deemed mandatory segregated student fees unconstitutional. As a result, UW students no longer have to contribute student fees to fund campus organizations they don't support. A refund plan is being devised.

• The American Academy for Liberal Education, a group of scholars who advocate teaching Western culture without all the political correctness, granted its first accreditation to the U. of Dallas. Rhodes College, Tenn., and St. Thomas Aquinas College, N.Y., will be reviewed for full accreditation this month. The group is still investigating Michigan State U.'s James Madison College for accreditation.

• The National Association of College Stores (NACS) is investigating instances of price discrimination by some publishers. So far, NACS has found that many midsize and smaller publishers practice "dual pricing" — where college stores pay 20 percent more for books than regular booksellers. The NACS says it's considering filing a lawsuit claiming this policy violates federal antitrust laws.

• UCLA's Higher Education Research Institute reports that more college freshmen than ever before say they selected their school for financial reasons. According to the Institute's annual freshmen survey, 33.1 percent of the 1996 freshmen listed financial assistance as a "very important" factor in choosing a college.

• According to an Institute of International Education study, the number of American students studying abroad rose 10.6 percent to 84,403 in 1994–95, continuing a 10-year upward trend. By contrast, foreign enrollment in U.S. schools rose less than 1 percent in the past two years.

• Trial Lawyers for Public Justice is suing the NCAA, charging that freshman-eligibility requirements discriminate against black athletes. The group has asked the court to bar the NCAA from using the minimum standardized test score cutoffs. Lawyers argue that the cutoffs aren't based on valid research and don't accurately reflect educational potential, especially of students who are black or from socioeconomic backgrounds that left them unprepared for college.

• Cissy Stahl is offering a $75,000 reward to find out who killed her son execution-style 12 years ago. Richard Barren Bryan, a football player at the U. of Alabama, was shot, bound and thrown into the Tombigbee River in 1984. No one was arrested for the crime.

Biz Kid$

Student entrepreneurs take jobs into their own hands

BY MELISSA GREGO
Assistant Editor
Photo at right by Greg Harris, U. of Wyoming / Photo below courtesy of Java Dog

Fifth graders Ryan Duques and James Warner dunked rubber-banded T-shirts into bubbling, multicolored liquid all summer and dreamed of going into business together — a tie-dye company. They were business vets, having already been paid by neighbors to transfer home movies to video in the fourth grade. But they never thought they'd own two newspapers — before either was even old enough to celebrate at a bar.

Duques, a junior at the U. of Massachusetts, Amherst, and Warner, a sophomore at Bryant College, R.I., founded The Source, the community newspaper in Madison, Conn., in May 1994. They'll launch The Sound in Branford, Conn., this month. Each paper grosses $10,000 per issue.

Show me the money

Duques and Warner aren't one-of-a-kind. In fact, they're part of the growing number of college students who own and operate their own businesses. According to the 1996 GMAC/Gallup College Senior Survey, entrepreneurship was the top employment choice for men and third choice for women who graduated from college in 1996.

It sounds risky, but considering the shrinking number of available jobs, the idea of being your own boss in college doesn't exactly come out of nowhere, says Jennifer Kushell, president of Young Entrepreneurs Network in Boston.

Mugging for the camera.

According to the Bureau of Labor, 80 percent of college students between 1983 and 1994 secured degree-requiring jobs, whereas only 75 percent of college graduates between 1994 and 2005 can expect to do the same.

"It used to be a very simple progression — school, degree, job," Kushell says. "But young people realize they have a better opportunity in the entrepreneurial sector."

And the entrepreneurial lifestyle suits students, Kushell says. "They're comfortable with the hours, intensity, stress and newness of it. College people are used to tackling things they don't know."

Kushell, a '96 grad of Boston U., has the experience to prove it. By the time she entered college, she had already started four businesses. In November 1993, she and two partners began what is now the Network with $10,000 they scraped together from personal funds.

Eye of the tiger cub

Duques and Warner's youthful ambition has been their not-so-secret weapon.

"The Journal Register Company out of New Jersey is our major competition," Duques says. "Their local branches said they were concerned but didn't know what to do because we're kids. I'm excited to see us squeezing them."

On the flip side, young entrepreneurs need to be wary of being exploited, says U. of Nebraska, Lincoln, freshman Michael Malcom. Since he put tens of thousands of his family's dollars into the production and launch of a unisex perfume called Loquétion (pronounced "location"), he has received several calls from people wanting to get in on the action.

"I make sure business people know I'm educated in the industry before they know I'm 18 years old," Malcom says. "So the people who know I'm 18 also know that I know what I'm doing."

But student status has its advantages. Former U. of Wyoming basketball player Oliver Wilson got his big break in business when a local printer recognized him.

In October 1996, Wilson, a grad student at Wyoming, and Kevin Bonner, a '96 Wyoming grad, founded BONE and Associates, which produces clothing geared toward active living.

"The guy who printed our first T-shirts knew and trusted me because I did my undergrad and played basketball at Wyoming," Wilson says. "So he printed the shirts for us even though we didn't have any money."

Being the big man off campus is the daily grind for Aaron Henkel, a junior at Maranatha Baptist Bible College, Wis. He opened the Health Nut, a bulk health food store two miles from school in October 1994. Nine thousand bucks in student loans and help from Grandma was all he needed.

BONE-chilling businessmen.

"Four employees help me run the store besides my mom — two Maranatha students and two older, married women," Henkel says. "It's hard when your employees are older and you have to take control. I'm the authority figure."

Moonlight madness

Sometimes juggling business and school isn't possible. Henkel took a year off to nurture his budding business. And when Kristy Roach founded Kurvz, a women's snow boarding apparel company, she reduced her course load at the U. of California, Davis. Kurvz is entering its fourth season and just started operating in the black.

"I started the company while I was going to classes. I did that for about a year and almost exploded," Roach says. "I felt like I could not slack on the business, and my grades suffered. I've been taking classes here and there. That's easier."

Time management is a doozy, says Henkel, who is taking 17 credits this semester, lifeguards twice a week and plays baseball for the school. "If you own something like this, it's always in the back of your mind. I might have to go in and make an order instead of studying."

Constantine Makarewycz, a '94 grad of UC Davis, says that the hands-on experience of having your own business is the best education you can get. He started his company, Java Dog, as an undergrad with about $10,000 in loans and credit cards. He's seeking patents on Java Dog's mug clips, key chains and watchbands.

But Makarewycz admits that learning by doing also means learning the hard way. "When we first started showing our product, we talked to someone about placing an order of 15,000 pieces. At the rate we'd been sewing them by hand, that would have taken us five and a half years."

Hang in there

Although Makarewycz heeded his wake-up call and expanded the business, he says he understands why some students are tempted to give up. "Today I'd say I want to continue working for myself. But yesterday I said it would be nice to work for someone else because it's not all glorious."

Don Philabaum, founder of the Start Your Own Business Web site, says that students with good business sense can even turn a business failure into a shining spot on their résumés. It's just a matter of accentuating the positive — can you say "learning experience"?

Philabaum, who started his first business as a Kent State College, Ohio, student in the '70s, says wanting to throw in the towel is normal. The company, Aardvark Studios, which shoots the photos of graduating students, wouldn't be worth the million dollars it is today if he had quit.

As for making your own millions, Philabaum says it comes down to one simple thing: "You just never give up."

Melissa Grego's best entrepreneurial effort — a Kool-Aid stand — yielded $7.19. And her dad bought most of that.

HOW LOW WILL YOU GO?

Students hit bottom in their job limbo

BY COLLEEN RUSH
Associate Editor
Illustrations by Greg Harden, U. of Kansas

Troops, it's hell out there. Right now, you're probably scrambling for cover from the downpour of rejection letters and phone calls that invade campus this time of year. Just when you think it's safe to visit the mailroom — wham! — another lost job opportunity explodes in your face.

Someday, you'll sit around like an old veteran, cup of coffee trembling in your weary hands, and recount your job war stories. But your wounds were not life-threatening, nor your actions heroic. No, the scars you wear like a badge of honor are from a run-in with a deep fryer. Or was it a paper shredder?

It's no big secret that college students are poor, which explains the variety of interesting jobs the average student has had. We salute your efforts to be productive, upstanding citizens, and yet we marvel at the lengths you'll go to just to make a lousy buck. It's hard to define the lowest of the low on the job food chain, but students seem to have maintained bottom-feeder status in their swim to the top.

At your service

The customer-service or retail job, which generally requires dealing with dumb, cheap people, is just one layer in the stagnant scum of crap jobs. It takes a certain kind of person to handle griping customers, mindless tasks and hours of boring down time. And beneath that person's vacant eyes, perma-smile and faux friendly greeting lurks a student dying to scream, "Screw you! The customer is not always right!"

Rob Bloom, a junior at the U. of Florida, realized that customers are seldom right during the summer he worked at a discount clothing store. Between his stints as a cashier and "clothes hanger guy," Bloom learned more about people than he really needed to.

"I spent hot summer days hanging up women's clothes and breathing in the aroma of smelly feet in the shoe department," Bloom says. "When I was a cashier, one woman chose to pay for her purchase by unbuttoning her blouse and taking a wad of sweaty, soaking wet cash out of her bra."

Pierrette Shields didn't have to worry about sweaty cash from customers as a bagger at an Air Force commissary. The U. of Missouri junior worked for tips, which doesn't amount to much if your tip is, "Don't talk to strangers."

"I had to bag for this woman who nearly bought out the store. The size of the order usually warranted about a $6 tip," Shields says. "So she sifted around in her bag for a while and, with a sincere smile, gave me 8 cents."

Annoying customers aren't half as bad as being an annoying salesperson, says U. of Richmond senior Shannon Maynard. "I was a fragrance model in a department store, so I basically bullied people into trying the latest scent," she says. "And I had to wear these ridiculous outfits to match the theme of the fragrance."

Mike Mumah, a sophomore at Ferris State U., Mich., discovered that boredom and creativity make strange bedfellows at a monotonous job. Being a panty arranger wasn't something he aspired to, but that's exactly what Mumah found himself doing at a part-time job in a clothing store.

"I guess 'maintenance guy' was my official title, but I spent some days just refolding stuff," Mumah says. "I had all these panties to arrange one day, and I'm an artist, so I decided to get really creative. I spent two hours doing a color-coordinated panty formation in this big spiral."

Jobs a la commode

You can call 'em maintenance technicians, and you can call 'em waste management facilitators, but it all boils down to one task: cleaning up other people's crap. It's a thankless, behind-the-scenes job, and for some reason, it takes a college student to do it.

One student, who wishes to remain anonymous so she can score this prize of a job again, worked at a training camp for competitive skiers in exchange for access to the training facilities. Her tasks ranged from cooking to coaching, but she hadn't anticipated the nastiest chore of all: cleaning up a bathroom that 20 people shared.

"My weekly cleaning session involved mopping up stagnant water behind the toilet that had scads of tiny black worms writhing in it," she says.

Jason Slobotski thought he was going to be a groundskeeper at a beach resort for the summer, but the U. of Nebraska, Omaha, freshman found out there's more to a shrub-sculpting job than meets the eye.

"I took the job for extra summer money, but they didn't tell me that lawn maintenance also meant cleaning bathrooms and toilets."

Shawn Sunderland, a junior at Georgia Southern U., didn't just clean up crap — he shoveled it. Sunderland moved manure for $10 to $20 a day for a summer.

"It was good pay for what we did — we didn't work all day, and it wasn't brain surgery or anything," he says. "The really bad part is smelling like it after you go home. Manure isn't one of those smells that washes off right away."

But the bottom of the maintenance barrel is cleaning rooms at a motel, says Summer Lindenberg, a freshman at North Idaho College.

"Cleaning rooms at Motel 6 was the nastiest job I've ever had," she says. "They didn't give us gloves or liners for the garbage cans, and I had to pick up stuff with my bare hands. You name it, and I had to clean it up — needles, broken mirrors, puke, used condoms, whatever."

You live, you learn

And then there are the jobs that just defy categorization. We'd like to chalk it up as a "learning experience," but these jobs — the bizarre, the freaky, the silly and the unheard of — offer little more than a cache of useless skills and priceless stories.

The sweet smell of sweets wasn't enough to keep Peter Lee at his part-time bakery job. The U. of Michigan senior says the prestige and experience of packing frozen dough balls into plastic holders just didn't cut it for him.

"Imagine the scene in I Love Lucy when Lucy worked at hyper-speed on the chocolate factory line — except this job wasn't funny."

But Neil Story's job at his dad's cement-yard-art manufacturing company is funny. Little cute froggies under umbrellas, bird baths, fishing boys, geese — they made it all. But Story, a senior at the U. of South Carolina, Spartanburg, didn't have the cushy, pencil-pushing job — he was the poor sap sitting in 90-degree heat, painting and sanding the unfinished cement pieces.

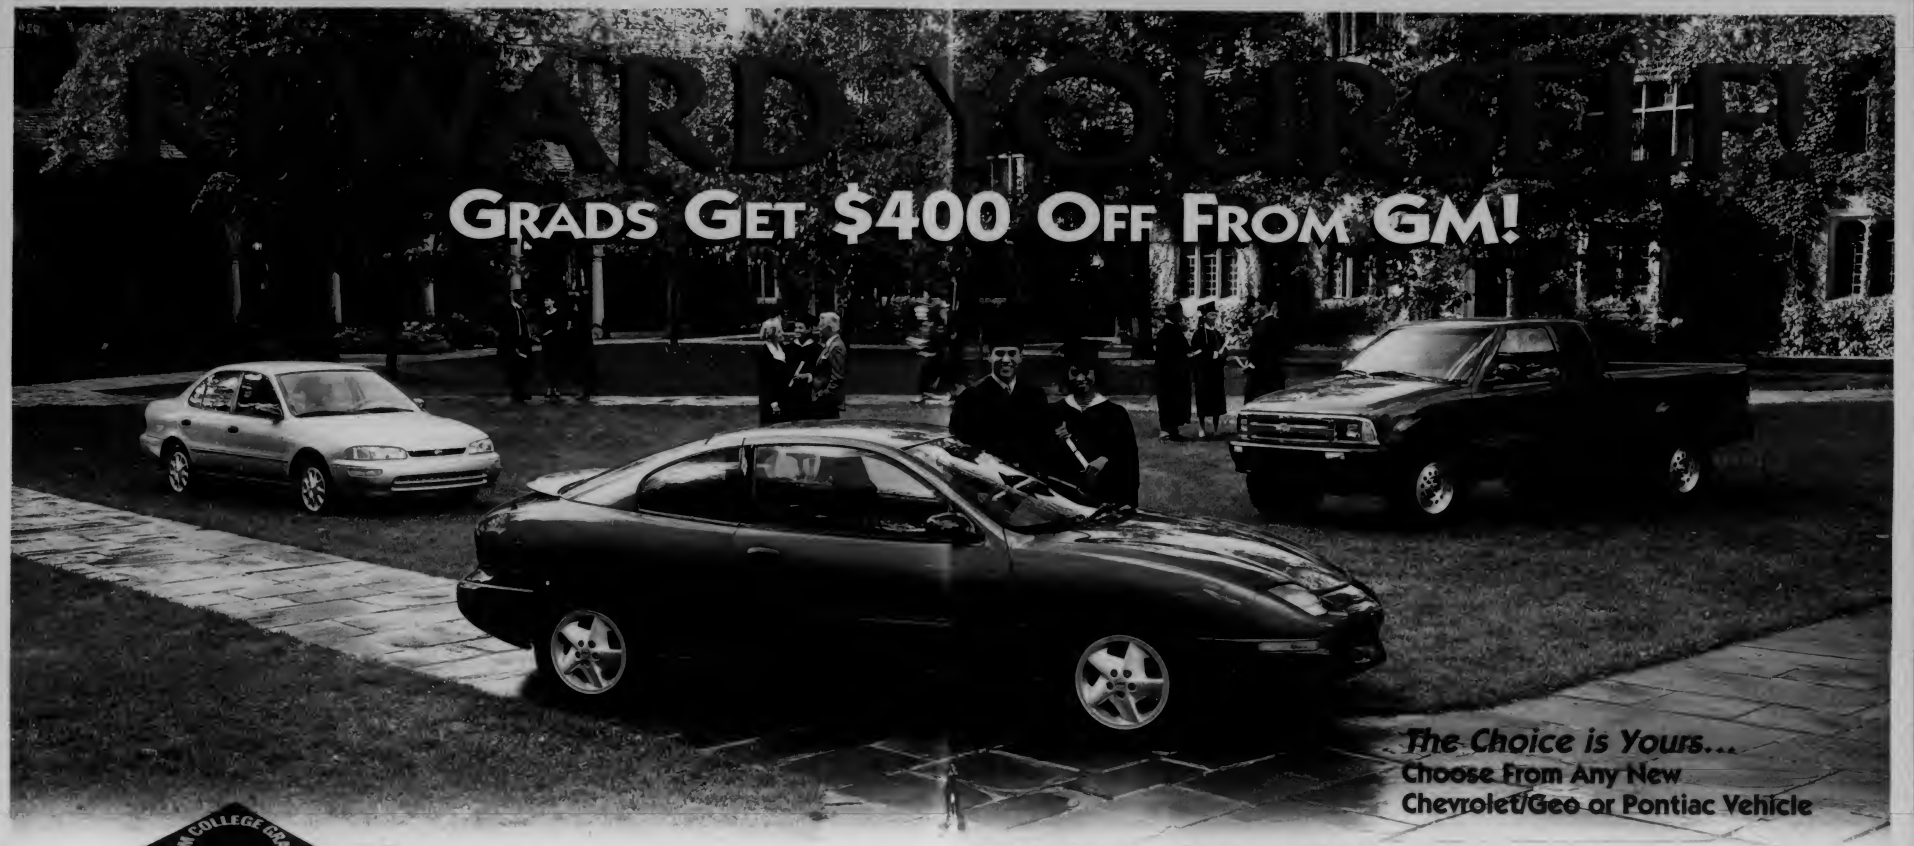
"That job is the reason I got into photography," he says. "A camera is much lighter than yard art."

Fellow USC senior Josh Hatchell had his own weight problems as a security guard at a retirement home — dead weight, that is.

"It sounds morbid, but the only thing that happens on the midnight to 8 a.m. shift is that some of the residents die," he says. "I was the one they called when they needed help moving bodies because I was the strong, young guy."

Hatchell did manage to pick up a few interesting skills during his graveyard shifts, including how to tell how long someone has been dead.

"I sincerely hope that's not a skill I'll need later in life," he says. "But I did gain insight into relating to older people."



If there's one thing Sara Weber knows, it's that she will never use the skills she learned as a "detasseler" in the corn fields of Iowa. The Iowa State U. junior spent several summers lopping the tops or "tassels" off of corn.

"It had something to do with male and female corn and breeding, but we didn't really get into the genetics of it," Weber says. "We just had to handpick the tassels off."

The recurring dreams about corn have faded, and Weber says the experience actually guided her career path. "I will never, ever do hard labor again. Working in that field is what got me to go to college."

The moral of the story? Aw, who needs a dumb ol' moral? Just be glad you're studying your way away from stories like these.

Colleen Rush was an English major, so she's just glad to have a job at all.

Plus...

- No Downpayment When You Purchase
- Special Easy Financing For Grads

Grads, for your $400 certificate and program information, return the postage-paid reply card enclosed in this publication, or call:

1•800•964•GRAD

visit our web site: www.gmgrad.com

CHEVROLET. Geo. PONTIAC. GMAC FINANCIAL SERVICES

See your participating Chevrolet/Geo or Pontiac dealer for details. ©1996 GM Corp. All rights reserved.

Rock

BY AMY HELMES

Rating System

★★★★★ John ★★★★ Paul
★★★ George & Ringo
★★ Pete Best & Stu Sutcliffe
★ Yoko

Pocket Band

My Drug Hell

Roaming the streets of London, singer and guitarist Tim Briffa was searching for something. He spent several years asking anyone who remotely resembled a musician if they wanted to be in his band and help create sounds for the songs he had written.

When bassist Paul Donnelly and drummer Joe Buttitude said "Yes," the trio formed My Drug Hell, a Britpop band whose sound is a throwback to the psychedelic '60s.

The band's first U.S. release, This Is My Drug Hell, wraps light rhythms around jangling guitar cuts.

Briffa is afraid the charming pop sound of "Girl at the Bus Stop," the group's first single, will deceive people. "We are generally more sleazy and deeper than that song is," he says.

"Girl at the Bus Stop" has the catchy hook that radio program directors love to play to death — an unfortunate fate for rising musicians. But Briffa hopes the band's depth will convince music buyers that it's more than just a one-hit wonder.

"There are 200 songs in my head, but only 10 on this album."

The band derives inspiration from the Beatles, but like most British artists these days, Briffa has a definite opinion of My Drug Hell's mega-popular compatriots, Oasis.

"It'd be unfair to call them shit because they're not shit," Briffa says. "But they are massively overrated, and their songs are two minutes too long."

By Pete Holtermann, Xavier U., Ohio

L7
The Beauty Process: Triple Platinum
Reprise

★★★★½

STATIC AND FUZZY SCREAMS preface these raucous rock chicks' fifth album. Never known for their subtlety, L7 renders ear-seizing vocals, screeching guitar riffs and pounding bass rhythms.

The album feels desperate and a tad psycho, but humorous lyrics from the catchy "Off the Wagon" and "The Masses Are Asses" are what make The Beauty Process fun. "Moonshine," a simple, more low-key song, is as sensitive as you're gonna get from these grunge girls. (You can't expect a group that opens for Marilyn Manson to be too sentimental.)

While The Beauty Process definitely won't put you to sleep, the energy of the later tracks wanes into slower, pulsing sounds. But the beat picks up again by the end with the ultra-frenetic love song "Lorenza, Giada, Allesandra." This latest release lives up to the standards of L7 fans, and may even entice those less familiar with their earlier work.

RADIO, RADIO

1. Tricky, Pre-Millennium Tension, Island
2. Screeching Weasel, Bark Like a Dog, Fat Wreck Chords
3. Guided By Voices, Sunfish Holy Breakfast, Matador
4. Less Than Jake, Losing Streak, Capitol
5. Jon Spencer Blues Explosion, Now I Got Worry, Matador
6. DJ Shadow, Entroducing..., Mo' Wax
7. His Name is Alive, Universal Frequencies, 4AD
8. Sun Ra, The Singles, Evidence
9. Fiil, Sinkhole, Low Blow/Triple X
10. Future Sound of London, Dead Cities, Astralwerks

Chart based solely on college radio play. Contributing radio stations: WRUV, U. of Vermont; WXJM, James Madison U., Va.; KTEK, New Mexico Tech U.; WCBN, U. of Michigan; KFSR, California State U., Fresno; WNYU, New York U.; KWVA, U. of Oregon, Eugene; WMSV, Mississippi State U.; KCR, California State U., San Diego; KTRU, Rice U.

Get the groove on U.'s music page: http://www.umagazine.com/rocks

Various Artists
Nowhere Soundtrack
Mercury

★★★½

A sexy, edgy soundtrack to accompany a motion picture about doomed youth and adolescent love — and it has nothing to do with Claire Danes or Leonardo DiCaprio. Some big names contributed musically to director Gregg Araki's grand finale to his "Teen Apocalypse" trilogy, and the soundtrack should spawn some radio favorites.

All-around raging teenage freakishness is succinctly expressed in tracks like Hole's "Dicknail" and the ever-charming Marilyn Manson's "Kiddie Grinder." Elastica's "In the City" is a short but energized previously unreleased track, and Radiohead delivers a drifting, acoustic ballad with "How Can You Be Sure?"

Other standouts from Catherine Wheel, Curve, the London Suede, Lush and 311 make up for several droning techno tracks. With or without the movie, the Nowhere soundtrack is definitely on the map. One listen, and you're guaranteed to feel hopelessly despondent.

Marvin Gaye
The Vulnerable Sessions
Motown Records

★★★½

Moody, pleading, soft and romantic ballads on lost loves and broken promises — all this from a man who weathered some stormy relationships himself. Marvin Gaye said of all his albums, this was the one he loved the most. But until now, the seven songs had never been properly arranged for release.

Smooth and jazzy for the lovers and the lovelorn, Gaye sounds like he should be crooning along with Old Blue Eyes. He'll rip your heart out with perfect melting vocals and lines like, "Without your love, I'm slowly dying," and "Why must your kiss torrure me and drive me crazy like this?"

The Vulnerable Sessions is more mellow than the R&B-spiced pop songs you're used to from this Motown master. So if you're craving some soulful, seductive rhythms, Marvin Gaye can tell you what's going on.

Van Morrison
The Healing Game
Polydor Records

★★½

Healing is sometimes a slow process, and for better or for worse, Van Morrison illustrates that sentiment with his latest release, The Healing Game. That guttural voice he's known for still rings true, belting out bluesy lyrics backed by strong saxophone instrumentals.

Unfortunately, many of the songs drag, and there's too much repetitiveness. For the last minute and a half of one song, he croons over and over, "You know I'm talking about this weight." He may be talking about the weight, but you just be waiting for him to stop.

Although they're no "Tupelo Honey," the songs on The Healing Game are great to just unwind to. Songs like "Fire in the Belly" and "Waiting Game" are a few of the more enjoyable tracks. By far, the most beautiful and overwhelming standout is "Piper at the Gates of Dawn," which is made more mystical and entrancing with wistful Celtic pipe accompaniment.

Our Picks

Komeda
The Genius of Komeda
Minty Fresh

Maybe it's something in the meatballs, but Sweden is a hotbed of unique pop. The latest worthwhile import is Komeda, a sophisticated blend of Bergman and Kubrick film soundtracks, mod-rock soundscapes, go-go beats and lush vocals à la Slowsie & the Banshees.

Pigeonhed
The Full Sentence
Sub Pop

The best of Lenny Kravitz, early Fine Young Cannibals, P-Funk grooves and indie-rock sensibilities have gone to Seattle to die and be reincarnated in this duo of Steve Fisk and Shawn Smith. With help of (ex-)musicians from Pearl Jam, Soundgarden and Alice in Chains, they churn out elevated, soulful creations.

Various Artists
Oil/Skampilation Vol. 2: Skalloween Radical

Listen up all collegiate rude boys and girls who want an outlet from the rat race — it's time for the brilliant two-tone of ska's third wave. Recorded at Coney Island High's 1995 Skalloween dance party, it preserves professional sound while showcasing the chaotic live show of 10 Next Big Things. For fans of camp, skank to the revisited "Munsters Theme."

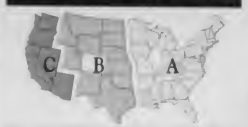
Rockers Hi Fi
Mish Mash
Warner Bros.

Launch into the electronic world of the British duo DJ Dick and Glyn Bush, where sonic soundscapes are filled with hip-hop and a multitude of sampled treasures. It's sure to be Warner's most qualified entry into the drum and bass movement and a club floor sensation.

Sugar Plant
After After Hours
World Domination

A spoonful of Sugar Plant helps the medicine go down. The Tokyo couple produce ambient melodies with a soft techno influence perfect for settling down after a long night out.

Jericho Turnpike
Big Red Dumpster
Rustbelt



Although the band's name sounds divine, we're not sure if these guys are straight-ahead Christian rockers. But they do have a handle on strong, expressive vocals and lyrics. Either way, it doesn't matter once the clean, Midwestern rock with an occasional crunch gets turned up. Everyone gets a little grungy once in a while — even Jesus got his feet washed.

The Assistant Editors have wasted away countless hours to find these selections for your consideration.

Great Weekend Escapes for as low as $109 from MasterCard and United Airlines!

Take Off For The Weekend With United Airlines And Return The Following Monday Or Tuesday To Get Substantial Savings When You Use Your MasterCard® Card.

Weekender Zone Fare Certificate

Roundtrip Rates

Within Zone A or B	$129 roundtrip
Between Zone A & Zone B	$189 roundtrip
Between Zone A & Zone C	$269 roundtrip
Between Zone B & Zone C	$189 roundtrip
Within Zone C	$109 roundtrip

Not valid for travel to/from IL/CO/AK/HI

To enjoy these low Weekender Zone Fares - plus earn Mileage Plus® credit on your trip - just call your travel professional or United to reserve your flight and redeem your certificate.

To receive these savings, use your MasterCard® card to purchase an E-Ticket™ between Feb 1, 1997 and May 15, 1997 for travel between Feb 15, 1997 and June 6, 1997. Outbound travel good on flights departing on Saturday. Return travel good on flights returning the Monday following departure (An exception for travel between zones A-C. Return travel may also be on the Tuesday following departure)

Zone Definitions:
Zone A - AL, AR, CT, DC, DE, FL, GA, IA, IN, KY, LA, MA, MD, ME, MI, MN, MO, MS, NC, NH, NJ, NY, OH, PA, RI, SC, TN, VA, VT, WI, WV
Zone B - ID, KS, MT, ND, NE, NM, OK, SD, TX, UT, WY
Zone C - AZ, CA, NV, OR, WA

Not valid for travel to/from IL/CO/AK/HI

Use Your MasterCard® Card For Great Savings On United Airlines.

To make reservations, call United at 1-800-241-6522 or your travel professional. Please reference Weekender Zone Fare Certificate AV0027.

Promo Code: AV0027
Ticket Designator: AV0027
Travel Complete: June 6, 1997

CUT CERTIFICATE HERE

TERMS AND CONDITIONS:
Promo Code: AV0027
Valid Carrier: United Airlines/Shuttle by United/United Express.
Valid Routing: Roundtrip travel must begin and end in the 48 contiguous United States (IL/CO/AK/HI excluded). All travel must be via the routes of UA in which UA publishes Economy Class fares. One way travel/stopovers/circle trip/open segments/waitlisting/standby are not permitted. Open jaw permitted (IL and CO excluded as origin/destination- however connections through CHI/DEN are permitted.)
Valid Ticket Dates: Feb 1 through May 15,1997.
Valid Travel Dates: Feb 15 through Jun 6, 1997. All travel must be complete by Jun 6, 1997
Blackout Dates: 1997 Mar 22, 29- Apr 5,12. Outbound travel must be on flights departing on Saturday, with return travel on flights the Monday following departure, or the Tuesday following departure if the passenger is traveling between zones A-C.
Class of Service: V class (Seats are capacity controlled and must be available in the required booking inventory at the time reservations are confirmed.)
Advance Purchase: Within 24 hrs of making reservations, at least 14 days prior to departure
Min/Max Stay: Saturday night stay minimum. RETURN TRAVEL MUST BE THE IMMEDIATE MONDAY FOLLOWING DEPARTURE. AN EXCEPTION FOR TRAVEL BETWEEN ZONES A-C. RETURN CAN ALSO BE THE IMMEDIATE TUESDAY FOLLOWING DEPARTURE
Mileage Plus Accrual: Discounted travel is eligible for Mileage Plus credit
Ticketing: E-Ticketing only (electronic ticketing service)
Taxes/Service Charges: All fees, taxes and surcharges including Passenger Facility Charges (up to $12) are the responsibility of the passenger and must be paid at time of ticketing
Cert Restrictions: Certificate is required for discount and must be presented at time of ticketing. Accept original certificate only. Non-extendible, non-combinable with other air travel certificates or discount fare offers (Mileage Plus awards/SilverWings awards/convention/group/tour/senior citizen/student/child/travel package/travel industry discount/ military/government/joint/interline/wholesale/bulk).
not replaceable if lost or stolen. No cash value. may not be sold or bartered. Protection for flight irregularities will be on United/United Express/Shuttle by United flights only. Discount applies to new purchases only and will not be honored retroactively or in connection with the exchange of any wholly or partially unused ticket. One ticket per certificate redeemed. Void if altered or duplicated.
Ticketing Restrictions: Non-refundable. Non-transferable after ticketing. Change in origin or destination is not permitted. Tickets MAY BE rewritten for a $50 per ticket fee.
©1997 MasterCard International Incorporated

Agency Ticketing Instructions: See $*PMA/AV0027 for detailed information
1. Treat as Type 'A' Discount Certificate
-Use Fare Basis Code: VE14NSTU
VE14NSTD (zones A-C)
-Use Ticket Designator: AV0027
-Endorsement Box: VALID UA ONLY/Non-Ref/No Itin Changes
2. Refer to ARC Industry Agents' Handbook, section 6.0 for details.
3. Failure to comply with promotion guidelines could result in debit memo.

UAL ATC/CTO Ticketing Instructions: See $*PMQ/AV0027

8 016 5003000045 7

UNITED AIRLINES

MasterCard

©1997 MasterCard International Incorporated

Reel

BY JAMES HIBBERD

FADE IN † SCENE I. YOUR LOCAL theater on a rainy March day. † As the story opens, we see Harrison Ford beating the snot out of Brad Pitt's Irish accent in New York. Then the camera pans over to Wall Street where Tim Allen plays a commodities trader — sans tool belt. Jump cut to Val Kilmer, still acting like an Iceman after all these years. Slow dissolve to Jim Carrey as a lawyer who rarely, if ever, talks out of his butt. And cue Jennifer Lopez lip-synching Selena for the uplifting finale. † FADE OUT

Devil's Own

Sony

Although widely published reports of ego-driven script battles between stars Harrison Ford and Brad Pitt dogged this production, who can resist a pairing of Hollywood's most appealing leading men? Not us, surely. Here, a New York City cop (Ford) takes a young émigré from Northern Ireland (Pitt) into his home. But when his family members are taken hostage, Ford begins to suspect his new roomie is no lucky charm. Could it be the shrine to Michael Collins in Pitt's room?

Liar, Liar

Universal

Trying to prevent his dad's trousers from spontaneously bursting into flames, the son of a habitually fibbing lawyer (redundancy alert!) makes a birthday wish that his father will tell the truth for 24 hours. Jim Carrey stars as the fast-talking lawyer who suddenly finds he cannot tell a lie. Quick — ask him if he's really worth $20 million!

The Saint

Paramount

First George Sanders, then Roger Moore and now Val Kilmer have taken a crack at playing that poor-man's James Bond — secret agent man Simon Templar. If you can accept the former lizard king as a government agent, you'll have no trouble buying Elisabeth Shue as a scientist whose life's work everyone is trying to steal.

Jungle 2 Jungle

Buena Vista

A commodities trader (Tim Allen, TV's Home Improvement) discovers he has a long-lost son who was raised by Amazon tribesmen. Fighting his initial instinct to "Sell! Sell!," the trader takes the fruit of his loins to the jungle of Wall Street, where he tries to teach him the finer points of social etiquette, city life and investment banking.

Selena

Warner Bros.

Rushed into production faster than you can say La Bamba, this big-screen biopic of the Tejano music sensation will finally give Selena the recognition her tender, well-crafted ballads of San Antonio angst deserve. Jennifer Lopez opens her heart to play the Madonna wannabe of the Southwest.

Mimic

Miramax

Years after saving New York City from an infectious disease, a scientist (Mira Sorvino) and her husband (Jeremy Northam) find themselves stalked by the virus they thought had been destroyed. How exactly, you ask, does a virus stalk someone? Well, it has learned to disguise itself as a human — mimic, if you will. And you thought the alligators in the sewers were a bitch.

All Over Me

Fine Line

Two teenage best friends (newcomers Alison Folland and Tara Subkoff) living in Hell's Kitchen discover love, lust and lesbianism on summer break. Long the center of each other's worlds, the girls' friendship is challenged when a variety of boys enter the picture. Expect budding sexuality set to a good soundtrack.

Inventing the Abbots

Fox

Next Big Things Liv Tyler and Joaquin Phoenix star in this drama about two families shrouded in mystery and dark secrets (no, it's not autobiographical). Based on a short story by Sue Miller and helmed by Circle of Friends director Pat O'Connor, the plot follows two brothers competing for the affections of three wealthy and beautiful sisters.

Hoodlum

MGM/UA

He fought in Vietnam with Martin Sheen, went deep undercover with Jeff Goldblum and even fell from grace as Ike Turner. Now Laurence Fishburne is Ellsworth "Bumpy" Johnson, godfather of Harlem in the 1930s. After taking control of the local numbers racket, Bumpy wages war against gangsters Dutch "Grumpy" Schultz (Tim Roth) and Lucky "Sneezy" Luciano (Andy Garcia).

Wide Awake

Miramax

In this coming-of-age comedy starring Denis Leary and Rosie O'Donnell, a 10-year-old goes on a quest to find God (presumably not played by Leary). The boy, named Joshua no less, sets out on his pursuit to make sure his beloved, recently deceased grandfather is in the right hands.

You'll find everything but the Rainiests on U.'s movie page: http://www.umagazine.com

Screen Saver

Love and Other Catastrophes

Hunting down AWOL professors, being charged mysterious library fines, struggling to park on campus — sound familiar? It certainly does to Emma-Kate Croghan, the 23-year-old writer/director of the college satire Love and Other Catastrophes.

"There was certainly some catharsis in writing the story," she says.

The picture follows five students at an Australian college who juggle relationships, classes, dying professors and thesis papers with titles like "Doris Day as a Feminist Warrior." For Croghan, the 17-day film shoot was an opportunity to make a feature with her film-school friends.

"Everyone who worked on the film graduated from the university within the past three or four years," she says. "So it felt like a student film, but there was a lot of pressure because you're using other people's money."

Once completed, Croghan was pleasantly surprised when her project got picked up for distribution and eventually found its way to the Sundance Film Festival.

"It has positively exceeded our expectations," she says. "When I was making the film, my dream was just for it to be finished — and then to not end up in cans under my bed." — JH

The Reel Deal

Grosse Pointe Blank

What's worse than being stood up on prom night? Finding out your missing sweetheart is a professional killer. That's what Debi (Minnie Driver, Sleepers), discovers when Martin Blank (John Cusack, City Hall), shows up for their Grosse Pointe High reunion.

Strange as it may sound, Driver says this black comedy is about the fine line between the American dream and the American nightmare. "This film was absolutely rooted in the truth of what this country can create: a self-made man who is a killer."

Not to worry. It's no Natural Born Killers, although Driver does liken the idea of attending her reunion to a rampage. "It's kind of like a car accident. I sort of feel like there would be a lot of rubbernecking and — as they say in the film — seeing who has swelled."

Driver and Cusack on the set may also have appeared to be life imitating art. "I basically sparred with John every day," Driver says. "It was like a couple of big deer clashing antlers."

But she makes it clear that working with Cusack was cool. "It's so rare that actors are just in it because they love it and they're having a good time. And Johnny is like that."

— Melissa Grego, Assistant Editor

There is a girl being born in America

P.L.A.Y. Participate in the Lives of America's Youth. Call 1-800-929-PLAY.

HOWARD'S End

Howard Stern wants you to see his Private Parts

BY THE U. CREW
PHOTOS COURTESY OF PARAMOUNT PICTURES

RADIO'S BAD BOY HOWARD STERN HAS A REPUTATION for terrorizing reporters — he rips them a new one if they ask a stupid question, and he's always asking female reporters to show him their breasts (or worse!). So when Stern called U. Magazine from his Long Island home's basement to talk about his new flick, Private Parts, we were ready for anything.

But what we got threw us for a loop. Stern — the radio show host who has racked up more than $1 million in FCC fines — was professional, courteous and downright polite. What gives?

Apparently, there's another side to Stern. And that's the side he bares in his movie Private Parts, which is based on his best-selling autobiography of the same name. That's right — Stern isn't satisfied with his millions of listeners, his best-selling books and his television show on E!. The self-proclaimed King of all Media is ready to take on Hollywood. But is Hollywood ready for Howard Stern?

U. Magazine*: What were you like when you first started out in radio?
Stern: When I was first starting out, I would get on the air and I would f—k up. In the movie, you see me in my first college radio job, and you're going to laugh your ass off. You're gonna go, "How did this guy get to be one of the top broadcasters in the country?"

U.: You mention your first college radio gig. Does the movie focus much on your college days at Boston U.?
Stern: Yeah. In fact, the first time I come on screen you see me in college trying to pick up girls — something I was not very good at.

U.: What was it like reliving your college radio days?
Stern: Doing the college radio scenes (filmed at Lehman College in the Bronx) was probably the most fun for me. I went back and listened to a lot of tapes of me doing bad radio. And man, I had a lot of tapes of that. I wasn't good. I was green. And my voice was f—ked. My throat would tighten up, and I would sound like Kermit the Frog.

U.: Is there anything in the film college students will relate to?
Stern: There's a lot of college stuff that's really cool — getting your first job and going in for your first job interview. It's the whole idea of going out and trying to conquer the world when you have no f—king self-confidence.

You'll see me when I go on my first job interview, and the guy who's doing the interviewing is a complete maniac. He goes, "What do you want to be? A disc jockey?" And I go, "Yeah." And he goes, "What are you? An asshole? What are you? Stupid?" And I go, "No, I'm not stupid. In fact, I'm a graduate of Boston University."

U.: When you first started out in radio, did your parents always harp on you to get a real job?
Stern: No, but I had an uncle who used to constantly ask me, "Why don't you get a real job?" People always thought I was sort of jerking around, and quite frankly, I wasn't making any money at it, so I'd even think, "What am I doing with my career?"

U.: Howard, the movie's called Private Parts. Are we going to see your private parts?
Stern: Well, I'm in my underwear, and you do see my butt cheeks. You're gonna throw up. And they're not stunt cheeks; they're mine.

U.: No body double? You must be pretty confident.
Stern: No, I just know they're about the funniest butt cheeks in America. There's hair on 'em. There's cellulite. There's all kinds of shit. You can't duplicate my buttocks for comedy.

U.: Is the movie going to have a lot of the same fare as your radio show?
Stern: Yeah, there's lesbians and Fartman. But what's going to shock you is that you have a real story here. It's not just me spanking women.

U.: The movie also centers on the love story with your wife, Alison.

Howard goes Hollywood.

What's it like being married to Howard Stern?
Stern: The main problem we have is that when I'm on the air, I have this diarrhea of the mouth, and I talk about everything in our lives, and she has a hard time with that. In the movie, we also show intimate scenes just talking in bed, and you go, "Man, he's a great guy. I can see why women would like him." And then on the other hand, you go "What a f—king asshole." And that is my wife's dilemma.

U.: You make a big deal about being faithful to your wife. How did you like the love scenes with Mary McCormack, the actress who plays your wife in the movie?
Stern: Well, I've got to admit, I kinda dug 'em. Those guys who say you don't get aroused during love scenes, they're all full of shit. I was totally aroused. I guess I'm not so professional.

U.: Some of your fans think you're a god, while some people think you're the devil. How do you see yourself?
Stern: God.
(pause)
No. It's weird that some people's perception of me is that if I walked down the street, people would throw eggs at me or something. That's not true at all. I did an interview with 20/20, and I said to the guy, "You think I'm hated? Let's walk out on the street right now, and I guarantee you everyone will like me." And sure enough, we walk out on the street and everyone's going, "Hey, Howard! What's happening!"

U.: You don't make many public appearances, but when you do, they're usually pretty scandalous.

What are you planning for the premiere?
Stern: We have some wonderful bands on the soundtrack — White Zombie, Marilyn Manson, Green Day — and they all want to perform, so we're thinking of having a big concert and then showing the movie. And I want to do it for my fans. I don't want to have one of these Hollywood premieres where you're waiting for George Clooney to show up. That's just not me.

U.: Are you worried that the critics might pan the movie?
Stern: It's impossible. I think begrudgingly they're going to have to give me some praise. Ivan Reitman, who produced the film, said they can't criticize my acting.

U.: It would be pretty embarrassing if you couldn't play yourself...
Stern: Well, playing yourself is tricky. It was a little more difficult than I thought it was going to be. I mean, listen — I'm no Olivier, but I think I did a credible job.

U.: You've done radio, you've written books, you've got a TV show. Now you've made a movie. What's next?
Stern: I don't know. I don't give a f—k. I don't know what's next. The next thing I gotta do is make sure I get up to do that radio show.

A face only a mother could love.

U Magazine
The National College Magazine

PUBLISHER & EDITORIAL DIRECTOR
1991-1996
GAYLE MORRIS SWEETLAND

PUBLISHER & EDITOR
FRANCES HUFFMAN

ASSOCIATE EDITOR
COLLEEN RUAN BOZARDELL U. '95

ASSISTANT EDITORS
CARRIE BELL HUMBOLDT STATE U. '96
MELISSA GRILLO U. OF MICHIGAN '96
ANI HELMES XAVIER U. '96
JAMES HERRERO U. OF TEXAS, AUSTIN '96

ART DIRECTOR
DAVE DRUM

ADVISORY COUNCIL
DR. DAVID L. ADAMS INDIANA U.
W. B. CASEY U. OF IOWA
DR. JAN T. CHILDRESS TEXAS TECH U.
MONA CRAVENS U. OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA
MARK GOODMAN STUDENT PRESS LAW CENTER
DR. LES HYDER EASTERN ILLINOIS U.
KATHY LAWRENCE U. OF TEXAS, AUSTIN
RICHARD C. LITTLE SOUTHERN METHODIST U.
LESLEY MARCELLO NICHOLLS STATE U.
DR. FRANK MAGUSKY OREGON STATE U.
DR. J. DAVID REED EASTERN ILLINOIS U.
TOM RUNNICLE ASSOCIATED COLLEGIATE PRESS
RICHARD SCHLETTE PAST PRESIDENT, CMA
CHUCK STONE U. OF NORTH CAROLINA
LAURA WIESNER NORTHWEST MISSOURI ST. U.

PEER COUNCIL
KELLY BOLMANOVICZ COLORADO STATE U.
HAZELENE P. BOWEN INDIANA STATE U.
LAWRENCE P. GANTI BABSON COLLEGE
BRIAN HUFFMAN MARSHALL U.
DOUG KALMA U. OF NEBRASKA, LINCOLN
HEATHER LEE OHIO STATE U.
ANGELA MUSE ARIZONA STATE U.
DOUG SMITH GEORGETOWN U.
GENAE STEVENSON UTAH STATE U.
GAIL WALKER AUBURN U.

ADVERTISING SALES OFFICES
Main Office
DIRECTOR OF SALES & MKTG. ALEXI GOLDFEIN
1800 CENTURY PARK EAST, SUITE 820,
LOS ANGELES, CA 90067
TEL: (310) 551-1501
FAX: (310) 551-1659 OR 552-0836

New York
U. MAGAZINE, 170 E. 61ST ST., SUITE 600
NEW YORK, NY 10021
TEL: (212) 980-2800 FAX: (212) 980-2811
PETER KERNOCHAN, EASTERN ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
LESLIE SUTTLE, AD SERVICES COORDINATOR

Midwest & Detroit
JOE GOENTHER, PETER GOENTHER,
TEL: (312) 335-9001 FAX: (312) 335-8578

Dallas
PAM GANZ, NANCY WELLS
TEL: (214) 991-4994 FAX: (214) 991-4995

San Francisco/Pacific Northwest
PATRICK DOYLE
TEL: (415) 777-4383 FAX: (415) 777-4385

Entertainment Ad Sales
PETTERI GOTTLIEB
TEL: (310) 836-7808 FAX (310) 841-4607

American Collegiate Network, Inc.
PRESIDENT MARIA SPEETH
VICE PRESIDENT PAULA PURDIE
OPERATIONS DIRECTOR KATHLEEN RYAN
CIRCULATION MANAGER TRACY MATTHEWS-HUBBERT
ASSISTANT CONTROLLER MARIETTE MERCADO
INTERN KASEY SYMMONS

WEB SITE: HTTP://WWW.UMAGAZINE.COM
E-MAIL: EDITOR: EDITOR@UMAGAZINE.COM
ART: EDITORS: EDITOR@UMAGAZINE.COM
ADVERTISING: ADSALES@UMAGAZINE.COM
CONTESTS: CONTEST@UMAGAZINE.COM
CIRCULATION: CIRC@UMAGAZINE.COM

U is published nine times a year and printed in the U.S.A. on recyclable paper. Subscriptions are $18. Copyright© 1997, U Magazine and © The National College Magazine are registered trademarks of American Collegiate Network, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

PLEASE RECYCLE U.

ABC

CONTESTS

5TH ANNUAL U. PHOTO CONTEST FOUR $1,000 GRAND PRIZES

Here's your chance to win big money! U. is offering four $1,000 cash grand prizes for the best photo entries submitted in four categories: Campus Life/Traditions, All Around Sports (mud to varsity), Road Trippin' and Funniest Sights. PLUS, for each entry published in U. during the year, we'll pay you $50.

Photos can be of anyone or anything on or off campus, from normal (whatever that is) to outrageous. For best results, keep the faces in focus and the background as light as possible.

Winners of the month will be published in U. and on our Web site at http://www.umagazine.com. The four $1,000 Grand Prize winning entries will be featured in U.'s May 1997 issue in our fifth annual College Year in Review special section.

Send entries on color print or slide film, labeled (gently) on the back with your name, school, address, phone number (school and permanent) and info on who, when, why, what and where the photo was taken. Include names of people in the photos if possible. Entries cannot be returned and become the property of U. Magazine.
Deadline for entries is March 14, 1997.

Mail your entries to
U. MAGAZINE PHOTO CONTEST
1800 Century Park East, Suite 820
Los Angeles, CA 90067-1511

TRIPPIN'
Matt Johanson, San Francisco State U.
"Hmmm ... weed or college?"

FUNNIEST SIGHTS
Brad McKown, New Mexico State U.
"Mountain biking mishap."

Remember that one special moment during your freshman year when all was right with the world? You aced an exam you didn't study for.. that person you'd been drooling over asked you out... you did a keg stand without passing out. Aaaah. The glory days.

To coincide with the release of "The Freshmen," The Verve Pipe want to hear all about that memorable moment from your freshman career. Write us about your best freshman experience (in 150 words or less) and you might win a free concert from The Verve Pipe at your school, compliments of your pals at U. Magazine and RCA Records. Just jot down that killer moment from your freshman year, and the boys in The Verve Pipe will choose the winning entry. (Notes You don't have to be a freshman to win!)

Deadline for entries is March 15, 1997.

Send entries, with your name, address, school and telephone number to:
The Verve Pipe/Freshmen Contest
P.O. Box 5476
New York, New York 10185 OR
E-mail your entry to:
freshmen@thevervepipe.com

Contest Rules

1) No purchase necessary.

2) You may enter by submitting a written essay of your favorite freshman moment in 150 words or less on a plain sheet of paper to: Win The Verve Pipe Contest/P.O. Box 5476/NY/NY/ 10185 or e-mail to freshmen@thevervepipe.com. Prize: The Verve Pipe will perform a free concert on the college campus of the winning entry by no later than May 31, 1997.

3) All eligible entries must be received by March 15, 1997. All entries become the property of BMG Music, and will not be returned.

4) Contest open to college students enrolled in an accredited college or university as of January 1, 1997. Employees and immediate family members of U. Magazine, BMG Music or any of its affiliated companies, or American Collegiate Network Inc. are not eligible to participate in this contest.

5) The winning entry will be chosen by The Verve Pipe and announced in the May 1997 issue of U. Magazine. The winner will also be notified by registered or certified mail on or about March 30, 1997. Only the prize set forth above will be awarded.

6) The Verve Pipe's performance will be subject to the representatives of the college at which the contest winner is enrolled. The decisions of The Verve Pipe in selecting a winner shall be final.

7) The contest is subject to all applicable federal, state and local laws and is void wherever prohibited or restricted by law.

8) By participating in the contest you agree to all the foregoing contest rules.

WIN A $10,000 SCHOLARSHIP!

In memory of our former Publisher & Editorial Director, Gayle Morris Sweetland, U. Magazine is offering a $10,000 scholarship to an outstanding student for graduate study in the field of journalism. This scholarship is not based on financial need and will be awarded to one student for the 1997-98 academic year. The scholarship is available to graduating college seniors and to students currently enrolled in a graduate journalism program who have at least two years experience at a campus publication.

To receive an application, please send a SASE to:
GMS Journalism Scholarship
U, The National College Magazine
1800 Century Park East, #820
Los Angeles, CA 90067

Oxygen
O
15.999

Fluorine
F
18.998

Chlorine Cl
35.453

Hydrogen
H
1.0079

Neon
$10,300

Argon
Ar
39.948

It's a gas.

Plymouth Neon $10,300* (For starters.) We've managed to bond together all the elements of fun—sporty looks, plenty-o-room, a 16-valve, 132 horsepower engine and an optional AM/FM stereo with cassette or CD player. It's hotter than a Bunsen burner. For more information on the Plymouth Neon sedan or coupe, stop by your friendly Plymouth dealer, call 1-800-PLYMOUTH or visit us on the Web at www.plymouthcars.com.

One clever idea after another. That's Plymouth.

*MSRP includes destination and $1,000 rebate, excludes tax. One mole of any gas occupies about 22.4 liters.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 90 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, February 26, 1997

Leaving Las Vegas

Wayne Newton joins Chevy Chase and cast for a new National Lampoon movie, Vegas Vacation. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

UMass once again goes to shootout

Senior tri-captain Buddy Hoffman and the Massachusetts Lacross team travel to chestnut Hill to take on the Eagles of Boston College. (See Sports page 10)

WORLD

France pushes for immigration laws

PARIS (AP) — France's conservative government began a final push yesterday to convince parliament to toughen up immigration laws, despite protests accusing the majority of bowing to the far right.

The National Assembly opened debate on proposals to strengthen an already restrictive 1993 immigration law, which made it easier to deport immigrants.

Interior Minister Jean-Louis Debre, the bill's sponsor, defended the proposal as "measured, without excess, with firmness, without inhumanity."

While he spoke, 16,000 protesters marched along the Boulevard St. Germain, chanting: "It's not the immigrants, it's Debre that has to go."

Under the new bill, longtime residents would have to prove they are not "a threat to the public order" before they could renew their 10-year residency cards. They also would have to show they maintain a "regular residence" in France, an effort to crack down on fake addresses.

The law would allow police to search workplaces for illegal employees, search immigrants' vehicles and confiscate the passports of foreigners lacking required residency papers.

NATION

Suspects charged in black church burning

PERRY, Ga. (AP) — Three white men were charged yesterday in the weekend burning of a predominantly black church.

Jason Wesley Cantrell, 22, Eric Anthony Shugart, 22, and Daryl Brent Patterson, 20, were each charged with first-degree arson, the Georgia Bureau of Investigation said at news conference.

The fire early Saturday gutted the Oak Grove CME Church in the community of Elko, about 10 miles south of this central Georgia town.

The brick and wood church was more than 100 years old and had about 40 members.

Investigators were tipped by confidential sources who said the three men were involved.

Nationwide, more than 300 churches have been damaged by arson or bombings over the past two years, according to a recent U.S. Department of Justice report. Most were black churches, many of them in the South.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 52 LOW: 44	HIGH: 45 LOW: 25	HIGH: 47 LOW: 21

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword .....page 13
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 12
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 14

Former UMass student dies of meningitis

Hendsbee, 21, died yesterday

Former University of Massachusetts student Todd Hendsbee, 21, of Main Street, Amherst, died at 1 a.m. yesterday morning at the UMass Medical Center, Worcester, of bacterial meningitis.

Hendsbee was diagnosed with meningococcemia, a form of bacterial meningitis that infects the blood.

Hendsbee fell ill Sunday night. He was first treated at University Heath Services (UHS) Monday morning, and was transferred to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton. From there, he was airlifted to Worcester, according to University spokesperson Kay Scanlon.

Hendsbee, originally of Winthrop, Maine, withdrew from classes in November. He worked at the Mullins Center and lived in a house with UMass students, Scanlan said.

According to UHS, meningococcemia is not easily spread, and there is no evidence that those who were in close contact with him have contracted the infection.

Scanlan said that Health Services contacted Hendsbee's close acquaintances and co-workers for preventative treatment with the antibiotic ciprofloxacin.

Plans for a memorial service were not yet announced at printing time.

— Tamar Carroll

UHS offers information, preventative treatment

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Health Services (UHS) has taken several preventative measures to ensure that other members of the Five College community do not become infected with bacterial meningitis, the disease with which former UMass student and Amherst resident Todd Hendsbee was diagnosed.

Hendsbee died early yesterday morning at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester.

Since Hendsbee's preliminary diagnosis on Monday, the University has been advising students to be aware of the symptoms of the disease — high fever, neck stiffness, nausea and vomiting — and bring any concerns about meningitis to UHS or their own private health care providers.

In addition, up to 70 of Hendsbee's close acquaintances, housemates and co-workers have been placed on preventative antibiotics.

Nicki McHugh, the marketing manager of the Mullins Center, where Hendsbee was an employee, said that Health Services was able to get in touch with the other employees who worked with him last Saturday.

"When he was diagnosed, we were contacted for a list of people who worked with him," McHugh said.

Anne J. Lardner, UHS public health nurse, said that everyone in close contact with Hendsbee had been contacted by UHS and assured the community there is no reason for panic.

"The people who needed to be contacted were contacted by health services and have been treated appropriately," Lardner said. "There is no cause for panic."

According to a UHS memo, people who attended a hockey game at the Mullins Center Saturday and a concert at John M. Greene Hall at Smith College Sunday night (which Hendsbee attended) are not currently being treated with the antibiotic ciprofloxacin.

Dr. Constance Lentz, a UHS physician, stressed precautions for avoiding all infectious airborne diseases.

"I can't say it too many times. You need to make sure you don't share drinking glasses or sodas, smoking materials, eating utensils," Lentz said. "If you follow the basic precautions, there's no chance of getting the infection."

Meningitis was also diagnosed two years ago in two Amherst College students. Twenty-year-old Nishtha Adhvaryu, an anthropology major, died from the disease.

Questions and concerns about meningitis can be directed to the UMass triage nurse at (413) 577-5229 or to private health care providers.

Bacterial meningitis cases rare; can be fatal without treatment

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

The death of Todd Hendsbee, a former University of Massachusetts student diagnosed with meningitis, has generated concern about the disease and its transmission.

Meningitis is an inflammation of the meninges, tissues that surround the brain and spinal cord. It can be caused by viral or bacterial infection. Viral meningitis is more common and less severe than bacterial meningitis, and is not life threatening.

Hendsbee's illness was bacterial, specifically caused by the Meningiococcus bacteria strand. This is one of the most common and deadly causes of meningitis, closely related in infective activity to the pneumococcus and streptococcus bacteria. Those strains also thrive in college-aged people as causes of meningitis, pneumonia and strep throat.

University Health Services (UHS) said the actual cause of Hendsbee's death was not solely the infection of the meninges, but rather a larger nervous, respiratory and circulatory infection, including meningitis, called Neisseria meningitidis. Hendsbee's bloodstream was saturated with the bacterium, according to Dr. Constance Lentz, of UHS.

"There are several different strains [of meninge-infecting bacteria] that are carried by the general population," Lentz said.

"In a healthy population we can find the organisms in the throats of 2 to 15 percent of the people. In an outbreak situation it's up to 20 to 40 percent," Lentz added.

Only one out of every 100,000 people are susceptible to meningitis, although up to 15 percent of the general population carry the bacteria responsible for the disease, according to Lentz.

The disease thrives in the winter and early spring, spreading more easily as people spend more time indoors in closer contact with each other. The colder temperatures and low humidity make mucous membranes more susceptible to infection.

The main symptoms of meningitis include severe headaches, fever, stiffness of the neck and back, easy exhaustion, irritation from bright lights and a deep red skin rash in some patients. Without treatment, drowsiness and loss of consciousness can result. Some varieties of the disease can be fatal.

Meningitis may be transmitted when airborne antigens for the disease are picked up through the nose or mouth. In many instances an infection spreads to the meninges through the bloodstream or from other infected organs, particularly respiratory organs.

According to the National Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, the annual infected population is not overwhelming.

"In the United States every year we estimate 2,600 cases of Neisseria meningitidis with a fatality rate of between 11 and 13 percent," said Dr. Nancy Rosenstein of the CDC.

Spread of the disease, although rare, is possible. UHS public health nurse Anne J. Lardner urged students to be aware of possible symptoms and contact UHS or their private health care provider for more information.

Autopsy results delayed on grad student

University of Massachusetts spokesperson Kay Scanlan said that the autopsy results for Anthony S. Nsiegbunam, a Nigerian graduate student who died last Saturday, will not be available for six to eight weeks.

Scanlan said the tissues have been sent to a laboratory for further examination, including drug testing. However, she stressed that the medical examiner's office found no indication of meningitis or other infectious diseases in Nsiegbunam.

Nsiegbunam was found unconscious in Parking Lot 71 at the University around 11 a.m. and transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, where he was pronounced dead. Scanlan said that there "was no indication of foul play."

Nsiegbunam, 28, was studying political science at UMass. He lived at 60 Platinum Circle, Northampton and interned at the Daily Hampshire Gazette.

Members of the local Nigerian community have organized a memorial service for Nsiegbunam on March 1 at 6 p.m. in the First Baptist Church in Amherst.

— Tamar Carroll

New security implemented at Empire State Building

By Beth J. Harpaz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A handwritten note carried by a Palestinian gunman to the Empire State Building suggests he decided more than a year ago that his "bitter enemies" must be "annihilated and exterminated."

The note found on the body of Ali Hassan Abu Kamal was released yesterday, two days after he killed one sightseer and wounded six others before fatally shooting himself on the 86th floor observation deck of the landmark skyscraper.

The scene of the bloodbath reopened to droves of tourists yesterday who had to go through newly installed metal detectors.

"We live in New York. You can't stay afraid," said teacher Hannah Schneewind who waited with her second-grade class to take in the city panorama on a clear, crisp day.

The gunman's rambling diatribe was laden with political references and titled "Charter of Honour." The note said those listed were "my bitter enemies and they must be annihilated and exterminated."

It blamed Zionists — backed by Americans, Britons and Frenchmen — for "turning our people, the Palestinians, homeless."

"My restless aspiration is to murder as many of them as possible, and I have decided to strike at their own den in New York, and at the very Empire State Building in particular," said the note, which was signed by the 69-year-old Abu Kamal, who worked as an English teacher in Gaza City.

He listed Jan. 1, 1996, as the note's "original date of meditation."

Police said they still believe Abu Kamal was a deranged killer who acted alone. Abu Kamal's family said he was distraught over somehow losing $300,000, but police questioned whether there ever was any money.

"There is no information that this alleged scam exists," Police Commissioner Howard Safir said. "There are no bank accounts that we're aware of, nothing in his personal effects, no safe deposit boxes."

Abu Kamal, who arrived in the United States on Christmas Eve, paid only with cash while dividing time between New York and Florida. However, "We would in no way characterize it as high-rolling," Safir said.

The document also lists as enemies "a gang of rogues who attacked me" — an apparent reference to a severe beating by vigilante militants in his homeland of Gaza — as well as an Egyptian police officer and a group of students he claimed beat his son. No mention was made of financial troubles.

The note shows Abu Kamal was a "man who had many, many enemies in his mind," Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said.

The shooting didn't deter tourists yesterday. Several hundred sightseers waited up to 40 minutes to buy tickets, go through the airport-style metal detectors and take the elevator up to the 86th floor.

Kim Broen, a 21-year-old Danish traveler, said he didn't like the long wait to go through the metal detectors, "but if this is the only way to stop this from happening, it's OK."

Judy and Larry Wilkinson of Valdosta, Ga., said they had arrived at the building Sunday 20 minutes after the shooting. Mrs. Wilkinson said she was determined to return yesterday.

"I was a little apprehensive, but I really feel like it was an isolated incident. And it is a marvelous view," she said.

New York authorities questioned how Abu Kamal was able to buy the pistol used in the shooting from a Florida gun shop just a month after arriving in the United States. He used a motel as his address for the required ID.

Fest celebrates Pakistani culture

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Let's take a journey

The Pakistan student's association presented "A Journey Through Pakistan" last night in the Campus Center Auditorium. Refer to the photo essay on page 3.

By Jeffrey R. Yusah
Collegian Correspondent

On Monday the Pakistani Student Association (PSA) sponsored a night of Pakistani culture and celebration called "A Journey Through Pakistan" in the Campus Center Auditorium from 6:45 to 9 p.m.

The night featured an array of songs, dance, ethnic fashion show and a poetry recital. According to Syed Musharraf Bokhari, treasurer of the PSA, the event was a celebration of Pakistani pride and an opportunity for others to learn about a culture and people not usually represented by mainstream America.

Hosted by Master of Ceremony, Sonia Ali, the night began with an electric guitar rendition of Pakistan's national anthem. The anthem foreshadowed an event that combined both the old and the new. There were six different dance routines which represented various different styles and rituals of all four provinces of Pakistan.

Students from Smith College played an integral role in the performance with a Garba hand dance, Dandia stick dance, modern Bhangra Punjabi dance and a song by Smith College student, Sabrina Rahim. All dance routines were choreographed by students and the music assortment had energetic and modern dance beats.

Bokhari, a senior electrical engineering major at UMass, performed a rendition of "Jab Se Tu Nain Mujhe" by Abida Parveen to a diversified and enthusiastic crowd. The night culminated with a service of traditional Pakistani food.

The PSA, founded a year ago, has held and co-sponsored various events this year including Pakistani Family Night, a rally against racism, a lecture by Jarvis Tyner and a pizza night. This was their first event of this magnitude.

"All events have been free so far without any financial help from the University," Bokhari said, who played an integral role in putting the event together. "It's always been hard for most of the RSO's and diverse groups to serve cultural food because of the extremely painful process of getting the paperwork done for any cultural events."

According to Umar Rana, president of the PSA, this was the first time the PSA has had a chance to give the UMass general audience a feel for Pakistani culture.

"I'm really glad that we pulled it off because there are a lot of Pakistanis at UMass and this was a chance to break a lot of stereotypical images," Rana said.

"We accomplished something really great. Pakistanis have not been represented [very] well at UMass, and now that they have, I guess UMass knows what we're all about," said Subika Raza, a performer at the event.

Bokhari added, "Smith College participation was a

Turn to PSA, page 3

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor: Seema Gangatirkar Production Supervisor: Daniel Bodah
Copy Editor: Lisa Oliveri Production Staff: Chris Lavin
Photo Technician: Lauren Kosky Matt Guilmette

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

A sign of protest

The GEO hangs a banner on the parking garage facing the Student Union yesterday morning.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage

Feb. 20
A parked vehicle was damaged in parking lot 12 on Forestry Way.
A minor two vehicle accident occurred on John Adams Road.

Alarm — Fire

Feb. 21
A fire in a suite lounge damaged furniture on the 7th floor of Brown Residence Hall.
Feb. 22
A fire alarm was pulled in Brown Residence Hall.

Annoying Behavior

Feb. 20
Individuals were harassing the residential staff of McNamara Residence Hall.
Feb. 21
There was a complaint of skateboarders in the Campus Center Garage.
Feb. 23
There were reports of objects being thrown from windows at John Adams Residence Hall.
There was a dispute between individuals in Moore Residence Hall.

Assault & Battery

Feb. 21
John C. Cleary, 18, of 12 Lunt St., Quincy, was arrested in John Adams Residence Hall for assault and battery and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering

Feb. 21
A vehicle was broken at University Press on East Pleasant Street. A car phone was stolen.

Disturbance

Feb. 23
Kristen A. Eldon, 18, of 119 Sandy Pt. Ave., Somerset, was arrested in Pierpont Residence Hall for disorderly conduct and possession of liquor.

Disorderly Conduct

Feb. 22
A male individual was in a women's bathroom in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Drug Law Offenses

Feb. 23
Joseph E. Farrell, 20, of 3 Knollwood St., Norton was arrested in Coolidge Residence Hall for possession of a false register of motor vehicle document and possession of alcohol.

Health/Safety Hazard

Feb. 23
There was smoke from a overloaded dryer in the basement of Wheeler Residence Hall.

Larceny

Feb. 20
Three wallets were stolen from offices in Tobin Hall. Police are requesting that any suspicious activities in academic buildings be reported. Call 545-2121.
A registration card was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
Feb. 21
An individual reported a credit card stolen from Brown Residence Hall.
Feb. 23
A bicycle was stolen from Melville Residence Hall.

Liquor Law Violations

Feb. 21
Kurt E. Loescher, 18, of 10 Oak Ridge Rd., Easthampton, was arrested in Kennedy Residence Hall for possession and transport of liquor.
Laura J. Kriebel, 19, of 130 Main St., South Hadley, was arrested for possession and transport of liquor.
Stephanie B. Goldberg, 18, of 7 Seward Avenue, Beverly, was arrested in Kennedy Residence Hall for possession and transport of liquor.
Feb. 22
Tom T. Chau, 18, of 26 Greenwood St., Lowell, was arrested on University Drive for possession and transporting liquor.
Ted M. Churchill, 20, of 60 Poquanticut Ave., Easton, was arrested on Massachusetts Ave., for possession and transporting liquor.
Mark R. McGowan, 20, of 26 Sutton Pl., East Longmeadow, and Richard P. MacDonald, 18, of 33 Frankwyn St., East Longmeadow, were arrested on University Drive for possession and transporting liquor.

Reported Death

Feb. 22
An official statement was released by the University about a student's death.

Suspicious Person/Activity

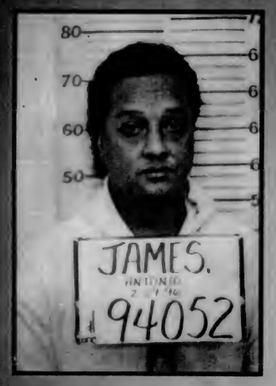
Feb. 22
Reginald A. Remy, 19, of 22 High St., Brookline, was arrested for trespassing on the Northeast Residential Area Quad.

Traffic Stop

Feb. 20
David Lee, 21, of 48 Holy Family Rd., Holyoke, was arrested for operating a vehicle with a revoked license (2nd offense) and operating a vehicle without an inspection sticker.

Vandalism

Feb. 20
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.
Feb. 21
Graffiti was written on a wall in Hamlin Residence Hall.
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
Feb. 22
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 50 on Emerson Road.
Windows were broken in John Adams Residence Hall.
Graffiti was written on the elevator panel in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
A bike rack was damaged at Emerson Residence Hall.
Two vehicles were damaged in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
Windows were smashed on two vehicles near Robsham Visitors Center on Massachusetts Avenue.
A large window was broken in the School of Management.
A vehicle's window was smashed in parking lot 29 on Clark Hill Rd.
Feb. 23
Windows were smashed in two vehicles in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.



Warrant Service

Feb. 20
Myriah D. Manley, 19, of 33 Turkey Hill Ln., Hingham, was arrested in Webster Hall for indecent exposure and disorderly conduct.

Weapons Violations

Feb. 20
There was report of a weapon being pointed out a window in Patterson Residence Hall.
Feb. 23
There was a BB gun being fired from John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

DEATH PENALTY FOCUS
A Film & Panel Discussion

"FINAL JUDGEMENT"
A documentary film by UMASS alumni Jonathan Stack showcases the last few weeks of Antonio James' life. James was executed by the state of Louisiana on Feb. 26, 1996, after spending 13 years in death row.

Panel Discussion
Jonathan Stack: Director and Filmaker
Burl Cain: Warden, Louisiana State Penitentiary
Bill Newman: Attorney, Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union

Wednesday, Feb. 26 Student Union Ballroom
UMASS, 7:30 PM

Sponsored by: Commuter Area Government, UMASS Prisoner Support, Mass. Prison Issues Group, AFSC

PSA

continued from page1

great help, thanks should go to the PSA members, the scheduling office, building services and special thanks to the Collegian for covering the event."

This past year, PSA has been active at UMass and the Five College area. All the events so far have been free of charge due to donations from the Pakistani community. The event was viewed by the members as a great success, with close to 400 people in attendance.

"It was one of the most well organized events held this year, and it demonstrated the diversity of the UMass community," said Aamir Khan, secretary of the PSA, and choreographer of the UMass dances presented at the event.

The event was open to everyone, and held an opportunity for others to become educated about a part of the world that many Americans do not hear about.

The energy that the performers exuded seemed to make it easy for the audience to get involved and enjoy the traditions of the Pakistani culture and people.

Pakistan is in its 50th year of existence and carries a population of more than 90 percent Muslim. The religion plays a large role in their traditions and beliefs.

Upcoming events held by the PSA will be to be hosted in April. Students can visit their webpage organized by Saba Rizavi at "http://www-unix.oit.umass.edu/~psa" or email the group at "psal@stuaf.umass.edu."

"CELEBRATING PAKISTAN"

PHOTO ESSAY

BY KENNETH W. P. SCOTT
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Pakistan Student's Association proudly presented "A Journey Through Pakistan" Monday night in the Campus Center Auditorium.

As one of the fastest growing RSO's, the P.S.A. put on their biggest event to date. The evening was filled with many different performances from different regional cultures.

The pictures hear feature Syed Musharraf Bokhari singing "Jab Se Tu Nain Mujhe." Some students from Smith college preformed a modern Bhangra, this was a modern version of a traditional Punjabi dance.

The last photo was another Bhangra (the dance of the province of Punjab), which was preformed in the traditional form.

thinking about grad school?
Kaplan can help.
If you're interested in taking that next step to success, come to Kaplan. We'll walk you through the admissions process and help you get a great test score on the GRE.
Class begins March 3
Ace the Exam!
the leader in test prep and admissions counseling.
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

Positions Available
The Collegian is acceptiong applications for:
- Associate Finance Manager
- Associate Advertising Manager
- Associate Business Manager

For more information call Alycia Hines at 545-3500, or come to the Collegian located at 113 Campus Center Basement

1997 REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

The Chancellor's Counsel on Community, Diversity and Social Justice is soliciting innovative proposals for educational activities and programs which have the following goals:

- promote mutual respect
- enhance understanding of community, diversity and/or social justice issues
- encourage collaboration between different campus communities and constituencies

Eligibility: Undergraduates, graduate students, staff and faculty, as individuals or groups

Award Criteria: Proposed activities

- must bring together persons from two or more communities or constituencies in a joint activity
- must demonstrate collaboration of communities or constituencies in the proposal planning process
- must promote mutual respect and understanding on the campus or in the larger community
- should represent new programs or collaborating partnerships as opposed to annual programs or continuations of past projects
- should be completed by the end of the fall 1997 semester

Examples of Activities Which Could be Funded: Forums, speakers, film/video series, seminars, workshops, training programs, public education programs, outreach activities to secondary schools and home communities, community public service programs, faculty/student collaboration to develop new courses, performance events, printed materials, posters.

Proposal Components:

- a clear description of how the proposed activities will meet both the goals and award criteria
- a list of groups involved and contact person or persons responsible for the activity
- a plan for evaluating the impact and effectiveness of the activities
- a time line indicating when the activities would start and conclude
- a budget

Award Ranges: $250 to $1500, with all awards expected to total $10,000

Submission Date and Location: Mailed, e-mailed (piquette@admin.umass.edu) or hand delivered by noon on Friday, March 14, 1997 to the Chancellor's Counsel on Community, Diversity and Social Justice, c/o Office of Human Relations, 206 Middlesex House.

Proposal Review and Award Announcements: A committee of the Chancellor's Counsel on Community, Diversity and Social Justice reviews all proposals. Awards will be announced during the week of March 24, 1997.

Information: Call the Office of Human Relations at 545-0851.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1992
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Campus card dreams

Prompted by the soft whining of his alarm clock, Sam emerged from a warm embracing slumber. It was 8:30 a.m. He wandered to the kitchen and prepared a cup of coffee, barely hearing the radio announcer babbling about a bombing in a nearby city. Guzzling the last few drops as he laced up his boots, he turned over the day's responsibilities in his head. Microeconomics convened in a hot, overcrowded lecture hall in a little over an hour. He knew that if he was late, his chances of sitting in a cushionless chair with no desk were near certainty. But he had to visit the campus store or he would be penless.

The bus was late this morning. When one of the drivers called in sick, the others struggled to compensate, barely able to justify the stress at $6 an hour. With shrinking funds the PVTA was having difficulty keeping enough buses on the road. This, of course, meant that Sam would have to stand on the crowded bus, after swiping his ID through the meter. Somewhere $.50 was silently deducted from his account.

As the bus approached the stop across from Hasbrouk it stood for nearly five minutes as rented security personnel attempted to clear a traffic jam of drivers unable to find parking.

With less than half an hour until class, Sam took a chance, stopping at the Starbucks franchise for a second cup. He recalled the friendly faces he used to see every morning before People's Market went bankrupt.

"Can I help you?" Frank asked abruptly.

Sam was somewhat thrown by his rude tone, but all things considered Frank probably had a right to be bitter. He had not been able to afford UMass and was taking night classes at Springfield Community. He pulled in $5.25 an hour at Starbucks to help pay for night school.

"Medium to go," Sam muttered. He had a right to be bitter as well since he had been unable to secure part–time employment at the said coffee establishment. The manager had chosen someone outside of the school who could work full time.

Sam swiped his ID through the $4000 card reader that had caused People's Market to close. Somewhere a tally was kept. 9:43 a.m. Starbucks — $1.75 med. coffee.

"Yes," Sam replied, barely able to contain his fury at having to settle for a condiment sandwich....

Sam McAfee

Rob hated working at Subway. The only thing that made his job worse was complicated orders. He repeated it.

"You want a chicken sub with no chicken?"

"Yes," Sam replied, barely able to contain his fury at having to settle for a condiment sandwich.

"Just lettuce, onions and pickles, please."

Rob made the order and rang it up on the register.

"Your card, sir."

Sam handed it over and glanced around the room for a place to sit. The AT&T lounge looked hopeful enough, provided he could tolerate the incessant buzzing of their neon logo.

"You don't have enough credit."

Rob stared blankly at this troublesome customer awaiting some form of payment. They did not pay him enough to deal with people like this, he thought to himself.

"Never mind," Sam replied sourly and strolled over to the only vacant bench in the lobby, next a monitor that ran CNN all day. Staring at what looked like disaster footage, he leaned back against the cold glass and dozed off.

Sam remembered the attendance policy. He left his notebook and jacket on the stair, unwilling to leave his new pen unguarded, and ran up to the card reader next to the podium.

10:08 a.m. Econ 103 McAfee, S. present.

By the end of class, Sam was famished. As he neared the newly constructed Fleet Bank Student Union 2000, he could just make out the neon golden arches through the window. No force in the galaxy could compel him to bite into one of those fat–laden McWaterbuffalo sandwiches. Strolling through the door he scanned the lobby, trying to ignore the McEyesore. Would he have to settle for Subway? It seemed likely since it was the only franchise with remotely vegetarian items.

Sam McAfee is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The ex–girlfriends club

Luke Meredith

If you see me on campus this week, congratulate me. Give me a high five, a nice wink, a pat on the back, whatever. I gained something Friday night that I've had before, I'll have again, and apparently, given my luck, something I'll always have in decent supply.

Kids, be proud. I have a new ex–girlfriend.

Just kidding. Just kidding. It's not great to have these, but you have to learn to deal with it. It's sure as hell ain't fun, but I imagine I don't have to tell you that. There's the obligatory break–up fight, which transcends all other fights. The gloves come off, and everything, I mean everything, comes out into the open. After it's over, there's the "scouting reports," like "Who was she with?" "What did she say?" and my favorite, "Could I kick his ass?" There's the more depressing knowledge that all the really cool times spent together are forgotten instantly, replaced by a pretty bitter and jaded view about all women, who are now just evil.

But I can deal with all those. I'm older now, and I realize that time heals all wounds, and that there are plenty of women out there who are not evil, yet. There's one side–effect of an ex, though, that I don't think I'll ever get over. Hell, I think it's impossible to even try.

I call it the "subtraction factor."

Pretty slick, huh?

It's the factor that says that invariably in a relationship, or a "situation" or a "whatever," there are certain unforgettable elements that will stay with you for the rest of your life, long after the ex is gone. There are just signposts that marked that time in your life, and stay with you always. Here, let me give you a few examples.

My first relationship was in kindergarten. Keep in mind that for the purposes of our discussion, "relationship" means any contact with a female that you cared about. Anyhow, her name was Joy, and she was in my class. Guys, she was da bomb. Tall, skinny blonde that was really shy and sweet. I'm head over heels for her, but of course I'm five years old, so I can't do anything about it. (I didn't play "doctor," I was a good kid.) One day, for our Christmas party, her mom baked brownies, and Joy had to go around class and give one to everybody. She got to my desk, and I got so red that I stared at my sneakers for an hour. Well, she sits down, we finish the party, two days later I get a ColecoVision for Christmas and it's all good.

Right?

Wrong.

To this day, whenever I see brownies, I think of Joy. She has "subtracted" brownies from me, because I can't think of them without thinking of her.

See what I'm saying? I've got a couple more for you to digest.

Third grade. Love of my life, Colleen Farrell. I liked her for about a year, but I only got to talk to her once. We're alone together, in Quik Stop, of all places.

My great line?

"What the hell are you looking at?"

She ran out crying, I bought a pack of Blueberry Bubble–Yum and went home and sulked. From now on, whenever I'm around Blueberry Bubble–Yum and the Phil Collins song, "Against All Odds," (don't ask), I think of Colleen.

Patriots–Broncos playoff game, 1988. Some girl I met in the Methuen Mall the day before, (save your wise–cracks for later) calls me up during the third quarter and asks me out. I give her the Heisman, Pats lose. Whenever the Pats and Broncos play, there's her face. Do you get it now?

I'll fast–forward to college, because the highlights are better there.

Freshman year. Random hook–up, but this girl and I had been working it for awhile. She dumped my ass for the goalie on the hockey team. She took with her "We Got Tonight" by Bob Seger. That's probably good, actually.

There have been countless others, who in no particular order, have "subtracted" Pearl Jam songs, Cavaricci's, (don't laugh, you wore them too) "Summer Lovin'" on the Grease soundtrack, my 20th birthday, the Methuen high hockey rink, an entire bar (Woody's Roadhouse, I'll miss ya) and a million other things.

Let's get back to Friday night.

We're fighting outside of DeLano's. Loud, angry, vicious fighting. In an epiphany I realize our fences will never mend. I've been uptown all night, and I'm pretty hammered. A few minutes before, I agreed to split a sausage from that guy that sells them right outside Antonio's if he waits in line for it.

So we're screaming, and in the middle of it all, my buddy tugs at my arm.

"Luke, here's your sausage."

He hands this half–eaten, ketchup–laden sausage to me. I look at it, and the absurdness of the whole scene blows me away. I knew then what she subtracted from me.

That's how it happens. From now on, sausages will remind me of her. (That and Mazzy Star.)

By the way, I never ate the sausage. I hate ketchup.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian Columnist

UMass: the breeding ground for a new democracy

Craig O'Connor

When we enter college, the University becomes the site of our lives for around four years. During that time we live in the atmosphere provided by the University, often to our advantage. It is at school that we have the opportunity to explore ideas and build frameworks of thought that will play a large role in the way we conduct our lives after graduation.

The possibilities of individual achievement and collective action on campus influence our feelings towards our potential for affecting the society in which we live for the rest of our lives. The society we inherit is ours to create and change; the extent to which we realize this is determined partly by our experiences in controlling our world here at the University.

Recently students have become aware that they have little control over their environment — that the Administration does as it wishes and makes its plans without adequate student participation. The lack of effective student involvement in running the campus and determining our education may perhaps further the general apathy towards and alienation from politics and social activism in the United States today.

This is our University; it is supposed to be dedicated to unleashing the potentials of every student, allowing for self discovery that will encourage us to build an ever greater nation. Public higher education began in this country for many reasons — one was to train the population to lead the United States into prosperity; another was to expand the scope of human intelligence and possibility.

The most egalitarian and noble ideal of public higher education is the one that seems most forgotten in recent times: public education is an instrument of democratizing the nation, allowing the benefits of education to seep through the whole of society, giving every person the opportunity to achieve success as they individually define it. Public education is meant to level the inequities inherent in a society whose opportunities are too often determined by family wealth and accident of birth.

The democratic intentions of a university like ours is to ensure that the class lines of society are not damagingly permanent and that students come out into the social, economic and political system feeling as if they can be a productive member of the creation of the world around them. Students should graduate, in a democratic society, convinced that the nation they enter will be theirs to fashion and be proud.

Yet it seems on this campus, though much less than on other campuses, students are treated not as equals whose ideas and needs are respected, but as mere tuition players and bodies to be made into workers for the corporate economy. This is not an argument against working in a hegemonic corporate economy but against the disfranchisement of students as regards to the campus and education in which they grow and live. Because of a distant and impersonal administration, that often ignores student views, students may leave school feeling as if society is an absolute formation which they cannot change but must simply find a place within. The dynamism and creativity of individuals may be mutilated into mere reactionary entities satisfied to accept that which already exists.

It is unfortunate that if one looks around the University you can see this occurring. Very few students feel that they can meaningfully take part in activities on campus — whether it be the All Campus Card or the plans for possible privatization or the planning of academic schedules in their departments — much less effect the political/economic structure of our nation.

The monolith of the military–industrial complex and the "two–party" political system which dominates our political options seems even larger and increasingly omnipotent after four years of what is intended to be a liberating education, yet feels more like survival on an impersonal, bureaucratic campus.

The idea of a democratic campus has been lost amid the shuffle of struggling to maintain the University while politicians slash education budgets and show the younger generations that the government and the establishment doesn't care about them or their future. The administration, often stuck in the position of making hard decisions about student life while having fewer and fewer resources to dedicate to education and culture, might find that students have ideas and possible solutions that would preserve the integrity of the campus and solvency of the University while expanding the democratic impulse of student.

As a brief example, the Administration might look into expanding the number of student businesses in the Student Union instead of bringing in outside corporations to run the building — thus preserving the ideal of a building run for and by students, increasing the quality and diversity of services without compromising the autonomy and freedom of the campus.

From a broad perspective, our society is one in which many people feel that the existing system is too powerful to overcome, that the economic and political structure is too dominant and pervasive to warrant effort at change. If we don't learn at college that we can change the way things are, then our college experience serves to perpetuate a system that many feel does not serve the interests of the whole society. If our formative college years aren't democratic and don't reward individual self–determination, then our society suffers from the stifling of new ideas and individual belief in meaningful social action for change.

This is our University — we live here, work here and make it run. When we don't have the right to vote on and veto or otherwise affect the decisions being made about the campus and the education we receive, it becomes less an institution of broadening horizons and democratizing society and more a training ground for a docile and apathetic, alienated populace. Four years of exclusion could beget a lifetime of feeling one cannot make a difference, that we can't control or change the way our society works. The things which affect us — employment, financial aid, academics, access for everyone, privatization — should not be controlled by others but should include us, the students!

Students should call, write, e–mail and petition the Administration until they allow us meaningful participation in the act of controlling our campus. We all should try to open not only our campus but all of society to everybody's ideas. America needs a renewal of its democratic impulse; where better to begin creating this new democracy than here on our own campus?

Craig O'Connor is a UMass student.

PRIVATIZATION: Voice your opinion on the Collegian's Ed/Op page next week on this pressing topic. Submissions must be typed. E–mail letters to: Letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Letters to the Editor

Stop the bickering

To the Editor:

Recently the Undergraduate Student Senate has been plagued by partisanship and bickering. It is our hope that the Senate can transcend the pettiness within factions and look toward issues and legislation that will proactively reflect the voice of the students. Because of this, a certain degree of closure needs to be achieved over events concerning the legitimate concern of the direction of the Title VII committee. Closure can only be attained by understanding, and understanding can only be reached by putting aside politics and closely examining the issues. We hope that in the future individuals may decide issues on what is best for students. This matter has, to date, come to an amicable solution within the Senate. Tom Sadlowski and Amy Pellegrino, as co–chairs of the Title VII committee, will be working together as a model to those who believe it can't be done.

Co–chair Amy Pellegrino
Speaker Brian Tirrell

How you can send your letters to the editor via email

Remember the rules:

1) Try to keep it short and sweet (400 words is a nice length).

2) Don't forget your name, address and phone number for verification purposes.

3) Send letters over email to Letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu or drop them off at 113 Campus Center, 125 Willis Hall.

Fourth Vacation film falls flat; Vegas has never been so bland

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

VEGAS VACATION
Directed by Stephen Kessler with Chevy Chase, Beverly D'Angelo, Randy Quaid
Playing at Hampshire Six Theatres

There's an ominous scene in National Lampoon's Vacation (the first film in the series) when obsessive patriarch Clark Griswold (Chevy Chase) explains why his family's impending summer vacation is so important to him, "I see the kids for a few minutes in the morning, a few minutes in the evening, a couple of hours on the weekend... Before I know it they're going to be all grown up."

If only that were true. In the fourth installment the Griswold saga — after driving cross–country in the first film, winning a trip around Europe in the second, and staying home for the holidays for the third, Clark has decided to bring the clan to Las Vegas. It seems only fitting that Vegas is the choice, given the recent barrage of positive spin that little desert mecca has been putting out of late.

The co–operation between the city and the filmmakers is evident: at times Vegas Vacation seems like a travel video from the Las Vegas Board of Tourism with its extended montages of the glittering strip, sans the decadence that made it famous half a century ago. Unfortunately, the film's humor is as sanitized as the '90s have made Las Vegas — the coup d'etat is the cameo appearance by Seigfreid and Roy.

The feature actors from the previous movies returning for this excursion are Chase, Beverly D'Angelo as his patient wife Ellen and Randy Quaid as her foul cousin Eddie. Strangely, after 14 years, the only person showing his age is the remarkably unfunny Chase. The giddy expressions he sports as he becomes a gambling addict are the same he's had forever, which coincidentally grew tiresome long ago.

Advertisement for plastic–surgery Beverly D'Angelo has some amusing scenes when it is revealed that she is a Wayne Newton fanatic. The film takes a bizarre turn for the positive when Wayne Newton becomes attracted to her, sending her free tickets, bringing her on–stage to sing a duet and taking her to his estate. Newton appears to be the perfect companion to D'Angelo — synthetic eternal youths.

The few, precious moments that are worth their predecessors are infrequent. Wallace Shawn, who has built a career on hilarious minor roles in The Princess Bride and Clueless, plays Clark's sadistic black–jack dealer with delicious aplomb. Of course, the funniest aspect of any vacation film is the fact that they always replace the Griswold children with a new pair of actors. D

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wayne Newton sings and swings his way through National Lampoon's Vegas Vacation.

The kind, friendly folks down at the Arts & Living desk here at the Collegian (113 Campus Center Basement) would like to communicate the desire for new writers. Be ye an art gallery person, a performance art fan... whatever your passion may be, we'd like to plaster it up all over our pages. We'd serve you lemonade and a fine country home–cooked dinner if we could, really.

Stillsuit rocks the house with new disc

COURTESY TVT RECORDS

Stillsuit joins Trent Reznor's TVT label catalog with their new album.

Hi. I know everyone missed last week's column. I'm sorry — I was overwhelmed with listening to the new Sick Of It All which you should have all purchased by now. I'm back to give you your hardcore fix for the week.

First up there's a show this weekend at Smith College on Saturday night. Hands Tied, featuring Tim MacMahon of Mouthpiece, will be playing and I can't hype this band enough, so go check them out. Drowning Room, 20 Below and Unionsuit will be playing as well. The show starts at 8 p.m. and it is $3.

Well, New York is once again showing the world that they are the capitol of hardcore. If the Sick Of It All album wasn't enough to prove that New York is the King then the Stillsuit and Cause For Alarm albums should help convince you of where you need to go for hardcore.

Stillsuit's debut full–length At The Speed Of Light came out yesterday on TVT records. To dispel the initial rumors their contract with Wreck–Age was bought by TVT records and they had no choice but to go with the Trent Reznor–owned label.

Now for the music, which is what you really should be concerned with. Stillsuit has that post–hardcore sound that bands like Quicksand and Shift made famous. However, unlike those two bands, rather then taking a mellower, more commercial approach Stillsuit has come out with their guns blazing. The dynamics of the music are way beyond Shift and the ferocity of the attack has more impact than more traditional hardcore bands like Strife.

Stillsuit's vocalist Julian Vasquez is just one of the band's strengths that separate them from other bands. His lyrics are insightful without getting into the psycho–babble that bogs so many emo bands down. The rhythm section of Manuel Carrero on bass and Dimi Douvas on drums is tight. Guitarist Orlando Acre does things on guitars that have to be heard to be believed. Put down your Slayer album and listen to an innovative original hardcore band that hasn't forgotten that speed and intensity mean a lot in making a great hardcore record.

Victory Records just put out the latest full length by New York Hardcore veterans Cause For Alarm. While I usually hate bands who get back together after breaking up years ago I am willing to make an exception for Cause for Alarm for two reasons. The first reason is that the band originally broke up in 1983 at the height of their popularity for personal reasons and not because the scene was dying out. They then got back together in 1995 and played traditional hardcore rather then the metal core that seems so popular today. The second reason why it's hard to ignore this band is because Cheaters and the Cheated is an incredible album.

Vocalist Keith Burkhardt backed by Tony Scaglione on drums, Jason Banks on guitar, and Joe Orega on

Turn to REAL, page 8

Keepin' it real with Adam Plugacz

AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT
is now recruiting for
VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS
Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3
FIRE DEPT.
Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community
for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, Feb. 26, 27, 28
Open House at the North Fire Station, February 28, 5:00 p.m.
Call 549-5419

BIRTHDAYS
Place a Classified for a Birthday for 1/2 Price.
Call at 545-3500
or Visit Us at Our Newstand on the Concourse or in Our Basement Office

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES PRESENTS
"Something Every Friday"
COMEDIAN
GARY EWING
FREE!
February 28, 1997 8:00 pm
Campus Center Auditorium
Gary is sure to keep you laughing with his high energy, honest performance. His refreshing humor is drawn from day to day life, and does not rely on mean-spirited jokes. His T.V. credits include HBO's Two Drink Minimum, VH1's Fools For Love, Stand-Up Spotlight and Comedy Tonite, and MTV's Half Hour Comedy Hour.
For more information check out our website:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calender.htm.....
The movie "Get On The Bus" will be shown immediately after the performance.
A POWERFUL PIECE OF FILMMAKING!
★★★½
GET ON THE BUS
This program is made possible by a Grant from the Auxiliary Services Office, The Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs and the Daily Collegian

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
COMING MARCH 5!
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
(888) 211-OCMP
Present
Dining Out
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates call 545-3500

Multicultural Affairs

Special Edition

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Black History: Tragic + Triumphant

...From remembrance to a call of action...

A ghettoization of the contributions of people of color to world history

Editor's Note — This article is reprinted from the Oct. 25, 1996 edition of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian's Multicultural Affairs Section originally headlined "A ghettoization of the original agenda."

Africa, Africans and peoples of African descent have been historically — and are today — the most maligned victims of European education. That is why in the United States the most vocal and persistent advocates of multiculturalism and diversity are African–American.

The ignorance and the misinformation about Africa, Africans and peoples of African descent is vast. It is this ignorance and its promotion that makes possible the continuing cancer of white racism. Not a day passes that African–Americans in the United States are not confronted with some expression or manifestation of white racism. This is at the heart and soul of the demand for multiculturalism and diversity in education, from primary through University and beyond.

It is a demand for inclusive, comprehensive honesty in tracing and interpreting humankind's journey from its beginning. It is a warning that without multiculturalism and diversity, in theory and in practice, we are destined to continue down the road to a tragic race war that, in the final analysis, could spell doom for much of humankind.

Today, college and university campuses across the United States are awash in debate and heated controversy over the issues of diversity and multiculturalism — the demand to extend the presence, the validity, the contributions and the critical perspectives of African, Asian, Latino and Native American cultures and realities.

This debate had its origins in the late 1960s, with the demand by African–American college and university students and faculty members for increased black student enrollment, increased black faculty and administrator recruitment, and in-depth curriculum and textbook revisions to accurately reflect the African and African–American presence and contribution to American society. The reply by establishment academia to the demand 30 years ago was a subterfuge that made the current controversy inevitable.

Unable to justify the continued exclusion and distortion of the black presence in America and the world, and fearful of alliances beginning to develop between the angry, urban, ghetto–spawned, militant blacks and angry black academics and student organizations that had sprung up on college and university campuses across the country, black studies programs and departments were hastily developed and instituted. On the surface it appeared that a significant effort had been made to meet the demands initiated by black college university students. But it soon became apparent to some that these efforts were programmed for failure.

David G. DU BOIS

Rather than undertaking the in–depth revision and correction of textbooks, syllabi and the reorganization of academic disciplines to accurately reflect the African–American and African reality; rather than significantly increasing black faculty and administrators on college campuses; rather than recruiting black students into all departments and schools of institutions of higher learning, the response to black demands in the late 1960s academia took on a fairly African–American studies departments and programs, directed toward the black student community rather than toward the academic community as a whole. As a result, these departments and programs rapidly became ghettoes for the black presence on campus, operating more as select, exclusive clubs than integral parts of the academic community.

In very much the same vein there followed subsequently Latino studies, women's studies and, belatedly, Native American studies programs. This creation of ethnic– and gender–based departments and programs included the establishment of non–classroom cultural and social facilities, in most cases exclusively for the members of those communities.

These developments had the effect of diffusing and weakening the central demand for a fundamental restructuring and revision of the content of the liberal arts disciplines of history, sociology, anthropology, government, English and languages, the fine arts and performing arts. They also provided grit for the mill of those who charged that mainstream white students were somehow being discriminated against. This was an effect much desired by those wishing to maintain the white, male, Eurocentric domination of academia.

Faculties and administrators for these new departments were recruited from among the most articulate, vocal, militant leaders and organizers who had spearheaded both the community and campus protests. Choices were made in many cases not on academic merit, proven academic experience and the existence of a body of scholarly accomplishment. Teaching positions were offered to young blacks and Latinos who had not prepared for the profession, but with salaries they could not duplicate outside academia. Community and campus organizers accepted administrative positions in these new programs and departments without a clue to the intricacies and subtleties of academic administration.

It was thus that both the community and the campus were stripped of some of their best and brightest organizers, leaders and spokespersons. No one could object. Wasn't this what had been demanded all along: academia's acceptance of and attention to the "minority" reality structured into the institution? Many hailed the absence of the academic traditions of graduate degrees, research, publication and teaching experience that so many of these new appointees brought to their positions. It was just those traditions that were under attack, they insisted.

Generally, the faculty and administration beneficiaries applauded these changes and, following their lead, students generally celebrated the creation of these programs and departments, as did the academic community as a whole — albeit begrudgingly. For black students there was finally a recognition of their presence with academic funds being spent to facilitate that presence. For these new black faculty and administrators there was new prestige, relatively good salaries and community status. And thus it was that the seeds of their own destruction were sown.

Little was done to revise or restructure academic materials and syllabi to more accurately reflect diversity and multiculturalism. Little was done to guarantee ethnic faculty representation in university departments other than in those committed to ethnic studies. Attempts to increase black, Latino, Native American and Asian American student enrollment were in nearly all cases half–hearted and short– lived.

These results made inevitable some 30 years later the emergence of the current debate and controversy over diversity and multiculturalism, now not confined to the university campus, but sweeping the nation's entire educational system.

David G. Du Bois is a visiting professor of Afro–American studies and journalism at UMass.

The University of Massachusetts: a wannabe Amherst College

I'm not a millennial prophet or anything, but I have a prediction: I predict that as of next year, the UMass student body will look smaller, richer and whiter.

In a Faculty Senate meeting on Feb. 6, Provost Patricia H. Crosson announced that UMass will be seeking a smaller freshman class. She claims that this decision will tie in with the University's goal of raising the academic profile — Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores, class rank and grade point average (GPA) — of enrolled students.

What she really means is that in an effort to make UMass look more "respectable," and gain higher status among the elite universities, we will now be seeking "smarter" students. They do this by diminishing the overall pool of accepted students, and being pickier and choosier about admissions standards — looking more at class rank, GPA and subjective classist tests such as the SAT. All of these criteria have proven to be discriminatory and racist against people of color and low wage earners. Why does the administration see the need for "smarter" students?

Arlene Cash, our Admission's Director, has the answer. In a Collegian article, Cash was quoted as saying, "Our rankings will be better in college guides and our public perception will go up.

"The state legislature may see it and justify giving us more money."

Lisa CHIU

She added, "It's only recently that we've begun to pay more attention to SAT scores. The college guides really focus on them, and public perception has a lot to do with how we get funding."

The administration seems to think that fewer ALANA students at UMass will enable us to compete with more prominent private universities who are a part of the Association of American Universities (AAU), an organization which Chancellor Scott is currently hoping to admit us into. In order to fulfill this administrative quest for status and more funds, the diverse makeup of UMass will be seriously jeopardized. All this because UMass administrators are sick of the "Zoo–Mass" image.

The Provost said, "In addition, the University plans to gradually increase the percentage of Massachusetts residents enrolled from the current 71 percent of the undergraduate student body to 75 percent."

To which Cash added, "Out–of–state applicants will be much more critically looked at — we'll accept fewer of them."

This raises a crucial issue for ALANA students, because Massachusetts as a state, has a higher percentage of ALANA students who attend college. In order for UMass to keep up their end of the 1992 ALANA agreements, by moving overall ALANA student enrollment up to 20 percent (a goal they have yet to reach), they must go out of the state in order to seek more qualified applicants of color.

The ramifications of this new policy are blatantly clear: less students = less out–of–state students = less ALANA students.

And it gets worse. UMass is also currently offering $8,000 a year scholarships to high school students who place first or second in their graduating class. I wonder just how many of these students 1) actually want to attend a state university, 2) haven't already received a better offer at a better school, and most importantly, 3) are students of color. Essentially we're bribing "smart" white kids to attend our university just so that we can "look better."

Referring to the scholarships given to graduating valedictorians and salutatorians, Cash said, "We should be attracting the best, and enrolling the best."

And I wholeheartedly agree.

- The best is being a school that actually commits itself to diversity by first ensuring that ALANA student enrollment always goes up and not down.
- The best is a school that ensures that faculty and staff of color are offered tenure and are actually paid for the amount of work and effort they put into this University.
- The best is a school that prides itself for what it is — a state university and does not want to resemble an elitist private one.
- The best is a school that understands that using warped criteria such as GPA, SAT scores and class rank to admit students as opposed to creativity, the ability to think critically and the willingness to learn, is wrong.
- The best is a school which lives up to what it said it would do before the eyes of the state department and hundreds of angry students of color — live up to their end of the 1992 ALANA agreements, something they have yet to do.

If we don't do something to stop the racist and classist direction that the Administration is moving us towards, we'll never be the best.

Lisa Chiu is a Collegian columnist.

UPI PHOTO

"Our capacity to deal creatively with shattered dreams is ultimately determined by our faith in God... However dismal and catastrophic may be the present circumstances, we know we are not alone." – Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

King honors Du Bois in last major speech

The following is an excerpt from the last major speech of Dr. Martin Luther King before his assassination. It was delivered by the Nobel Laureate at Carnegie Hall in New York City, on Feb. 23, 1968.

[Dr. Du Bois] symbolized in his being, his pride in the black man. He did not apologize for being black and, because of it, handicapped. Instead he attacked the oppressor for the crime of stunting black men. He confronted the establishment as a model of militant manhood and integrity. He defied them, and though they heaped venom and scorn on him, his powerful voice was never stilled.

And yet, with all his pride and spirit he did not make a mystique out of blackness. He was proud of his people, not because their color endowed them with some vague greatness but because their concrete achievements in struggle had advanced humanity, and he saw and loved progressive humanity in all its hues, black, white, yellow, red and brown.

Above all he did not content himself with hurling invectives for emotional release and then to retire into smug, passive satisfaction. History had taught him it is not enough for people to be angry — the supreme task is to organize and unite people so that their anger becomes a transforming force. It was never possible to know where the scholar Du Bois ended and the organizer Du Bois began. The two qualities in him were a single, unified force...

... they have declared an armistice in the war on poverty while squandering billions to expand a senseless, cruel, unjust war in Vietnam. We will go there, we will demand to be heard, and we will stay until the administration responds. If this means forcible repression of our movement, we will confront it, for we have done this before. If this means scorn or ridicule, we will embrace it, for that is what America's poor now receive. If it means jail, we accept it willingly, for the millions of poor already are imprisoned by exploitation and discrimination.

Dr. Du Bois would be in the front ranks of the peace movement today. He would readily see the parallel between American support of the corrupt and despised Thieu–Ky regime and Northern support to the Southern slavemasters in 1876. The CIA scarcely exaggerates, indeed it is surprisingly honest, when it calculates for Congress that the war in Vietnam can persist for 100 years. People deprived of their freedom do not give up — Negroes have been fighting more than a hundred years, and even if the date of full emancipation is uncertain, what is explicitly certain is that the struggle for it will endure.

In conclusion let me say that Dr. Du Bois' greatest virtue was his committed empathy with all the oppressed and his divine dissatisfaction with all forms of injustice. Today we are still challenged to be dissatisfied. Let us be dissatisfied until every man can have food and material necessities for his body, culture and education for his mind, freedom and human dignity for his spirit. Let us be dissatisfied until rat– infested, vermin–filled slums will be a thing of a dark past and every family will have a decent, sanitary house in which to live. Let us be dissatisfied until the empty stomachs of Mississippi are filled and the idle industries of Appalachia are revitalized. Let us be dissatisfied until brotherhood is no longer a meaningless word at the end of a prayer but the first order of business on every legislative agenda. Let us be dissatisfied until our brother of the Third World — Asia, Africa and Latin America — will no longer be the victim of imperialist exploitation, but will be lifted from the long night of poverty, illiteracy and disease. Let us be dissatisfied until this pending cosmic elegy will be transformed into a creative psalm of peace and "justice will roll down like waters from a mighty stream."

COURTESY OF COLLEGIAN ARCHIVES

A student petitions for a boycott of the Franklin Dining Commons as a result of racial remark made by one of the D.C. employees.

Editor's Note:

Welcome to the first edition of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian's Multicultural Affairs Page for the spring semester! This special focus section of the Collegian is published bi–weekly and presents informative news stories and commentaries concerning issues foremost regarding people of color on this campus as well as the world.

This first edition is a Black History Month tribute to the many great achievements and contributions African–Americans have made in the development and wealth of the history of the United States. Despite the many positive aspects of black life in America, we must never forget the mental and physical torture suffered by blacks from slavery to the beginnings of European colonization on the continent of Africa.

Given the demography of this campus, it is important that the view points of students of color receive adequate space and attention throughout the educational dialogue and learning that takes place here. This serves to benefit not only the historically oppressed students of color, but those privileged students who, unfortunately due to their race, have been marginalized in the struggle for justice and equality in America and the world.

Yes, it is ironic, indeed, that those who constitute the silent majority are far more depraved than they may realize, as our educational system continues to force upon all of us a limited, and narrow–minded Eurocentric world view which has thwarted the progress of humankind. Through the Multicultural Affairs Page, as well as the other Diversity sections of this newspaper, you can become enlightened to a whole new world of truth which you would never learn in the classroom.

Hopefully, the public mainstream will one day expand its scope as well, but it will only happen with the participation of college students like us who constitute the future leaders of tomorrow. And therefore, the long journey towards truth begins right here, on the Multicultural and other Diversity Pages of the Collegian.

Raghuram Vadarevu

–Raghuram Vadarevu

William Edward Burghardt Du Bois
Feb. 23, 1868 to Aug. 27, 1963

In honor of one of the greatest leaders and intellects in world history, W.E.B. Du Bois, who would have been 129 years old this past week. We should all dedicate our lives, as he did, to the upliftment of people in whatever career we chose to follow.

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Raghuram Vadarevu • Photos by Thang Vo

"I don't think that there are activities on campus provided for us [students of color]. [We have] to take the initiative [to get recognition]. The University as a whole does not provide us anything."

Perla Mondriguez
First year, political science
Springfield

"They should not restrict the celebration of Black History Month to one month, but it should be celebrated and appreciated all year round. Most students, black and white, are ignorant of the contributions of blacks in the world. UMass is trumpeting itself as a multicultural institution, but where is the commitment?"

Gamal Walker
Senior, finance
Boston

"First thing to do is educate ourselves about the contributions of African–Americans and people of color. [Groups such as] ALANA affairs and the BSU (Black Student Union) should bring more people of color on campus."

Sean Carter
UMass–Amherst Student Trustee
Senior, economics
North Andover

What can students do to show the contributions and achievements of African–Americans and people of color at UMass?

"I think that as students participate in campus life they can help people understand the contributions of African–American's, but also other communities of color. People here don't know the struggles of people of color at UMass."

Rick Townes
Assistant Vice–Chancellor for Campus Activities
Amherst

"To honor the contributions [of people of color] in a physical aspect. Then a member of the African–American community will be reminded of their culture and remind other cultures of African–American contributions. For example, a mural with paintings of important people in a strategically located place."

Aida Beez
Senior, civil engineering
Lawrence

"We should consistently have events that benefit each community such as art displays, plays and readings. I think that we should have more courses that deal with specific groups [of people of color] and we should also do research on our own."

Kenny Lacosse
Black Student Union Vice–Chair
Sophomore, English
Boston

For many years now, people of color have been fighting an uphill battle to gain recognition of their great contributions to the whole of humanity. This process has been hindered, in part, due to the lack of people of color in areas such as mass media. As long as we keep quiet in the public arena of information exchange we will not have an opportunity to dispel the stereotypes that plague us as individual groups and as a people.

A start to affecting positive social justice for the great many, one can get experience in the media by writing for the Massachusetts Daily Collegian's Multicultural Affairs section. Contact Raghuram Vadarevu or Christine Soh at 545–1851 or 545–3500 or just drop by to met us in person.

Disney makes deal with Pixar

By E. Scott Reckard
Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Walt Disney Co. has ensured its dominance in animated feature films by locking up an exclusive long-term deal with Toy Story partner Pixar Animation Studios.

Challengers such as the new DreamWorks SKG studio are hoping to break Disney's near monopoly in animated features. But the 10-year, five-movie deal announced Monday will keep Disney on the leading edge.

For Pixar, which will get more profits per movie through the deal, there was no better partner than Disney.

"The collaboration we had on Toy Story was magical," said Steve Jobs, the Apple Computer founder who bought Pixar a decade ago from LucasFilm. "And the thought of working with someone else — we just couldn't imagine it would be as good."

Disney will meld its storytelling know-how with Pixar's low cost computer savvy. The studio's full-length films are made by 150 people instead of the 500 to 600 needed on conventional animated features.

Pixar did the computer-generated work on Toy Story, which has generated about $360 million in worldwide box office receipts. The new plan calls for Disney to pay most of the marketing, distribution and merchandising costs for five new films. Pixar will put up half the production financing and will get half the profits.

It replaces a previous Disney-Pixar deal to produce three animated movies, beginning with Toy Story. Under that plan, Disney provided all the financing and got most of the profits. Disney also will invest $15 million for 1 million Pixar shares, with options to buy 1.5 million more shares. The total would bring Disney's stake in the northern California studio to 5 percent.

The deal came as Disney prepared for today's annual shareholder meeting, which may feature fireworks over a new contract for Chairman Michael Eisner that easily could be worth $300 million over 10 years, and the $100 million-plus severance package awarded Michael Ovitz for 14 months as Disney's president.

Votes will be taken on shareholder resolutions to force Disney to re-evaluate its executive compensation policies and to more closely monitor overseas factories that make Disney-branded goods to prevent sweatshop conditions. Disney opposes the resolutions.

Conrad MacKerron, director of social research for Progressive Asset Management, an investment fund that sponsored the resolutions, says his goal is to get 3 percent of the votes, enough to put the resolutions on the shareholders' ballot again next year.

Madagascar band to play Iron Horse

COURTESY SHANACHIE RECORDS

Tarika Sammy takes the music of their homeland Madagascar to the Iron Horse tonight.

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

With a new album, Beneath Southern Skies, on one of the leading world-music record labels, Shanachie, Tarika Sammy brings their acoustic-roots-meets-world-beat music to the Iron Horse tonight.

Tarika Sammy is one of Madagascar's premier groups. The leader, Sammy, is a master of many of the African island's native instruments, including the 18-stringed marovany, a boxed instrument played with pick and fingers. Another instrument he is adept at is the jejy votavo, which has two sets of strings on a neck connected to a gourd resonator, much like the Brazilian native instrument, the berimbau.

Joining Sammy on stage is his guitarist/percussionist cousin Tiana, bassist/guitarist Johnny, and sisters Noro and Hanira lending vocal and percussion help to the highly rhythmic music. The band was founded in 1982 by Sammy and Tiana.

The band got their big break in 1992 when Shanachie released A World Out Of Time. The much-acclaimed album thrust Tarika Sammy onto the African scene as representatives of Madagascar's music, which was previously widely unknown behind the usual African music stars nations such as Niger, Senegal, and South Africa. Their diverse musical styles that embrace harmony, polyrhythm and instruments never heard before were a winning combination, surely.

Their live show is a mix of many styles, even with rap influences on the topical tune "Roba," which deals with rural villagers being oppressed and assaulted by large armed groups of men trying to ruin their simple lifestyle. It should be a fun night of a culture and music that hasn't been as widespread as that of other African nations.

Tarika Sammy will perform at 7 p.m. at the Iron Horse. Call the club at 584-0610 for more details.

Designing woman turns into stage diva

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It definitely will become a growth industry in regional theaters and beyond over the next several years: actresses of a certain age taking on the role of Maria Callas in Master Class.

Yet they are still lining up to play it on Broadway. Terrence McNally's re-creation of a Callas master class for aspiring opera singers has been running at the Golden Theater for nearly 18 months, first with Zoe Caldwell and then Patti LuPone. Faye Dunaway is playing Callas on the road.

New York's latest La Divina is Dixie Carter, at first glance, an unlikely replacement. Yet before making a name for herself on television's "Designing Women," Carter had extensive stage credits.

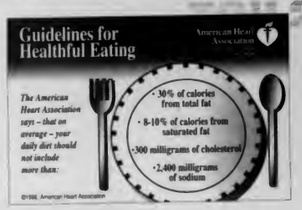
Her theater background serves her well. Carter is a sexier, slinkier Callas than either of her predecessors, although she is no match for them in the vocal department. Some of her dialogue slurs by, particularly when Callas confronts the terrified students.

Yet Carter commands the stage in the play's moments of comedy, delivering Callas' withering stare with an impeccable sense of timing. Watch how her face suddenly sours as she stands astonished at the ignorance of her students about what should be their whole lives — singing.

The actress also rises to the evening's two big dramatic arias which McNally carefully doles out — one in each act. Master Class, a 1996 Tony winner for best play, remains surprisingly sturdy. It is more than a vehicle for whatever actress happens to be playing Callas.

Those spoken arias, particularly Callas' reminiscences about her ill-fated affair with Aristotle Onassis, form the heart of the play. Framed by Brian MacDevitt's remarkable lighting and Michael McGarty's ingenious setting that transforms itself into La Scala at a moment's notice, they become the grandest of theatrical showcases.

The supporting cast does more than just assist Carter. They create believable, comic cameos that delineate real people. Jay Hunter Morris, the one original-cast holdover, earns his bravos as the self-confident tenor who venerates Mario Lanza. Theodora Fried is adorable as an awe-struck soprano who can't get anything right. And Alaine Rodin-Lo is gloriously defiant as the singer who stands up to Callas.



Yet Master Class, in the end, rises or falls on the woman playing Callas. If Carter doesn't erase memories of the ladies who preceded her, she at least puts her own, individual stamp on the diva.

■ real

continued from page 5

Bass are pissed and they want everyone to know about it. Cheaters and the Cheated rages with the frenetic energy of bands like Agnostic Front and Minor Threat. Staying true to the old school, the album comes complete with bomb drops, sing-a- longs, and those crucial breakdowns. Most importantly the songs are fast as they all clock in at under three minutes. The lyrics deal with a wide range of political topics from the lies our government tells us, the mirage that material objects present to us, and the damage TV inflicts upon us. I highly suggest you pick this up and listen to some hardcore veterans stay true to form.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

Check out the Collegian Online:
http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS...
We are here !!

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

Haircuts Perms
Highlights Colors
Facial Waxing Tanning
Up Do's Consultations
Regency Hairstylists
253-9526

ATTENTION STUDENTS!!
GET YOUR TICKET FOR:
UMASS MEN'S BASKETBALL
VS.
TEMPLE (3/1/97)
AVAILABLE ON THURS., FEB. 27 AT 7AM
IN THE LOBBY OF THE CURRY HICKS CAGE
YOU MUST HAVE YOUR VALID ID AND ACTIVITY CARD

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
TOKYO $799 Roundtrip
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
347 Madison Ave NY NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

UMass Women's Basketball
UMASS MINUTEWOMEN HOST ATLANTIC-10 TOURNAMENT GAME
THURSDAY FEBRUARY 27, 1997
@ MULLINS CENTER 7:00 PM
RESERVED SEATS: $6.00
ADULT ADMISSION: $4.00
CHILD GENERAL ADMISSION (12YRS. AND UNDER): $2.00
UMASS STUDENTS: $2.00
(AVAILABLE IN ADVANCE AT THE CURRY HICKS OR 6AME NIGHT AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE)
FOR TICKET INFORMATION CONTACT THE ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE (413) 545-0810

Tonight
Retro Night
Music of the 70's and 80's
Weekly Drink Specials
16oz. Red Dog Drafts 1.50
16oz. Bacardi Limon & Coke 2.00
16oz. Vodka and Cranberry 2.00
12oz. Bottles of Rolling Rock 1.50
NEW HOURS
1/2 Price Appetizers & Nachos
3-5 pm Wed-Sat 7-11 pm
No Cover Charge
THE PUB

Hospital officials discuss downsizing of health care

The current state of downsizing health care and its effect on Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton will be addressed by several health officials at the Bangs Center in Amherst tomorrow afternoon.

One of a series of forums held at the Bangs Center, this program is titled, "Conversation with Donna Bowles: Health Care at Risk."

The focus of the discussion will be on whether downsizing the nursing staff at Cooley Dickinson has diminished the quality of care, if all HMO's are created equal, the pro's and con's of HMO's for seniors and whether there will be a community hospital in the future.

Donna Bowles, the vice president of Cooley Dickinson Hospital will lead the discussion followed by Dr. Tonya Helsand, a member of the emergency service staff at Cooley Dickinson, Sandy Eaton, a representative of the Massachusetts Nurses' Association, Tom Wolf, a member of the community development staff at the University of Massachusetts and Assistant Attorney General Barbara Fain, author of Attorney General's Report on Managed Care in Massachusetts — Protecting Managed Care Consumers.

Isaac Ben Ezra, a new member to the Pioneer Valley Community and program coordinator, stressed the critical impact health care has on students within the community, especially at Cooley Dickinson since it is the closest hospital in the area.

The failure of most students according to Ben Ezra is thinking about the future.

"Students fail to look into the future at what the state of health care could be for them or even right now, I mean what happens if they have an accident?" Ben Ezra said.

The forum will be held at 1 p.m. tomorrow.

— Laura Forster

Women's issues discussed at round table

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association's (SGA) Women's Issues Committee held a round table discussion yesterday afternoon in the Campus Center.

Facilitated by committee Chair Stacey Shackford (Central Area), the discussion was held as an open meeting to the public.

The purpose of the discussion was to allow students and members of the University community to express what issues they want the Women's Issues Committee to address and what they feel to be the most prevalent concerns on campus.

Most members cited safety to be the number one problem concerning women, as well as men.

"There are women in my [residence] hall who don't feel safe on this campus. It really takes away from the educational experience at this school," said Sen. R.J. Lamar (Orchard Hill).

Concerns about the escort service, lack of call boxes in areas far from dorms, mace on campus, as well as the role of women in SGA were discussed.

"We want the administration to be held accountable for the safety on campus," Shackford said.

Ideas included listing the escort service phone number on call boxes and undertaking a campus safety survey, the last of which was completed in 1979.

WMUA Women's Affairs Director Heather Moreland attended the discussion and extended an invitation to all to participate in a women's issues show broadcast Fridays from 5:30-6:30 p.m.

"My goal for the show is to get the message out to those interested. I don't think that many people know about it," Moreland said.

Committee members are also considering changing the name of the committee from women's issues to something that shows how the committee affects everyone.

"Men are thinking it's just about women's issues, but in reality, they are human rights issues," Shackford said.

"A name change would be a good thing because it wouldn't put people off. The whole safety thing doesn't just just have to do with women," said Sen. Emilie Codega (Central Area).

"We would like to make it more of a committee that would deal with discrimination and rape as everyone's issues," Shackford said.

The name change however, would not affect the issues discussed in committee.

"I entered this committee concerned with the undertones, mentality and attitudes towards women in the Senate. How can we get the tone more positive towards women in the Senate?" asked Sen. Stephanie Parenti (Orchard Hill Area).

This sentiment was echoed by Sen. Natalia Lopez (ALANA).

"The mentality of the men makes me very uncomfortable," Lopez said.

Currently, efforts are being made in SGA to recruit women senators and encourage them to enter into prime leadership roles within all committees.

"It's important for women to infiltrate other committees," Parenti said.

"Their voices need to be heard in every committee," Lamar said.

The committee, now only a select committee, which means that it has to be voted in by the Senate every year, may become a standing committee in the near future.

A standing committee is a permanent committee added into the SGA Constitution which allows for members to work on more long term goals.

"Campus safety and education should be a continued concern. Follow up and advocacy is the key," Shackford said.

Economics alums to speak tonight

By Michael J. Nam
Collegian Staff

The Economics Alumni Advisory Board will be holding its first alumni career night tonight from 5-7 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

The event will feature University of Massachusetts alumni from the economics department at information tables.

Stu Tobin, president of the Alumni Board, said that all students with an interest in economics are invited to attend.

"Our initial thrust was to invite economics majors, but secondarily we wanted to get anyone who had taken economics courses from all walks of life," Tobin said. "We expect anyone who had taken a departmental course to attend, people from liberal arts and other majors."

There will be approximately 15 alumni present who graduated from the UMass economics department. These alumni will speak on a number of careers including consulting, teaching, marketing research, brokerage and sales.

"There will be a great variety of speakers [tonight]," Tobin said.

The two-hour event will feature each alumnus giving a brief speech on their personal background and their career. Afterward they will break down into tables according to their career background.

Some of the alumni participants will be actively recruiting for their companies and corporations. There may be internships available as well.

The board was established in May of 1996 with the goal of getting as many alumni as possible to involve themselves with the department and pooling the talents of alumni from a variety of occupations.

"There are 13 members on the alumni board and we're doing this to help the students, the department and the University," Tobin said. "It's self-gratifying to give back to the University for what they have given to us."

According to the National Science Foundation, the University's economics department is placed among the top 25 programs in the country.

U.S. says Mexican corruption hinders drug war

By Carolyn Skorneck
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton outlined yesterday how he wants to spend the 5 percent increase he's seeking from Congress to fight drugs next year, as U.S. officials acknowledged the battle has been hampered by recently revealed ties between Mexico's ousted drug czar and narcotics kingpins.

"There is a major corruption problem at all levels (in Mexico) — federal, state and local," Robert Gelbard, assistant secretary of state for narcotics affairs, told a House panel.

The arrest last week of Mexico's newly installed anti-drug official, Gen. Jesus Gutierrez Rebollo, because of his links to a major drug trafficker "belied previous assumptions that corruption was largely limited to the police," Gelbard said.

Clinton, however, did not directly address the pressing question of Mexico's recertification for anti-drug aid, which must be decided by March 1. He said generally that decisions would be made after Secretary of State Madeleine Albright returned today from her overseas trip.

"We are committed to cooperating with our friends in Latin America," Clinton said. "We want to cooperate with them, but we want them to cooperate with us as well."

Gen. Barry McCaffrey, Clinton's drug czar, called the scandal "a serious blow to our partnership" with Mexico, but also signaled the administration's eagerness to get around it.

"The United States and Mexico are trapped economically, culturally, politically and because of drug crime in the same continent and we'd better figure out a way to work on it together," McCaffrey said.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said the administration was "working very hard" for a decision Friday on Mexico's recertification. Anything more than a slap on the wrist could result in withholding some foreign aid to Mexico.

Administration officials touted Clinton's proposed $16 billion anti-drug budget for 1998 — an $800 million increase over this year — is the largest in the government's history. Most of the increase, $350 million, will go to a new prime-time, public service TV ad campaign aimed at teen-agers.

Otherwise, however, the package that Clinton and Gore outlined at a morning ceremony contained no new initiatives.

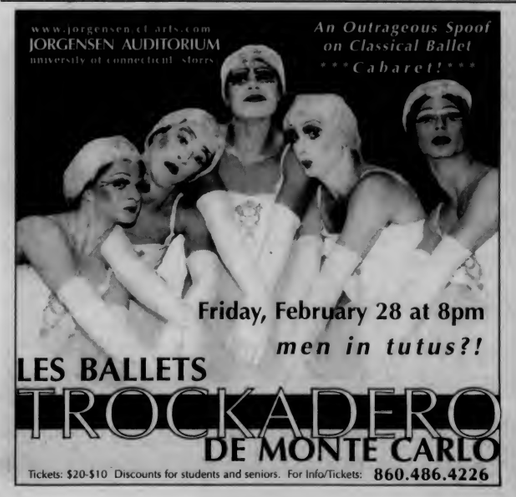
First proposed last month as part of the president's fiscal 1998 budget, it includes $75 million for "drug courts" that offer nonviolent drug criminals voluntary alternatives to jail and $42 million to help pay for drug-testing people arrested on federal, state and local charges.

Republican and Democratic lawmakers alike are urging Clinton to decertify Mexico to demonstrate U.S. impatience with the lack of cooperation in the drug war.

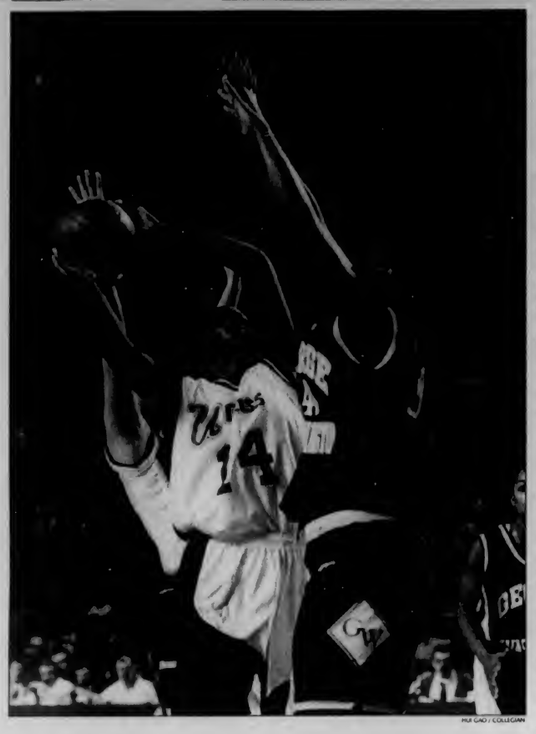
"...Stop by our table in the Campus Center Concourse for the article."

TOLERANCE IS NOT ENOUGH.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. believed there was something better than tolerance. LOVE



Love means accepting people and moving toward them, rather than distancing ourselves from them or simply not caring. It means reaching out... even to those who are different.



This year in honor of Dr. King's birthday and Black History Month we're offering the article "Give the Dream New Life." For your free copy call 1-800-236-9238

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Give the Dream New Life.
For your free copy call 1-800-236-9238

Ad presented by friends and student's of RSO's Campus Crusade for Christ and BASIC (Born Afain Students in Christ)

MAT GAO / COLLEGIAN

Tourney Time!

Tomorrow night at 7 p.m. UMass will face the winner of the Rhode Island–Duquesne game in A-10 Quarterfinal action.

Boston teams in the run for No. 1 pick

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — Other cities have their championship rings and trophies, their gleaming new stadiums and coaching legends. Here in Boston, the local sports entries are trying to corner the market on No. 1 draft choices.

In the past three weeks, Boston teams have been dropping games like tea in the Harbor. Ten straight without a win for the Bruins; 10 losses in a row for the Celtics. Each is in line for its league's No. 1 overall pick.

"Right now, we're taking our lumps. We know that," Celtics boss M.L. Carr said yesterday. "But the future looks pretty bright."

Even the AFC champion Patriots made a run at the NFL's No. 1 pick, unsuccessfully going after the Jets' first-rounder as compensation for head coach Bill Parcells. But the Bruins and Celtics are using more conventional methods.

The Bruins have made the NHL playoffs a professional sports record 29 consecutive years — a streak that would be over if the season ended today. What's more in doubt is whether they will hold on to the worst record in the NHL; their 0-8-2 mark since Feb. 2 can't hurt.

The Celtics, who don't have ties to muck up their mediocrity, have simply lost 10 straight. They also have the fewest wins in their league, although expansion Vancouver — which is ineligible for the top overall pick — has four more losses.

The Celtics are on a pace to lose 65 games and surpass their previous worst by a dozen. Should they fail for the 11th consecutive season to win the NBA title — and Las Vegas would make you rich if they do — it would be the longest championship drought in team history.

All that losing has hurt attendance at the FleetCenter, where both teams moved last year. Although the NBA and NHL announce tickets sold, rather than the actual size of the crowd, anyone who actually goes to a game can see that attendance is dwindling.

"They're not providing clients with a great environment for doing business if the team isn't going to perform," Chester Darling, a lawyer whose clients want out of their six-year club seat leases, told the Boston Herald.

"We can't even give these tickets away," Jeanne Friedman, a computer marketing executive who is on the hook for nearly $11,000 a year, told the paper. "It's killing us."

The Bruins went from pathetic to comical this week when star scorer Adam Oates blamed the front office for failing to gather enough talent. Even as he was stripping the alternate captain's "A" off Oates' sweater as punishment, assistant general manager Mike O'Connell admitted that "there was some truth to what he said."

Bruins coach Steve Kasper stayed out of it, and wisely so. Since being hired on May 25, 1995, he has become the longest-tenured of Boston's professional sports coaches (with a couple of college coaches thrown in for good measure).

The previous Celtics and Bruins coaches Chris Ford and Brian Sutter went out on the same day — "Carnage on Causeway Street," the TV stations called it.

Since then, It's been: goodbye, Bill Parcells; what have you done for us lately, Kevin Kennedy; adios, Frank Stapleton; thanks for stopping by, Dan Henning; and see you in the NBA, John Calipari.

Kansas a class act on and off the court

By Doug Tucker
Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Word reached Roy Williams that Jacque Vaughn finally had made a decision.

Would the finest high school point guard in the nation come to Kansas, or grace UCLA with the play-making magic that spells the difference between a pretty good team and a champion?

Taking a deep breath, Williams dialed Vaughn's home.

"Sorry, coach, I know you didn't want to hear this, but I've changed my mind and I'm going to UCLA," Vaughn said.

The line went silent. Then, Vaughn broke into a laugh.

"Just kidding, coach. I'm going to be a Jayhawk," he said. "The pause probably lasted about five seconds," recalled a grinning Williams. "But it seemed like five years."

The incident, Vaughn said, "was the start of the bond we have."

But it also says a lot about the man who heads the program that's been ranked No. 1 for 13 straight weeks and will probably go into the NCAA tournament as the overall No. 1 seed.

Vaughn had yet to play one game for Williams. Yet, he felt close enough to the coach to be playful at a moment of high tension, and confident enough to entrust to him his college career.

"What I've learned from him goes far beyond the basketball court," Vaughn says now as he nears the end of a career that's eclipsed the all-time Big Eight record for assists.

Williams' players do not just win. They also go to class, stay out of trouble and vow undying devotion to the high-energy, iron-willed coach who constantly fights a craving for sweets and whose strongest cuss word is "dadgumit."

"Coach Williams is like a father to us, but he's really more than that," said senior guard Jerod Haase. "It's like he's our best friend, too. He tries very hard to maintain a family-like bond to the entire program. I know that for the rest of my life, wherever I am, coach Williams will be there for me."

There are six seniors on this 1996-97 team that stands 28-1 heading into Sunday's regular season finale at Nebraska, including Vaughn and Haase, who are both academic all-Americans.

In May, barring some unforeseen classroom catastrophe, all six will get their degrees — in an era when some coaches go years without having six players graduate.

"They're just a great bunch of kids," said Williams. "That's the kind we try to recruit here."

Under the Williams system, there have been high-talent prospects turned down after showing signs of academic or behavioral problems. Their scholarship was used on youngsters whose talent may have been less impressive, but who exhibited stronger character traits.

Once he gets them, Williams molds players into a team-oriented, fastbreaking squad that plays ferocious man-to-man defense, never seems to come out flat, and wins, wins, wins.

Since Williams was hired off Dean Smith's North Carolina staff, right after Larry Brown coached the 1988 Jayhawks to the NCAA championship, Kansas has failed to win fewer than 25 games only once, in his first season.

His career record is 241-57, a mark no other man in Division I history after nine years can match.

In the Williams era, the Jayhawks have been to two Final Fours and won six of the last seven conference championships, including this year's inaugural Big 12 title.

And, there has never been one whiff of recruiting or academic wrongdoing at a school whose record in earlier times was less than spotless. Williams' first year was spent under heavy recruiting restrictions the NCAA imposed for infractions committed on Brown's watch.

Bowe leaves Marine Corps

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Did he march or didn't he? Did he polish his boots and run the obstacle course, or simply throw in the towel?

The ballyhooed bout featuring Riddick Bowe and the U.S. Marine Corps appears to have ended with a split decision.

The former heavyweight champion left Marine Corps boot camp last week after telling his drill instructor and battalion commander the regimen was too strict, that he missed his family and that he wished he'd enlisted when he was younger.

At the time, the Marines said they tried to talk the 29-year-old multimillionaire into staying and continuing his quest to join the Marine Corps Reserves.

But in yesterday's Washington Post, base spokesman Maj. Rick Long said the Marines booted Bowe because he refused to train.

"There were a lot of occasions when he was told to do something and he just said, 'No, I'm not going to do it.'" Long told the newspaper. "It's just obstinacy, that's all."

But Long told The Associated Press on yesterday: "I did not say it was just obstinacy. I wouldn't classify it as obstinacy. He had difficulty with the day-to-day regimen."

And he said he knew of no instances where Bowe outright refused to follow orders.

"I didn't say he was a problem," Long said. "I said he had problems with the day-to-day being told what to do, when to do it and how fast to do it."

Rock Newman, Bowe's manager, said from Las Vegas that Long called him this morning to "apologize for the fact that he was misrepresented, misquoted and mischaracterized."

Said George Solomon, sports editor of The Washington Post: "We have our notes and we stand by our story completely."

Long said Bowe's decision to leave was a "two-way process" made by Bowe and the Corps.

He said he was concerned about reports that Bowe had requested to leave and the Marines tried to talk him into staying. He said Marine officials spoke with Bowe and agreed it would be best he leave.

"He didn't want to be a Marine and he was having trouble adapting," Long said. "The bottom line is if you don't want to be a Marine, you won't be one."

Long told the newspaper it became obvious Bowe was a "problem" recruit during his initial five days after processing and that his behavior became worse Feb. 18 when he refused to train.

UMass Collegian Graphics
The best in '97

SPRING INTO ACTION with PRUDDY'S SPRING LINE UP!!
Wednesday
RAVE W / DJ JA
(TECHNO & JUNGLE)
NO COVER
Thursday
Anything Goes
W / DJ YU
Hip-Hop &
Request night
FRIDAY
City Night Life
A mix of everything W/DJ YU
Saturday
Club, Retro & Disco
W / Dj YU

The ALANA Lectures Series and The University Chaplains
PRESENT
Rev. Eugene Rivers
GUEST SPEAKER
HE WILL SHARE HIS
VISION FOR LEADERSHIP AND SOCIAL JUSTICE IN COMBATING YOUTH VIOLENCE
THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1997 • 7:00PM
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM • UMASS AMHERST
Sponsored by: Dean of Students Office, Office of ALANA Affairs and The University Chaplains.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
1/2 PRICE
THURSDAYS
Starting Thursday February 27, 1997
Students place a classified on Thursdays for only 10¢ !!!
Call the Collegian Classified Staff at 545-3500
Visit our Campus Center Concourse newsstand, or come down to our office in the basement!

■ gymnastics

continued from page 14

luxury."

Waxing poetic, he continued, "We threw them to the wolves their first year, and they have survived and thrived in that atmosphere, but that is not for everybody. This year, we have been able to rest them here and there, and it is really good for this last stretch."

And down the stretch they come

This season, the Minutewomen have experienced both the lap of luxury, and harsh reality. On Jan. 25, the Mullins Center welcomed them with a school record crowd of 2,435 against then-No.11 Michigan. Yet, the next weekend, their practice facility was their competitive facility as the Boyden Gymnastics Center sheltered their wins over Rhode Island and Bridgeport.

At this point of the season, it doesn't matter where the team competes on campus, because they will not be here. This final stretch holds the road as their ceremonial carpet, with UMass looking to fly off to promised land at the Nationals in Gainesville, Fla. Meets at UNH and WVU will help prepare Laing, Swartz and the entire team for the A-10 Championships (Mar. 22) and the NCAA Regionals (Apr. 5). In true confident, but not cocky, fashion, Laing believes this road trip will garner the true NCAA experience.

"Being home every weekend, you don't really feel like you're in that season mode," Laing said. "But, now we're in the championship season, and then, we have to come back for an extra two weeks that we're not used to, and get ready for Nationals.

"I really think that we will go to Nationals, and if we don't make it, we will have really told the nation, 'watch out, because we're here and we will be pressing against everyone else.'"

Kuzara believes that statement, but adds the next step.

"We don't intend on just going to Nationals, we intend at this point to be in contention for the Super Six," Kuzara said. "From this point on our expectations will remain that high, and Tara and Lianne have never settled. They have never settled in the gym, and that guides us and leads us."

Whatever happens, this is not only the final stretch of the 1996–97 season, but it is also for Laing and Swartz in the maroon and white. After a tough four years of let–downs, inspiring wins, and meeting high expectations, they now can probably say that UMass has been very, very good to them.

"I don't think I could have asked for a better way to end my gymnastics career than to be with the team I am with right now," Laing said, who is interested in sports marketing and broadcasting after graduation. "I think we're going to make it to Nationals, and for that opportunity it was all worth it. Personally, I'm scared of retirement! It's creeping up on me, and I don't know how to deal with it.

"I'm just glad to be going out the way I am with this whole year, and for Tara and I to stand there together, knowing this was partly our doing."

"I have mixed emotions," Swartz said, who plans on going to law school. "I have done gymnastics for so many years I guess it's time. My body is telling me it's time, that's for sure. But I mean I will definitely miss it, it has been my whole life.

"I have always been Tara the gymnast, now I'm going to be Tara the... I'm excited, and I know I will miss it, but it's time to move on."

Kuzara has seen their development in not only gymnastic standards, but as people, as well. From relatively bewildered freshmen, they have evolved into his senior leaders.

"They have not only grown gymnastic–wise, but they have grown personally, and there has been a tremendous amount of personal growth between the both of them," Kuzara said. "For me, we need to finish the job, continue on this roll, get to Nationals, and it would be a storybook kind of career.

"Even if we stub our toe along the way, we've set the tone on how this program will be like, and they have helped set that tone. No one will ever forget them."

■ horn

continued from page 14

• The Cincinnati Reds surprised some people last week by signing Deion Sanders. Deion hasn't had a spectacular go of it moonlighting on the diamond, but be assured, he can play. Sanders is a very good lead–off hitter who can create runs with his speed, and his defense can be fantastic when he wants it to be. He showed his skill in the 1992 World Series, and he's never had the chance to prove himself in a full season. Sanders brings excitement to a team that often gets its biggest thrill cleaning up after Schottzie, owner Marge Schott's St. Bernard. Deion will help the Reds. It's just too bad their pitching won't.

• For God's sakes, leave Allen Iverson alone. Any man who isn't afraid to grow dreds during the hoop season is all right by me. Hey, Allen. I'm starting a Collegian team for Haigis Hoopla, and Stamm and I need a point guard. If you suit up, there's a $130,000 gold Mercedes in it for ya. Oh wait, you already have one. A very nice gesture from Georgetown's finest friends of the program. Just good people, I guess.

• I don't know anything about hockey, but I do know that the Mighty Ducks are 47–8–4. On the Sega NHL '96, that is. I traded Guy Hebert for Patrick Roy, and created five new players who currently ranked first through fifth in the league in scoring. Of course, you know you're playing a video game when the Blues are your main competition.

• Two words for all you Duke doubters. Trajan Langdon.

• Hey, if you happen to see an ACC official, remind them that if you step on the three point line, it doesn't count. NC State, you got lucky.

• I still hate the Knicks.

• Hey, watch out for the Brewers this year. They have a good rotation, they hit well, and...

Forget it, I tried my best. The Brewers will, alas, always stink up the state of Milwaukee.

• Did you know that The artist formerly known as Prince was actually an all–county basketball player in high school? Isn't that nuts?

Even more nuts?

The artist formerly known as the Pimp Daddy was All–Methuen in 8th grade, before a series of ankle injuries and a general lack of talent sidelined the one–time junior high legend. Some say that if he had the talent, he could have been the next Tim Legler.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Depression is a serious threat to anyone that has a brain.
UNTREATED DEPRESSION
http://www.save.org

■ nhl

continued from page 14

you puckhead wanna–be.

This team plays the game the way it was meant to be played, defense first and foremost and as a team. The fairly solid top line of Dixon Ward, Donald Audette and Brian Holzinger provides some scoring punch, but offensive threats for Buffalo are like A's on my report card... few and far between.

Buffalo, while possibly exceeding Florida in goal, falls short when it comes to having defensive forwards who can score like a Scott Mellanby, Rob Niedermayer or Tom Fitzgerald. What it does have though is silently one of the league's most improved players in 1997.

Matthew Barnaby, who last year led the NHL in penalty minutes with a whopping 338, has shown recently he can be a viable player, while maintaining his edge. Bam Bam Barnaby as he's called on his own radio show on WGR 550 AM in Buffalo, is becoming a prototypical old time hockey player. Barnaby is Exhibit A in why Nolan is the shoe–in Adams Award winner as Coach of the Year.

Additionally, no team will win over this two–bit writer without a quality goon and Rob Ray, who has a fighting misconduct rule unofficially named for him, fits that bill.

Defensemen Garry Galley, Alexi Zhitnik, et al, are fair, but still no Ed Jovanovski. Regardless the often hapless team is unbeaten in its last 12 games and trucking the Northeast title and a number two playoff seed up to Buffalo.

The last time Buffalo had a 12–game unbeaten streak was 1981 and someone named Scotty Bowman was behind the Aud bench and the lineup had guys like Mike Ramsey, a young Phil Housley and Mike Foligno jumping for joy.

They're fired up in Western New York; from Ransomville to Riceville and Big Tree to Tonawanda (These are actual suburbs, I couldn't make those names up if I tried and had heavy assistance from the three wisemen). Folks in Buffalo usually only get fired up this time of year when that day's storm only drops a foot of snow and the mercury hits 20.

The Buffalo Sabres are this year's Florida Panthers, but in April they won't out–Panther the Panthers.

If the 1996 Panthers were the 1995 Devils in disguise, this year's Sabres are just a sheepish clone of JovoCop and his mates from South Beach. Buffalo can beat many of the teams in the East, possibly even the Broadway Blueshirts in a grinding seven game series, and grind almost any team into the ground with its physical presence. The reasonable bets over Buffalo right now? Florida and Philadelphia.

• Buffalo has a plethora of enforcers. When Philly made its 1987 run to the Finals its enforcer was its goaltender Ron Hextall. Ten years later the Flyers have finally found his perfect tag–team partner in Maine alum Garth Snow. The two are one and two in the NHL in penalty minutes for goalies, while ranking in the top 10 in goals against average.

• Worry not good citizens of Amherst, that awful screaming sound you heard about 8:30 pm on Feb. 16 was just me yelling with joy from Room 323 of the Fairfield Inn in Phoenix a couple thousand miles away.

Finally, after an career in which he played against the Colorado Rockies, someone somewhere finally realized that Paul Coffey, the NHL's all–time leading scorer amongst defensemen, in a word, sucks.

Renewing a fight–laden intrastate rivalry with Pittsburgh, the Penguins took it right at Coffey every time on offense, and burnt the future Hall of Famer like a slice of DC pizza, for two easy first period goals.

Throw respect out the window for the should–be winger. Mario and Co. balked at pressuring rookies, a wise choice in the case of rock solid 21–year old Janne Niinimaa.

Coffey is a +6 this year. In 1970 the original offensive defenseman Bobby Orr was +128. Coffey has played for three teams already this season, but the Flyers management will probably quote Mark Twain to you.

Leading lefty ready to go for Red Sox

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FORT MYERS, Fla. — Butch Henry, one of baseball's top left-handers before being hurt, thought about quitting.

His elbow was badly damaged. Rehabilitation would be long and uncertain. He would make progress then would suffer setbacks. But with a young family to support, he decided to keep trying. On Monday, more than 18 months after he last faced a major-league hitter, Henry is scheduled to make his first spring appearance for the Boston Red Sox against the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I haven't thrown totally pain-free in the last four years," he said. "Thus far in spring training, I've been virtually pain-free. It's kind of a neat feeling."

"He's progressed way beyond anybody's wildest dreams," said Boston pitching coach Joe Kerrigan, who held the same job with Montreal when Henry pitched there from 1993 through 1995.

In 1994, Henry was 8-3 with a 2.43 ERA in 107 1-3 innings. The next season, he was just 7-9 but his ERA was 2.84 in 21 games, all starts. He even had a no-hitter for several innings against the New York Mets in his last start.

The left elbow that was operated on in 1989 started hurting the beginning of August 1995. But he was pitching well so he didn't tell anyone.

"I got (the injury) because I was stupid," Henry said. "I figured if you don't say anything, it'll go away."

In the fourth inning against the Mets on Aug. 17, he said, the pain got worse and he told Kerrigan. He tried one more inning but got just one out and left the game. He hasn't pitched in the majors since.

A ligament had pulled away from bone, taking part of the bone with it, he said. He points to the big scar on the inside of his left bicep. That's where doctors cut to do reconstructive surgery. Yet Boston took a chance. It claimed Henry off waivers on Oct. 13, 1995 and he stayed in Florida for extended spring training last year. He would make progress, throwing up to 60 pitches a game, and there were hopes he could be in Boston by July. He never made it. "I went too fast trying to get back to the big leagues and it cost me the year," Henry said. "You make decisions that you have to live with and I felt like the best thing I could do at that point was push it. The arm had other plans."

Now, just 28 years old, he has a chance to start the season in Boston — perhaps as a member of the rotation. He is out of options and another team almost certainly would pick him up if the Red Sox put him on waivers.

Henry said he's as healthy as anyone in the clubhouse and has been doing the same workouts as other pitchers. He figures any setback would have occurred already.

Kerrigan and manager Jimy Williams are optimistic.

"I see good life on the fastball, same velocity if not harder than before," Kerrigan said. "The curveball, which I think would be the last thing that would come back, has been really biting. He's a breath of fresh air."

"He looks pretty good," Williams said. "In fact, he looks real good."

Henry admits he still must realize he can throw hard without re-injuring his arm. But Kerrigan said that mental block should disappear in a couple of weeks.

Yet uncertainty remains if Henry can regain his form of 18 months ago. Monday's game should give an early indication: "There were one or two times when I sincerely thought about doing something else and I came to a decision that, in order to be able to look at myself in the mirror when I wake up in the morning, I needed to play this scenario out," Henry said.

So far, his future is brighter than at any point in the last 18 months. He's confident that if he's healthy he'll pitch in the majors for the Red Sox or some other team.

"I'm about as close to 100 percent right now as one wants to be with a month and a half of spring left," Henry said. "I haven't really felt anything that's worried me."

The Huke Lau proudly invites you to the Grand Opening of New England's Finest Nouveau Dance Club
The Club Connection
Say hello and bring your friends to the newest and most exciting Dance Club in all of New England during it's Grand Opening Party
Thursday February 27th 9:30pm
Experience a state of the art intelligent light show and a mega mountain sound system with 20,000 WATTS of non stopping heart throbbing dance excitement. A European Flavor that needs to be experienced.
Hu Ke Lau
705 Memorial Drive Chicope Ma 413-543-5222 club CONNECTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Free Info Session
Wednesday, March 5th
7:00pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
Ship Around & Company
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!!

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families
Wednesday, February 26, 1997
Room 804
6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass
I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?
If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call University Health Services Health Education at 577-5181 or General Medicine 2 at 577-5233

Be a Resident Assistant!
Help Shape Your Piece of the World
Applications for 1997-1998 Resident Assistant Positions Now Being Accepted.
Applicants Must Attend an Information Session to Receive an Application:
February 12 7:00pm McNamara Main Lounge
February 18 7:00pm Webster Classroom
7:00pm Stonewall Center, Crampton
February 20 7:00pm Coolidge 5th floor
7:00pm Baker Classroom
February 24 7:00pm Campus Center 165-9
February 26 12:30pm Campus Center 165-9
7:00pm Knowlton Main Lounge
February 27 7:00pm Hillel House
7:00pm Gorman 2nd Floor Lounge
March 3 7:00pm Campus Center 804-05
March 4 7:00pm Patterson Main Lounge
For more information, call the Center for Diversity and Development at 545-0472.

Exercise your mind....expand your lungs
join BIKE-AID 1997
Inspire environmental awareness across America in the adventure of a lifetime!
BIKE-AID IS...
•promoting alternative transportation through action
•supporting environmentally sustainable development projects
•participating in educational exchanges with local communities
•cycling for social and environmental justice
•experiencing life to its fullest!
ROUTES AVAILABLE:
from Seattle, WA; Portland, OR; San Francisco, CA
Rides start June 12 ending together August 23 in Washington, DC.
Space is limited, call now for an incredible summer!
BIKE AID
Bike-Aid '97
1-800-RIDE-808
333 Valencia Street, Suite 330
San Francisco CA 94103
415-431-4480
odn@igc.org
www.igc.apc.org/odn/

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Are you interested in bringing a speaker to campus? Do you want to gain real-life experience working for a student organization? Come to a meeting for THE DISTINGUISHED VISITOR'S PROGRAM on Tuesday, February 25 at 7pm. in Room 168C of the Campus Center Call 545-0046 for more info. Food will be served.

SUMMER IN SWITZERLAND First session 5/24-6/27 ALL MAJORS: 6 credits airfare Eurorail Room/board ALL FOR $3299- Contact Chris 545-4411 or Jeff 545-4046

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Large Studio Apartment Amherst Center Available now 253-9245

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Stanza 5-speed, loaded, power everything A/C, FWD, 110,000 miles Runs mint. Only $2100 546-1912

1985 Skylark automatic V-6, FWD, sunroof $850 546-1912

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1987 Ford Escort GT Burgundy Hatchback, AC, FM sunroof, excellent condition, 104K miles $2125 or B/O. Lis 256-1238

1987 Plymouth Sundance Excellent body, runs very well $1800 or B/O. Call 549-4425

AUTO FOR SALE

1988 VW Jetta 5-speed, sunroof, good condition $1800. 586-0383

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER JOB! Camp Samoset is now interviewing staff for this summer. Top boys' sports camp in Casco, Maine, seeks male and female counselors for all land and water sports: archery, riflery, arts and crafts, drama and woodworking. Also hiring secretaries, kitchen and maintenance workers. Call or fax resume to Winter Office, Wellesley, MA Phone: (617)237-3017 Fax (617)237-7269

COUNSELORS: TOP BOYS' SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Get in on an exciting, fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist. Openings in Baseball, Basketball, Soccer, Tennis, Hockey, Lax, Swimming(WSI), Water-skiing, and all Water Sports PLUS: Camping and Hiking, Ropes and Climbing Wall, SCUBA, English Horseback Riding, Archery, Riflery, Arts and Crafts, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top salaries, awesome facilities, Room/Board/Laundry, Travel. Call the (800) number now! (800)473-6104 for an appointment for an interview on March 11th in the Student Union Ballroom, 10:00am -4:00pm or E-Mail (cobbin camp@aol.com) or write Steve Rubin, CAMP COBBOSSEE (Kahbuhsee) 10 Silvermine Dr. South Salem, NY

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT- How would you like to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, and get paid? Call (206)971-3554 ext. C50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

EMPLOYMENT

COMPACT DISK BUYERS!! CD's go MUM! Earn free CD's and great weekly income $50 Dna-Time Investment International Program (413)322-6120

Camp Waynesister half of brother/sister camp, Northeast Pennsylvania 6/23-8/20/97) Have the most memorable summer of your life! Coaches, teachers, students. Pre-requisite Must love children, enjoy living and working in a group situation On-Campus Interviews March 11 Call (800)279-3019

LIFEGUARD- Private beach on Cape Cod Free beachside room Memorial Day- Labor Day WSI Certification 253-6619

Responsible person to care for infant in our home ON BUS ROUTE Three afternoons per week 549-5035

Premiere Brother/Sister Camps in Massschusetts On-Campus Interviews Counselor positions for talented and energetic students in all Team Sports, aspecially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball, 30 Tennis Openings, also Golf, Archery, Riflery, Ropes and Rock Climbing, Weights/fitness and Cycling, other openings include Performing Arts, Fine Arts, Figure Skating, Newspaper, Photography, Yearbook, Radio Station, Rocketry, Swimming, Skiing, Sailing, Wind surfing, Canoeing/Kayaking Top salaries, room, board and travel June 22nd-August 20th. Call for information MAH-KEE-NAC(boys) (800-753-8118 DANBEE(girls) 800-392-3752 Recruiters will be On-Campus Tuesday, March 11th, 10am -4pm at the UMass Camp Day.

EMPLOYMENT

CRUISE LINES HIRING- Earn up to $1000s/month plus free world travel(Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. (919)918-7767 Ext. C180. (Member, Better Business Bureau CARE Program)

ALASKA EMPLOYMENT- Earn up to $3000-$6000/month in fisheries, parks and resorts ...Airfare! Food/lodging! Get all the options Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors! Call (206)971-3620 ext. N50017 (We are a research and publishing company)

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washer/dryers and more! On bus line Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856

FOR RENT

One bedroom in a 2 bedroom apt on bus route. Heat and hot water included $322/month Call 546-0262

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

6X CD-ROM DRIVE 28.8 DATA/FAX MODEM Call Rafeal 549-4529

Bolster your immune system, improve your energy and focus with wild, organic, Super Blue Green Algae. 90-Day money back guarantee. Call independent distributor, Matthew Vergo at 256-1331 for more information or a free tape

KLH 3-Way 350W SPKRS (BR) 12" Woofers, $750(P). Call 253-6928

STEREO EQUIPMENT Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange, 256-0941

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Cindy, We know you wanted everyone to know it is your birthday, so here it is. Happy 21st! Love, Your Drinking Buddies Kimberly and Amy (Oops, Sorry Amy)

LOST

Small Black Earring between Boyden and Morrill Science Center LOST 2/18. If found please call 367-2640

LOST

Black Organizer/Phone Book $Reward$ if found. Please contact Adam at 549-2623

MISCELLANEOUS

Pledged and didn't like it? Start your own Fraternity. Veta Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, E-Mail ZBT@1BTNATIONAL.ORG or call Brett Hirbeck at (317)704-1898

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)666-479

PERSONALS

JAY ROSE!
Congrats 2 U and Allia on your engagement! Your Friends at Admissions

ROOM WANTED

Looking for apartment on bus line starting Fall '97. Call Amy 546-0706

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 or 2 females needed to share an apt. Fall '97. Call Kim or Karen 546-0617 ASAP

SERVICES

HIGH-SPEED Internet comes to the Five College Area! Unlimited local access, no busy signals, free Web Page with account! Call TIAC at (860)644-6732 Student rates available.

SERVICES

GRE GMAT Prep Courses 30 hours 3 weeks $295.00 1-800-806-Prep

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

Foreign Students-Visitors. Greencard programs available (800)773-8704 Cost: $25 Applications close 2-24-97

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street, Northampton (413)586-0829

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. F50016 (We are a research and publishing company)

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '97! CANCUN, BAHAMAS, JAMAICA AND FLORIDA 7-meal plan only $191 GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH. CALL TODAY! (800)700-0790 www.vagabondtours.com

Spring Break '97 Don't be left out! Space is limited! Cancun and Jamaica from $449 and Florida from $129. Call STS @ 1-800-648-4849 for the best rates!

London $189, Paris $199, Rio $250 (ALL R/T) 50-90% off all fares. Air Courier Int'l (800)298-1230 24 hrs

TRAVEL

Scuba Spring Break Earn 2 credits March 16-22 Call (800)282-0977 for info.

Jamaica-Spring Break from $589 Go with whom you can trust! Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week (413)786-7133 Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Europe $155, Caribb./Mexico $189 R/T Worldwide Destinations Aurhitch Tm. (800)326-2009 aithitch@netcom.com or www.is-com.fr/aithitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven. Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations-free parties!!! Organize group and travel free. Lowest price guaranteed from $99. (800)426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

ATTN SNOWBOARDERS- I need pictures for my snowboarding zine called Toothsome. Please call 253-6493

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be processed by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals (this means dorm room numbers as well).
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek employment, or for commercial gain.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad listed on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 26

Discussion — Ilan Wagner and Guy Korngold will present "Israeli & American Cultural Differences Today" and "Pro- Israeli Activism on Campus" at 8 p.m. at Hillel Houses. Sponsored by UMass Hillel/ Hamagshimim Group.

Film, discussion — Commuter Area Government presents Final Judgement, a documentary film by UMass alumnus Jonathan Stack, showcasing the last few weeks of Antonio James' life — the true story from which the movie Dead Man Walking was based. The film, which starts at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom, will be followed by a panel discussion with Jonathan Stack (Director/ Producer), Burl Cain (Warden, Louisiana State Penitentiary) and Bill Newman (Attorney, Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union).

Lecture — Ross Chambers, Marvin Felheim Distinguished University Professor of French and comparative literature at the University of Michigan will present a lecture, "Anxious Reading: Eric Michaels' Unbecoming and the Death of the Author" at 4 p.m. in the Front Room of Amherst College Campus Center. Presented by Amherst College and its French Department, the event is free and open to the public.

Lecture — The Wildlife Society presents Robert Leverette, professor at Mount Holyoke College, on "Old Growth Forests in Massachusetts," at 5:30 p.m. in Holdsworth 203. Refreshments will be served.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold this week's meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174. Anyone who appreciates or writes poetry is welcome. New members are always welcome. For more information contact Tim at 546-0562 or Kave at 546-1459.

Meeting — the Biracial/Multiracial Student Association will be holding a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge. Everyone is welcome to join.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Performance — Craig Hickman performs "Portraits of a Black Queen" at 8 p.m. in the Hampden Theatre. Part of the GLBT Cafe Series and co-sponsored by the Stonewall Center and the UMass Arts Council.

THURSDAY, FEB. 27

Lecture — Michael Thelwell, professor of Afro-American Studies will be lecturing on Civil Rights activist Kwame Ture, formerly Stoakley Carmichael, at 7 p.m. in the New Africa House, room 311. Poetry Reading — Joseph Langland and Michael Pettit, two of the best known poets and spokesmen for poetry in the Valley will read from their works at 7:30 p.m. in the Large Meeting Room of Jones Library. For more information call English Professor, Stanley Koehler at 545- 5505.

Discussion — Biosci will be hosting Anp De and Carolyn Augart, med students from UMass Worcester, in a discussion about what medical school is really like at 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center, room 168 C. Contact Carey at 546- 4465 if you have any questions.

Religious — Learn the cooking magic of the Challah with all of your friends at the Challah Baking Extravaganza. We want you to make and gorge on delicious fresh Challah. All you have to do is show up at the Hillel House at 7 p.m.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

NOTICES

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (215 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Dance — The UMass Ballroom Dance club invites everyone to come dance with us every Tuesday and Thursday from 5:15–7 p.m. at 101 Totman Gym. Newcomer Waltz/ Chacha class begins Feb. 25. Intermediate/ advanced instruction by a pro every Wednesday, 6:15–7:30 p.m. All instructions are free. For more info, call Kevin Murphy at 549-4036.

SGA nominations — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the nominations for the positions of President and Student Trustee, along with positions for local Area Government are now being held. The nomination forms are available in the SGA office. These nominations close on Feb. 27 by midnight; all forms must be turned in by this date, otherwise the candidates are not eligible to run for office.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Film — The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Mother Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our website page: www.umass.edu/film

Band wanted — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently seeking a four piece band for the Spring production of Fame. The band must include: keyboard, guitar, bass, and drums. Great publicity possibilities. For more information call Heather at 549–3681 or Justin at 546–0460.

Coffee Shop — Student Valley Productions is holding a Coffee Shop in April. They are looking for any talent coming from the Five College area in music, songs, poetry, skits, comedy, etc. For more information, call Daisy at 253–6514.

Mission Improvable — The UMass comedy improv troop is performing every Saturday night in the Campus Center basement. Admission is free. All are welcome from the Five College area. For more information call Aaron at 546–5225.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

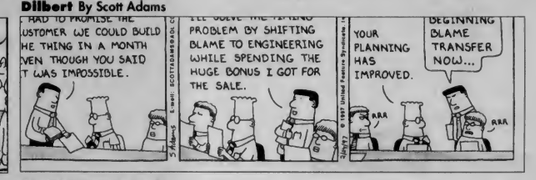
WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 hamburger tacos after 10 tonight!

Full Menu Served 'til 1 AM!
We accept Credit Cards

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 26, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Business Rpt.	Women's College Basketball: Connecticut at Syracuse (Live)			Young Voices on Sheff		In the Wild (In Stereo) ⓒ		Gift From Sea
WFSB	3	3	News ⓒ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am Journal	Grammy Awards (Live In Stereo) ⓒ					News ⓒ	Late Show ⓒ
WBZ	4	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Grammy Awards (Live In Stereo) ⓒ					News ⓒ	Nightline ⓒ
WCVB	5	5	News ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ⓒ	Grace Under	Coach ⓒ	Drew Carey ⓒ	Ellen ⓒ	Primetime Live ⓒ		Jenny Jones (In Stereo) ⓒ
WLVI	6		Full House ⓒ	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Sister, Sister	Nick Freno	Wayans Bros.	Jamie Foxx ⓒ	News		News
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune Jeopardy! ⓒ		National Geographic ⓒ		Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ		Law & Order 'Working Mom' ⓒ	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Fresh Prince	Martin ⓒ	Judge Judy	Red TV ⓒ	Sentinel "Red Dust" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager "Rise" ⓒ		Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ	LAPD	R. Patrol Real TV ⓒ
WYIT		10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy ⓒ	National Geographic ⓒ				Law & Order 'Working Mom' ⓒ	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	3	11	Simpsons ⓒ	Roseanne ⓒ	Home Imp.	Seinfeld ⓒ	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five 'Hitting Bottom'		News	Coach ⓒ	Deep Space 9
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune Jeopardy! ⓒ		National Geographic ⓒ		Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ		Law & Order 'Working Mom' ⓒ	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	4	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ				In the Wild (In Stereo) ⓒ			News ⓒ	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	29	News ⓒ	ABC News	Seinfeld ⓒ	Ent. Tonight	Grace Under	Coach ⓒ	Drew Carey ⓒ	Ellen ⓒ	Primetime Live ⓒ	News ⓒ	Nightline ⓒ
WSBK	38		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld ⓒ	Mad Abo. You	Sentinel "Red Dust" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager "Rise" ⓒ		News	Martin ⓒ	Mad Abo. You Real TV ⓒ
WTBS	72		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	NBA Basketball: Seattle SuperSonics at Indiana Pacers. (Live) ⓒ					Inside-NBA	"Krynter Forbidden Subjects"
A&E	45		Quincy "Holding Pattern"		Equalizer "Video Games"		Biography: Nelson Mandela		American Justice		20th Century "Firestorm!"		Law & Order ⓒ
CNN	43	28	WorldView ⓒ		Moneyline ⓒ	Crossfire ⓒ	Prime News ⓒ	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ⓒ		World Today		Sports Illus. Moneyline ⓒ
COM	53	30	Tick ⓒ	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	"Pee-wee's Big Adventure" (1985) Pee-wee Herman				Pee-wee Herman (R)		Daily Show TV Nation
DISC	52		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings of the Red Star (R)		Wild Discovery: Struggle		Discover Magazine "Survival"		Secrets of the Internet		Wild Discovery: Struggle
ESPN	51		Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: St. John's at Seton Hall (Live)				College Basketball: North Carolina at Clemson. (Live)				Sportscenter ⓒ
LIFE	49		Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Their Second Chance" (1997, Drama) Lindsay Wagner			Living	Mysteries
MTV	31		Grammy Nominations		Grammy Awards Pre-Game		Prime Time (In Stereo)				Real World ⓒ	Real World ⓒ	Grammy Post Lovelins
NICK	55		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug ⓒ	Rugrats ⓒ	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy ⓒ	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Test ⓒ Odd Couple ⓒ
SCIFI	59		Twilight Zone	Darkside	Time Trax (In Stereo)		Talwar "Redemption" (R) ⓒ		Forever Knight (In Stereo) ⓒ		Sightings (In Stereo) ⓒ		Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)
TLC	42	28	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	SeaTek	Pop Science	Down In Flames (R)		Earth's Fury		SeaTek (R) Pop Science
TNT	54		In the Heat of the Night ⓒ		In the Heat of the Night ⓒ		★★½ "National Lampoon's Vacation" (1983) Chevy Chase				★★★ "Seems Like Old Times" (1980, Comedy) Goldie Hawn.
USA	62		Renegade "Teen Angel" ⓒ		Highlander: The Series ⓒ		Murder, She Wrote ⓒ		★★½ "Sharon's Secret" (1996, Suspense) Candace Cameron. ⓒ		Wings ⓒ	Wings ⓒ
HBO	33		(4:45) "In Love" (★ Ladybugs (1992, Sports) Rodney Dangerfield. ⓒ				★★★ "Copycat" (1995, Suspense) Sigourney Weaver. 'R' ⓒ				Larry Sanders Tricsey Takes		Comedy Hour: George Carlin
MAX	35		★★½ "Batman Forever" (1995, Adventure) Val Kilmer. 'PG-13' ⓒ				★★½ "The Fog" (1980) Adrienne Barbeau 'R' ⓒ		★★ "Dirt 6" (1996, Drama) Theresa Randle (In Stereo) 'R' ⓒ				"Martha"
SHOW	36		Tina Turner: Wildest Dreams Concert (R) (In Stereo)				★★ "Uncertow" (1996) Lou Diamond Phillips 'R' ⓒ		★½ "Jury Duty" (1995) Pauly Shore 'PG-13' ⓒ				Best of Fest "EndSumm"

Bruno By C. Baldwin



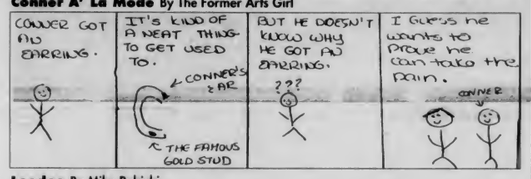
Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

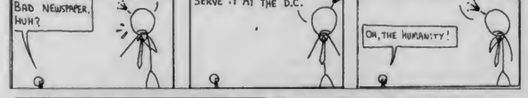
Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Social Norm By Mr. K



Non Sequitor By Wiley



University* By Frank Cho

Conner A' La Mode By The Former Arts Girl

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Keep a close watch on details, especially those involving finances. Small changes could mean a big payoff. Take time for yourself. Don't become overly involved in other people's intricate problems.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Stick to a routine...and establish priorities and follow them. Your natural abilities emerge, especially if you have an audience. Old friendships are renewed and new ones are formed this week. Don't take situations or people for granted.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Keep emotions under control. Study situations before taking action. Pay attension to health. diet. Storms on the domestic horizon will blow over if you let them. Finish one project before tackling another one. A clean slate makes a better starting point for a new project at work.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
Let others take the lead. Wait and watch for the right moments to make a move. Don't worry, you'll know when the time is right. Things will become clear over time. Share concerns, especially financial ones, with your mate.

LEO
July 23–August 23
Work hard and stay focused on your goals. Ignore distractions and try to keep worries to a minimum. Things will work out as they should. There is a growing chance for travel and/or romance. Be aware of the signs and act on them.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
The pressure of conflicting duties and desires could build up. Be aware of what's really required. Try to see the big picture and let the little things work themselves out. Avoid scattering your forces or spreading yourself too thin.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Learn from past victories and mistakes. Don't try to force your opinions—talking softly is better now. Work in the background and let others take credit for ideas and actions. Even small actions can have big consequences. Take time to comfort others.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
See things as others see them. Giving in a little now can get you more in the long run. Take a breather when you need it. Pushing yourself too hard could backfire and keep you from reaching goals. Your mate really does want to help if you allow it.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
Don't let work pile up. Keep on top of things for best results. Keep health resolutions about rest and diet. Stick to a middle-of-the-road course for best results. Resist efforts to draw you into an extreme position. Now is the time to stay on the sidelines.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
Read the fine print and study details closely. Domestic problems could be simmering just below the surface. Deal with them now rather than later. Your situation will get better in time. Take time to tie up loose ends.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
A potential ally is waiting in the wings for the right moment. Don't flaunt on health and relationships. Trying to force the issue only makes the situation worse. Now is the time to avoid unnecessary expenditures and watch your budget.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
You have to be the watchdog. Hold others accountable and be sure to get receipts. Your taste and loneliness partners may grumble about it, but they will thank you in the end. Asking the right question at the right time could give the answer you need.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

Quote of the Day

"From evolution we've been killing each other, I figure man should have it down to a science."

–Philip Anselmo Pantera

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH: Chicken Cutlet, Black Bean Burger, Mac & Cheese
DINNER: Roast Beef, Cheese Lasagna, Chicken Breast

Worcester

LUNCH: Mac &Cheese, Rotini, Meatballs & Roll, Red Beans
DINNER: Roast Beef, Baked Ziti, Caponata, Pastabilities

Hampshire

LUNCH: Hamburger, Chicken Cutlet, Grilled cheese
DINNER: Roast Beef, Baked Ziti

Berkshire

LUNCH: Mac &Cheese, Rotini, Sauce, Tri Bean Casserole
DINNER: Roast Beef, Chicken wings, Caponata, Pastabilities

ACROSS
1. Stink
6. Lhasa ___ (dog breed)
10. Beset's abode
14. Coat fold
15. Young deer
16. Where some work out
17. Sociologist Durkheim
18. Magi or Musketeers, e.g.
19. Harvest
20. As easy as ___
21. Night vision
23. Natives of Oulu
24. Eat between meals
26. Falklands feuder abbr
27. Milt. female
28. Actress ___ B. Davis
30. General Bradley
32. ___ Buddhism
35. In s high dudgeon
38. Don't bet ___ (2 wds.)
39. Member of an '80s pop group (2 wds.)
40. Took out
42. Weird
44. Pestured oneself
45. Disturbance
47. Salad ingredient
48. School course: abbr
49. Props for Soupy Sales
50. Beatlemania adjective
51. D.C. lobbying gp.
52. Singing syllable
54. ___ the Top (Stallone film)
57. Express grief
61. Honesty
63. All About ___
64. ___ lacto
65. Cheese in a mousetrap
66. "Out like a lamb" follower
68. Made a knot
69. Restless desire
70. Vulgar one's lack
71. Bassett and Mack
72. Words from Scrooge
73. Pamplins

DOWN
1. Purge
2. MIA rescuer of film
3. Narratives
4. Electric ___
5. Asked for mercy
6. Tan Years ___
7. Model
8. Do the crawl
9. Artist Yoko
10. Kind of soprano
11. Hymn ender
12. Positive thinker's phrase (2 wds.)
13. Sings like Hammer
22. Alec- ___
23. Cold, in a guessing game
25. Loathed
27. Inventor James
28. Clear profit
31. Moor morning feature
32. "The Twilight ___"
33. Layers' legacies
34. Nays

St. Joe's out-hustles UMass in second meeting

Hawks sweep UM 2–0 on season

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

As the St. Joseph's fans rushed the floor of Alumni Memorial Field House after last night's 78–63 win over Massachusetts, the Minutemen (17–12, 10–5 Atlantic 10) made it that much harder to ensure their spot in the NCAA Tournament.

With their first national ranking since March of 1973 and campus media dubbing last night's contests as "the game of the century" the No. 23 Hawks defended their turf to sweep UMass 2–0 on the season.

MASSACHUSETTS	63
ST. JOSEPHS	78

UMass cut the lead to a point on a Lari Ketner drop step jam with 12 minutes to play, but then went sour. On the heels of four Minuteman turnovers and hand full of fouls, the Hawks (20–6, 12–3) sparked a 12–1 run keeping the lead well out of reach the rest of the way. How cold was the Maroon and White? UMass went 11:07 without a basket during the lethal St. Joe's run.

When it came down the wire, the Minutemen got sloppy missing foul shots shooting just 7–16 from the stripe in the second half letting their emotions get the better of them. The Hawks, on the other hand, lit it up from the charity stripe going 18–23 (78 percent).

While officials tried to keep emotions on the court in check by calling a tight game, UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint drew two technical fouls from the bench. Before being ejected in the games final minutes, Flint congratulated the coach of his alma mater — a classic show of sportsmanship in what was a frustrating situation.

Ketner proved to be the scoring work horse for UMass, harassing the Hawks inside knocking down 19 points and pulling down seven boards before fouling out with 3:20 remaining in the contest.

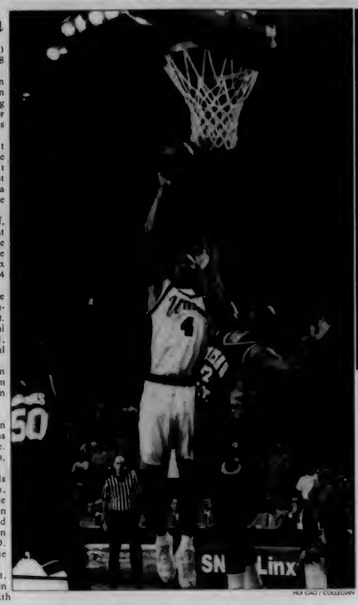
Despite shooting just 5–15 from the floor (4–10 from downtown) Carmelo Travieso notched 18 points and 8 assists.

In the first half, the Minutemen mustered the game's only tie when Travieso stripped the ball sending backcourt–mate Edgar Padilla in for a dunk with 11:30 to go. That was as close as UMass would get.

The Hawks just out–hustled the Minutemen when it counted — in the first set, St. Joe's held a 2–11 advantage in second chance points

Down by five (40–35) at the half, UMass struggled to contain point guard Rashid Bey whose dribble penetration and speed abused the Minutemen for 18 points and six assists before fouling out with 1:04 in the game.

While Ketner and Travieso were the only Minutemen to put up double digits in the scoring column, St. Joe's boasted five (Dmitri Domani 12, Bey 18, Arthur "Yah" Davis 11, Terrell Myers 16 and Harold Rasul 10).



If the Hawks beat La Salle on Saturday, (currently at the bottom of the A–10 West) the No. 1 spot in the East is theirs.

So, now what?

Despite falling to Dayton on Sunday, it looked as though UMass had taken a step off the bubble. However, with a loss to St. Joe's, they have taken a step backwards.

Before you sharpen the pencils and dust off your calculators, racking your brain to solve the equation that earns UMass an NCAA berth, the Minutemen need a big game against Temple on Saturday in the William D. Mullins Center to close out the regular season.

As for the A–10 Tournament, though a win ensures them a spot in the pool of 64, capturing its sixth consecutive conference Championship will not be as easy as it has been in the past.

HOI CAO / COLLEGIAN

Lari Ketner led the Minutemen in scoring, but UMass came up short on Hawk Hill last night.

No. 23 ST. JOSEPH'S 78, MASSACHUSETTS 63

At Philadelphia, Penn.
Massachusetts (17-12, 10-5)

Travieso 5-15 4-6 18, Weeks 2-7 2-4 6, Ketner 8-11 3-4 19, Clarke 3-6 1-2 8, Padilla 3-10 2-5 9, Smith 0-0 0-0 0, Babul 0-0 0-0 0, Basit 0-0 0-0 0, Norville 1-5 1-2 3. Totals 22-54 13-23 63.

St. Joseph's (20-6, 12-3)

Simmonds 0-4 3-4 3, Domani 2-6 6-6 12, Petrovic 3-4 2-6 8, Bey 5-12 6-6 18, Davis 4-11 3-7 11, Mazzio 0-0 0-0 0, Myers 3-10 8-8 16, Gallagher 0-0 0-0 0, DelVescovo 0-1 0-0 0, Rasul 4-5 2-3 10, Haskins 0-1 0-2 0. Totals 21-54 30-42 78.

Halftime — St. Joseph's 40, Massachusetts 33. 3-Point goals — Massachusetts 6-18 (Travieso 4-10, Clarke 1-2, Padilla 1-6), St. Joseph's 6-23 (Domani 2-4, Bey 2-4, Myers 2-6, DelVescovo 0-1, Haskins 0-1, Davis 0-3, Simmonds 0-4). Fouled out — Ketner, Bey. Rebounds-Massachusetts 34 (Travieso 9), St. Joseph's 35 (Petrovic 8). Assists — Massachusetts 18 (Travieso 8), St. Joseph's 12 (Bey 6). Total fouls — Massachusetts 31, St. Joseph's 22.

Technicals-Massachusetts bench, Massachusetts coach Flint 2 (ejected). A-3,200.

Player of the Game

Lari Ketner – 19 points, 7 rebounds

Highlights...

The Hawks held this one from wire to wire. UMass tied it up at 14 in the first half when Carmelo Travieso stole the ball and getting it to Edgar Padilla who dunked the tying bucket. However, in the second half, St. Joe's went on a 12–1 run in which they kept UMass off the board for just over 11 minutes. Lari Ketner led the Minutemen with 19 pts before fouling out while Travieso tallied 18 pts and 8 assists.

Buffalo stampeding to Cup; Toronto sells soul to Devil

LEIGH TORBIN ON THE NHL

It turns out the Boston Bruins probably could have had Doug Gilmour and his 1,101 career points for a package like Trent McCleary, Steve Staios and an elongated collar left over from the Don Cherry years. Why, oh why do I still root for this team? Just lock me in a room with Neil Sekada's Greatest Hits, a rabid moose and an accountant — it will be far less painful than waiting for June's entry draft.

Last night Toronto GM Cliff Fletcher, in a move that will likely find him working in the Eaton Center food court next month, dealt Gilmour, a prototypical power forward and his team's long–time captain and heart and soul, along with solid veteran defenseman Dave Ellett and a draft pick to the Devils for — get this — Jason Smith, Steve Sullivan and Alyn McCauley. It seems John Calipari isn't the only one in the swampland royally ripping off teams these days.

Smith (not the same one who laced 'em up at UMass three years ago) has 11 points in four years of sporadic NHL action. Sullivan, meanwhile, has played in a whopping 49 career games. The saving grace for the rabid Maple Leaf faithful is the acquisition of McCauley (not related to the Home Alone pip–squeak), last year's Ontario Hockey League MVP with the Ottawa 67's.

Gee, imagine the package deal Harry Sinden could have gotten by putting Gilmour and the disgruntled Adam Oates together. Those two could guarantee a Stanley Cup for several contenders, but no, Sinden will sit on Oates until the former alternate captain cries uncle, and probably deal him in the end for Dennis Vaske.

• The Buffalo Sabres are bar none the surprise team in the NHL this season, playing the game exactly the way it was meant to be played. But, pardon me if I jump off the bandwagon somewhere around the Buffalo suburbs named Boston or Amherst. The closest this classic old–time team will come to the Stanley Cup is the Holy Grail's year–round home at the corner of Yonge and Front Streets in Toronto.

That said, this team is still going places. I am a tremendous fan of Ted Nolan's team, its snazzy new unis, and new home arena which comes complete with a jumbotron to match the Freefall ride and any of our nation's fine Six Flags Amusement Parks.

What Nolan has done with this team after the likely career–ending loss of its big toe Pat LaFontaine is nothing short of what Bill Murray and Harold Ramis did for Bravo Company in Stripes minus Sgt. Hulka, its own LaFontaine.

The Sabres are nearly this year's Florida Panthers. The team features a dominating goaltender in Dominik Hasek, who leads the NHL in save percentage, saves and minutes played, while playing behind the biggest collection of no– names this side of "Saturday Night Live."

Go ahead, name five members of the first place team in the Northeast Division. Come on, I double dog dare ya'! Bring it on! See, differential calculus doesn't look so hard now does it

Turn to NHL, page 11

Laing – Swartz shine in senior season

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

For lack of a better way of saying it, the 1990's has been very, very good to the sports teams at this university.

The No. 20 Massachusetts women's gymnastics team (7–2) can be seen from Boyden Gym to the Curry Hicks Cage to the Mullins Center, with thanks going to senior co–captains Lianne Laing and Tara Swartz.

When coach Dave Kuzara took over the program four years ago, Laing and Swartz were the first two stars he could build around. After the NCAA and World University Games success of Tammy Marshall in 1992–93, Kuzara was brought in to change his program from a one–star team to a team with thirteen different stars. That is where his now–co– captains came in, and now, you can consider them to be the cornerstones of the team's current success.

When you first meet Laing and Swartz around campus, it could be hard to consider the 5–foot–4 and 5–foot–1 gymnasts, respectively, as "cornerstones" in any shape or fashion. But, to consider them cornerstones is true, and the resurrection of the program has them to thank.

In their four years at this University, their success has been tailor–made, and it's all business for them almost every weekend of the late winter and early spring.

"We got 13 star gymnasts now," Laing said. "Every year when Tara and I have been competing, we knew if we made mistakes, the team wasn't going to pull through. Whereas, now when we go out, we know the job is getting done by the top six girls going that day.

"I mean, we're so good. To be ranked where we are, and to not have reached our peak yet just shows how our program has gone. Tammy Marshall started up the fire, and it's kind of nice to know that Tara and I have been the cornerstones for the rest of the team to keep it going."

Swartz performed to the best of her ability this past weekend in the team's upset of then–No. 15 Minnesota, breaking Marshall's school record in the all–around competition (39.350). For her, it's upset in the early Kuzara era. In the imposing environment of the WVU Coliseum, the Minutewomen broke West Virginia's streak of 24 consecutive wins in the Atlantic 10 with a stunning 190.925–190.725 win over the then–21st ranked team

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Senior Co–Captains Lianne Laing and Tara Swartz honored together in their final home meet last weekend.

After a tough home loss to Pittsburgh early in February, 1995, UMass came back with its' biggest

Turn to GYMNASTICS, page 11

Lobos, Cards sleeper picks Jayhawks rock and chalk

LUKE MEREDITH AROUND THE HORN

The snow's all melted, the buds (not those buds, Cheech) are starting to peak out of the trees and spring training is underway, leaving us with the knowledge that warm weather and the beauty of spring is coming up soon. But until then, we have to deal with the NBA, the NHL and car racing taking up way too much time on SportsCenter. But hey, there's college hoops, right?

That's where I'll start. My housemates and I got frisky last week and picked our pre–Selection Sunday Final Four, with some interesting selections.

Skip picked the standards: Wake Forest, Kansas, Kentucky and Duke. Dave picked Clemson, which he has supported all year, along with Wake Forest, Kansas and Michigan. Sammy, who lists Rutgers as one of his favorite teams, has Indiana, Maryland, Kansas and Villanova going to Indianapolis. Eric, who'll I'll give props to because he keeps it real with the Minutemen, has UMass, with Duke, Georgia Tech, (a preseason pick) and Kansas.

Me?

Right now, I have Kansas, because they're amazing, and I've got the Demon Deacons because of Timmy Terrific, the best player in America. My other two?

New Mexico and Louisville.

What? That's right, baby, the Cards and the Lobos. Have I finally lost it? Maybe, but let me explain myself.

The Lobos are the most underrated team in ßßAmerica. They've torn up the WAC, which is actually really good for once, and their core players all have tournament experience. Clayton Shields, Kenny Thomas and Charles Smith are as good a trio as you'll find, and they're hungry for respect. They'll get a weak West bracket to deal with. (do not get started on UCLA), and they'll surprise America by marching to the dance.

As far as Louisville goes, let me say this. I hate the Cardinals more than you do, but a Final Four doesn't go by when at least one team isn't a complete shock. I feel Louisville can do it. They have a player who can get as hot as anyone in America in DeJuan Wheat, and the program has a long history of tournament success under televangelist turned basketball coach Denny Crum. The talent is there, they just need to find it. And if they don't, they'll lose in the first round.

• Jesus once said, "Teach a man to fish, and he'll eat for life." If that's true, how come nobody ever watches those fishing shows on ESPN?

Turn to HORN, page11

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 91 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, February 27, 1997

Tourney time!

Led by Kelly Van Huisen, women's hoop faces Duquesne tonight in an A-10 Tournament game (see Sports, page 14).

Noho music scene alive and well

The Arts desk takes a close look at the Northampton music scene and Easthampton's Chunk Records (See Arts & Living page 5).

WORLD

Vatican seeks ban on cloning human beings

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Responding to the cloning of an adult sheep in Scotland, the Vatican newspaper appealed yesterday for a ban on the cloning of humans, saying people have the right to be born "in a human way."

President Clinton has asked a bioethics advisory commission to review the implications of the technology for humans. In testimony yesterday, the director of the National institutes of Health, Dr. Harold Varmus, called the prospect of cloning humans "repugnant." The Vatican editorial, by theologian Gino Concetti, was headlined "an urgent appeal to reason and to humanity."

People "have the right to be born in a human way and not in a laboratory. Going against these principles should be interpreted not as opposition to science or as a brake on progress, but as safeguarding those values which constitute the human being and its existence," Concetti said in L'Osservatore Romano.

He also called for swift passage of laws banning human cloning. In another comment on the breakthrough sheep experiment publicized earlier this week, Monsignor Elio Sgreccia, director of the Bioethics Institute of Rome's Catholic University, urged respect for animals.

NATION

Clinton orders probe into Army nerve gas scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pledging to act on any information uncovered, President Clinton ordered an investigation yesterday into whether the Army knew of nerve gas at an Iraqi weapons site blown up by U.S. troops shortly after the Gulf War.

The Pentagon acknowledged in a report Tuesday that the CIA had warned senior Army officers of possible chemical weapons at an Iraqi weapons storage site at Khamisiyah in February 1991.

Army engineers blew up the site the following month, apparently unaware of any exposure risk.

Speaking at a news conference with Chilean President Eduardo Frei, Clinton said he wrote a letter to Joyce Lashof, chair of the Presidential Advisory Committee on Gulf War Veterans' illnesses, asking that the panel review the Pentagon documents in order to understand "the full significance" of its contents.

"As soon as we get any new information we share it with our veterans and the American people, and we will act appropriately on any information we uncover," Clinton said.

The president cautioned the public against thinking there was a cover-up.

"It is important not to prejudge the actions or the developments that occurred in the previous administration," Clinton said.

"We simply have to get to the bottom of it."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 60	HIGH: 50	HIGH: 55
LOW: 35	LOW: 30	LOW: 30

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword.....page 12
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 12
News.....page 2
Sports.....page 14

500 rally to protest parking fee increases

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Approximately 500 undergraduate and graduate students, staff and faculty rallied together in the Student Union Ballroom (SUB) yesterday to protest the proposed increase of parking lots fees.

The proposed fee increases would range from 40 percent in parking lot 71, located near Whitmore, up to 300 percent in the parking garage. The proposal calls for two increases over two years with a two percent annual fee increase thereafter.

After listening to speakers, the rally participants marched over to the Whitmore Administration Building with a petition totalling over 5,000 signatures in hand, and delivered them to the offices of Chancellor David K. Scott and Vice Chancellor of Administration and Finance Paul Page.

Three speakers spoke to the crowd in the SUB before they stormed over to Whitmore. At which time, Student Government Association (SGA) President Maurice Caston– Powe addressed the crowd.

"Today is a day for action," Caston–Powe said. "Today is a day to tell Paul Page that we are not paying for parking... We make this University run, the students and staff are the life line of this University."

Stefanie Ameres, treasurer of the Graduate Student Senate (GSS) said, "we are here today because slowly but surely we are being priced right out off the University.

JENNIFER ESTRADA / COLLEGIAN

Yesterday students protested against increased parking costs in front of Whitmore Administration Building (see photo essay, page 3).

"It is going to keep going on and on unless we stop it. We need to get together to remind the administration that we are a public university and that we have a right to be here, we have a right to our education."

During the rally in the SUB an announcement was made that the administration had pulled the proposal off of the April Trustees meeting agenda. Concerns and questions then arose concerning whether the administration will try to past the proposal over the summer while the students and much of the staff are away.

UMass alumnus and Amherst resident Melanie Kasparian, the statewide president of the Massachusetts Teachers Association, was the third and final speaker at the rally.

Kasparian spoke about the need for equality on all of the UMass campuses.

"Unlike our colleagues at UMass Boston, we do not have the redline that drops us off on campus and unlike our colleagues at UMass Dartmouth and Lowell, we are not allowed to park for free," Kasparian said.

"This University is owned by all the tax payers and that includes everyone standing in this room," she added.

At 12:30 p.m., half an hour after the rally began, the group prepared to march to Whitmore with signs that read, "30,000 strong, don't mess with us," referring to the total number of students, faculty and staff on campus.

Other signs read, "We shall not be towed," "Another hidden pay cut," and "$76,125,000 for capitol projects. 0.00 for parking lots. Smart move."

Chanting "Hey hey, ho ho, parking fees have got to go," the crowd slowly made their way to Whitmore.

Many rally participants had mixed feelings about how they expected the administration to react.

"This is an opportunity for all Unions to work together," said Debra Britt, a staff clerk at the University. "I have attended bigger rallies on campus and I am not expecting much from them [administrators]... people are finally mad enough to do something about this situation."

Roland Giguere, a staff member of the English department, was skeptical of the entire rally.

"I am anxious and curious to find out how much effect we are going to have," Giguere said. "I think it's ironic that all the people who sat down to bargain are leaving soon. I think it will die. All the people we had support from are gone."

When the University proposed the parking fee increase, a negotiating team for the University was created. Four of the team members — Vice Chancellor of Administration and Finance Bill Rose, Parking Manager Lynn Braddock, Human Resources Labor Relations Administrator Paul Meade and Director of Human Resources Bob Garstka — are leaving the University.

Rose is moving to Alaska, Braddock is resigning and Meade and Garstka are retiring.

"They can't help but hear us," said Chris Salm, a graduate student employee.

Undergraduate student Melanie Russo, a sophomore Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration (HRTA) major, said, "I don't have a car on campus but I think it is ridiculous. I hope they will pay attention to what we are saying."

Senior plant soil major Ryan Harris said, "I don't expect Whitmore to do anything that they don't want to do. So we just have to make them do it."

Chris Wilson, a graduate student in political science, was pleased with the rally's turnout.

"I am glad that this many people showed up since most of the students are paying $10 a semester to parking in the yellow lots and have their cars broke into," Wilson said.

Once inside Whitmore, the participants chanted the entire way to Page's office, which was closed.

Before the rally, the 5,000 signatures were taped together to form a 309 foot trail of paper. These petitions were slid under the door of Page's office.

"The office being closed shows the arrogance that they show towards the students and the employees," said Chris Johnson, a labor studies graduate student.

The crowd moved next into the Chancellor's office and his secretary was handed the stack of petitions.

There, participants were informed by an office staff member that everyone was away on a retreat.

Jason Vecchio, student coordinator of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) was disappointed that no administrators addressed the rally.

"Whether Paul Page or the Chancellor were away or not, the point is no one came out to speak to us," Vecchio said.

Following the rally, Kasparian told the group, "We sent a strong message today. We said that the parking fees are intolerable to a vast majority of people on campus and that we are not going to live with them."

She also added that, in a previous meeting with Page, they had "agreed to disagree about who should pay for parking fees."

"It should be budgeted," Kasparian said. "I understand that there are maintenance problems and other

Turn to PARKING, page 3

University plans additions to eastern side of campus

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The office of Campus Planning and Space Management has released its plan for future development in the East Area of the University of Massachusetts campus.

As presented by Associate Chancellor Beverly Wood at the Feb. 6 Faculty Senate meeting, the plan outlines all future development for the East Area, roughly that part of campus between the University Apartments and Worcester Dining Hall and extending back to Central and Orchard Hill Residential Areas.

"It is the plan and from now on all development in the East Area will come from this plan," Wood said. "This plan will be built incrementally as the projects are needed. Renovations, parking lots, new buildings and plantings — everything will be guided by and will conform to this plan."

How the plan was formed

Wood said that the plan was created in response to interest in building more structures in the area.

"There had been a lot of talk about new development in this area, beginning about five years ago," Wood said.

"There are two major developments that people are talking about now — a visual arts center, a major new project to house the art department, and life science buildings located near Morrill Science Center.

"Before people went too far along in planning for individual projects, we wanted to create a plan to ensure that room was provided for open space, pedestrian traffic, new development and parking," Wood said.

The plan was a collaborative effort between the office of Campus Planning and Space Management, led by Wood and senior planner Judith Steinkamp, and the planning team of the department of landscape architecture and regional planning, which has both faculty and graduate student members.

Wood said that the planning team also spoke with students and residents of the Town of Amherst about the East Area Plan.

"I think we had pretty good student input," Wood said. "We have had town involvement in two ways. We consulted with the Town of Amherst Planning Board and the Town Engineer. Also, we presented two or three workshops on the plan, and we invited all property owners within 300 square feet of the area to come."

"We had input to the plan," Wood said. "It shouldn't be a surprise to anyone."

Plan components

Several major changes in traffic patterns and parking are contained in the plan, in addition to space allocations for new buildings and recreation areas.

The plan calls for restructuring the road system in the East Area to eliminate traffic congestion and direct pedestrian traffic to four main crossings on North Pleasant Street.

Stockbridge Road will no longer extend up behind Morrill Science Center and the area behind Morrill will be turned into a central plaza. A loop road will be formed between Thatcher Way and Stockbridge.

Clark Hill Road will pass through the parking lot by Franklin Hall and connect directly to North Pleasant Street.

The so–called "goat path" from Orchard Hill to Worcester Dining Hall will be improved. Stairs will be added and steps will be taken to prevent further erosion, according to Wood.

The intersection of Massachusetts Avenue and North Pleasant Street will be redesigned to eliminate traffic by the Newman Center.

Turn to EAST page 2

New appointments divide SGA

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Last night's Student Government Association (SGA) sparked a debate between two seemingly divided groups in the Senate.

Eight motions were presented to the Senate to confirm the appointments of senators. Four appointees received positive confirmation while the other four were denied senatorship. One appointee withdrew his appointment before it could be debated upon.

These motions had previously received positive recommendations from the Administrative Affairs committee and needed to be approved by the Senate by a two–thirds vote.

Questions arose between senators when appointees previously receiving positive recommendations and unopposed failed when the vote took place in the Senate.

"Why are you [members of the Administrative Affairs Committee] voting against people you previously approved? Some explanation would be appreciated," said Sen. Will Serweiman (Southwest Area).

In response, Sen. Seth Avakian (Southwest Area) voiced his problems with the committee and their procedures.

"I don't feel that the Administrative Affairs Committee is working properly and making good decisions," Avakian said.

Some senators felt that the appointments were failing specifically because their friends were not receiving confirmations. Others however, felt that an effort was being made to stack the senate in favor of one group's personal agenda.

"We've been led to believe that certain people have been pushing for the appointments. It almost seems like the committee is divided. I see the division as people of color and white folks," said Malwin Davila (ALANA Caucus).

Sen. Jennifer Casasanto (Southwest Area) also felt that the Administrative Affairs Committee and the Senate in general are not comfortable atmospheres for women and people of color.

"I witnessed at the committee voting which I see as corrupt and prejudice. I voted against [the candidates] because there were others more qualified. The senate body is a hostile environment for women. They are being intimidated, talked about, discriminated towards, and shown zero respect. Often times these nominees are not being appointed with the best interest of minorities and women in mind," Casasanto said.

Senate appointee Attia Alam, whose confirmation was approved at last night's meeting also had problems with the way the Administrative Affairs Committee dealt with appointments.

"You [the Administrative Affairs Committee] are a col-

Turn to SGA, page 2

Outspoken Reverend to speak at UMass

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

He has spoken against the Nation of Islam's Louis Farrakhan, Harvard's Henry Louis "Skip" Gates Jr. and what he calls the elite "Niggeratti" of Washington D.C.

Pastor and co–founder of the Azusa Christian Community and Director of the Seymour Institute for Advanced Christian Studies, Rev. Eugene F. Rivers III, will share with the UMass community his vision for leadership and social justice in combating youth violence tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Born in Boston and raised in Philadelphia, Rivers' Azusa Christian Community comprises young African–Americans committed to combating the desolation and poverty in the Four Corners neighborhood of Dorchester.

Along with other pastors in the Boston area, he has developed and is promoting, "The Ten Point Plan for Combating Black on Black Violence." This plan brings together inner–city churches who work with young black men involved with drugs and violence.

A forthright speaker, he has aligned himself with such unlikely figures as Ralph Reed of the Christian Coalition, Republican leader William Bennett, Cardinal Bernard Law and right–wing journalist Arianna Huffington.

According to a quote from Boston Magazine, Rivers' said, "The Democrats have become Republicans and that means, fuck the niggers. Politics at the top is all gangsters. So how do I keep the worst gangsters off my back? Who can I rob? So I'll talk to everybody."

Rivers' has also written and spoken at a number of different settings on the role of intellectuals in the present age of drugs and violence. He is also a fellow at the Harvard Divinity School's Center for the Study of Policy and Public Life.

The Azusa Christian Community began renovating a burnt out building on the main street of the Four Corners area into the Ella J. Baker House in 1993. Since it opened in July 1995, the house has become a central location for the initiatives by Azusa to address the pressing social ills affecting the residents of the area.

This event is part of the ALANA Lecture Series, sponsored by the Dean of Students Office, Office of ALANA Affairs and University Chaplains.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor: Mike Burke Production Supervisor: Josh Sylvester
Copy Editor: Raghuram Vadarevu Production Staff: Sam Smullin
Photo Technician: Jennifer Jutras Leon Latino

No hope for balanced budget

Torricelli decision leaves little doubt on fate of the amendment

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In an all but fatal blow, Sen. Robert Torricelli announced opposition yesterday to the Republican-drafted balanced budget amendment to the Constitution. He said the proposal could hamstring future generations confronting a military crisis, recession or the need for federal construction.

"We write not for our time but for all times," said Torricelli (D-N.J.), who has supported similar constitutional amendments in the past. When it comes to making a change in the 210-year-old Constitution, he added, "good is not good enough." Elected to the Senate last November, the New Jersey Democrat thus became the 34th Democrat to oppose the measure, enough to ensure its defeat.

Republicans rushed to attack Torricelli for breaking a campaign promise. "He has thumbed his nose at the people of New Jersey once and for all," charged Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott.

At the same time, Torricelli's decision confronted Lott with a choice between offering concessions in hopes of gaining the elusive 67th vote in support of the measure — or watching it go down to the narrowest of defeats next week and trying to pin the blame on the Democrats.

The White House issued a statement in which President Clinton said he was pleased with Torricelli's decision. He added it was now "time to get down to the hard work of balancing the budget." The proposal, a cornerstone of the Republican congressional agenda, would require a balanced budget by 2002, with a three-fifths vote of the House and Senate to run a deficit thereafter. It cleared the House two years ago, when the Republican revolution was in full flower, but fell one vote shy of passage in the Senate.

This time, it bogged down in the House, where some Republicans flinched in the face of Democratic charges that it could threaten Social Security benefits. That prompted the GOP leadership to try to push it through the Senate first.

Republicans argued the measure was needed to instill fiscal discipline in a government that has run deficits for nearly three decades. To dramatize their point, they stacked budget books several feet high on desks in the front row of the Senate, one thick volume for each of the years the budget has been unbalanced. Within the new Senate, where all 55 Republicans support the measure, it quickly became clear that the swing votes were held by four newly elected Democratic senators.

Two of them, Max Cleland of Georgia and Mary Landrieu of Louisiana, announced their reluctant support over the past several days.

Sen. Tim Johnson of South Dakota declared his opposition last week, even though he, like Torricelli, had supported a similar amendment only two years ago. And shortly after Torricelli's announcement, the Republican National Committee disclosed it would begin airing radio commercials in South Dakota today saying Johnson "broke his promise."

Landrieu's announcement on Monday left Torricelli squarely in the spotlight — a position clearly welcomed by a newcomer who has moved forcefully to establish his presence within his party and the Senate.

He conferred privately with senior Democratic colleagues on Tuesday, spoke by telephone with Clinton, delivered a formal maiden speech in the Senate at dinner time and met with Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, (R-Utah), in a room behind a darkened chamber immediately afterwards.

■ sga

continued from page 1

lective body. You are not a charity. You shouldn't give a recommendation because you want seats filled. I have a procedural problem with the way it's run. Approving someone in the hopes of filling a seat is pathetic," Alam said.

Amidst the accusations, appointee Brendan Mahan withdrew his appointment for the position of Southwest Senator At-Large.

"I thought things were much more mature, much more professional," Mahan said.

Paul Ferro, Southwest senator and member of the Republican Club, felt that the appointees who failed to become senators were there to represent the student body and were unfairly discriminated against.

"Those people who came today were random people who came to represent the student body. It is a slap in the face to pass judgement on people [senators] haven't talked to, met or investigated," Ferro said.

"I think SGA proved tonight that it's a little club made up of arrogant individuals who feel they have the right to dictate to the rest of the senate how this universities money should be spent," said Sen. Brian McManus (Southwest Area).

Claiming to take no sides on the issue, Sen. Bill Ramsey (Commuter Area) felt that there were important bills to be discussed in the senate, and last nights meeting was essentially wasted by only discussing appointments.

"I think this is total mockery. Its sad that the senate has been bogged down like this. I had motions on the agenda dealing with athletic fees and the University Body Shop," Ramsey said.

Also at the meeting, Rob McDonald, Secretary of Administrative Affairs, announced his candidacy for Trustee instead of SGA President as he had earlier announced.

"This is a direct result of what many students have asked me to do... The students told me they felt I would be extremely effective for the student body," McDonald said.

Sen. Lia Wong (Northeast At-Large) also announced her candidacy for SGA president.

Correction:
Yesterday's Collegian printed an incorrect entry in the Campus Police Log. Myriah D. Manley was arrested for failure to pay a $30 fine on past warrants, not on the indecent exposure and disorderly conduct warrants. The Collegian regrets the error.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Feb. 24
A vehicle backed into a fire hydrant on Holdsworth Way. Minor damage occurred.

Accident — Personal Injury
Feb. 25
A two vehicle rear-end collision occurred on Governors Drive. Ravi Bhandari, 30, of 950 North Pleasant St., Amherst, complained of pain and was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton. One operator was cited.

Annoying Behavior
Feb. 25
Children were using the 911 line at the Mullins Center. There was no emergency.
Bottles were being thrown from the 8th floor of Brown Residence Hall.
There was a dispute between two individuals in Washington Residence Hall.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Feb. 25
An individual from Johnson Residence Hall reported that CD's were stolen from her room.

Drug Law Offenses
Feb. 24
Jordan S. Chabinsky, 18, of 2 Carrie Ln., was arrested in McNamara Residence Hall for possession of a Class D drug.

Larceny
Feb. 24
A telephone was stolen from Dickinson Residence Hall.
A cell phone was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 42 on Commonwealth Avenue.
Feb. 25
A multi-line display telephone was stolen from an office in Middlesex House.
A telephone was stolen from an office in the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

Missing Person
Feb. 24
Police investigated a report that an individual had not been seen for a day.
Feb. 25
Police checked on missing juveniles from Northampton in John Adams Residence Hall. The juveniles were not located.

Traffic Stop
Feb. 25
Duc M. Tran, 26, of 295 Lincoln Ave., Amherst was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for operating a vehicle with a revoked license and operating an uninsured vehicle and operating a vehicle with a revoked registration plate.

Vandalism
Feb. 24
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 80 on Lincoln Ave.
Feb. 25
A wall was damaged in the Campus Center garage from a truck.
A resident's room was damaged in Prince Residence Hall.
A bulletin board and other property was damaged in Herter Hall.
A vehicle's tires were damaged in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
Bottles and trash were being thrown from the 11th floor of John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.
Derogatory material was affixed to a resident's room door in Brooks Residence Hall.

Warrant Service
Feb. 26
Jacob D. Sims, 20, of 35 Great Rd., Acton, was arrested for possession of a class D drug.

■ east

continued from page 1

In addition, to improve pedestrian safety and disabled access, the sidewalks in front of Morrill will be raised, directing people to the crosswalks. Wood said that the four main pedestrian crossings will also be set off by different paving (bricks) and possibly flashing yellow lights to alert drivers to slow down.

Wood said that the plan calls for the addition of 400 new parking spaces. These spaces would be added by the construction of a four-deck structure at lot 64, allowing for night use by patrons of the Fine Arts Center, and a surface parking lot with a one floor deck by Franklin Dining Hall to support University Health Services. Two additional surface lots, one each at the North and South ends of the East Area, will be built.

The metered parking on Infirmary Way will be eliminated and a soccer field-size recreational space will be added. A more distinct plaza area between Upper and Lower Central will be constructed, and an additional recreational space will added in back.

Wood said that the 300,000 square feet of assignable space in the East Area could be used for any number of buildings, but that priority will be given to academic buildings.

"We have to see what projects get funding," Wood said.

Wood also said that Health Services may be moved to a more central location on campus, but that a final decision on this has yet to be made.

Future of the plan

The final plan will go to the Chancellor's Executive Advisory Council next week for approval. It will then be distributed in a mass mailing to the campus community.

According to Wood, once the plan is approved, it becomes part of the Campus Master Plan. She estimated a 15-year planning horizon for the East Area Plan.

"I think a substantial part of it will be developed in 15 years," Wood said. "It's a lot of work now to implement this plan. That is what we will be doing over the next 15 years."

Wood said that the utility and road work and the construction of parking lots would be the first components of the plan to be put in place, in order to prevent traffic congestion and parking shortages while structures are built.

This part of the plan could be put in place in the near future, depending on funding and priorities set by the parking office.

Depression is a serious threat to anyone that has a brain.
UNTREATED DEPRESSION
http://www.save.org

"There are some who still find the Cross a stumbling block, others consider it foolishness, but I am more convinced than ever before that it is the power of God unto social and individual salvation."
Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.
stop by our concourse table for the article
This year in honor of Dr. King's birthday and Black History Month we're offering the article "Give the Dream New Life." For your free copy call 1-800-236-9238.
The Dream Begins With God.
1-800-236-9238
Ad presented by friends and students of RSO's
Campus Crusade for Christ and BASIC (Born Again Students In Christ)

Positions Available
The Collegian is accepting applications for:
- Associate Finance Manager
- Associate Advertising Manager
- Associate Business Manager

Sophomore students encouraged to apply, all will be considered. For more information call Alycia Hines at 545-3500, or come to the Collegian located at 113 Campus Center Basement

■ parking

continued from page 1

needs, but we feel that parking should be budgeted into a fixed amount."

Vecchio said, "The rally was very successful and I was surprised by the amount of support from the staff on campus and the amount of students who joined in on the march to Whitmore."

Despite the fact that the proposal has been removed from the April trustees meeting, Vecchio is still worried.

"The campus has not yet stated that the proposal is gone," Vecchio said. "Since it is still here at the University, that means it is still a proposal that the Chancellor and Page support. It is not dead yet.

"This is an issue that brings the whole campus together. It is not just an issue that affects the students or just the staff faculty."

The Student-Labor Coalition Against the Parking Fee increase, which includes five on campus unions and the SGA organized yesterday's rally.

Protest on Whitmore

JENNIFER JUTRAS
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Five hundred students, faculty, and staff members gathered together yesterday to protest the proposed increases in parking lot fees on campus. The protesters marched from the Student Union Ballroom to Whitmore Administration Building holding signs and chanting. The march continued into Whitmore where the parking petition, consisting of 5,000 signatures, was presented to the Chancellor's office.

New at Alfredo's

POSTERS - A variety of subjects ranging from your favorite professional athlete to exotic landscapes.
SPORTS PHOTOS - Up close shots that capture the heat of the moment

REASONABLY PRICED
AND CONVENIENTLY LOCATED IN AMHERST CENTER
39 S. PLEASANT ST.
413 - 253 - 1707
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

The ALANA Lectures Series and The University Chaplains
PRESENT
Rev. Eugene Rivers
GUEST SPEAKER
HE WILL SHARE HIS
VISION FOR LEADERSHIP AND SOCIAL JUSTICE IN COMBATING YOUTH VIOLENCE
THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1997 • 7:00PM
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM • UMASS AMHERST
Sponsored by: Dean of Students Office, Office of ALANA Affairs and The University Chaplains.

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 9a.m.-11 p.m.
Tel: 549-2692
Shop Scott's & Save Lott$! THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATRONAGE
Corona 12-packs bottles $8.39 +dep.
Busch & Busch Light bar bottles $9.49 +dep.
Latrobe Craft Beers 6-packs $4.99 +dep.
LowenBreau 12-pack bottles $6.99 +dep.
Milwaukees Best (Reg. & Light), 30-packs $9.99 +dep.
Red Hook 6-packs $4.99 +dep.
Check out our Other Great In Store Specials
Tangueray Gin 750ml $12.49
Absolut Citron 750ml $13.99
Southern Comfort 750ml $7.99
Midori Melon Liqueur 750ml $13.99
Cuervo Gold Tequila 750ml $10.99
Bacardi Limon 750ml $8.99
Go Ahead
MasterCard VISA DISCOVER
Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Center, Amherst

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES PRESENTS
"Something Every Friday"
COMEDIAN

GARY EWING
FREE!
February 28, 1997 8:00 pm
Campus Center Auditorium
Gary is sure to keep you laughing with his high energy, honest performance. His refreshing humor is drawn from day to day life, and does not rely on mean-spirited jokes. His T.V. credits include HBO's Two Drink Minimum, VH1's Fools For Love, Stand-Up Spotlight and Comedy Tonite, and MTV's Half Hour Comedy Hour.
For more information check out our website:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calender.htm.....
The movie "Get On The Bus" will be shown immediately after the performance.

This program is made possible by a Grant from the Auxiliary Services Office, The Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs and the Daily Collegian

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Simsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stathm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Tyra & me

Hey, guys. c'mere.
Yeah, over here, so the girls won't catch wind.
A little closer. Lean in.
Perfect.
You know what I love best about a woman? I'll bet you can guess, boys.
I am an absolute sucker for a nice, pert set of...
Oh, geez, here come the ladies — gotta pretend like I'm writing my column. We'll continue later.

Last week, I did something that in earlier years I would have thought beneath me.

I bought the issue.

It all started innocently enough. I was engaged in my regular pre-track meet search for some trifle of a pop culture-based magazine to read on the bus.

Then I saw the issue. Tyra, coyly tugging at the top of her bikini bottom, staring at me from the University Store rack. A wave of Neanderthal vibes shook my frame, and almost instinctively I grabbed and purchased the "Sports Illustrated" volume, clutching it in my newly de-evolved mitts.

> "Then I saw the issue. Tyra, coyly tugging at the top of her bikini bottom, staring at me from the University Store rack. A wave of Neanderthal vibes shook my frame, and almost instinctively I grabbed and purchased the "Sports Illustrated" volume, clutching it in my newly de- evolved mitts."
>
> C. Taylor Connor

The "moron boy" mentality had entrenched itself in my psyche, amply armed with the ammo of pro-swimsuit rhetoric for maximum defensiveness. At this juncture, you couldn't tell me that it wasn't OK to indulge in an appreciation of male aesthetics, the residual impulses of our pre-homo erectus days.

Were Bach the editor, educated folks wouldn't even bat an eye at SI, the joy of man's desiring. All the wahooey over the content was just that — wahooey. Now there was some justification.

Yet, shortly after perusing the mag a few (hundred) times, my return to self-awareness began — and, my, was it a doozy. All of the post-feminist guilt in my system thrust itself at my gut. Strangely, I felt like rolling around in mud.

Color me Wilbur, I thought, 'Cause I've officially entered the ranks of pigginess.

But I, a breathing piece of bacon? I, who upon viewing the infamous Vanessa Williams issue of "Penthouse" at ten years of age in a friend's basement, was so morally distraught that I ratted him out to his mom?

I, who, at age eight, saw a topless woman rise out of the turquoise waters of Jamaica — and then proceeded to run ashore and cry to mommy?

I, who, after working at the video store in high school, would study in the living room while friends who had persuaded me to rent pornos on my account watched the features in my den.

How could I have become such a decidedly non-kosher product? For all of the egalitarian politics of gender I preached to the chauvinistic bunch of lunkheads (who I loved nonetheless) with whom I attended that single sex prep school, it seems as though I might as well have become just another hand-me-down-Saab snot in the old boys network.

For God's sake, even though any criticism from female friends was more than warranted, I'm even willing to admit I used to read my mother's copies of "Cosmopolitan" to become a more sensitive...

Wait a minute. Cosmo? I was on to something.

While most people focused all their energy on one issue of a magazine whose cheesecake swimsuit edition is published but once a year, Cosmo gets away with relentless exploitation of women on a monthly basis.

How, you ask? The average cover tells all.

Consider the fact that on each cover there usually appears one uber-slim skeleton of a model — in a women's magazine. Then take a gander at the subjects of the top stories for the issue. I would bet my original vinyl copy of the Shaft soundtrack that one or more of the following will be featured: 1)"How to have a better orgasm"; 2)"How to make him a better lover"; 3)"Lose 15 lbs. on new diet"; or 4)"How your new diet will improve your orgasms by making him a better lover."

Guaranteed. And this is supposed to be progressive? At least there was no hint of pretense behind the SI meat-marketing.

And quite honestly, the plastic hardbodies lose their luster after a few (hundred) flips of the page. Even — gasp! — Tyra.

Hey, guys, I'm back. Almost forgot to finish my thought.
I am an absolute sucker for a nice, pert set of... cerebral lobes.
(C'mon, you knew I couldn't go there.)

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

A not-so perfect solution

I got myself into an argument with a friend of mine a few days ago, and we hashed it out and hemmed and hawed (and I almost never haw) and finally decided to agree to disagree.

Civil, right?

Well, I woke up this morning and decided to be juvenile and selfish and use my position at this paper in order to get the last word in for myself.

Ha! Yay for me.

The argument was over the military's "don't ask, don't tell" policy regarding homosexuals serving in the armed forces. My friend felt that it was demeaning, insulting, offensive, unfair and homophobic. I agreed, with one small catch, and that's where the trouble started.

It's the best that we're going to be able to do for now.

In saying that, I'm certainly not suggesting that homosexuals can't or shouldn't serve in the armed forces, if that's their choice. I feel exactly the opposite. In fact, I figure that someone who has the tenacity to willingly enter into such a traditional arena of staunch homophobia as the military will probably make a better than average member because obviously they really want to be there.

I also understand the argument that some members of the GLBT community feel betrayed by President Clinton for seemingly backpedaling on his promise to make the armed services free and open to everyone regardless of sexual preference as one of his first acts after taking office.

The problem with Clinton's initial promise was that it was unrealistic in the first place. There's no way that the military would be willing (or logistically able) to change a major piece of long standing policy overnight. In the military you can't even get vacation time without the necessary paperwork and a series of signatures. So the next best thing happened, they compromised.

> "It's not a perfect system, but what else would you suggest for a country this large and this disparate?"
>
> Bob Dunn

The entire government as it runs now and as it was initially envisioned is based on the art of compromise. There is rarely a piece of legislation passed that 100 percent of the public are happy with. So, what do you do? You compromise and add this, delete that and so on until you have a piece of legislation that does the most good while doing the least harm. It's not a perfect system, but what else would you suggest for a country this large and this disparate?

Every change in the basic makeup of the military has been met with resistance from within. Women and African Americans were once excluded from serving in the ranks. Today, no one thinks twice about someone from either groups enlisting and advancing along with their counterparts, but it wasn't fast and it wasn't easy, it took a lot of time and hard work. No one just waved a magic wand and erased decades of intolerance and exclusion nor could they.

So "don't ask, don't tell" isn't a permanent solution, it's a step. A small step, granted, but a step nonetheless. In a perfect world, anybody would be allowed to do anything they wanted to regardless of who they decided to share a bed with. Guess what, though? Utopia doesn't exist and people are more often than not small, petty, intolerant thugs who are frightened of change and of things that they don't understand, and sometimes they need some time in order to realize that they're behaving like Neanderthals.

So, what to do until then? What to do until the powers that be realize that they can't keep denying rights to people based solely on ignorance and fear?

Well, rock the boat a little, push the envelope a bit and eventually people will see that sexual preference has no bearing on one's ability to serve.

As for the military itself, speaking as a former member, eventually they'll get it. Once our soldiers and sailors have been around for a while under "don't ask, don't tell," they'll begin to realize that the world isn't going to end, the military isn't going to fall apart and reveille isn't going to be replaced by show tunes. Once that happens, the next logical step can be made and free, open access can happen. Not overnight, but gradually through hard work, small steps and compromise. The way it should be.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

TWO PARTY SYSTEM OF LAWS

The naked truth

No matter how much things change, they really stay the same. I recently decided to take a look back upon the history of the University of Massachusetts through old copies of the Collegian. I was stunned when I realized how dramatically different college life was before the 1990s, but the themes remain the same.

As the flowers bloom in spring, students celebrated in different manners in each decade. In the 1960s, the students sponsored such things as Greek Week. This practice included a ball, parties and a beauty pageant titled "Greek Week Queen." I am not quite sure when this tradition died out, or if the entire Greek Week practice ever did because Greeks still celebrate the arrival of spring.

However, spring time celebration changed in the 1970s. As the flowers threw off their protective buds, the students shed their clothing. However, unlike today when students sport shorts and t-shirts, the co-eds of the '70s shed everything and went naked.

I was not shocked by the idea of students streaking because I have witnessed it here on our campus and near Boston University. However, I was stunned when I discovered photos of the streakers in all their glory in the pages of the Collegian!

In the age of Reagan, life at UMass resembled more closely to today. The students celebrated the return of the robins with a Spring Concert and varying residential festivals.

Superficial changes like spring-time celebrations are not the only differences. According to a regular nationwide survey sponsored by the University of California at Los Angeles, students have markedly changed politically and socially.

In the past 20 years, the number

> "I was stunned when I discovered photos of the streakers in all their glory in the pages of the Collegian!"
>
> Matt Wurtzel

of students who supported the legalization of marijuana has dropped from almost 60 percent to about 35 percent. Students in the mid- '80s overwhelmingly supported laws against homosexuality. In 1986, 63 percent of male and 43 percent of female college students supported such laws, but today only 45 and 24 percent of men and women, respectively, feel the same.

The most dramatic change in attitudes concern feminist ideals. Although outside of the hallowed halls of academia, blow-hards like Rush Limbaugh compare feminists to Nazis, today's students accept more of the ideals than their counterparts from 30 years ago. In 1967, two-thirds of male first-year students felt a women's place was in the home. Today, only 31 percent of male students feel that way.

Despite all the statistical data that suggests we have changed, I disagree. Sure, political and social attitudes have fluctuated, but students continue to hold many of the same interests.

Young adults, whether they are students or not, seek adventure. Students in the '60s often drove cross country; today's students, given the same opportunity, would also make the trek. As early as the turn of the century, young adults gladly went abroad when the opportunities arose. Hemingway joined the Red Cross before the United States entered World War I.

I recently went to Israel. The trip, however, did not satiate my desire for adventure. I want to visit other countries, and also return to Israel for a longer stay. A few friends of mine have talked about working abroad in Africa, and Russia. Other friends are excited about the prospect of leaving New England and taking jobs all across the country.

Although the politics and practices of youth change over time, in the end, youth is the same. Youth will always seek out adventure and a good time.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Ban on postering hurts Amherst

To the editor:

In a recent story about the latest battles in Amherst's "poster wars," the Hampshire Gazette depicted me as a scruffy "solo wolf." To be sure, I am a low income person — but does that reduce the value of my arguments (which have been well-publicized for months)?

In early 1993, the Bulletin ran stories about posters in downtown Amherst. That fall, the Pioneer Valley Transit Autocracy toed the same line and started sending out "good squads" to remove all posters from its supposedly public- serving bus stops several times each week. This completely devastated me because posters tell me about low-cost music shows at the colleges. (I am an older hardcore/punk fan and I can't always afford to go to the well-advertised club shows). More importantly, I basked in the plethora of fall- semester posters that kept reappearing and thought "what a pathetic, sterile place my town will become if all this disappears." (I encountered Amherst as a student in 1971 and liked its vitality so much that I've remained, now half my life).

So in Oct. of 1993 I started attending the public meetings of the Town Commercial Relations Committee, trying vainly to answer my concerns about posters — and last summer I became a dissident on this committee, for reasons the Union-News terms a sense of disgust over "democratic" processes.

The Gazette may picture me as a [lone] crusader, but that is how Martin Luther started. I love Amherst and its liveliness and diversity. I'm for the parking garage and things which enhance it. I'm against the poster ban and other things which work against the entire community. I have spoken out and will not shut up no matter how much or how often I get pilloried.

I will discuss the ominous possibilities for increased alcohol/drug use from the poster bans on WMUA at noon on Sunday, March 2, and after that "speak through a cable- video program where a baker's dozen of Amherst residents discuss 'Posters contra y por'. And I hope to find more people to advocate for POSTERING RIGHTS & RESPONSIBILITIES with a public meeting at the Bangs Center in downtown Amherst at 7 p.m. on Thursday, March 6. Hier stehe Ich. I cannot do otherwise.

John Furbish
Amherst

PRIVATIZATION

Voice your opinion in the Collegian next Wednesday as the Ed/Op page dedicates an entire page to the pressing issue of privatization on campus.

Submissions must be typed and received by Monday. E-mail letters to: Letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu or drop off letters in the Collegian office located in the basement of the Campus Center.
If you have questions call Mike Burke at 545-1361.

FILM • MUSIC • THEATER • LIFESTYLES • BOOKS • ART

Arts & Living

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian Volume CVI Issue 91 Thursday, February 27, 1997

NOHO ROCK CITY

A fan's guide to local music

Everybody knows the big names: The Pixies, Dinosaur, Jr. Sebadoh, Buffalo Tom - the bands who hit the big time in the late '80s and early '90s, putting the Pioneer Valley on the international musical map. For a while, the music biz had the Amherst/Northampton breeding ground pegged to be another Athens or Minneapolis. Of course, the hype inevitably died down and the focus of where the next musical hotbed would be shifted to Seattle.

Don't let those shortsighted industry geeks deceive you, though. Right now there is a thriving scene happening, almost literally, in your own back yard.

Last month, Northampton's Downtown Spirits Co. Pleasant St., right next to the theater, featured a window display advertising, in so many words, "100 reasons to support Valley music." The variety and musical scope of the bands listed ran the gamut from Nightclub's general manager, Matt Arnold, states that the area is "full of lots of talent around here . . . which will go places when discovered." The bottom line, kids, is that every weekend (and most weeknights), local clubs are filled with great live music, most of it homegrown.

Don't expect to find it in Amherst, though. A city ordinance prohibits any bar larger than a trio from performing in town. Coupled with the virtual disappearing act pulled by the University Productions and Concerts (UPC) at Curry over the last couple of years, the locals has pushed down Route 9 and across the river into Northampton.

The primary live venue in Hamp is Pearl St. (10 Pearl St. 584-7771). Some bi-national and international touring bands - Current stars the Fugees, Counting Crows, Dave Matthews Band and Marilyn Manson have all stopped by over the last couple of years, as well as artists ranging from the Dead Milkmen to Blue Oyster Cult to James Brown and Ray Charles. The club is essentially two different rooms under one roof; the larger, upstairs stage (average admission $10) which is the sight of the many dance nights and bigger acts, and the smaller, more basic lower level (avg. adm. $6), which caters to many smaller touring bands, local groups and tribute acts. Pearl St. helps support the local scene by often placing Valley bands in the opening slots for nationally touring acts.

Of course, if you're hunting for cheap local music and indie rock, look no farther than the Bay State Hotel (41 Strong Ave. 584-8513). The Bay State is ubiquitous with the local scene, with many Valley bands playing there on a regular basis. Part of the club's appeal is its lack of a stage; instead, bands set up on the floor of the restaurant adjacent to the bar. Look for the Next Big Thing there, too. In the past, bands such as Morphine, Royal Trux, Superdrag and the Grifters have stopped by on their rise to national prominence. The average admission is a paltry $3-5, with live bands Thursday through Saturday and free blues on Monday and an open-mike night during the week.

The hundreds of photos lining the walls of the Iron Horse Music Hall (20 Center St. 584-0610) are a definite indication of the venue's unique style. Perhaps the most famous live music spot in the Valley, the Iron Horse caters to a varied crowd with eclectic tastes. Featuring jazz, blues, world music and the occasional rock show, the Horse has recently featured acts ranging from Dick Dale to Bo Diddley to Pat Metheny. Although the cover can be steep (often exceeding the $20 mark), the chance to see some legendary artists in such an intimate venue usually justifies the price of admission.

Other stages in town include the Northampton Brewery (11 Brewster Court 584-9903), with free local music (as well as excellent beer) on Sunday nights, Club Metro's Lava Lounge (492 Pleasant St. 582-9898), and the brand-new Silent Cal's (192 Pleasant St. - in the Chilton's Shops building - 587-9876), with their cover-free Monday night showcases.

Of course, with the abundance of clubs and so many bands floating around, it's almost impossible for a non-insider to know who's who, and for the insider, what kind of music they play.

Although the following lists are by no means unanimous (my apologies to everyone left off), hopefully they will provide some sort of a rough guide and entry-level categorization to a smattering of local bands.

If you're looking for basic, '60s-inspired guitar-pop, here to check out Mal Thursday and the Chunksters, Familiarious, Humbert, the Unheard, the potent New Radiant Storm King, and the Velvet Underground meets Neil Young sounds of the Pigments. Indie pop? Try Tizzy, Velvet Candy, Pirate Jenny, Stringbean and the Mitchells. Punk or hardcore? Serpico, the Measles, and Hallraker. Roots, country, or rockabilly? Angry Johnny and the Killbillies, the Scud Mountain Boys, Hospital, the Lonesome Brothers, Treefort, and the Ray Mason Band. Throw Like Daddies and Steve Westfield somewhere in the mix, too, and you've got just the tip of the Valley music iceberg.

Hopefully, you'll be inspired to take advantage of the thriving local music scene lying at your doorstep. For more info about shows and bands, be sure to check out the Valley Advocate, the Collegian, and such radio stations as WAMH, WOZQ, WMUA, and WHMP. And if none of this has piqued your interest, yet you still want an interesting evening of music, there's always Friday night karoake at the War II Veterans Club (50 Conz St.).

John Hendrickson is a Collegian columnist.

Multiple winners include Beck & Beatles

9 multiple winners at Grammys; First Lady wins

COURTESY ALISON OVER

Beck

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hilary Rodham Clinton

By David Bauder
Associated Press

NEW YORK — From the Beatles to Beck, nine different artists took home multiple Grammys yesterday in a ceremony that celebrated music's diversity. Even a "tone deaf" first lady took home a Grammy.

Multiple award winners included the Beatles, the Fugees, Beck, Sheryl Crow, Eric Clapton, Kenneth "Babyface" Edmonds, LeAnn Rimes, Toni Braxton and Vince Gill.

In a year of no clear trends, it was one song that proved dominant. The composition "Change the World" was responsible for Grammy awards for singer Clapton, its songwriters and producer Babyface.

Hillary Rodham Clinton, saying she was "amazed" to win for her recording of her book on child rearing, It Tykes a Village, picked up the prize during the pre-telecast presentation ceremony at Madison Square Garden before heading back to Washington for a state dinner.

"I was very surprised because I didn't even know that the Grammys were given to tone deaf people like me," said Mrs. Clinton, recalling an off-key duet she recently performed on "The Rosie O'Donnell Show."

Music's top awards ceremony was moved to the Garden this year and, for the first time, members of the public were admitted to see the televised portion of the 39th annual show.

With three awards yesterday, the Beatles nearly doubled their lifetime haul of Grammys. They won for best pop performance by a duo or group for "Free As a Bird," the song manufactured by the three surviving members from a tape left behind by the late John Lennon.

They also won two video awards for "Free As a Bird" and their anthology project. During their peak in the 1960s, the Beatles won only four Grammys.

A tearful country singer LeAnn Rimes, with a dress to match her hit song, "Blue," won the award for best new artist. The teen singing sensation also won for best female country vocal performance.

"Blue" was also honored as best country song, an award that went to writer Bill Mack.

At 14 years old, Rimes said she was proud to be the first country singer to win best new artist. She wasn't sure how she was going to celebrate.

"I'm going to go out to dinner, but I guess that's about all I can do," she said. "I'm going to party somehow."

Babyface, who earned a record-tying 12 Grammy nominations, won the songwriter's award for best rhythm and blues composition. "Exhale (Shoop Shoop)," sung by Whitney Houston. He also was honored as producer of the year.

Beck augured a changing of the guard for rock music, beating out veterans Bruce Springsteen, Bryan Adams, Clapton and John Hiatt for an award for his surrealistic "Where It's At." He also won for best alternative music performance.

Braxton, admitting she was surprised to beat Celine Dion, won best female pop performance and best female rhythm and blues performance for two different songs: "Un-break My Heart" and "You're Makin' Me High."

Crow won for best rock album and best female rock performance for "If It Makes You Happy." The Fugees, who performed with late reggae star Bob Marley's back-up band, took home two awards. Gill won for best country collaboration and best male country vocal performance.

Tracy Chapman received a Grammy for best rock song for her plea to a reluctant lover, "Give Me One Reason." The song was also nominated for record and song of the year.

LL Cool J was ecstatic upon finding out he won an award for best rap solo performance. "My head was exploding over there because I didn't want to have to smile if someone else won," he said.

Although Mrs. Clinton took home an award, another moonlighting celebrity was out of luck. Shaquille O'Neal was part of a group nominated for best rhythm and blues performance, but he lost out to the Fugees.

Veteran folk artist Pete Seeger received a standing ovation when he won an award for best traditional folk album.

Cissy Houston, mother of pop star Whitney Houston, went home a Grammy winner for the first time for a gospel performance. Winners were chosen by the 9,000 voting members of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences, a group of music business professionals.

Partial list of Grammy winners

SONG OF THE YEAR - "Change the World," Gordon Kennedy, Wayne Kirkpatrick and Tommy Sims.
MALE POP VOCAL PERFORMANCE - "Change the World," Eric Clapton.
FEMALE POP VOCAL PERFORMANCE - "Un-break My Heart," Toni Braxton.
NEW ARTIST - LeAnn Rimes.
POP PERFORMANCE BY A DUO OR GROUP - "Free as a Bird," The Beatles.
POP COLLABORATION WITH VOCALS - "When I Fall in Love," Natalie Cole and Nat King Cole.
POP INSTRUMENTAL PERFORMANCE FOR AN ORCHESTRA, GROUP OR SOLOIST - "The Sinister Minister," Bela Fleck and the Flecktones.
POP ALBUM - Falling Into You, Celine Dion.
TRADITIONAL POP VOCAL PERFORMANCE FOR SOLOS, DUOS OR GROUPS - "Here's to the Ladies," Tony Bennett.
MALE ROCK VOCAL PERFORMANCE - "Where It's At," Beck.
FEMALE ROCK VOCAL PERFORMANCE - "If It Makes You Happy," Sheryl Crow.
ROCK PERFORMANCE BY A DUO OR GROUP - "So Much To Say," Dave Matthews Band.
METAL PERFORMANCE - "Tire Me," Rage Against the Machine Rob Zombie and Alice Cooper.
HARD ROCK PERFORMANCE - "Bullet With Butterfly Wings," The Smashing Pumpkins.
ROCK INSTRUMENTAL PERFORMANCE - "SRV Shuffle," Jimmie Vaughan, Eric Clapton, Bonnie Raitt, Robert Cray, B.B. King, Buddy Guy, Dr. John and Art Neville.
ROCK SONG - "Give Me One Reason," Tracy Chapman.
ROCK ALBUM - Sheryl Crow, Sheryl Crow.
ALTERNATIVE MUSIC PERFORMANCE - "Odelay," Beck.
FEMALE R&B PERFORMANCE - "You're Makin' Me High," Toni Braxton.
MALE R&B VOCAL PERFORMANCE - "Your Secret Love," Luther Vandross.
R&B SONG - "Exhale (Shoop Shoop)," Babyface.
R&B ALBUM - Words, The Tony Rich Project.
RAP ALBUM - The Score, Fugees.
RAP SOLO PERFORMANCE - "Hey Lover," LL Cool J.
RAP PERFORMANCE BY A DUO OR GROUP - "Tha Crossroads," Bone Thugs-N-Harmony.
COUNTRY ALBUM - The Road to Ensenada, Lyle Lovett.
FEMALE COUNTRY VOCAL PERFORMANCE - "Blue," LeAnn Rimes.
MALE COUNTRY VOCAL PERFORMANCE - "Worlds Apart," Vince Gill.
COUNTRY PERFORMANCE BY A DUO OR GROUP - "My Maria," Brooks and Dunn.
COUNTRY COLLABORATION - "High Lonesome Sound," Vince Gill featuring Alison Krauss and Union Station.
COUNTRY INSTRUMENTAL PERFORMANCE - "Jam Man," Chet Atkins.
COUNTRY SONG - "Blue Bill Mack," LeAnn Rimes.
BLUEGRASS ALBUM - True Life Blues: The Songs of Bill Monroe.
NEW AGE ALBUM - The Memory Of Trees, Enya.
CONTEMPORARY JAZZ PERFORMANCE ALBUM - "High Life," Wayne Shorter.
JAZZ VOCAL PERFORMANCE - "New Moon Daughter," Cassandra Wilson.
JAZZ INSTRUMENTAL SOLO - "Cabin Fever," Michael Brecker.
JAZZ INSTRUMENTAL, INDIVIDUAL OR GROUP - "Tales From the Hudson," Michael Brecker.
LARGE JAZZ ENSEMBLE - "Live at Manchester Craftsmen's Guild," Count Basie Orchestra.
LATIN JAZZ PERFORMANCE - "Portraits of Cuba," Paquito d'Rivera.
ROCK GOSPEL ALBUM - "Jesus Freak," DC Talk.
POP/CONTEMPORARY GOSPEL ALBUM - "Tribute: The Songs of Andraé Crouch," Various Artists.
SOUTHERN GOSPEL, COUNTRY GOSPEL OR BLUEGRASS GOSPEL ALBUM - "I Love to Tell the Story: 25 Timeless Hymns." Andy Griffith.
TRADITIONAL SOUL GOSPEL ALBUM - "Face to Face," Cissy Houston.
CONTEMPORARY SOUL GOSPEL ALBUM - "Whatcha Lookin' 4," Kirk Franklin and the Family.
Convention Choir.
LATIN POP PERFORMANCE - "Enrique Iglesias," Enrique Iglesias.
TROPICAL LATIN PERFORMANCE - "La Rosa de los Vientos," Ruben Blades.
MEXICAN-AMERICAN/TEJANO MUSIC PERFORMANCE - "Un Millon de Rosas," La Mafia.

Courtesy Associated Press

IRON HORSE
MUSIC HALL
20 Center St. Northampton
ALL AGES
ALL THE TIME
thursday, february 27 • 10 pm
CORDELIA'S DAD
INTENSE ALT ACOUSTIC • Folk
thursday, february 27, 10 pm, $6 adv.
GALACTIC
AND TAMMY FLETCHER & THE DISCIPLES
new orleans groove/funk & blues from burlington friday, february 28 • 7 pm
MARCUS roberts TRIO
outstanding jazz piano • $16 adv.
tue & wed march 4&5 • 7 pm
JANE SIBERRY
THE CANADIAN CHANTEUSE • $18 adv
thursday, march 6 • 10 pm
SCUD mountain BOYS
last area show before national tour • $6 adv.
friday, march 7 • 7 pm
CINDY BLACKMAN QUARTET
kenny kravitz's percussionist does jazz. $10 adv.
friday, march 7, 10 pm
groovasaurus AND JIGGLE THE HANDLE
boston's funky best •$5 adv.
monday, march 10 •7 pm
jonathan RICHMAN
1000 RETURN! • $15 adv.
MUSIC SEVEN NIGHTS A WEEK
Coming: Big Geranoums, Robyn Hitchcock, Gato Barbieri, Michael Hedges, Ashley Macisaac, Royal Crown Revue, Dude of Life, Ferron, R.L. Burnside, Nils Lofgren
TICKETS: For the Record in Amherst, at the Northampton Box Office or call 586-8686 to charge by phone
24-hour Concert info: 413 584 0610

Media Advisor
Position Available
AT
HAMPSHIRE
COLLEGE

JOB DESCRIPTION: Hampshire College is Looking for a Graduate Assistant to Work 10 Hours a Week as an Advisor to Hamshire College Student Publications and to Assist in the Development of a New Paper THat Will Be Starting this Spring.

WHO SHOULD APPLY? Graduate Students with Experience Working on a College Newspaper are Preferred. However, all Applications will be Considered.

PAYMENT: This is a Graduate Position and Pays $10 an Hour. The Assistantship May also Included Tuition Waiver for the Spring Semester.

TO APPLY: SEND YOUR RESUME TO:

DEAN OF STUDENTS AFFAIRS
HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE
AMHERST, MA 01002
OR FAX (413) 582-5584

R&P
Liquors
• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
• Largest Selection of Micro Brews in S.Amherst • Fridge Rentals
309 West St. • South Amherst
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brooks, & The Residence

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
2nd week
Daily at 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.
AND ON
OVER 75 TEN BEST LISTS!
DIRECTORS GUILD OF AMERICA NOMINEE
BEST DIRECTOR - Scott Hicks
SCREEN ACTORS GUILD NOMINEES
Shine
PG-13
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema House 584 8435

thinking about grad school?
Kaplan can help.
If you're interested in taking that next step to success, come to Kaplan. We'll walk you through the admissions process and help you get a great test score on the GRE.
Class begins March 3
Ace the Exam!
the leader in test prep and admissions counseling.
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
MONDAY-SATURDAY 9:00AM-11:00PM
Not responsible for typos
VISA DISCOVER MasterCard
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE • CIGARS

BASS ALE 24-12 oz. bott. $21.99 +dep.	MAGIC HAT 24-12oz. bott. $22.99 +dep.	SAM ADAMS 24-12 oz. bott. $18.99 +dep.	MOLSON ICE/24-12 oz. bott. GOLD $15.99 +dep.	KILLIANS IRISH RED 24-12 oz. bott. $15.99 +dep.	MICRO KEGS! SAM ADAMS OREGON SARANAC HARPOON J.W. DUNDEE Plus Lots More!
BUSCH & LT "30 pks." $11.99 +dep	MILLER "HIGH LIFE" "30 pks." $11.99 +dep	KEYSTONE LT "30 pks." $10.99 +dep	M.G.D. & LT 24-12 oz. bott $9.99 +dep	MILWAUKEES BEST "30 pks." $10.49 +dep.	ICE! 10 lbs.....$1.29 50 lbs.....$5.99 100 lbs.....$9.99 Sale Thru 3-5-97
SOUTHERN COMFORT "90 pks." $7.99 750ML	TEQUILA $6.99 1.0L	4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L	BARCARDI RUM $15.99 1.75L	LET'S GO Yankees SPORTS WE DELIVER 584.8174	KEGS!!! BUD, BUD LT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT, MICHELOB DK, RED DOG, LITE, LOWENBRAU DK, M.G.D., LIGHT ICE $39.99 +dep. ICE HOUSE Keg of the Week! $38.99 +dep. Natural Lt/Ice $34.99 +dep.
CHATEAU SOUVERAIN SAUV BLANC $5.99 750ML	MERIDIAN SAUV BLANC $6.99 750ml	J. LOHR CHARD. $7.99 750mL	WOODBRIDGE CHARD & CAB. $5.99 750mL

Updike's latest: one for the ages

By Jayna Stafford
Collegian Correspondent

JOHN UPDIKE
In the Beauty of the Lilies
Fawcett / Columbine

John Updike's latest novel, In the Beauty of the Lilies, is a close examination of the Wilmot family as they grow through four generations. The book, divided into four parts, from great-grandfather to great-grandson, chronicles the lives of each successive family member.

In embracing an almost complete century-long view of America, Updike is cautious to show the full portrait of the country; his narration of the exciting, promising times are complicated with their simultaneous flaws and imperfections.

The reader is swept from the events of pre-World War I up to the present day. There are vivid details of the burgeoning labor movement shown by a careful description of the New Jersey Silk Mill strike of 1913, both World Wars and remnants of the stink of McCarthyism. Stretching to current times, the reader experiences cultist religious fervor and the very real threat of AIDS. Updike cleverly weaves together the selected moments of a country's history, as well as a family's memories through letters and conversations.

Updike must change the narrator's voice four times within the space of the novel and he achieves this effect seamlessly. He has a gentle rhythm and a believable tone, which is steady whether he is creating the voice of a spoiled little girl or an elderly man. Each section is so completely developed that they might easily be divided into four novellas.

Running throughout the entire novel is the undercurrent of each family member's struggle to come to terms with religion and the place of God in their lives. Peaceful Clarence, the familial patriarch, begins the novel. A caring Presbyterian minister, who one day loses his faith. It simply evaporates, "a visceral surrender, a set of dark sparkling bubbles escaping upward"; he is left empty and betrayed. As he leaves the church and attempts to find work, this marks the beginning of the family's continuous struggle with the meaning of religion and God. This sometimes unconscious quest will cycle from father to son to daughter to son and end in a place strangely close to where Clarence began.

Teddy, named after the bright, young Theodore Roosevelt, is unable to forgive the God he feels has deserted his father. He tells his future wife, "My poor dad wanted to believe and needed to believe and God just stayed silent." He can never bring himself to be faithful again.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

John Updike

It is with Essie, Teddy's daughter, that her struggle for religion begins to come full circle again. She leads a life of self-centered beauty and the quest for eternal youth. A Hollywood starlet in later life, as a child, when she prayed, she felt as if she was speaking directly to Clarence, her unknown grandfather in heaven. Ironically, it is he who is her spiritual being.

Clark, Essie's son, leads a life where there "was more than the usual number of problems with girls, drugs and wrecked cars." He holds little animosity toward his absentee mother; he generally tells people that she did the best she could, she just didn't have enough time. The two generations furthest removed from one another are closest in temperament. The spiritual battle of sorting out religion and lack of religion grabbed hold of Clarence, and years later, of Clark. Sorting out the intricacies of God's presence brings both men to the edge of their own personal doom.

The novel is somber in tone and full of renewing sorrow. The heartaches of life and the sadness of the human condition are, even in the fleetingly happy moments, overwhelmingly present. The fragility of human flesh plays a principle role; the delicate frame of the body is continually a conspicuously real presence. In the Beauty is filled with broken souls and bodies: a disfigured foot, a lisp, obesity, cancer, death. In the face of frailty and pity, Updike has created a family so realistic that the reader can do nothing but hope and wish for their survival in a world so marked by pain, and shift uncomfortably to recognize a world so gloomily similar to real life. B

UMass Ed TV tells kids "To Try this at Home"

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Patty Bode, one of the hosts for UMass Ed TV's "Try This at Home," works with Mtalika Banda and Justin Serrano.

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Educational Television (UMET), presented a valentine to the community this month in the form of a new show to be broadcast on Continental Cablevision's local programming channels throughout the Pioneer Valley.

"Try This at Home" is a 14-part series that was developed by UMET staff, the first new show since the local studio has become associated with Continental in October, 1996.

The series features a variety of projects for kids and grown-ups in topics ranging from art projects, mask making and shadow puppets to introductory scientific experiments asking questions like "will your bubble-gum lose or add weight after you chew it?" and "is your favorite food an acid or a base?" Most of the projects can be done along with the show and all of them can be done in a regular kitchen.

The series has two hosts, UMass School of Education Professor Richard Konicek and Amherst Public Schools art teacher and local artist Patty Bode. Both Konicek and Bode host the show along with a group of adventurous seven and eight year-olds. Konicek hosts the scientific shows, while Bode tackles the artistic episodes with the experience her position as an art teacher has provided.

In regards to her experience taping the show last May, Bode is excited.

"I really like the way UMET interacts with the community. They use the public school teacher's teaching skills and combine it with their student staff, the expertise of the producers and directors and the technology they provide to create an educational and creative public service in the media," Bode said.

And what about the students who were able to help host some of the shows? Bode had the opportunity to work with some of her own students from Amherst's Wildwood School where she teaches.

"The kids were thrilled. They loved being involved with the show and really took to TV studio life. They're really looking forward to seeing the shows," Bode said.

"Try This at Home" premiered Feb. 12 on Continental Cable and can be seen every Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m. until May 14. For further information call Continental Cablevision at 586-6911 or UMass Ed TV at 545-1155.

Come Write For Arts!
The Arts & Living desk is always looking for new writers. Come on down and see Jeremy brothers at the Collegian in the basement of the Campus Center.

BIRTHDAYS
place a Classified for a Birthday for 1/2 Price.
Call at 545-3500
or Visit us at Our Newstand on the Concourse or in Our Basement Office

Attention RSOs/GSOs/Agencies
Space Allocation Applications are due
Friday, February 28, 1997
at 4:45 p.m.
Return the completed Applications to the Campus Activities Office • 416 Student Union
If there are any questions contact the Campus Center/Student Union Commission
817 Campus Center • 545-0198

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
Over ~500~ Microbrews
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines
MICROBREWS
Ipswich (Dark & Ale) $5.99/six
Latrobe Craft Beers $4.99/six (Bavarian Black, Bohemian Pilsner, Pale Ale)
Longshot Black Lager $4.99/six
Pete's Wicked Ale $75 1/2 Keg
BEER SPECIALS
Bass Ale 12 pk Bottles $11.99
Bud Dry 12 pk cans $5.99
Busch & Busch Lt case Bottles $9.99
Icehouse & Red Dog 18 pk cans $8.99
LIQUOR SPECIALS
Jagermeister $8.99/375 ml
Glenfiddich $20.99/750 ml
Luksusowa Polish Vodka $9.99/750 ml
Mt Gay Eclipse Rum $10.99/750 ml
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Direct Distributor

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
COMING MARCH 5!
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
(888) 211-OCMP
Present
Dining Out
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates call 545-3500

Magical series heats up Hampden

COURTESY DAVID KATZENSTEIN

The unique style of Alvin Batiste, courtesy of the Magic Triangle series.

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

Tonight at the Hampden Theater, the Magic Triangle Jazz Series, sponsored by WMUA in conjunction with Residential Arts, clarinetist Alvin Batiste plays his version of be-bop, long considered unusual, especially as he is a New Orleans native.

Many record executives throughout his career would never actually take the risk to sign him to a major contract simply because he was a New Orleans man not playing traditional dixie-land jazz. In 1994, he finally released a major-label record on Columbia with pianist Kenny Barron aptly titled Late as in "better late than never."

However, between his 1932 birth in the middle of hometown hero Louis Armstrong's heyday and the present time, he had to go from place to place, from small show to small show, all the while carrying a vast music expertise which earned him the nickname, "Mozart."

Surely, the man has his abilities taken care of, especially with his skills on clarinet being so enticing, as it is a very hard instrument to master. He started out with these abilities with bluesman Guitar Slim in the '50s, before moving on to join fellow New Orleans jazz staples sax player Harold Batiste, drummer Ed Blackwell, bassist Richard Payne and famous father/pianist Ellis Marsalis (the patriarch of a family that includes trumpeter Wynton, saxophonist Branford and trombonist Delfeayo, all successful players now) in a group called the Original American Jazz Quintet.

He went on in the '60s through the '80s recording for a label called South Louisiana Music, all recordings of which he keeps as a private collection. To find music from him from these times, one must look to albums from Wynton Marsalis, Freddie Hubbard and other leaders.

With Ellis Marsalis and saxophonist Edward "Kidd"

Turn to HAMPDEN, page 10

Hicks' film inspires

Sad and sweet, the magic of Shine

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

SHINE
Directed by Scott Hicks with Geoffrey Rush, Noah Taylor, Armin Mueller-Stahl
Playing at Academy of Music

We associate the word, shine, as something aesthetic: beautiful, as if light is gleaming down upon us from the skies above. Yet, there is rarely any light gleaming in Scott Hicks' brilliant masterpiece. In fact, aside from the main character, David Helfbgott, rarely does anyone even smile, and the strange thing is, David is insane.

Shine has already won countless awards by both critics and festivals nationwide, including seven Academy nominations. It is not enough to merely comment on how good a film Shine is, everyone knows that already. Rather, what is essential here, is to try to put the pieces together; understand why this simple, but true story is so sincere and powerful.

To give away the story's secrets in a plot summary would truly be a sin, even though this is surely one of the most anti-climatical films of the year. The focus is on three stages of David's life: a young boy, late teens (Noah Taylor) and middle aged (Geoffrey Rush). What the audience so clearly witnesses through these distinct stages, is the evolution of insanity, and many may argue that this is the major point that Hicks is attempting to describe in his film.

David is a musical prodigy, and although he may not be the greatest pianist of our time, he is close enough to be warranted a genius. His father Peter, played by Armin Mueller-Stahl, loves his son to such a degree that David can no longer deal with the pressure. Peter symbolizes the old world — an Australian immigrant from Poland. We assume that he is a survivor of the Nazi holocaust and has witnessed the massacre of his entire family. Therefore, he will do anything to keep his current family together.

The pressure that David encompasses, both from his father's obsessiveness and the struggle of being a world- renown concert pianist, set the film's sad and bittersweet tone. The reason the film is called Shine is because that is the way the world perceives him. But those who know and understand him see David in a different light. He speaks quickly about random things and people laugh at his unique charm, after all he is amusing. Their laughter is however, filled with a sorrowful content — because they love David and feel sorry for him. He is innocent and naive, and most of all he never asked to go insane, but as we all know — life isn't always fair.

What separates Hick's film from others similar to it, is his sensitivity to his subject. The theme of Shine is not incredibly unique, we have all seen movies about insanity before. Yet, watching this particular film is an entirely original experience.

Hicks refrains from all acts of pretentiousness by evading excessive complication in his narrative. The audience is never-felt overwhelmed with bizarre symbolism and abstract dialogue. Directors often attempt to make the viewer feel as if they are growing insane along with the protagonist, such as what Alan Parker did with The Wall. Hicks offers no such nonsense, but rather his only ambition is to tell a beautiful, sad story.

Shine is so superbly photographed and brilliantly performed that it is impossible to not become fully absorbed into the story's spirit. Hicks is aware of this and has carefully edited certain sequences to serve as a reminder to the viewer that they are watching a movie. At times when David is playing his piano, Hicks uses certain intriguing techniques to intensify the story's passionate nature and take us away from the actual narrative, in order for us to recognize how amazing the structure of the film is.

Shine is truly a breathtaking cinematic voyage into the heart of the traditional character study. It is enlightening and bitter at the same time. Hicks plays with both extremes so diligently like a true master of film art. His cast is profound with three different actors coming together to form an honest look inside the world of David Helthgott. May this film's charm inspire filmmakers for decades to come. A

Leftover Salmon makes waves at Pearl Street

By Jean Sienkewicz
Collegian Correspondent

For many, walking into Pearl Street Tuesday night was like coming home: dread-locked heads, tie-dyes, corduroys, patchwork clothing, and best of all: smiling faces above animated dancing bodies.

Why? Because the music of Leftover Salmon moved them. The look in their eyes gave it all away: there was no place they'd rather be than there, boogieing down to the "polyethnic Cajun slamgrass."

Leftover Salmon, the quintet formed several years ago from two popular Colorado bluegrass bands (the Left Hand String Band and the Salmon Heads) played some jamming three hours of music. A scant 45-minute first set barely held a candle to the 2-1/2 hours that made up the show's second half.

True to form, Leftover Salmon meandered from style to style seamlessly for the entire night, barely giving the audience a chance to catch their breath. Jumping from a heavy blues number with a funky twist, to sweet reggae (driving leads provided by, get this: a mandolin with a steel drum-sound effects pedal), to an audience-participation- required polka (the band completely grooving on Freebird, polka-style. Think of this, just for a moment, have you ever even considered what a Freebird polka might sound like?) to lightnin'-quick finger-pickin' bluegrass to good, old- fashioned rock n' roll (including high-energy covers of Led Zeppelin's "Rock n' Roll" and the Stones' "Honky-Tonk Woman" in the midst of a scorching jam session).

Leftover's vocals generally bopped back and forth between the group's resident guitarist/mandolinist/electric fiddler Drew Emmit and rhythm guitarist Vince Herman. While the band's lyrics weren't a particular high point of the night, the energy and vigor Emmit and Herman imbued them with was impressive, to say the least. And though, by the end of the night,

Turn to SALMON, page 10

Pearl Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
EVERY TUESDAY
GAY NIGHT
18+ 9PM-3AM
Don't Cry for Me Argentina
A MADONNA CELEBRATION, FEBRUARY 25, 1997
EVERY THURSDAY
THE BIGGEST
HIGH ENERGY
Dance Party
21+
A FULL HOUSE EVERY WEEK
EVERY FRIDAY 9-2am
FREE BEFORE 10:00PM
21+
RETRO NIGHT
MUSIC FROM THE 70's, 80's & 90's
EVERY SATURDAY
TEEN NIGHT
AGES 15-19 • 6:00 - 10:00 PM
LIVE MUSIC
Fri. Feb. 28 @ 8:30 pm
THE LUNACHICKS
ONE TON SHOTGUN/SWEET 16
Sun. Mar. 1 @ 8:30 pm
A Pearl Jam Tribute
ITCHY FISH
SKIN
Sun. Mar. 2 @ 7:00 pm
SAM BLACK CHURCH
HYPNOTIC KICK/FURY OF FIVE/SMOLNIGHT
Mon. Mar. 3 @ 7:00 pm
BAABA MAAL
TONY VACCA & WORLD RHYTHMS
March 5-7 @ 7:00 pm
and March 8 @ 4:00 pm
ANNIE SPRINKLE
"HARDCORE FROM THE HEART"
Fri. Mar. 7 @ 8:00 pm
SLIPKNOT
Sat. Mar. 8 @ 8:00 pm
A BENEFIT FOR THE NORTHAMPTON COMMUNITY MUSIC CENTER
PANGEA
JOHN SHELDON AND BLUES STREAK
Sun. Mar. 9 @ 7:00 pm
AGNOSTIC FRONT
Wed. Mar. 12 @ 8:00 pm
BLACK 47
UPCOMING
Thur. Mar. 13 18+ SHAKEDOWN
Fri. Mar. 14 21+ AMY FAIRCHILD BAND
Thur. Mar. 20 All Ages B-SIDE RECORDS BENEFIT
Fri. Mar. 21 21+ TEXAS FLOOD
Sat. Mar. 22 21+ BARRY KINGSTON & THE SCREAMING SOULS
Sun. Mar. 23 All Ages LORDZ OF BROOKLYN
Wed. Mar. 26 All Ages THE DESCENDENTS
Fri. Mar. 28 18+ THE BREEDERS
Tues. April 1 All Ages BLOOD HOUND GANG
Advance tickets available at the Northampton Box office. 586-8686. 1-800-760 TICK. Strawberries Record Stores. Tur The Record in Amherst. About Music on Greenfield. Fls Unlimited at U. Mass. Platterpus Records in Westfield. Music Outlet in Enfield & B Side Records in Northampton 586-9536
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
http://www.virtual-valley.com/pearl.street
413-584-7771

YOU CAN change the world!
This spring, join Tour de Cure- one of the biggest diabetes fundraising events in history.
a cycling event of American Diabetes Association
Tour de Cure
Sign up today, call
1-800-TOUR-888
(1-800-868-7888)
or visit us at www.diabetes.org/tour

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
Doe Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
Roundtrip
TOKYO $799
Advance tickets available at the Northampton Box office. 586-8686. 1-800-760 TICK. Strawberries Record Stores. Tur The Record in Amherst. About Music on Greenfield. Fls Unlimited at U. Mass. Platterpus Records in Westfield. Music Outlet in Enfield & B Side Records in Northampton 586-9536
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
242 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

Spring Break Party '97
DAYTONA BEACH
From $229 Bus & Hotel
From $99 Hotel Only
• ROUND TRIP TRANSPORTATION VIA DELUXE MOTORCOACH
• 6 OR 7 NIGHT ACCOMMODATIONS AT OCEAN FRONT HOTELS
• FULL TIME BREAKAWAY STAFF ON LOCATION
For Details or to Book Call:
1-800-465-4257 Ext. 375
Breakaway Tours
www.breakawaytours.com

In Celebration of International Women's Month we invite you to...
A Week with Maria Elena Pineda Campesina Artist from Nicaragua
March 3: Opening Reception for The Ideal and the Real:
"Art and revolution in Nicaraguan Campesion Painting"
5:00 - 7:00 pm
March 4: Reception
7:00 - 9:00 pm
Latin American Cultural Center
All staff and students invited for an informal discussion!
March 5: Women Studies Brown Bag Lecture Series:
featuring: Maria Elena Pineda
A Presentation of social, political and ecological issues that inform her art
Augusta Savage Gallery
12:00 - 1:30 pm
These events were sponsored by The Everywoman's Center. The Office of ALANA Affairs, Women's Studies Department, Latin American Cultural Center, Latin American Studies Program, Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund, and the Dean's Office Graduate School.

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Genny" 30-pack $9.42
Super Buy! Genuine Draft bottles $9.99/case
"MICRO MADNESS" CONTINUES!
Harpoon- take your pick of "Flavors"!
Red Hook - E.S.B., Bitter, I.P.A., Porter, Rye & "Hefe-Weizer"!
Middlesex - Oatmeal Stout, Brown Ale, & "Raspberry Wheat"!
Pete's - 10 different flabors includ. the new "Mardi Gras"!
Saranac - Amber, Ploe Ale, Blk & Tan, Goldern & "Maple Porter"!
Mix & Match "TWO" 6/PKS ... $9.95
Wow!
Vodka 80 $8.99 1.75 Liter
Sutter Home White Zinfandel $6.99 1.5 Liter
Check out Russell's many Indoors Specials
Micro Brews 7 Weverg lycur dozing $3.99 6 pack
•All Beers Plus Deposit• OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT
is now recruiting for
VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS
Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3
Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community
for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, Feb. 26, 27, 28
Open House at the North Fire Station, February 28, 5:00 p.m.
Call 549-5419

Check out all the maple trees

Embrace the sun and celebrate because spring is coming

Ahh... sad but true — the winter's snow has left the Pioneer Valley. No longer can we even contemplate about the possibility of skiing in the Valley's backwoods or sledding down Amherst College's superb slopes. Ice patches from last week's rain storm are not enough to support tricky tube sledding or a quick trek on skating skis.

In fact nowadays it seems like the only thing we can count on from Mother Nature are sporadic frigid temperatures, mud-caked shoes and the potential of getting our cars stuck in muddy roads.

However despite the cold brown earth it is officially no long winter, but harvest time. The corp is "maple sap" and its harvesting time begins during the final weeks of February continuing until the end of March.

Known as "sugaring time" this unique transitional period between winter and spring can be experienced throughout the Pioneer Valley at public sugarhouses or private yards full of maple trees.

"Sugaring time" begins when the sun starts to penetrate through the winter skies and warms up the flow of sugar sap in maple trees. Maple trees primarily use this sap to regenerate growth after spending the long hard winter in a deep sleep.

Centuries ago people used to ax or chop big notches in the trunks of maple trees in order to extract sugar sap for the production of syrup or candy. Sap would pour forth from these gaping wounds and the maple trees would eventually die.

Referred to as "gushing," the Native Americans and pioneers first tapped maples in this manner, however, in the 19th century people began to drill small holes into tree trunks and attached "sap spouts."

Thanks to these early engineers tapping is now harmless for maple trees and has lead to the production of maple syrup, one of New England's most profitable cottage industries.

In order to tap into this industry all you have to do is drill a hole with a bit just under one-half inch in diameter and no more than one-half inch deep slanted upward into the trunk of a maple tree.

Alfresco News with Liz Anderson

Once the hole has been drilled into the body of the maple tree, the spout can be hammered into the hole through the side of a large bucket to collect the sap. The bucket must have a lid on it so that the sap will not be polluted by snow or rain.

Known as the "traditional bucket method," all of these supplies, plus instructions for effective tapping, can be found at Amherst Farming Supplies, just of North Pleasant Street beyond Amherst College.

Under perfect conditions a bucket will be filled with sap in one day. (However, when is life ever perfect? Realistically, it will probably take two or three days.) Once the bucket is full it is taken to a sugarhouse where the sap is boiled in evaporation pans until it reaches 218 degrees fahrenheit.

Turn to MAPLE, page 10

Snazzy releases from Haden, Metheny and Cary

COURTESY JIMMY KATZ

Pat Metheny and Charlie Haden join forces for Beyond the Missouri Sky, a collection of short stories.

Two of Missouri's favorite sons, Charlie Haden and Pat Metheny, have recently released an album together on Verve Records called Beyond The Missouri Sky (Short Stories). After having planned this project for years, the bassist Haden and guitarist Metheny were finally able to record it last year, probably after Haden had recorded his Grammy- nominated album with his Quartet West ensemble, Now Is The Hour and Metheny finished recording on Michael Brecker's Tales From The Hudson, also nominated for a Grammy.

The word that certainly permeates this album is "contemporary." It is a very soft and very open sound all around. The playing is, for the most part, heartfelt, but most anything with Metheny, the King of Contemporary Jazz, will have that wimpy reverb that basically ruined almost all of jazz in the 1980s and has made its presence felt on into the '90s.

The album is not Haden, Metheny and a few other friends. It is just Haden and Metheny. The duo play mostly acoustic little pieces, which they, for some reason or another, call "short stories." One reason could be that they all reflect a memory or something to do with their family, especially Haden's (as this is mostly his project — Metheny is signed to Geffen Records).

"Waltz For Ruth," a new original by Haden, written for his wife, opens the album with Haden playing a nice bass solo after Metheny has meditated on the wide plains of his home state with acoustic guitar. Metheny takes over on an older Haden tune, "Our Spanish Love Song," next, laying down the Metheny sound for the album — wide-spanning, dreamy acoustic or light electric guitar over a quiet Haden bass background.

On "The Moon Is A Harsh Mistress," an old country tune adapted here, we are deeper in Methemy Country, with synclavier orchestration making everything that much more gentle, yet more elevator. Despite that, there is better chemistry on this tune than on most others, as is the next tune "The Precious Jewel," with added acoustic guitar backup for a real rhythmic effect. Haden's son, josh's song "Spiritual," which is actually from Josh's-band Spain.

It is one astounding melody line, making it a winner. Despite the sometimes elevator dreaminess here, at least it isn't more re-bop, which is what you'll find with too many current artists.

Re-Bop ("Re-emergence of be-bop") is exactly what permeates saxophonist Frank Foster's new album, Leo Rising (Arabesque Recordings) basically from the first to last track. Foster, who has been in music for over 40 years, has not only had a 42-year tenor sax seat in Count Basie's big band, but has also played live or recorded with Billie Holiday, Tony Bennett, Lionel Hampton and others.

For his first album for an American label in over 25 years, Foster recruited some big names: bassist Christian McBride, pianist Stephen Scott and drummer Lewis Nash. For a couple of numbers, he is also helped by Derrick Gardner on trumpet.

This band sticks close to regular be-bop for almost all numbers, but on "Simone," the bop is less evident, as Foster lets his sax sing a little more melodically, and also McBride is quite nimble and full of surprises. There are some nice rhythmic variations on the title track, while Scott has a very nice solo on the standard "When April Comes Again." However, most songs are just too similar to each other.

We have a new artist on our hands with pianist Marc Cary. Also on Arabesque, he has his debut album as a leader, Listen, out now, and it's quite a piece of work. There is some very fine composing all through.

Taking time off of his current job backing up Abbey Lincoln's vocals, the thirty-year-old was able to put together an instrumental band with Ron Blake (tenor sax), Terell Stafford (trumpet), Yarbrough Charles Laws (flute), Daniel Moreno (percussion), Dion Parson (drums) and Billy Johnson (bass) to back him up.

He has a fast tune in "Runnin' Out Of Time (Epilogue)," which is ironically the opening track. "In Another Way" is an astonishing practice in composition — great layering accompanied by the practice of ensemble phrasing as a group. When he does let his boys take solos, he'll usually feature one in their own song, blowing all the way through, like Ron Blake's meditative riffing on this version of Lincoln's "Throw It Away." A fine debut from a man, usually in back of vocals, able to chill out with some cool improvising and instrumental composing.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian Columnist.

Jazz/Blues Weekly
by Joshua boyd

WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
You love our Restaurant, now try Late Nite
Start March Madness Early with our Mad Specials
$1.00 Gin &Tonic
$1.00 Vodka & Cranberry
$1.00 Bud Lite Drafts
$1.00 Nacho's After 10 pm
Everyday from Thursday Feb 27 to Sunday March 9
41 Boltwood Walk Amherst
Behind Antonios
253 - 4040

The Huke Lau proudly invites you to the Grand Opening of New England's Finest Nouveau Dance Club
The Club Connection
Say hello and bring your friends to the newest and most exciting Dance Club in all of New England during it's Grand Opening Party
Thursday February 27th 9:30pm
Experience a state of the art intelligent light show and a mega mountain sound system with 20,000 WATTS of non stopping heart throbbing dance excitement. A European Flavor that needs to be experienced.
Hu-Ke-Lau 705 Memorial Drive Chicope Ma 413-543-5222 club CONNECTION

FACULTY • ALUMNI • STUDENTS
ABSOLUTE AUCTION*
AT "AMHERST WOODS"
9 PRIME RESID. LOTS
REP # 7-0679 SATURDAY, MARCH 15TH AT 11 AM
LOTS 1-13, 26-27, 31-32, 36-37, 40, 41, 42, 43 & 45
OFF WOODLOT RD & OLD FARM RD, AMHERST, MA
Jerome J. Manning & Co., Inc. is proud to offer 9 prime lots in one of Amherst's finest neighborhoods. Situated within Amherst Woods, the lots are some of the only remaining lots available and range in size from .08± acre to 3± acres.
* 4 of the 9 lots are being offered ABSOLUTE-BUYER'S CHOICE.
TERMS: FIRST 4 LOTS TO BE SOLD ABSOLUTE- BUYER'S CHOICE, REGARDLESS OF PRICE. REMAINING 5 LOTS TO BE SOLD SUBJECT TO SELLER'S CONFIRMATION. $ 2,500.00 deposit PER LOT, in cash or certified check. Balance 45 days. 10% BUYERS PREMIUM. Other terms, if any, announced at the sale. Ma Lic 111.
BROKER TERMS: 2% BROKER INCENTIVE OFFERED.
48 hour broker pre registration required. Call for form.
CALL FOR INFO & BROCHURE
JEROME J. MANNING & CO., INC.
800-521-0111

Tonight Dance Music by D.J. Bob Paulin
Weekly Drink Specials
16 oz Red Dog Drafts $1.50
16 oz Vodka & OJ $2.00
16 oz Jim Bean & Coke $2.00
12 oz Rolling Rock Bottles $1.50
THE PUB
Appetizer & Nachos
1/2 price
3-5 pm Wed-Sat 7-11pm
No Cover Before 10 pm
15 East Pleasant Street
Crown Royal Promo Tonight

"MARCH" OVER TODAY FOR GREAT SAVINGS!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $11.99 + DEP.
Coors & Coors LIGHT CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $15.49 + DEP.
HARPOON MARDOCK and ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP.
Bass ALE 12 PK. BOTTLES $10.99 + DEP.
MEISTER BRAU REGULAR & LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PK. CANS $7.99 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, MICH, MICH LT, MICH AMBER BOCK, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, LITE $39.99 + DEP.
WINE OF THE MONTH
DUNNEWOOD CHARDONNAY, ZINFANDEL, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $5.49
Almaden Mountain
ALMADEN WINES $7.49
CHABLIS, BURGUNDY, RHINE, WHITE GRENACHE, BLUSH, CHABLIS, GOLDEN CHABLIS
RENE BARBIER RED & WHITE 1.5l $6.49
Robert Mondavi
WOODBRIDGE CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $5.99
BERINGER WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $3.99
KALIBER BEER NON-ALCOHOLIC 6 PK BOTTLES $3.99 + DEP.
POPOV VODKA $9.99 1.75 L
Canadian Club WHISKEY 1.75 L $16.49
SOUTHERN COMFORT 1.75 L $14.99
FLEISCHMANN'S GIN 1.75 L $11.49
CLUNY SCOTCH 1.75L SALE $12.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $9.99
EMMETS Ireland's Cream Liqueur 750ML SALE $8.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $5.99
We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 2/27/97 THRU WEDS. 3/5/97
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
Voted Best! 1996
• 14 9 ft. Tables
• All Sporting Events
• Every Thursday Night $10 Cash 8-Ball Tournament

Best Locations!
Now Leasing for April 1th
Gloucester Manor Hobart Lane
Lincoln Real Estate
25 N. Pleasant Street
253 - 7879

They're just a band, or are they...?

COURTESY RUNHYBO TANUMA

The Collegian Arts Desk would like to congratulate Geri as this weeks Spice Girl of the week.

maple

continued from page 9

It takes roughly 15 hours of constant bubbling motion before the sap reaches 218 degrees fahrenheit. As the sap boils it becomes thick and amber in color until it finally turns into maple syrup.

If you do not have the time or the facilities to undertake processing maple sap into maple syrup, then you can enjoy watching the process at local maple sugarhouses throughout the Pioneer Valley.

Just follow Route 116 north to Ashfield Village and celebrate the beginning of spring at Gary's Sugarhouse. Learn about processing maple sap at Gary's Sugarhouse and eat the finished syrup on fresh pancakes.

Located just north of Ashfield Village off Route 116 sits the small hill town, Conway, home of the Boyden Brothers Sugarhouse. Mrs. Boyden offers visitors a tour of her maple syrup industry as well as the opportunity to buy a variety of maple sugar products.

Maple sugaring is serious business in the hill towns of Hampshire County. If you are not only interested in maple syrup, but also want to escape for some rest and relaxation in New England foot hills, then hop onto route 112 north and travel to Worthington Corners.

Once you reach Worthington Corners take Route 143 north to the Cook's small farm and tour their maple grove. Located just off of Bashan Hill Road the Cooks' sugarhouse is located 800 feet into the woods and is at the end of a tricky path. The Cooks request that visitors call on weekdays to make reservations.

Worthington Corners is also the home of the Red Bucket Sugarhouse. Surrounded by sweet clouds of sugar smoke the Red Bucket Sugarhouse offers the public an extensive tour of its facilities and fresh maple sugar cakes and breads.

If you find yourself cranky this weekend due to Mother Nature's barren vistas and muddy landscapes then go outside and check the maple trees. Their buckets will tell you that it is officially no long winter, but it is sugar time.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist

Salmon

continued from page 8

which concluded close to 1 a.m., the audience's dancing energy levels had dropped dangerously low, the band looked as if they could have continued for at least another two hours. Herman was still howling into the microphone, the bandmembers were Chuck Berry-dancing across the stage, leaning on each other back-to-back, and playing off one another in true AC/DC rock n' roll fashion.

The antics of these five Colorado grizzlies were hilarious. The bass player, Tye North, on more than one occasion, played the Luke Skywalker/Darth Vader game with Herman and banjoist Mark Vann, substituting their respective musical instruments for laser-beam swords. And the senses of humor and Colorado twangs with which they rapped back and forth and introduced songs only added to the light and playful atmosphere.

The high point of the night, without a doubt, was the simple opportunity of viewing these musicians up-close. Whether you're a fan of Leftover Salmon or not, it's impossible not to be impressed by their musical and technical know-how, their talent, versatility and spontaneity. Drew Emmit is an absolutely fantastic musician, coaxing electric guitar tunes from his mandolin sweeter than any his contemporaries could produce.

With his effects pedals, it was virtually impossible to tell the difference between a guitar and his mandolin, unless you were watching. And his fiddle-playing commanded the crowd to dance, no questions asked, an order to which the audience had no trouble responding.

Michael Wooten on drums provided backbone rhythm throughout the show, yet he was clearly the quietest of the members, hidden behind everyone else. Perhaps if he had some more exotic instruments than just the standard drum kit, Leftover Salmon and Wooten's playing itself might take on a whole new dimension.

And finally, banjoist Mark Vann, with his speed-of-light fingering, although quiet and seemingly in his own world, left an indelible impression on the music and the audience -it's no surprise he won the prestigious Telluride Bluegrass Festival banjo contest a few years ago.

If you missed Tuesday's show at Pearl Street with Leftover Salmon (and opening band the Ugly Americans, described by one audience member as "alterna-rock injected with a bit of funk"), yet have an appreciation for frenetic high-energy jamming, a band with a sense of humor, and enjoy dancing so hard you'll still feel it next week, I implore you: catch these boys on their next swing around - the smile you'll smile will stick with you until the next morning.

Hampden

continued from page 8

Jordan, he is part of a triumvirate of New Orleans music instructors responsible for teaching young Crescent City go- getters like Leroy Jones and the Marsalis' boys jazz theory and basically what the music is all about.

Tonight he will continue his quest of "philosophical and spiritual inquiry," that began in 1969, while playing with Ellis Marsalis, when he had a supposed "psychic experience," which most likely furthered his musical explorations.

Tonight's lineup will consist of Batiste on clarinet, Rufus Reid on bass, Jim Pryor on piano and Herman Jackson on drums.

The Alvin Batiste Quartet will perform tonight at 8 p.m. at the Hampden Theater. Tickets are $6 for students and $9 for the general public. Call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511 for more details.

COURTESY BROOKE WILLIAMS

A tender moment

Fred Alston, Jr. gets a hug after performing a concert at Cherry Hill, a former Alston plantation in North Carolina in the film Family Name, part of the Multicultural Film Festival. Family Name will be screened April 14 in Herter Auditorium.

Norman Mailer: first time T.V. veteran

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Norman Mailer is, among many other things, a television veteran.

His first TV appearance? On a program called "Night Beat," where, butting heads with its scrappy young host, Mike Wallace, Mailer called President Eisenhower "a bit of a woman" and Life magazine "dirty."

Four decades and countless TV appearances later, Mailer, the author of 29 volumes and winner of two Pulitzer Prizes, will be back on television Monday to discuss his book Portrait of Picasso as a Young Man.

Airing on cable's Bravo channel at 10 p.m. (and again six hours later), "Mailer on Picasso" doesn't ignite those old-time fireworks.

But Mailer on TV is inherently watchable, reliably listenable. Speaking of Picasso and his interpretive biography of "far and away the greatest artist of the 20th century," Mailer yet again shows his stuff as an untamable observer.

Here's Mailer on the significance of Picasso's Blue Period: "Colors have a life for painters that different kinds of whiskies have for a drunk. A serious drinker will find a profound difference between bourbon, rum and scotch, and wouldn't dream of drinking one if the other is available."

The interview was filmed last summer at Mailer's home in Provincetown, where, in shirt-sleeves as boats bob behind him in Cape Cod Bay, the writer talks with Melvyn Bragg, host of British TV's "South Bank Show."

"Mailer on Picasso" is an absorbing, insightful hour, despite the fact that, earlier this week, Mailer was giving himself little better than a 50-50 score for his performance.

"I don't think too much of myself on TV shows," he explained, his face crinkled in amusement.

Just returned from Massachusetts to his Brooklyn Heights townhouse, Mailer likened being on TV to "being a porny star, spiritually speaking."

"In a porny," he told a reporter over tea, "you're engaged in an intimate activity with a bunch of strangers looking on. When you get on TV, too, you're engaged in a series of false but intense relations, and you're being measured. There's a stigma of embarrassment."

On the other hand: "I've known Melvyn for years, he first interviewed me for The Executioner's Song, so I have confidence in him. He's like a dentist I've gone to for 20 years."

Once upon a time, Mailer wrote a magazine article about TV — about watching it, as well as being on it — in which he concluded that "TV is a boredom-enhancing machine." Thus is television an answered prayer in a nation where "boredom is at last revealed as the ultimate protection against dread."

GRAND OPENING!
Special Korean Cuisine & Authentic Japanese Restaurant
ICHIBAN
Gift Certificates Available
$1 Sushi Rock 'n' Roll No Holiday Special please
ICHIBAN
One Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton
Tel: (413) 585-1188
Fax: (413) 584-8188

Classé cafe
eat heavy, eat light, eat sweet, eat smart eat natural, eat veggie, eat meat, eat beer
EAT GOOD IT'S HERE
morningOnoonOnight
OCMP
M-Sat. 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3
wine & beer
168 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291

GET STRANDED
AT THE ONLY BEAD STORE IN AMHERST
A STORE WITH A GREAT VARIETY AND SELECTION OF BEADS: SEMI-PRECIOUS, EUROPEAN GLASS, VENETIAN GLASS, WOOD, CLAY, NOVELTY BEADS
ALSO AVAILABLE AT AUGUST THE FIRST: GREAT GIFT IDEAS
AT August the First
197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst Ma. 01002, 413-256-0276

Thats Right!
Screen Printed T-Shirts On 100% Cotton!
Many Colors to Choose From!
COOL DESIGN HERE
Only $5.60
PRINTSHACK APPAREL UNLIMITED
322 Russell Street • Hadley, Mass.
3A Minimum. Includes: 1 side 1 color Ex. 4.31.97
Call Today 586-6933

UMass Women's Basketball
UMASS MINUTEWOMEN HOST ATLANTIC-10 TOURNAMENT GAME
THURSDAY FEBRUARY 27, 1997
@ MULLINS CENTER 7:00 PM
RESERVED SEATS: $6.00
ADULT ADMISSION: $4.00
CHILD GENERAL ADMISSION (12YRS. AND UNDER): $2.00
UMASS STUDENTS: $2.00
(AVAILABLE IN ADVANCE AT THE CURRY HICKS OR GAME NIGHT AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE)
FOR TICKET INFORMATION CONTACT THE ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE (413) 545-0810

Right Here Right Now!
The perfect opportunity has arrived for you to begin a career unparalleled by most other industries!
We're Ames. One of the dominant discount store chains in America, with more then $2 billion in sales and 300 stores in 14 states across the Northeast. And, we've recently been named the Connecticut Retail Merchants Association Retailer of the Year!
Assistant Buyer Training Program
Because discount retailing has developed into a complex, dynamic field where farsightedness and strategic planning are essential for success, we've created a formal, 7-week training program for you, that couples comprehensive classroom seminars and on-the-job training with a successful Buyer.
And because we're so dedicated to this program and your success, senior-level management will participate in the classroom training; and experienced Buyers and Divisional Merchandise Managers will work closely with you throughout all phases of your training.
Upon successful completion of the 7-week program, you will become an Assistant Buyer. Then, you'll work alongside a Buyer, assisting in the management of a $20 to $100 million business!
As an Assistant Buyer, you will continue to participate in ongoing developmental seminars, Business Analysis Group Workshops, and other training support programs...all designed to ultimately prepare you for a career in Buying.
We're looking for dynamic, creative, success-oriented graduates with excellent communication, analytical, and planning skills.
If that's you, please come talk to us!
We'll be at UMass to host an Information Session on:
Thursday, March 6th
7pm - 9pm
Contact your placement office for more detailed information or to schedule an interview.
Ames
Ames is an equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V.

Schaeffer qualifies for USCSAs, NCAAs

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's ski team began its post-season action last weekend when it headed up to the NCAA Regionals in Middlebury, Vt., and then the United States College Skiing Association Regionals (USCSA) in Waterville Valley, N.H.

At the NCAA Regionals, junior Tom Schaeffer led the way with a seventh place finish in the slalom, followed by Tom Holden at 18th and Todd Fowler at 28th.

The team took fifth place overall, ending with 112 points. Dartmouth took top honors, followed by Middlebury College, Vermont and New Hampshire.

In the USCSA Regionals, Schaeffer continued his excellent skiing, taking first place in the slalom with a time of 91.41. Todd Fowler came in 13th for UMass in 97.27, and Tom Holden took 17th at 98.02. In the giant slalom, Holden took second place with a time of 113.19, and Aaron Harsh was ninth, at 119.82.

The team finished in second place, with a time of 286.70. The Plymouth State Panthers took first place, with a total time of 284.28.

The women's team did not qualify for the Regionals, but it was represented by sophomore Katie Keane, who qualified on an individual basis. Keane finished 32nd in the slalom, and 45th in the giant slalom.

Leah Muliero also qualified for the Regionals, but could not compete due to a torn ligament in her knee.

Keane had a great performance in the USCSA Regionals when she took eighth in the slalom and sixth in the giant slalom.

"Katie Keane skiied exceptionally well in those championships," coach MacConnell said. "She's only a sophomore, but she's gained a lot of maturity."

With its performance in the USCSA Regionals, the men's team qualified for the USCSA Nationals, and will head out to Incline Village, Nev. to compete on March 5.

Tom Schaeffer and Katie Keane also qualified for the Nationals on an individual basis.

Impressively, Schaeffer has also qualified for the NCAA Championships at Mount Snow in Stowe, Vt.

"It's very unusual to qualify for the NCAA Championship," MacConnell said.

Because the USCSA and NCAA's are held during the same week, Schaeffer will miss the giant slalom at the USCSA Nationals to ski in the slalom in Stowe. He will, however, fly to Nevada for the slalom there.

"The NCAAs are more important than the USCSA in our minds," MacConnell said.

commissioner

continued from page 14

ly in the IHL and in Italy before authoring a pair of books, one on the art of goaltending and the other a recount of his alma mater's athletic history.

Bertagna has coached goaltenders for Team USA in both the 1991 Canada Cup, the forerunner to this last summer's World Cup, and the 1994 Winter Olympics. Bertagna, who has operated a successful Boston area summer camp since 1973, spent seven seasons with the Bruins coaching staff and a pair with the Milwaukee Admirals.

Reaction in Amherst was enthusiastic for the new commissioner.

"It's an excellent choice," Massachusetts hockey coach Joe Mallen said. "Joe Bertagna is the type of guy that we need. He's a fair, hard-working, honest guy. We need someone who's going to be a mover and shaker and he might be that sort of guy.

"He's been the commissioner of [numerous] teams with the ECAC and now he'll be able to focus on only nine teams. That's going to help us move in the right direction to becoming nine of the top teams in the country."

briefs

continued from page 14

Led by Jenna Nolan, who had a seven-goal effort, the team beat UConn 8-6 Friday. Eliza Garvey had the team's other goal and helped out on three as well.

The defensive tandem of Sandy Wright and Molly Sherman went plus-six for the night and assisted on five goals. Melissa Frydlo contributed an assist as well.

Nancy Kaiser made 28 saves, including two huge stops in the last 1:30 to preserve the win.

The women were suffered a setback at the hands of Holy Cross, 4-2, Saturday. Nolan and Frydlo netted UMass' tallies, but Holy Cross hit an empty-netter to seal the win.

The women's next game is tomorrow at Union College.

Sports Briefs were compiled by Collegian staff member Casey Kane.

notebook

continued from page 14

This week five Atlantic 10 teams are in the top 32 in the RPI rankings. The RPI rankings are taken into account by the NCAA Tournament selection committee, because they factor in teams' and opponents' strength of schedule.

St. Joseph's checks in as the top-rated A-10 team at No. 18 in the RPI ratings. Massachusetts is next at No. 28, Rhode Island and Temple follow at No. 29 and 30, respectively. Xavier, the conference's highest ranked team in the AP Top 25 at No. 14, is at No. 32 in the RPI.

UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint also agrees there should be five league teams in the tourney.

"I think we should get five, no question," Flint said. "Everyone's talking about the RPI ratings, we've got five in the top 32.

"We don't have a Big Monday, but we have one of the best conferences in the country."

Some of the coaches feel there is no doubt there should be five A-10 teams.

"Just look at our ratings and our teams," St. Bonaventure coach Jim Baron said. "Our guys have done a great job. When the teams get into the conference and beat up on each other, it shows how good a conference we are. I think it's a no brainer [to get five in]."

La Salle coach Speedy Morris also thinks it's a definite.

"I think St. Joe's is definitely in, UMass is definitely in, and Temple is definitely in," Morris said. "Rhode Island should go. I would say five, and no less than four. If there are less than four then I will be irate. I think we deserve five."

The coaches are not alone in thinking the Atlantic 10 deserves five berths. Noted sportswriter Dick Weiss, who was on campus Monday, said the conference deserves the berths, especially considering the RPI rankings.

With at least one game and the conference tournament remaining, the A-10 will send Xavier and St. Joe's to the dance without a doubt, while UMass, URI and Temple are looking probable.

"I think you see a couple of teams vying for the NIT," Purnell said.

softball

continued from page 14

LaFrenier ripped a double to the gap in right center to score Katie Kenderski. A pair of late unearned insurance runs would give ISU the win.

Henderson dazzled Redbird batters under the lights, striking out seven in the first three innings, part of a nine-strikeout complete game, while allowing one earned run on four hits.

Truthfully, the Minutewomen will simply be glad to be back on actual fields when they get off the plane later this evening. Practice conditions on the dilapidated Boyden Building gym floor are far from ideal, and the players visibly suffered from that fact in Arizona.

For example, on Tuesday morning assistant coach Kathryn "Bert" Gleason took a can of neon orange spray paint to the team's balls because the batters couldn't pick them up well enough for hunting practice.

Boyden is no place to train for a tournament of this magnitude, but it has had to make due. UMass did not perform as it would have liked on the field in Arizona, and after sitting on that performance for two weeks, will have a shot at redemption starting tomorrow night.

hoop

continued from page 14

belt.

Ivy: It's hard not to say Princeton, but Penn always has a shot.

Metro-Atlantic: Only the league tourney winner will go, look for Fairfield or Loyola.

Mid-American: Eastern Michigan just isn't the team it was last year, so honors this year will probably all to Bowling Green or Ball State (watch out for Bonzi Wells).

Mid-Continent: Gotta go with Valpo (Valparaiso).

Mid-Eastern: Coppin State will fill up a low seed in a bracket, as long as it doesn't suffer a conference tourney setback.

Midwestern Collegiate: Detroit, maybe Northern Illinois or Butler.

Missouri Valley: Bradley doesn't have what it'll take, so watch out for Southwest Missouri State. State has the advantage of having a NCAA champion as its coach — former Indiana guard Steve Alford. Also look for Illinois State to pose a challenge.

Northeast: Monmouth or Wagner. Rider has a distant, outside shot.

Ohio Valley: Everyone's favorite — Austin Peay.

Pac 10: UCLA, Arizona, and Cal. Southern Cal will get some serious glances. Without a conference tourney, Oregon and Washington could be hurting.

Patriot: Colgate.

Southeastern: Kentucky and Cinderella herself-South Carolina. Look for Georgia to be a selection as well. Mississippi might receive some consideration.

Southern: Davidson usually steps up this time of year.

Southland: Did somebody say McNeese State? The Cowboys will have to get by Northeast Louisiana and Stephen F. Austin first.

Southwestern Athletic: Texas Southern.

Sun Belt: New Orleans, unless it runs amuck of the league finale; if Arkansas-Little Rock, Southwestern Louisiana or Western Kentucky capture the conference tourney, the Privateers could, could get an at-large bid.

Trans America: College of Charleston, 'Nuff said.

Western Athletic: Utah and New Mexico are locks. It would be a crime to deny Schea Seals and Tulsa a bid. Hawaii is on the bubble. Fresno State killed its chances with a poor second-half showing.

West Coast: This is Santa Clara country, although the Broncos will probably be heading to Florida for Spring Break instead of the tourney. Try San Francisco on for size this year.

Selection Sunday is Mar. 9. Mark it on your calendars and get ready for the Big Dance.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Thursday Nite Raffle Nite
Mike's Mad Money Mike's Tee Shirts
Drink of the Week
Rum Coke $1.50
Mike's Big One 16 oz Bud Ice $1.00
Friday Nite Crown Royal & Coke Nite
Lots of Great Prizes

Klub Kai
Thursday, Friday, Saturday Nights 9:30pm - 1:00am
Happy Hours Specials
Funny Novel Pink Lemonade Sex on the Beach 12oz $2
Bud or Bud Light 12 oz. 99¢
Red Dog & Ice House 16 oz. bds $2.00
$2 combo platter
Klub Kai would like to thank all the students for a wonderful grand opening
THURSDAY NIGHT International NIGHT Everyone Welcome!
FRIDAY NIGHT Ladies NIGHT No Cover Charge for the Ladies!
SATURDAY NIGHT College HOUSE PARTY All Students are Welcome!
DRESS TO IMPRESS -POSITIVE I.D. AND PROPER ATTIRE REQUIRED
21+ FRIENDLY•CLEAN•PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
MT FARMS MALL•HADLEY•586-2774

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385
• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

Write for Sports...
It's better than writing for class, and it's sure better than eating at the DC!

Summer is sooner than you think
PLAN YOUR STUDY ABROAD EXPERIENCE NOW!
Where will you be next summer? How about interning in London? Working with film directors in Australia? Exploring the Daintree Rainforest and the Great Barrier Reef? Hanging out at the Edinburgh Festival? Visiting Sigmund Freud's House in Vienna? Touring the Irish Parliament in Dublin? Chatting with the locals in Guadalajara?
If any of the above sound better than what you've already planned, call us right now!
Beaver College offers a range of summer programs in six countries: Australia, Austria, England, Ireland, Mexico and Scotland. All programs are available for undergraduate academic credit and promise you the summer of a lifetime.
Call for a free catalog today.
1.888.BEAVER-9
cea@beaver.edu
http://www.beaver.edu/cea/
Beaver College Center for Education Abroad

Salve Regina
Summer Session
Dizzy Gillespie Slept Here . . .

So did Duke Ellington, Louis Armstrong, Miles Davis, Ella Fitzgerald, Dave Brubeck, Thelonious Monk and every other legend of Jazz. This is Newport, where the world's greatest musicians have given historic performances at the Newport Jazz and Folk Festivals and the classical Newport Music Festival.
Now you can join the artistic atmosphere and receive college credits at Salve Regina's "Summer Session" in Newport. We specialize in courses in music, art, literature and the liberal arts. Commune with Newport's fabulous summer atmosphere—concerts, museums, beaches—and study with us while you're at it.
Call Salve Regina University for Summer Session Information Today:
1-800-321-7124
Visit our Home Page: http://www.salve.edu
Salve Regina University • 100 Ochre Point Ave • Newport • RI 02840-4192

Jonathan Reid
THE COMPLETE MEN'S STORE HAMPSHIRE MALL HADLEY, MA
We Specialize In Dressing Men for Interviews, Banquets, or Any Casual Outing, with Prices to Fit Any Budget. When Appearance Counts Count on Jonathan Reid etc.
We Pride Ourselves in Our Friendly Professional and Courteous Service

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

SUMMER IN SWITZERLAND First session 5/24-6/27 ALL MAJORS: 6 credits, airfare, Eurorail, Room/board. ALL FOR $3295- Contact Chris 545-4411 or Jeff 545-4046

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Thanks For Your Support
FLAVA BOY PRODUCTIONS and CLUB METRO WOULD LIKE TO THANK EVERYONE FOR THEIR SUPPORT OVER THE LAST YEAR. PLEASE JOIN US ON MARCH 8th FOR OUR 1st YEAR ANNIVERSARY PARTY as we present "GET LAVED" at CLUB METRO!

-THANKS
TONY & IAN

London $189, Paris $199, Rio $250 (All R/T) 50-90% Off All Fares. Air Courier Int'l (800)298-1230-24 hours

The Sisters of Sigma Delta Tau would like to Welcome and Congratulate our newest pledges: Adina, Aisling, Andrea, Arbell, Arial, Clarissa, Colleen, Gretchen, Jacklyn, Julie, Kelly, Kristy, Laurie, Mireya, Ruthie, Sabrina, Sibyl, Tara and Zoe.

Congratelations Saoirse! Good Luck with the semester Jessica, Joy, Heidi, Patrica, Meghan, Tracey, Joanne Robin, Julie, Michelle, Amy, Stacey! We love you! Love the Sisters of AXW

Here's your chance to make UMass feel a little smaller. Come check out IGU. We may be a sorority, but not all sororities are the same! RUSH IOTA GAMMA UPSILON 7:00pm, 3/3, 3/4, 3/5. For more information, call Sara, 549-6461

AUTO FOR SALE

1989 DAYTONA TURBO 5-speed, A/C, detach-facs stereo, T-tops, 88K miles. Asking $3000 or B/O. 549-2943

1987 Ford Escort GT Burgundy, Hatchback, 5-speed, A/C, F/M, sunroof, 104K miles, $2125 or B/O. 256-1238

1997 Plymouth Sundance Excellent body, runs very well. $1800

EMPLOYMENT

or B/O Call 549-4435
WEBMASTER NEEDED For New College Business. Html Experience Required. 549-9919

Restaurant
Looking for dedicated people
Part-Time/Full-Time for fast food restaurant! Great hours! Must be available year round. 583-1060 New England Job Placement Restaurant Staffing Services

Summer Camp Positions in upstate New York. Camp Hilltop is seeking caring counselors with skills in swimming, water and land sports, A&C, horses, dance, music, mountain biking, riflery, archery, computers, high/low ropes. Competitive salaries. (800)782-5319

SAT Prep Course Teacher $15/hour Needed in all parts of Massachusetts Undergraduate degree preferred. Excellent Verbal and Math scores required. Call (800)698-7737 Please leave your name and telephone number

FUN! FRIENDLY! Co-ed Summer Camp in the Berkshires seeks new staff. Welcoming and supportive environment. Positions include: General Bunk Counselors, Heads and Instructors for Swimming, Sailing, Water-skiing, Baseball/Softball, Golf, Gymnastics, Lacrosse, Hockey, Archery, Soccer, Music, Pottery, Tennis, Horseback and more. Day Off accessibility to Boston, New York, Montreal. Call Today! Camp Schodack (800)851-1164, E-Mail Schodack@aol.com

COUNSELORS: TOP BOYS' SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Get in on an exciting, fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist. Openings in: Basketball, Soccer, Tennis, Hockey, Lax, Swimming/WSI, Water-skiing and all Water Sports. Plus: Camping and Hiking, Ropes and Climbing Wall, SCUBA, English Horseback Riding, Archery, Riflery, Arts and Crafts, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top salaries, awesome facilities, room/board, laundry, travel. Call (800) number now! (800)473-6104 for an appointment for an interview on March 11th in the Student Union Ballroom, 10am - 4pm or E-mail (coolsacamp@aol.com) or write: Steve Rubin, Camp Cobbossee (Kahbuh-see) 10 Silvermine Dr., South Salem, NY 10590

Counselors for co-ed Northeast Pennsylvania overnight Jewish Federation Camp3 hours from NYC)- general, sports, drama, H2O and arts (800)873-3868

LEADERS NEEDED! Summer Teenage Bicycling Trips! US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hostaling Program, Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341 (800)343-6132

Camp Waynesister half of brother/sister camp, Northeast Pennsylvania. 6/23-8/20/97) Have the most memorable summer of your life! Coaches, teachers, students. Pre-requisite: Must love children, enjoy living and working in a group situation. On-Campus Interviews March 11th. Call (800)279-3019

Summer Jobs
for the Environment
$2500- $4000/Summer
Campaign for clean air and water
Protect endangered species
Make A Difference
Offices in 33 states
Campaign To Save The Environment
1-800-75-EARTH

Camp Casedessis, Pocono Mtns., Pennsylvania. Excellent residential co-ed summer camp. Caring counselors to teach Video, Photography, Newspaper, Yearbook, Drama, Music and more! Great salaries. 5/21/97- 8/18/97. Call (800)572-8228 for an application

Camp Blue Ridge A Co-ed overnight camp 2 hours north of Atlanta, is looking for enthusiastic counselors. We are hiring lifeguards and WSI, as well as specialists in all sports, water skiing, rappelling, hiking, arts and crafts, riflery and archery. For info. contact Debra at 885-8463

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT- How would you like to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, and get paid? Call: (206)971-3554 ext C50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details or The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)275-4948 ext. C50017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Pelham 2 bedroom Mobile Home Gas, heat. No pets. First, last and security. $500/month. 253-5413

Sagarloaf Estates Ultra modern two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washer/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856

One bedroom in a 2 bedroom apt. on bus route. Heat and hot water included. $322/month Call 546-0262

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

Rossignol STS Skis 185 cm Marker Bindings, Solomon Boots Size 10 1/2. $125 or best offer. Call 253-8909

Mac Classics Style Writers carrying cases, Works/Word. Call Sarah (413)585-6208

KLH 3-Way 350W SPKRS DBL 12" Woofers $250/Pr Call 253-6520

BARTEND with Univarsity

INSTRUCTION

Bartending 50% Student Discount. On-Campus classes starting soon! Call (800)U-Can-Mix for info

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Three private 1/2 hour lessons $69.95 Call (413)732-8817 in Amherst Tues and Thurs eve.

LOST

KEYS with Blockbuster, Club Dave's, Coke and Bud keychains. VERY IMPORTANT. Please call Grel at 546-5867

MUSICIANS

Guitarist Wanted
Call Rich 253-1527
Original Band
Need song writing ability
Yea

MISCELLANEOUS

Fundraiser- Motivated groups needed to earn $500+ promoting AT&T. Discover, gas and retail cards. Since 1986, we've helped thousands of groups raise the money they need. Call Gina at (800)592-2121 ext. 110. Free CD to qualified callers.

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)666-4793

ROOM WANTED

Looking for apartment on bus line for Fall '97. Call Amy 546-0106

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 or 2 females needed to share an apt. Fall '97. Call Kim or Karen 546-0617 ASAP

SERVICES

PREP-COURSES
GRE/GMAT
30 hours, $295
American Academy
1-800-808-PREP
(Please leave your name and number)

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

HIGH-SPEED Internet Comes To The Five College Area!
Unlimited local access, no busy signals, free Web Page with account. Call TIAC at (860)644-6732. Student rates available

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. F50016 (We are a research and publishing company)

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '97! CANCUN, BAHAMAS, JAMAICA AND FLORIDA. 7-meal plan only $19! GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH CALL TODAY! (800)700-0790 www.vagabondtours.com

This Is The Oasis! $294 Panama City, Bus and Hotel. Cancun Only $400. Air and Hotel. Call 256-8724

TRAVEL

Party Spring Weekends Price includes: Round Trip Motor Coach, 3 days, 2 nights, Luxury Motel Downtown, 1 dinner, 1 breakfast. Departs every weekend- March, April and Memorial Day. Call Select Tours, Hanover, MA. (617)871-0490

Caribbean/Mexico $199 R/T, Europe $169 O/W. Fly the world dirt cheap! ONE WORLD TRAVEL

Jamaica-Spring Break from $599. Go with whom you can trust. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $550/week (413)786-7133 Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Europe $155, Caribb./Mexico $189 R/T. Worldwide Destinations. Airhitch Tm. (800)326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com or www.isi-com.fr/airhitch

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be processed by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals in which the full name may be printed.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals; this means street numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Pretzels may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must be signed. Author signatures, and full names, must be on file at the time placing the personal in the meetings order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to University judicial action.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's guidelines in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 26

Discussion — Ilan Wagner and Guy Korngold will present "Israeli & American Cultural Differences Today" and "Pro- Israeli Activism on Campus" at 8 p.m. at Hillel Houses. Sponsored by UMass Hillel/ Hamaqshimin Group.
Film, discussion — Commuter Area Government presents Final Judgement, a documentary film by UMass alumnus Jonathan Stack, showcasing the last few weeks of Antonio James' life — the true story from which the movie Dead Man Walking was based. The film, which starts at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom, will be followed by a panel discussion with Jonathan Stack (Director/ Producer), Burl Cain (Warden, Louisiana State Penitentiary) and Bill Newman (Attorney, Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union).
Lecture — Ross Chambers, Marvin Felheim Distinguished University Professor of French and comparative literature at the University of Michigan will present a lecture, "Anxious Reading: Eric Michaels' Unbecoming and the Death of the Author" at 4 p.m. in the Front Room of Amherst College Campus Center. Presented by Amherst College and its French Department, the event is free and open to the public.
Lecture — The Wildlife Society presents Robert Leverette, professor at Mount Holyoke College, on "Old Growth Forests in Massachusetts," at 5:30 p.m. in Holdsworth 203. Refreshments will be served.
Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold this week's meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174. Anyone who appreciates or writes poetry is welcome. New members are always welcome. For more information contact Tim at 546-0562 or Kaye at 546-1459.
Meeting — the Biracial/Multiracial Student Association will be holding a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge. Everyone is welcome to join.
Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.
Performance — Craig Hickman performs "Portraits of a Black Queen" at 8 p.m. in the Hampden Theatre. Part of the GLBT Cafe Series and co-sponsored by the Stonewall Center and the UMass Arts Council.

THURSDAY, FEB. 27

Lecture — Michael Thelwell, professor of Afro-American Studies will be lecturing on Civil Rights activist Kwame Ture, formerly Stoakley Carmichael, at 7 p.m. in the New Africa House, room 311.
Poetry Reading — Joseph Langland and Michael Petrit, two of the best known poets and spokesmen for poetry in the Valley will read from their works at 7:30 p.m. in the Large Meeting Room of Jones Library. For more information call English Professor, Stanley Koehler at 545- 5505.
Discussion — Biosci will be hosting Anp De and Carolyn Augart, med students from UMass Worcester, in a discussion about what medical school is really like at 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center, room 168 C. Contact Carey at 546- 4465 if you have any questions.
Religious — Learn the cooking magic of the Challah with all of your friends at the Challah Baking Extravaganza. We want you to make and gorge on delicious fresh Challah. All you have to do is show up at the Hillel House at 7 p.m.
Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6-7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

NOTICES

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.
Dance — The UMass Ballroom Dance club invites everyone to come dance with us every Tuesday and Thursday from 5:15-7 p.m. at 101 Totman Gym. Newcomer Waltz/ Chacha class begins Feb. 25. Intermediate/ advanced instruction by a pro every Wednesday, 6:15-7:30 p.m. All instructions are free. For more info, call Kevin Murphy at 549-4036.
SGA nominations — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the nominations for the positions of President and Student Trustee, along with positions for local Area Government are now being held. The nomination forms are available in the SGA office. These nominations close on Feb. 27 by midnight, all forms must be turned in by this date, otherwise the candidates are not eligible to run for office.
Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577-5316 for more information.
Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577- 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.
Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.
Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.
Film — The Interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Moiber Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: www.umass.edu/film.
Band wanted — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently seeking a four piece band for the Spring production of Fame. The band must include: keyboard, guitar, bass, and drums. Great publicity possibilities. For more information call Heather at 549-3681 or Justin at 546-0460.
Coffee Shop — Student Valley Productions is holding a Coffee Shop in April. They are looking for any talent coming from the Five College area in music, songs, poetry, skits, comedy, etc. For more information, call Daisy at 253-6514.
Mission Improvable — The UMass comedy improv troop is performing every Saturday night in the Campus Center basement. Admission is free. All are welcome from the Five College area. For more information call Aaron at 546-5225.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 hamburger tacos after 10 tonight!

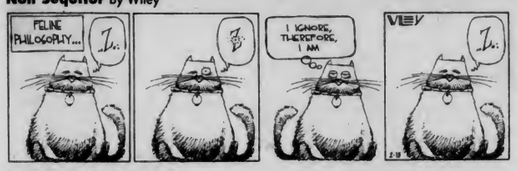
Full Menu Served 'til 1 AM!
We accept Credit Cards

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University² By Frank Cho

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Keep things moving smoothly for best results. Come out on top by letting little annoyances slide and staying focused on the end results. People will see your skills and accomplishments in a new light. A new ally offers support.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Forget past slights and disappoint ments and look for better things to come. Keep a positive outlook and remember that your friends will stay with you no matter what happens. Be receptive when friends and family try to make amends for past slights.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
It's time to rest and recharge. Getting away from work and personal stressors gives you a new perspective. Changing your surroundings could change your outlook for the better. Look to an old friend for the wisdom you need in the your way out of a tough situation.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Take health precautions, but also strive to see things realistically. Not all fears are valid. People whom you think are on your side are actually working against you. Be aware of this and play your cards close to the vest.

LEO
July 23-August 23
You have energy and drive this week to accomplish many things. Take on added projects and don't get sidetracked by fears and doubts. Things fall your way and someone you saw as an opponent comes over to your side.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Home and family provide a needed refuge. Don't take advantage of those close to you. Good ideas may come from an unlikely source. A low key attitude works best now, as he willing to wait things out and don't force issues.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Keep a sharp eye out for small obstacles and take time to deal with them before they get bigger. Remembering past slights and mistakes keeps you from moving ahead in the future. Be positive in your feelings about people and situations.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
You begin to see the payoff from past efforts. Hard work is rewarded at home and on the job. Be patient with friends and family. If you're in need of assistance, don't pussyfoot around. Take charge and ask for what you want. Take some time for yourself this weekend.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Be aware of what's going on around you because many things could be happening behind the scenes. Watch for signs and signals, and be ready to retreat a little to gain a lot. You'll know what to do and when to do it.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
A social event or a night on the town could be just the thing to boost your mood. Accept people as they are for best results. Look at the big picture and leave the details to others. Take a friend's advice in the spirit it is offered.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Take an honest appraisal of yourself. Seeing yourself as others see you could keep you out of a sticky situation. Trust your instincts in dealing with home and work issues but be sure to cover your bases. Call an old friend just to say hello.

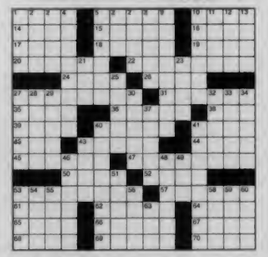
PISCES
February 19-March 20
It may seem like you're spending a lot of money, but the payback will be worth it. Focus on mundane details, like balancing a budget or a check book. It might feel like drudgery at the time, but in the long run, you'll have a better idea of your real circumstances.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

"OK, Mrs. Wertman, your installation is all set. Let's run through the operation. Do you, by any chance, have a watermelon?"

Quote of the Day



"Nothing on top but a bucket and a mop and an illustrated book about birds..."
–Meat Puppets

Today's D.C. Menu Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin		Worcester
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
'burger	Geek Lemon Chicken	Turkey 'burg	Geek Lemon Chicken
Quiche Lorraine	Veal Cordon Bleu	Beef Stew	Savory Stuffed Peppers
Meatball Grinder	Fiesta Rice and Sneeze	Fettuccini w/ Tomato	Pastabilities
Wheatball grinder	1/4lb 'burger		Manoccotti w/ Smurfs

Hampshire		Berkshire
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
'burger	Geek Lemon Chicken	Turkey Burger	Geek Lemon Chicken
Gilled Chicken Sandwich	Veal Parm	Rueben on Rye	Veal Cutlet Cordon Bleu
Turkey Bacon Folded	Scallops	Fettuccini w/ Tomato	Garden Chili
Pita	Smurfs	Seasame Noodle and Pea Pods	Pastabilities Manacotti

CROSSWORD 4

ACROSS
1. Blot
5. Sing like Bing
10. Tones pronoun
14. First name in gossip
15. Beaver's home
16. Water (diplomatic)
17. Spring, in Israel
18. Lagoon surrounder
19. Measure for Dr. Frankenstein
20. Turns aside
22. Lets out of jail
24. They disappear on standees
26. Cannoh of Deathtrap
27. Overshadowed
31. Harsh and metallic
36. Ready
37. Rewrite
38. What person?
39. ___ Kong
40. Small, as eves
41. Toolbox item
42. Peppermint
43. River boat
44. Duroc sound
45. Population count
47. Canned fish
50. Negative profit
52. Carrou and Deighton
53. Wandering off
57. Shocked a trap
61. Geezer
62. Gallows knot
64. Irish newspaper
65. Mitch Miller's instrument
66. He played Gentleman Jim
67. Hog food
68. Saturates
69. Sailed days
70. Tryout

DOWN
1. Gilbert of tennis
2. "Once In ___ With Amy"
3. Squedron
4. Coming undone, as cloth
5. Embraces
6. Rubbish!
7. Inconse
8. Was a girl-watcher
9. Early woman reporter (2 wds.)
10. Largest city in the West Indies
11. Selves, in psychoanalyses
12. Draw a line
13. Entrance exams: abbr.
21. Strike sharply
23. Bowler Anthony
25. Passover feast
27. System of morals
28. Routine task
29. Alb material
30. Heuls
32. Lover
33. Rise and ___!
34. Meringue maker's discards
37. Model
39. Nursery furnishing
41. Most clamorous
43. Passing marker
46. Lists of candidates
48. Mullroy members
49. Watson's macro-molecule: abbr.
51. Silent-night ruiner
53. River bed
54. Hamlet's phrase (2 wds.)
55. "___ for the home team"
56. Quayle's successor
58. Mah-jongg piece
59. God born of Chaos
60. Kind of store: abbr.
63. John, Jr. to Jackie

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Somedays I feel so good. Other days I walk around feeling as if I must be the most tormented person on earth..... quietly tormented ..... probably forever.

Nothing's steady.

Last night I dreamt I was on a trampoline bouncing up and down endlessly. I couldn't get off.

Finally I made a big push and jumped really high into the air..... freedom at last.

I would land my feet on the solid ground.

But when I came down... I landed right back on another trampoline.

Minutewomen face Lady Dukes in A–10 Tourney

UM hopes to avenge regular season loss

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

At the beginning of the season, senior co–captain Beth Kuzmeski said that the first goal of the 1996–97 Massachusetts women's basketball team was to win the Atlantic 10 championship.

After finishing behind St. Joseph's for the regular season divisional title, the Minutewomen have one more chance to realize their goal.

That road starts tonight.

The Minutewomen (17–9, 11–5 A–10) will host Duquesne (13–15, 9–8 A–10) in second round A–10 tournament action at the William D. Mullins Center at 7 p.m. tonight.

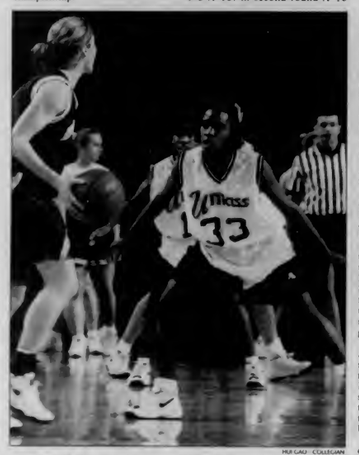
UMass received a first–round bye by virtue of it's second place finish in the East Division, but will have no picnic against the Dukes, who beat the Minutewomen 85–58 back on Jan. 18.

"They played as well as they could possibly play and we didn't play well at all," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "They have a great player in Korie Hlede. We just hope to contain her and hope that nobody else hurts us."

Hlede is the key to the Dukes offense. The junior led the A–10 in scoring for the second straight year this past season, averaging 22.5 points a game. The unanimous first–team All A–10 guard was the A–10 Player of the Year in 1995–96, and only a great year by George Washington forward Tajama Abraham prevented a repeat performance.

Hlede, dubbed the "Croatian Sensation," has led Duquesne in scoring in every game this year, including a 23–point performance against UMass in their only meeting.

As far as the rest of the Dukes go, there isn't much else for UMass to be to concerned with. Backcourt mate Kelly Ebenhardt is second on Duquesne at 8.7 points a game, and freshman LynnDee Howell finished up a nice rookie campaign with seven points and four rebounds a game.



UMass has been gearing up for the A–10 tournament for the entire season. Following their first NCAA tournament appearance, the Minutewomen rebounded from a 3–4 start, but a few losses at critical junctures makes the A–10 tournament that much more important for UMass.

"They realize what they have to do," O'Brien said. "They realize that they let three or four games go during the course of the season that we could have had, especially the St. Joe's games. They know they can do it. They still have the opportunity to realize their goal. Now we have to go and take care of business."

The first order of business for Massachusetts is to get the ball to Crystal Carroll. The senior forward was named to her first All A–10 team this week, and for good reason. Carroll led the Minutewomen in scoring this year, posting 16.3 points and six rebounds a contest.

Freshman guard Kelly Van Huisen heads up the backcourt. The Haverhill native stepped in right away for the Minutewomen, ranking second on the team with 10.6 points a game and four assists.

"Our key is to execute on offense," O'Brien said. "We can't have turnovers that lead to easy baskets. We play good defense, we just have to make sure we don't give them those easy baskets. We just have to go in [tonight] and play our best game of the season."

MIA GAO / COLLEGIAN
Jaywana Bradley and the UMass women's basketball team host their first–ever Atlantic 10 Tournament game tonight at 7 p.m.

MIA GAO / COLLEGIAN
Freshman Alison MacFarland and the Minutewomen face a tough game tonight against Duquesne in A–10 Tourney action.

Night and Day rules ice; lax club to start season

Intramural action heating up

The intramural basketball teams are in their final week of competition, a week that will decide the make–up of the upcoming tournament. In order to make the tourney, men's teams must have a .500 record or better.

In women's action, Floor Play III is in control of the Power League, and The Firm has posted a 3–0 record in the Tough League.

Grad/Fac/Staff has only one 3–0 team, International Males. The Co–Rec division, two teams have recorded perfect marks, Hoop Screams and Repeat.

• In hockey action, Night and Day has reigned supreme so far, outscoring the other six teams to compile a 6–0 record with only one league game to play.

• The intramural wrestling tournament began Feb. 21 with 91 entrants in a breakdown of 10 weight classes.

We Still Ain't Greek won the wrestling team championship.

Individual winners were: Eric Connelly in the 120–130 pound class; Lamar Gore in 134.5–139 pounds; Justin Cotter for the 140.25–149 class; Bryan Meehan (150–160); Tim Lockhart in 161–163; Anthony Kusnierz in the 165–172 pound class; Nick Brink (188–198); John Tzouganatos in 200–216; and Warren MacCallum in the 227–235.5 class.

• Entry rosters for softball, volleyball and soccer are due in the intramural office by Mar. 10, with play slated to start Mar. 26.

• For any information concerning intramurals call the Intramural Office at 545–2693.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Club lax starting spring

The UMass lacrosse club will kick off its eighth spring season with another challenging schedule tomorrow at 3:30 p.m.

The men will travel to Fairfield, Conn. for a game against Division II Sacred Heart's junior varsity squad.

For information about the game or the club, call coach Judy Dietel at 545–3815.

Women's hockey splits weekend decisions

The UMass women's hockey club (2–7) had a big win over Connecticut this weekend and walked away with the first–ever Fireman's Cup.

Turn to BRIEFS, page 11

Softball heads south for second tourney

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts softball team left its Phoenix headquarters on Feb. 17, while dawn broke across the Valley of the Sun, the squad experienced a odd moment of closure.

Headed for the airport, Alan Jackson's honky–tonk classic "Chattahoochie" came over the radio while the van pulled onto the Hohokam Expressway. The song served as a reminder of where the team's odyssey will bring them next.

The Minutewomen are headed way down yonder on the Chattahoochie to Columbus, Ga., site of last summer's Olympic softball championship, this weekend for the prestigious National Fast–pitch Coaches Association Lead–off Classic. Of the tourney's star–studded 18 team field, 14 advanced to last year's NCAA Tournament.

After a 1–5 showing at the season–opening Coca–Cola Classic in Phoenix, the team will look to rebound tomorrow evening when it faces No. 13 Southwestern Louisiana (USL) and Illinois State (ISU). USL has appeared in three of the last four College World Series, while the ISU Redbirds offered UMass no love, beating the Minutewomen 4–1 on Valentine's Day.

After those two preliminary games, each of the 18 teams will be seeded into three six–team modified double–elimination brackets, representing gold, silver and bronze medal rounds. Each team will play between three and six games total between March 1 and 2.

Last year, UMass came away with the bronze medal, defeating regional rivals Princeton and Connecticut to capture the prize, and buoying the team into a tremendous performance in its next action at the Lady Seminole Invitational in Tallahassee, Fla.

This season, the team will have a pair of fresh faces in the UMass line–up.

With only a pair of pitchers, UMass Coach Elaine Sortino encountered some difficulties at the Coca–Cola Classic, as the three–day, six–game tournament dragged on. To alleviate the strain on Danielle "Harry" Henderson and Liz Wagner, Sarah Watters has joined the team. The 5–foot–11 righthander will don the No. 11 formerly worn by the now–graduated Amy Powell this weekend. A freshman from Las Vegas, Watters played for Bonnie Kenny's volleyball team in the fall and her arrival will boost the UMass staff.

Meanwhile, a more familiar face will be in a less–than familiar place tomorrow. Sophomore Mandy Galas returns from off–season knee surgery which kept her out of the lineup in Arizona. The team's swift–footed starting rightfielder last year, Galas will try her hand at second base in 1997.

While UMass has never faced the Lady Cajuns, the Redbirds are familiar faces to UMass; especially that of Kerri Bartlow, who went the distance on the mound for ISU in their earlier encounter with UMass, while driving in the game–winning run. UMass fell behind early 2–0 in the game, but drew to within a run in the fifth when Karen

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 11

Joe Bertagna named new HE commish

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Hockey East is now officially one up on Major League Baseball. The east's premiere college hockey conference has a commissioner.

Joe Bertagna, former ECAC hockey commissioner and Boston Bruins goaltender coach, was placed in charge of the nine–team conference on Tuesday and was introduced at a press conference at Boston University. The league's front office had the vacancy since Merrimack athletic director Bob DeGregorio stepped down as commissioner following the 1995–96 season. Bertagna will assume his new position on July 1.

Bertagna served as commissioner for the entire ECAC hockey league, monitoring Division I, II and III teams along with the immense conference's growing women's hockey sector.

"I'm very excited and I know all of the Hockey East athletic directors are as well to have Joe moving into the job this summer," said Gary Strickler, Boston University athletic director and chairman of the Hockey East Executive Committee, which oversaw the conference this season. "Joe brings a national hockey reputation and I know he will make our strong conference even stronger.

"We know what a good job Joe has done for ECAC hockey, and we look forward to him doing the same for Hockey East, Strickler said."

Bertagna's resume includes something from almost every aspect of the sports industry, making him uniquely qualified for the position. He served as Sports Information Director at Harvard, established the ECAC's television contract and sought sponsorships for the league, and has served as the Executive Director of the American Hockey Coaches Association since 1984.

The former Harvard netminder played professional–

Turn to COMMISSIONER, page 11

Bubble teams abound as NCAA Selection Sunday approaches

Calgon, take me away!

This year's NCAA men's basketball tournament is nearly upon us; and this year's tournament selection committee is bathed in the infamous bubble teams.

With the widespread parity in the college hoop ranks this year, it seemed as if everyone had a shot at their respective conferences.

But now, Selection Sunday looms near and its time to look at who's going to be dancing over spring break, and who's going to be turning their TV's to tourney coverage.

CASEY KANE on COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Thirty conferences get an automatic bid, with the other teams being chosen on an at–large basis. Let's go to the big board and check out the conferences:

American East: Boston University

Atlantic Coast: Duke, Wake Forest, Clemson, North Carolina and Maryland. The ACC clearly deserves five bids, and still has Virginia floating on the bubble. Florida State may have edged Clemson, but the Seminoles are probably NIT–bound.

Atlantic 10: Xavier and St. Joseph's are definites. Massachusetts, Temple and Rhode Island are all almost there.

Big East: Villanova and Providence. Boston College will probably put in an appearance, but Connecticut is out. Syracuse has come on strong, as has Notre Dame. The Orangemen might sneak in, but let's be serious, Notre Dame, maybe the NIT. Miami started strong, but fell of the face of the Earth, so it's a no–go for the 'Canes.

Big Sky: Nate Green will lead Idaho State to the tourney.

Big South: Maybe Liberty, maybe Radford.

Big 10: Minnesota, a likely No. 1 seed, and Illinois are in. Indiana and Michigan, both hanging on to the bottom of the AP poll are definite maybe's. Sorry coach Keady, after being a No. 1 seed last year, Purdue may not make it this time around.

Big 12: Another No. 1 seed, perhaps the nation's favorite to raise the banner, Kansas. Colorado is a lock. The Big 12's Overrated Central headquarters — Iowa State — will go. Texas a maybe. The Big 12's Overrated Central associate headquarters — Texas Tech — will receive serious looks.

Big West: Long Beach State to take the conference tournament and go.

Colonial: Old Dominion, most likely. Although, Virginia Commonwealth could contend.

Conference USA: Pencil in Cincinnati and Louisville. Marquette and UNC–Charlotte could become first–round

Turn to HOOP, page 11

A–10 coaches: We deserve five bids

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

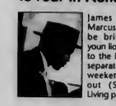
Will the Atlantic 10 receive five bids to this year's NCAA men's basketball tournament?

Ask any of the coaches, and the answer is yes.

"I would agree with that," Xavier coach Skip Prosser said.

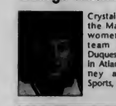
"I watch the tapes of our games and every game is a war. It's a tough, tough league. I think five is reasonable."

Prosser is not the only league coach who feels that way. Dayton coach Oliver Purnell also agrees there should be five conference members in the big dance.



"Without question, I can not see us not getting five teams in," Purnell said. "There's no way that the A–10, with our ranking, should not get five teams in."

Atlantic 10 Notebook



Turn to NOTEBOOK, page 11

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 92 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, February 28, 1997

Young lions of jazz to roar in Noho

James Carter and Marcus Roberts will be bringing their youn lion jazz sounds to the Iron Horse in separate shows this weekend. Check it out (See Arts & Living page 5).

Look out George Washington

Crystal Carroll and the Massachusetts women's hoop team dismantled Duquesne last night in Atlantic 10 tourney action (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Three Israeli officials could be charged

JERUSALEM (AP) — Benjamin Netanyahu's justice minister, a top aide and a key coalition ally are likely to face criminal charges in a growing influence–trading scandal, Israeli media reported yesterday.

But the prime minister said he has confidence in his government. "I feel very strong," Netanyahu said yesterday at a gathering of Likud Party supporters. "I have one characteristic — I like challenges. I especially like to win, and we are winning."

The scandal grew from the short–lived appointment last month of Jerusalem lawyer Roni Bar–On as attorney general. He resigned after one day in office amid criticism he was a judicial lightweight chosen for his political ties.

Israel TV alleged Bar–On's appointment was part of deal in which he would end the corruption trial of Shas Party leader Aryeh Deri in exchange for Cabinet votes needed to approve Israel's withdrawal from most of the West Bank city of Hebron. Netanyahu's government depends on Shas for its parliament majority.

NATION

Alleged FBI cover-up to be investigated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department inspector general will investigate whether the FBI covered up allegations that one of its crime lab agents testified falsely during the ouster of a federal judge.

Under pressure from Senate Republicans wary about the FBI's ability to police itself, Attorney General Janet Reno announced yesterday that she had directed FBI internal investigators to turn over the two–day–old cover–up probe to Inspector General Michael Bromwich. He is completing his own inquiry that found management and other problems at the world–renowned crime lab.

Reno acted after Sens. Charles Grassley (R–Iowa) and Arlen Specter (R–Pa.) said Wednesday they would not be content with the internal investigation begun by FBI Director Louis Freeh.

"We're trying to have the inspector general pursue every issue" about the crime lab, Reno said at her weekly news conference. Justice spokesman Bert Brandenburg said Freeh agreed the transfer "was the right thing to do."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 25	HIGH: 50 LOW: 40	HIGH: 55 LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword.....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 10

Death penalty revisited at UM; alum presents his documentary

BEN KITRAS/COLLEGIAN
From left to right, Jonathan Stack (director), Burt Cain (warden Louisiana State Penitentiary), and Bill Newman (attorney of Mass. Civil Liberty Union) speak Wednesday in the Student Union Ballroom.

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

At midnight on March 1, 1996, technicians at the Angola Louisiana State Penitentiary figured their heart monitors were broken when the heart rhythms of the death row inmate, Antonio James, pulsed across the screen abnormally slow at the time he was set to be executed. What they discovered, however, was that after 16 years in prison, James had accepted the idea of dying calmly and with faith in God.

Outside the prison, friends and family tearfully held each other as they sang "Amazing Grace," and said their prayers for James, who at 12:27 a.m. was pronounced dead.

These moments were portrayed Wednesday evening in University of Massachusetts alumnus Jonathan Stack's documentary film Final Judgement, which followed African– American Antonio James through the last two weeks of his life in Angola Penitentiary — the same prison in which the film Dead Man Walking was filmed.

In addition to Stack, Burl Cain, the warden of Angola who maintained a close relationship with James, and Bill Newman, attorney from the Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union, were present to conduct a panel for discussion about the death penalty following the movie.

The discussion came at a time when various groups such as the UMass Prisoner Support Group and the Western Mass. Prison Issues Group are working towards gaining support from voters to block a renewed Death Penalty bill proposed by Bill Weld and the Massachusetts Police Association.

Newman expressed clear opposition to the death penalty, a practice he finds makes the public "moralize death." In fighting the death penalty, Newman said "I think executions should be televised... if more people saw them, they'd stop them."

Stack and Cain expressed their difficulty in forming an opinion for or against the death penalty. Cain, who has worked at Angola for five years, said, "I don't make the law, I just carry it out, and that's not a cop–out. I'm a Christian man."

Stack, who graduated from UMass with a degree in education in 1979, also offered his opinion on the death penalty.

"I don't believe that the death penalty heals," Stack said.

Stack explained his goal in making the documentary was to be a catalyst to the public and make them more "proactive" in how they view the situation of the death penalty and the condition of prisons.

James had been charged with two murders — one of an African–American male in an attempted robbery and the other a Caucasian male in a hold–up.

When asked whether he thought James deserved the death penalty, Cain said that James had admitted to the murder of the African–American male but not the Caucasian male, which the movie had not highlighted.

"I'll be honest — if someone killed my son, I'd want to kill them too, but I can't say how I feel," Cain said.

Cain was further asked whether he believed in the "cured criminal," an idea he clearly supports. He has started literary programs and allows mothers to have physical contact with prisoners, to help achieve what he calls "moral rehabilitation" for prisoners. In addition, death row prisoners are allowed spiritual advisors if they want, or may even practice Satanic worship.

"With education, prisoners can recover and leave without ever returning," Cain said.

In questioning the racial make–up of prisoners, Cain was unsure of the racial breakdown of his prisoners but that the only colors in his prison were "blue and inmate." He felt that the issue of who is in prison is more about money than color.

Newman reinforced this by adding that the prison system doesn't ferret out the worst criminals — just the helpless and most vulnerable.

The evening proved to be an emotional experience for many with some, as Stack explained, "...trying to make sense" of it all.

Police seeking information on recent dormitory fires

Due to recent fires in Brown Residence Hall, the University of Massachusetts Police Department is asking for any information leading to the arrest of a perpetrator.

Early Friday morning, Feb. 21, a suspicious fire occurred in the 7th floor suite lounge, causing approximately $1,000 in smoke, furniture and paint damages.

Since the lounge fire, there have been at least two reports of an unknown individual lighting bulletin boards and materials posted on doors and walls on fire.

"We are investigating the lounge fire as well as the bulletin board fires. Anyone who has information should contact us. The information will remain confidential," said Chief of Police Jack Luippold.

In addition, a false alarm was pulled on the Feb. 22 and there have also been reports of residents throwing fire extinguishers out of windows.

Arson is a felony in Massachusetts and is punishable by up to 20 years in prison or a $10,000 fine.

If anyone has information about the fires call the UMPD at 545–0893.

— Leigh Faulkner

Rash of telephone thefts leaves authorities baffled

Over the past week, four Ericsson Display telephones have been stolen from various offices around campus, according to University of Massachusetts police.

On Feb 25, an office in Middlesex House reported to police that a display phone was stolen. When the officer responded to the call, he received a report of another display phone stolen on the previous Friday, Feb. 21, according to UMass Chief of Police Jack Luippold.

In addition, a display phone was stolen from the W.E.B. Du Bois Library on Feb. 25, and a phone used in the lobby at the UMass police station was stolen on Feb. 21 but not reported until Feb. 25.

Luippold said the incidents are still being investigated, and that he is not sure if they were related.

He added that the library phone disappeared at 4 p.m. and the Middlesex phone disappeared at 5 p.m. he said.

Each display phone is worth $500 and the non–display phones are worth $200.

"A couple of Caucasian males, clean shaven with no glasses and a backpacks and coats, were spotted around Middlesex around the time of the theft [on Feb. 25]," Luippold said.

Since the Ericsson phones are digital, they cannot be used off campus where phones are analog.

"The phones have limited use on campus," Luippold said. "I'm not sure how much use a display phone has on campus once it is removed from the jack it was programmed for."

If anyone has any information, call the police at 545–2134.

— Leigh Faulkner

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

I'll take the stairs

Many students are having to wait for the only operating elevator in the library while the others are out of service.

Soldier convicted of killing black couple

By Emery P. Dalesio
Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — A white former paratrooper faces the death penalty after being convicted yesterday in a racial killing that set off a nationwide outcry over extremists in the military. James N. Burmeister, 21, was found guilty of two counts of first–degree murder and conspiracy in the shootings of Jackie Burden and Michael James on Dec. 7, 1995.

Jurors were to hear more evidence Friday before recommending the death penalty or life in prison.

The victims' mothers split on whether Burmeister should be executed.

"He has the heart of cold steel and God help him," said Lillie G. James, who said she didn't wish to see Burmeister get the death penalty.

Mary Lou Burden, however, raised her arms in victory outside the courthouse and said she hoped the jury sentences her daughter's killer to death.

"I'm so happy... I can't talk. I'm so happy," she said. Civil rights advocates also applauded the verdict.

"Today a jury affirmed the right of people of every background, race and religion to walk the streets of America without fear," said Abraham H. Foxman, national director of the Anti–Defamation League.

Burmeister showed no emotion as the guilty verdicts were read, but his mother, Kathy, sobbed in the row of seats behind him. Prosecutors contended that Burmeister killed the couple on a dirt road near downtown Fayetteville for no other reason than to earn a spider web tattoo, a sign among racist skinheads at nearby Fort Bragg that the wearer had killed a black person.

"The animal who took the lives of these two people executed them in as cold–blooded a manner as is possible," prosecutor Ed Grannis told the jury during closing arguments Tuesday.

The slaying prompted an Army–wide investigation that found little evidence of extremist activity in the service.

However, the probe did turn up 22 soldiers at Fort Bragg, all white men and including Burmeister and the two other soldiers charged in the killings, with ties or sympathies toward extremist groups.

The three accused soldiers were kicked out of the Army, where they had been in the elite 82nd Airborne Division.

One, Malcolm Wright, is scheduled for trial next month on the same charges Burmeister faced.

The other, Randy Meadows, was the prosecutor's star witness against Burmeister. Meadows testified that while the three rode around and drank the night of the killings, Burmeister joked about earning a tattoo.

Meadows said Burmeister had a 9 mm pistol in his belt when he got out of the car with Wright. Meadows said he then heard gunshots.

Meadows pleaded guilty to lesser charges in exchange for his testimony.

New director to enhance the W.E.B. Du Bois Library

By Frank Campailla
Collegian Staff

Margo Crist, previously the assistant director of the University of Michigan library, has recently been appointed the new director of Library Services at the University of Massachusetts.

Crist hopes to make the W.E.B. Du Bois Library more user–friendly to make the students' academic experience easier and more fulfilling.

"We want to ensure that others feel comfortable in our library," Crist said. "We want to be part of the discovery process for the students."

Crist said the library staff is a major strength.

"The staff is recognized as user–friendly already and highly motivated," Crist said.

Crist believes the staff can help the library become more accessible to students and faculty.

"The staff needs to be available to go out of the building for class demonstrations and for visiting offices," Crist said. "If the staff is out on campus then that is another location of the library."

Print media is another asset of the library, according to Crist. It holds special collections of papers from Silvio Conte, the late U.S. Representative from Pittsfield, William Smith Clark, an early president of UMass (when it was the Massachusetts Agricultural College) and houses the W.E.B. Du Bois papers. The library also has materials of African– American , afid Latin–American studies which have been recognized outside of UMass.

Crist explained that papers, not just technology, are essential to students in manipulating the texts for better comprehension and learning.

"We want a real mix of papers in place with electronic resources that will complement each other," Crist said. "Technology is not a goal, it is a tool."

Crist noted that the physical science and engineering libraries, in Morrill and Lederle Graduate Building, respectively, are valuable to their departments, which expand the library system. Re–opening the music library in the Fine Arts Center is a priority, but according to Crist, the floor is not capable of holding the weight from the stacks of books. The possibilities of having it hold some presence in the music department are being explored.

Additions to the W.E.B. Du Bois Library will include 10 computer stations in the large public area on the main level. Users will have access to the World Wide Web and one station will have an electronic tutorial where students can take a virtual tour of the library. The Center for Computer Based Instructional Technology is setting up the program with hopes of it becoming a CD–Rom. In the future Crist would like the computer stations expanded throughout the library.

Assisting the needs of the disabled is also a priority for Crist. The library is in the process of installing a communication system where hearing impaired students can keyboard questions to staff and be read on screen.

"We have hearing impaired staff which reminds us of the hearing impaired needs," Crist said.

Crist, originally from Kansas, received her undergraduate degree in humanities from the University of Kansas. She received her masters degree in library science from the University of Michigan. She has spent 20 years working in various libraries in Massachusetts, including three years as assistant director of the Boston Public library.

Crist said she wants students from all learning styles to come to the library so they can benefit and interact with types of education which they are not used to.

"Our library is a place where information is highlighted and brought together for the campus," Crist said. "We are not just about information, but about knowledgeable resources."

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor: Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor: Lisa Chiu
Photo Technician: Chris Cesnek
Production Supervisor: Mark McGrath
Production Staff: Elizabeth Brown
Sandi Krauss

Students aid in filing tax returns

By Juliette Doro
Collegian Correspondent

University of Massachusetts students are providing free tax assistance to the Amherst community while gaining training and experience in dealing with the public.

According to accounting and information systems Professor Nelson E. Pion, the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program started nine years ago to serve people in the lower income brackets who can't afford to pay for help and might be losing advantages such as Earned Income Credit. The program is also geared to the large number of foreign students and residents in the area.

Representatives from the Internal Revenue Service and UMass faculty train the students, who must have completed Accounting 371, on the latest changes in the complex state and federal tax laws. Students earn one credit for the training.

Pion said that the training is good experience for students, especially because many are not familiar with the state tax system.

Senior accounting major John O'Rourke said volunteering his services was a valuable experience.

"It's a wonderful opportunity to use your class knowledge in a real life experience," O'Rourke said.

Limin Xu, a senior accounting major, said that the program is good experience for him because he only had practice doing his own taxes before volunteering.

"It gives me a more broad sense of taxation, and it's a pretty fun experience," said Xu.

The students assist taxpayers in filling out forms and give out advice.

Senior accounting major Mark Heichman said, "Before this [program] I took a couple of classes. I did my taxes at home... but since I've been here I've done everything that a real tax accountant would do."

Heichman said the most difficult part of the experience is asking personal questions, such as if people are married, or on welfare.

"We ask so many questions that I normally wouldn't ask," Heichman said.

David Desmarais, a junior accounting major, said people aren't always happy with the answers the students give them. He said the first couple he helped were angry that their returns were less than last year because they got married.

"I thought they were going to get divorced over the thing," Desmarais said.

Students will be at the Jones Library on Tuesday from 6–9 p.m. and Wednesday from 3–5 p.m., and the School of Management Library on Tuesday from 6–9 p.m. for non– resident aliens, up to April 15, which is the final day to file state and federal taxes.

Students assisting at the School of Management Library have been trained specifically by the Internal Revenue Service in filing for non–resident aliens.

Israel may leave large part of West Bank

By Samar Assad
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel will hand the Palestinians a significant slice of the West Bank next week if they acquiesce to the construction of a new Jewish neighborhood in disputed east Jerusalem, reports said yesterday.

Despite the tension caused by Israel's decision yesterday to build the 6,500-home Har Homa project, only about 400 Palestinians participated in a peaceful protest against it yesterday.

Carrying Palestinian flags and signs claiming the area is Palestinian, they marched from the West Bank town of Beit Sahour toward the hillside — called Jabal Abu Ghenaim in Arabic — where the project is to be built.

Organizers urged the demonstrators not to throw stones at Israeli soldiers and the march ended peacefully.

Israel's decision to go ahead with building Har Homa — a project conceived years ago — brought rebukes from the United States and the Arab world. Palestinian leaders said construction in east Jerusalem violates the Oslo peace accords.

"This is against Oslo, against the world, and international law," Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat said yesterday.

U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan expressed concern the project will impede negotiations on the city's final status, saying in a statement: "No objective is more important than for the parties to find mutually agreeable solutions to the sensitive issues involved, including Jerusalem."

Palestinians and Israeli doves warned of riots similar to those that killed 80 people after Israel opened a controversial tourist tunnel in Jerusalem in September.

But Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's timing appeared better calculated this time.

In September, peace talks were going nowhere, and the violence helped prod Netanyahu into speedier negotiations. Now, Netanyahu has begun fulfilling Israel's promises to the Palestinians — pulling out of most of the West Bank town of Hebron and committing to more pullouts that violence could scuttle.

Last month's Hebron agreement stipulates that Israel withdraw troops from West Bank rural areas in three stages, ending in mid-1998. Under the agreement, Israel determines the extent of each pullback; the first one is scheduled for March 7..

Hendsbee, 21, former UMass student

Todd Hendsbee, 21, a former University of Massachusetts student who lived in Amherst, died on Feb. 25 at UMass Worcester Medical Center from bacterial meningitis.

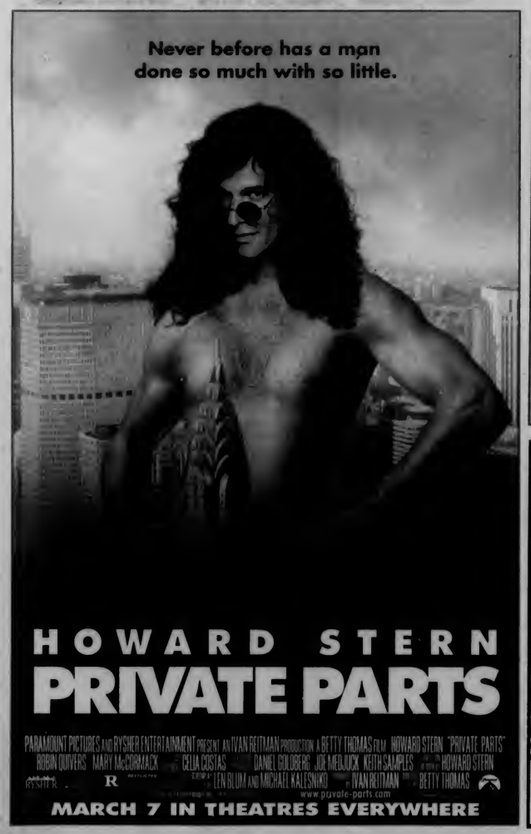
Hendsbee graduated from Maranacook High School, Readfield, Maine, in 1994. He entered UMass in Sept. 1994, and was a student at UMass until May 1996. He was a student in Continuing Education in the fall of 1996, withdrawing in November.

Hendsbee worked at the Mullins Center and at University Productions and Concerts. In high school, he was active in basketball, track and cross country. He visited Russia in 1992 with Project Harmony.

Hendsbee leaves his mother, Constance (Bresnick) Hendsbee, his father, Robert W. Hendsbee of Concord, N.H. and his brothers Mark, of Concord, and Robert, of Litchfield, Maine.

Calling hours were held last night and a private funeral will be held today. Arrangements are through the Bennett Funeral Home, Concord. Burial will be in the spring in Litchfield, Maine. Memorial contributions should be made to a charity of one's choice.

Notice



The memorial service for Anthony S. Nsiegbunam, a University of Massachusetts graduate student who died Feb. 22, has been changed from the previously reported time of 6 p.m. Saturday, March 1 to 2 p.m. on March 1. The service will be held at the First Baptist Church on North Pleasant Street in Amherst.

The event is being organized by the local Nigerian community. Members of Nsiegbunam's family and colleagues from the University will be in attendance.

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT/COLLEGIAN

I'd rather study
Aaron Barrell, a junior, deals with balancing his check book.

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES PRESENTS
"Something Every Friday"

COMEDIAN GARY EWING FREE!

February 28, 1997 8:00 pm
Campus Center Auditorium

Gary is sure to keep you laughing with his high energy, honest performance. His refreshing humor is drawn from day to day life, and does not rely on mean-spirited jokes. His T.V. credits include HBO's Two Drink Minimum, VH1's Fools For Love, Stand-Up Spotlight and Comedy Tonite, and MTV's Half Hour Comedy Hour.
For more information check out our website:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calender.htm.....

The movie "Get On The Bus" will be shown immediately after the performance.

This program is made possible by a Grant from the Auxiliary Services Office, The Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs and the Daily Collegian

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
(888) 211-OCMP
Present
Dining Out
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates call 545-3500
COMING SOON

Prunhuber addresses state welfare reform

By Michelle Pobiegla
Collegian Correspondent

On Feb. 25, Patti Prunhuber, who is a staff attorney of Western Massachusetts legal services, led a discussion on welfare reform. Her audience comprised a concerned group, who were either directly affected by these reforms or who were working in organizations dealing directly with these issues everyday.

Although the focus of the meeting was to discuss welfare reform and education opportunities, Prunhuber started out with a general outline of the changes being made in welfare reform under Chapter 5, which greatly affect families, immigrants, the elderly, and single mothers.

Under the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Act of 1996, many of the decisions formerly made by the federal government are now going to be made at state–level.

Prunhuber said, "the action is no longer controlled in Washington D.C., but now Boston."

She pointed out that although under the new block grant Massachusetts will receive $114 million, it could lead to disastrous effects if the state doesn't use the money wisely.

Under the new state laws individuals lose their right to protection in the federal courts if they are not receiving the money that they are entitled to, which basically leaves these individuals with no protection, according to Prunhuber.

She said, this could, however, be "a period of enormous opportunity" if the state uses their power and money the way they should.

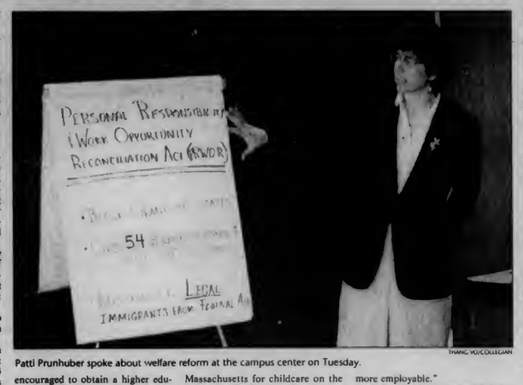
Prunhuber then switched to her main topic of welfare reform and education. Her purpose was to assess how the new laws under Chapter 5 were affecting people's access to a higher education and what role the university was or should be playing in this process. Prunhuber said it seems that they "left this one alone" when considering welfare reform and its repercussions.

Welfare reform recipients are not encouraged to obtain a higher education. While it is acceptable for them to get a high school diploma, general education diploma, train in vocational programs, or attend a two year college, anything after that is discouraged. Under the new laws "the only people who can have their educational plans for four year colleges approved are those who began their college education on or before Jan. 1, 1995 and meet other certain requirements," said Prunhuber.

Consequently, if you have decided to enter a four year school knowing that the DTA (Department of Transitional Assistance) doesn't approve, you lose child care and transportation assistance automatically. This proves to be a huge obstacle for women with children. Receiving childcare at the university is a barrier, due to limited slots, spacing and funding. This shouldn't be an issue as this money dilemma could have been solved, but Weld rejected a $20 million offer to Massachusetts for childcare on the basis that it had an extra educational attachment to the bill and he didn't want to spend any more money on education, according to Prunhuber.

Prunhuber explained that in addition to these complexities, there is an added strain that welfare recipient must complete a 20 hour work week, whether in paid work, community service, or a conjunction of the two. Prunhuber points out that there is a greater emphasis for women to complete this 20 hour work week obligation than to pursue their chances for a higher education. The women even get a cut in their TAFDC grant if they fail to complete this obligation.

Prunhuber stated that the message women are receiving is, "any job is a good job, if you are hired you are a success." She also insists that the legislature is "not looking at the big picture in terms of how this is going to help people become more employable."



She said, "higher education has a significant effect upon women's earning capacity."

Suggestions by the audience were more financial aid, access to work study which would ease the burden of the 20 hour work week for mothers, and added daycare.

Kelly Facto, who is associated with the Common Ground of Massachusetts, expressed a need for a study documenting how the new welfare reform laws were impacting the student population.

Prunhuber said that "there is a dramatic reduction in determined women who can get here and stay."

While studies have been done at other colleges such as Greenfield Community College, none have been done at UMass and many people are slipping through the cracks, according to Prunhuber. There was also a statement to involve all unions on campus to be on the side of working women.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Patti Prunhuber spoke about welfare reform at the campus center on Tuesday.

French far right chooses culture as its battlefield

By Jocelyn Noveck
Associated Press

MARIGNANE, France — The citizens of Marignane always have been proud of their town library. A "temple of culture," the town's history book calls it.

But lately, visitors to the periodicals section wanting to read Liberation, a major newspaper with a leftist attitude, have had to go across the street to the newspaper kiosk.

Marignane is National Front territory.

The leader of the far-right party, Jean-Marie Le Pen, has made headlines worldwide for his war on immigration, which he blames for high unemployment and crime.

But here in southern France, where the Front controls four city halls, people are talking about a different kind of war. A quieter one, but one many say is equally dangerous.

It is being waged in libraries, theaters and festivals, and it is creating a climate of anger, vengeance and sometimes fear.

"We have a choice: censor ourselves, or lose our jobs," said a librarian in one of the cities, who refused to be further identified for fear of being fired.

Marignane, a town of 32,000 near Marseille, was one of three captured by the Front in June 1995 municipal elections, along with Orange to the north and Toulon to the south. This month, nearby Vitrolles joined them.

A book by a National Front supporter with a preface by Le Pen was on display recently in Marignane's airy, spacious library. In periodicals, the plastic slot for Liberation, one of France's five most widely read papers, was empty. "Subscription interrupted on Sept. 4, 1996," a label said. The same was written under slots for two other popular leftist publications. Three extreme-right publications had been added.

In a reader's request log, someone had asked when the newspapers would return. "That is not up to us," said the handwritten response, directing the reader to the mayor's office.

Marignane is not alone. In Orange, the same leftist publications have been removed from the library, and all four professional librarians have resigned in protest, according to Marie-Pascale Bonnal, regional president of the Association of French Librarians. And in both towns, librarians have been advised not to order non-European children's books, especially ones from Africa or Asia, Bonnal said.

None of the librarians who spoke to the Associated Press would give their names. Under French law, municipal employees are banned from discussing their jobs.

Marignane mayoral aide Josette Qunz confirmed that her office had removed some leftist publications and added some rightist ones, saying the policy would continue "in the spirit of giving representation to the national right."

The Front's strategy of targeting cultural institutions is particularly effective in France because so many of them, even if private, are heavily subsidized by local governments.

Some of the most visible disputes recently have been in Toulon, a port city of 170,000 that is the largest controlled by the Front. About 2,000 people protested when the director and founder of the famous Chateauvallon Theater was fired after angering the mayor by refusing to accept municipal subsidies.

Mayor Jean-Marie Le Chevallier said in an interview that the director mismanaged the theater's money, and that a new director could present a less "elitist" program "that would appeal to more of our citizens."

Also in Toulon, many were angered in November when Le Chevallier overruled a literary award at the city's book fair to Jewish writer Marek Halter, and instead chose actress Brigitte Bardot, whose husband is a member of the National Front. Le Chevallier says he wanted to honor a writer from the region. Bardot declined the award.

In Toulon's main library, no subscriptions have been canceled. But rightist publications have been added, and librarians, afraid for their jobs, say they have not ordered books they think might offend City Hall.

Senators want Lake's full FBI file before nomination comes to vote

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott and several colleagues insisted yesterday that the White House release the full FBI report on CIA director-designate Anthony Lake.

Lott said through spokeswoman Susan Irby that senators should be able to review the full FBI report, not just the summary submitted by the White House. Other Senate Republicans said they won't let Lake's nomination to head the CIA come to a vote until the White House yields.

"This is not negotiable," said Sen. Phil Gramm (R-Texas). Gramm, who chairs an ad hoc group of Senate conservatives, circulated among colleagues a letter addressed to Lott urging no action on the Lake nomination until the White House makes the full FBI report available. At least 10 had signed it by yesterday afternoon.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said, "We'll work with the senator to address those concerns." He also said the White House found it "very troubling" that the nomination appeared to be mired by politics.

An administration official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the FBI material made available to senators is the standard information package normally provided in nominations.

The focus on the FBI report appears to represent the latest Republican effort to block a nomination that several senators say has the votes to win confirmation. Two Republicans on the intelligence committee, Sens. John Chafee of Rhode Island and Dick Lugar of Indiana, now say they plan to vote for Lake barring any last-minute revelations.

Sen. Richard Shelby (R-Ala.) chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said in an interview yesterday he is considering yet another delay in Lake's confirmation hearing, now set for March 11, if the White House balks on releasing the full FBI file.

Gramm and other Senate Republicans recalled that in the confirmation battle over the late Sen. John Tower for defense secretary under President Bush, lawmakers had access to the entire FBI file. Gramm also saw irony in the Clinton administration's concern about revealing an FBI file of one of its own.

"I do find it peculiar that the administration is so concerned about this file when they had a political operative look at 700 files without supervision," Gramm said in an interview. He was referring to the controversy over a White House aide gaining unauthorized access to hundreds of FBI reports, including some on prominent Republicans and Bush administration officials.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNIK/COLLEGIAN

Fire in the sky...
A full moon lights up the night over Southwest.

http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
(413) 545-3217
TOC will be open early on Saturday March 1 at 9am
Munchie Specials Mon - Fri 4 - 7 PM
UMASS vs. Temple at 2pm
COME SEE UMASS BREAK THE TEMPLE ZONE
Free Popcorn Draft Beer Drink Specials & Micro Brews
UMass basketball
11th Floor Campus Center
Mon.-Fri. 4pm - 12:30am
Sat. 5pm - 12:30am

BIRTHDAYS
Place a Classified for a Birthday for 1/2 Price.
Call at 545-3500
or Visit Us at Our Newstand on the Concourse or in Our Basement Office

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief | Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager | Josh Sylvester Production Manager | Craig I. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager | Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadareva Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stumm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quint Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the 7¢ Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Immortality lost

Andrew Trodden

Late Monday afternoon I received a call from University Health Services informing me that I had been exposed to a co-worker that had been diagnosed with meningitis. I was told to go to Health Services and pick up the necessary preventative medication, which I did almost immediately. Less than 12 hours later my co-worker had died.

I knew Todd Hendsbee, which is only to say that I worked with him briefly so I knew his name and face. However it is still hard to believe that he is gone. I think of how easily it could have been my best friend or even me, and that scares the hell out of me.

How easy it is for us to forget that we are not immortal. that we are not the controllers of this planet? There is and probably will always be something more powerful than us that we cannot control. Disease is just one of those uncontrollables.

One day you're here and the next you could be gone. Nothing made that more clear to me than Todd's death. I saw him at work last Saturday and he seemed fine, yet just a couple days later he was dead.

I wondered to myself if I was to go that quickly and suddenly, would I be happy with the way I left this life? Would my last day on Earth leave a good picture in the minds of those I had left behind? Had I been as good a person as I could have been? Could I have been nicer to people?

The sad part is that even if the answer is no to any of those questions, there wouldn't be much you could do to change them, because your time will have run out. There would be no way of going back and fixing all of your regrets when you only have hours to live.

The trick therefore is to truly live each day as if it is your last. Not in the sense that you know that it is your last day, more like it could be your last day. Which, more or less, everyday could be. So when you go to sleep every night ask yourself, if you were to never wake up, would you wish that you could have done something, anything, different on that last day?

Sometimes we may feel as though nothing could ever kill us, that we're a good person so God will protect us. However, the fact still remains that we are mortals with weaknesses and the devil does still exist in today's world, and we cannot prevent all of the evils that the devil causes.

The fact of the matter remains that Todd is dead and that he was somebody's friend, somebody's son and now he's gone. I didn't really know him so I will not pretend to know what a great guy he was. I'm sure there are many people who do know that about him, but nonetheless, as the saying goes, what does it really matter what you say about someone after they're gone?

After hearing about Todd's death I became rather acutely aware of my own mortality. If someone my age could be taken down so quickly by this disease, what's to say that I couldn't be next? Obviously nothing can be done to change what has happened, all we can do is learn from it and try to teach ourselves a little bit more about the fragility of life, so that we can focus ourselves a little more on being good people, in hopes that if that last day does come sooner than expected, we can at least feel comfortable about the mark we left here on earth.

It's troubling to know that it takes a tragic event to open our eyes to the darker, unpleasant side of reality. But I suppose it may be necessary every once in a while to keep the rest of us on our toes. Maybe in some weird way that was Todd's final deed on earth, to teach us all that you truly must sometimes lose first if you want to win.

Andrew Trodden is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Surviving the Holocaust

Martin F. Jones

The Jewish Holocaust stands without rival as the darkest and most devastating hour in all the history of the world. From 1939 to 1945, over six million Jewish men, women and children were systematically forced into ghettos across Europe, and then rounded up and transported to concentration camps where they were exterminated. The full scope of this atrocity is staggering to the imagination.

The painfully vivid film Schindler's List recently revealed to us the horrifying depths of evil towards which men have succumbed throughout history.

Steven Spielberg, perhaps the greatest filmmaker of all time, won an Academy Award for Schindler's List as he undertook the enormous challenge of bringing to life a riveting depiction of the tremendous suffering and brutality which characterized the Holocaust. His new Survivors of the Shoah Visual History Project is currently documenting hundreds of interviews by the actual Holocaust survivors who were liberated from the Nazi concentration camps by Allied and Soviet forces during the final months of World War II.

The network television premier of Schindler's List was broadcast recently with full sponsorship by Ford Motor Company. It has been noted consequently that this generous sponsorship of the broadcast may have been intended to redeem the widely-known anti-Semitism of the company founder, the late Henry Ford. The broadcast also came at a time when new national discussions about the Holocaust have been sparked by recent revelations about Swiss banks having in their possession billions of dollars in assets seized from Jews during the Holocaust, as well as the personal discovery by U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright that she was born to Jewish parents who converted to Christianity in the shadow of the Holocaust, with her parents having been among the millions who died in the Nazi death camps of Eastern Europe.

Today, over 50 years after the Shoah (Hebrew for Holocaust), we must examine the state of our world and ask of ourselves: Why? Why can't we all live together peacefully on this beautiful, bountiful world which God has created for us? What is it that could cause such an evil regime as the Nazi Party to rise to power in a modern industrialized state such as Germany? Does Satan truly rule this earth of ours? Let us hope not.

Tonight, millions of Jews around the world will begin to observe the Shabbat (Sabbath), an obligatory practice of Judaism that goes back for thousands of years. Those of us who are not Jewish should take a moment, perhaps, to remember the courage and resilience of a people who have faced centuries of hatred and abuse because of their supreme commitment and devotion to their faith. Such remembrance can serve as a reminder to all of how we must never yield to the forces of evil which are constantly on the march around the world.

Watching Schindler's List taught me the lesson of the great redemption that is gained from unearned suffering. Yes, I too am a survivor of the Holocaust. Here, I am not referring specifically to the Nazi concentration camps of World War II, but rather to a pervasive philosophy that continues to plague humanity. It is the philosophy of Social Darwinism that reduces people to rungs on the fictitious ladder of natural human selection. It is the world view that has justified the enslavement of my ancestors, who were shipped as human cargo in the holds of dark, diseased, and death-ridden slave ships. It is the colonial settlement of European peoples that led to the near-extinction of pre- Columbian indigenous civilization in the Americas. It is the violent ethnic warfare that is responsible for the ethnic cleansing of Muslims in Bosnia, and the genocidal massacre of Hutus in Rwanda.

This is the true breadth and scope of the Holocaust; the repeated rise and practice of the systematic rape, torture, and murder of our own people on earth; across the Developing World, in the ghettos, and right here in our own homes and communities.

Never forget the Holocaust, for today it continues, robbing the human family of so many precious lives with each waking moment. Many people around the world awaken to each new day, hoping that it won't be their last. Millions languish in prisons, their future stolen from them. Others face death and torture as their homelands fall under the guns of occupying armies. Biological, chemical and nuclear weapons continue to be developed, and for the sole purpose of impacting the greatest amount of pain, death and destruction possible upon the targeted group of their choice.

Despite this bleak mosaic of endless calamity, there is still a glimmer of hope. Thanks to the marvelous work of director Steven Spielberg, we may soon see the world begin to unlearn its tragic affliction of racial and religious hatred which has cost far too many lives. One day, the dream of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. could actually become a reality given the acceptance of this great eternal truth: that we are all brothers and sisters in the family of God, and all forms of hatred, whether they be fashioned over religious, racial, ethnic, or nationalist distinctions, must be abolished forever, for these are the components of the evil forces which are destroying our world.

Perhaps one day there will emerge a generation of righteous people who will dedicate their lives to begin the process of rebuilding anew from the ashes of a world destroyed by war, poverty and injustice. This planet, our home, was created for all of us to share and enjoy together and harmoniously for all of eternity. We, the people of Earth are a blessed tribe indeed, for God has given us a great gift called Life, the most precious gift in the universe, and it is this gift unto which we are bound to honor, protect, and preserve.

Towards this end we must base our very existence.

Martin F. Jones is Collegian columnist.

The pro-student manifesto

Will Serwetman

The actions that transpired on the Senate floor Wednesday night should offend those of you with any faith left in the Student Government Association.

On Monday, the Administrative Affairs Committee met to recommend appointees to the senate. I've been on this committee since I was elected in September and I take the entailed duties seriously. There has been an abundance of vacant seats this semester — as long as the seats remain open, students living in those areas have no voice. We made recommendations to fill 10 vacant seats that night, seven of which were unopposed. This confirmation is essentially a rubber-stamping. The campus is too apathetic to keep its senate seats full, so anyone with the energy to apply for a seat is welcome.

The situation was more complicated in the case of the three contested seats. The first conflict was between two friends for a single seat in Grayson. They were equally qualified and the committee vote was close. I personally voted for the more decisive and energetic seeming of the two, since I think that the only attribute that really matters in a student leader is energy and force of will. I knew neither of the candidates personally, so I made my decision based on the way they responded to our questions. It wasn't easy. We each made our own decisions and in the end the candidate that I'd voted for won.

The other contest involved six candidates competing for two seats in Southwest-at-large. We interviewed each of the six candidates and made our decisions in the same manner as before, although the outcome was more controversial. I had an advantage going into this decision, however, because I knew three of the candidates personally. One of them, Brendan Mahan, is a good friend of mine that I encouraged to join senate because I respected his competence, energy and strong personal sense of responsibility. Two of the others were likewise encouraged to apply for the positions by their friend Jen Casasanto (my fellow senator from IA). While they are both active and qualified students, I had personal knowledge of both of them that led me to doubt that they would make good senators. I brought up these issues while the committee deliberated after the interviews. As far as I'm concerned, I did the responsible and ethical thing by condemning Sen. Casasanto's picks and endorsing my friend Brendan along with another candidate who had impressed me. I suggested to my colleagues that they vote for Brendan as well, but I in no way coerced anyone. When it came to a vote, the two that I had voted for again won the recommendation of the committee after a tie was broken.

Sen. Casasanto later angrily confronted me in my room and informed me that our friendship was over because I had taken no action last week when another friend of mine treated her in a grossly disrespectful manner in an enraged outburst. I'll plead guilty on that charge — I should have spoken to him immediately and supported her more, but I never held any ill will towards her. She concluded her tirade saying that she was "declaring war" on me and my friends in senate and accused me of not representing my constituents. She left without allowing me to defend my decisions and reconcile our differences. From the ominous note she left on, and her subsequent refusals to talk with me, I anticipated that there would be trouble on the senate floor Wednesday night.

But by God, I never foresaw anything as irresponsible and misguided as the events of that night.

I don't know for sure who was responsible for the decisions made that night, but the consequences were odious. Rather than the usual presentation of all appointments on a single block for easy confirmation (as is customary) each appointment was made its own motion to be voted on separately. When we began the process it was also insisted that each vote be taken in a time wasting roll call format as well! This wasted about five minutes of time per candidate. The first four candidates were voted in with a single dissenting vote apiece. The rest were blocked from entering senate for political reasons that left thousands of students underrepresented.

The reason that 20 senators opposed the entrance of the six candidates, especially those four who were unanimously recommended by the committee is rather convoluted. The short version is that the whole process was a conspiracy. There was no debate against the confirmation of any of the blocked appointees until after I spoke on the floor in their defense. I believe the majority of the senate simply decided in advance to block the appointments and rigged the agenda so each of the appointees could be identified and targeted by Sen. Casasanto and the block of conspirators followed her vote. Every single senator (save one) that planned to vote down the six appointees felt neither a need to explain why that person should not be a senator, nor a need to discuss those factors on the senate floor. Needless to say, I was suspicious and frustrated.

I asked the senators in opposition to the appointments what their problem was. The initial response to my query seemed to be that they distrusted the judgments made by the Administrative Affairs committee due to the aforementioned personal factors which had come into play. This is a questionable line of reasoning. I don't feel that I did anything unethical in my decision-making process and I stand behind my recommendations. The clear proof that this was not the conspirator's real reason lies in the fact that they allowed three unopposed appointees into the senate while denying entrance to the other four. They all went through the same supposedly corrupt process! The only senator who actually believed that the committee did an inadequate job making its decisions was Sen. Seth Avakian, who voted against every single appointee for that reason. While I'm disappointed by Seth's lack of faith in my judgment, he receives my full respect for staying out of the back room political deals. He alone had legitimate reasons for opposing the six. The rest were lying. How can they allow four appointees in after claiming that the whole process was unfair?

This is not a question of ethics. No one on the committee did anything wrong. The real reason people voted as they did was that they were told that the six who came before them were there to "stack" the senate in support of the Greek area during the budget process. There is a sliver of truth to the accusation and it needs to be addressed. One Greek Area senator, Dan Backer, was reportedly quoted as saying that he intended to stack the senate "to get money for the Greeks" and the rejected appointees were supposedly in on this scheme, even though not a single one of them is a member of a fraternity or sorority. I still don't understand how the senate jumped to this conclusion and why they made no attempt to confront the appointees individually.

The fact is that there is a large group of senators that meet an hour before Senate each week to discuss issues of mutual concern. I'm proud to be a member of this group, and we call ourselves the Pro-Student Caucus. I won't deny that we recruited several people who we felt would contribute to the senate, and each senator that we encouraged to join was blocked this week. All of the candidates before the Senate were distinguished active students worthy of more respect than they received, and I hope that they get a chance to prove that.

Over a third of the senate are members of the Pro-Student Caucus. We share a vision of a non-political senate working for the students, not special interest groups that organize to dominate the SGA. I can't speak for every member of the caucus, but I would like to see these specific changes: 1. A smaller, more streamlined, and non-politically driven Senate that serves the student body as a whole. 2. An end to the de-facto social segregation that characterizes race relations at the university. 3. Stronger area governments that can organize worthwhile events that bring together all of each areas' residents. 4. Fair representation of Greek concerns. 5. Better food on campus by any means necessary. If any of these goals misrepresent the wishes of my constituents, let me know! I believe the only secret plot afoot is Sen. Casasanto's, who feels no need to explain to six worthy individuals why she organized this attack upon them and wasted the Senate's time. Given the fact that her real reason is that her friends weren't given the recommendations, I don't blame her for being deceptive.

The real question is, were we "stacking" the senate with those who share our views? I suppose it depends on how you define "stacking." Without question, speaker Tirrell "stacked" the Ways and Means Committee with members of powerful special interest groups in exchange for political support. It's equally clear that president Caston "stacked" the Student Judiciary to protect the Senate seats of the ALANA caucus.

It's true that we sought senators to fill the vacant seats and we picked them from people we know and have worked with. Unlike these previous cases we never recruited senators that we didn't feel would be active and competent. We never opposed the appointments of any candidates because they disagreed with us politically. We never forced anyone to vote any particular way, and we never cut any shady political deals to win power and influence. I feel comfortable with the decisions I've made and I am prepared to defend them. I've consistently represented my constituents and I've been active on their behalf. Any conscientious senator that voted with Sen. Casasanto should rethink why they are in Senate and who they are here to serve. This obstructionist attack was entirely without cause and was done for purely political reasons.

Senators acted deceitfully and without the interests of their constituents in mind when they singled out six senators who they were wrongly told would give money to the Greek area and vote as instructed by the caucus. The only good thing I can say about this whole mess is that it has left a line in the sand between those who want to keep the status quo and those who think we can do better. A line between those who have no problem with manipulating the budget and those who want to put the S back in SGA. The senate vote last night was all politics and no service. The students need to reassert themselves. If you'd like to help, you're welcome to an empty seat. The Pro-Student Caucus is open to anyone genuinely interested. We'd like to incorporate students of all races and both sexes who share our vision.

I swear upon my honor that nothing I've written here is intended to manipulate facts, hide truth, or deceive you, the students reading this, in any way. It's the truth as I see it.

Will Serwetman is dn SGA Senator representing John Adams.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Arts & Living

Friday, February 28, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

James Carter brings his hybrid jazz style to the Iron Horse this Sunday Night.

COURTESY: SCOTT SCHAFER

Weekend jazz shows at the Horse

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

Two young jazzmen will make their marks at the Iron Horse this weekend. On Friday and Sunday nights, respectively, the Valley will be treated to the jazz treasures of pianist Marcus Roberts' Trio and saxophonist James Carter's Quartet.

Roberts, hailing from Jacksonville, Fla., was a strong part of Wynton Marsalis' band in the late 1980s and early 1990s, until Roberts decided to take it solo. However, in his time with Marsalis, he appeared on such landmark Marsalis albums as Marsalis Standard Time, Live At Blues Alley, and the soundtrack for the film Tune In Tomorrow (which starred Keanu Reeves and Peter Falk). His first album, Alone With Three Giants, in 1991, was a tribute to Duke Ellington, Thelonious Monk and Jelly Roll Morton.

Roberts, now 32 years old, has been blind since the age of four, and that may have only added to the thrill of the challenge of becoming one of the current jazz scene's hottest and most highly able pianists available. He started his formal training at the age of 12 and trained classically for the next nine years, until moving on to college at Florida State University, where he became a music major.

In 1989, Roberts won the first prize of $10,000 at the First Annual Thelonious Monk International Jazz Competition, a definite plus to his credits, even though he had already been playing with one of his only living heroes, Marsalis, for four years.

Roberts' most recent releases, Time and Circumstance and Portraits of Blue, are two albums that feature his mastery of melodies and his ability to bring these melodies into a classical magnificence. Unfortunately, no lineup has been announced yet, but who knows, there may be some pleasant surprises.

On Conversin' With The Elders, James Carter, 27, gets to hang out with many of his modern blowing heroes also, but not as much in a spiritual sense as in a physical. Hamiett Bluiett, Harry "Sweets" Edison, Anthony Braxton, among others, all recorded this album with Carter, who is being called "the most exciting young saxophonist to arrive on the scene in the last 25 years," and they mixed in hip-hop rhythms, free-jazz atonal excursions and straight-ahead be- bop for one of 1996's most interesting jazz albums.

Having grown up in a musical family in which his brother Kevin, a guitarist, was part of George Clinton's P-Funk Mob in the '70s, and his mother sang R&B locally near his Motown home. Kevin recommended young James, who had just taken up the sax at 11 and was gifted with perfect pitch, to jazz instructor Donald Washington. Washington taught him well enough, that by the time he hit high school, he was adept at almost any reed instrument and flute.

While still in high school in the early '80s, Carter also served a brief stint in Marsalis' band, after that trumpeter's brother, Branford, had gone on to start his own highly successful, but brief, career. In 1988, Carter made a bee-line from Detroit to Manhattan to begin his career as a "young lion" sax player.

One of his first jobs was as sax-man to free-jazz pioneer Lester Bowie's trumpet-led band. He worked with Bowie (who also shows up on Conversin' With The Elders), and then did many other jobs with various New York ensembles before settling down in 1993 with his first album, JC On The Set, followed by 1995's Jurassic Classics and The Real Quietstorm, all of which brought him the attention he needed so that Conversin' would be a much-awaited album. Carter is not a man to disappoint: he didn't with Conversin', nor should he on Sunday night. He will be teamed up with his regular working band of Jaribu Shahid on bass, Tani Tabbal on drums and Craig Naborn on piano.

The Marcus Roberts Trio will perform at the Iron Horse tonight at 7 p.m. The James Carter Quartet will perform at the Iron Horse on Sunday at 7 and 10 p.m. Call the club at 584-0610 for more details.

Bowker hosts Turkish Folk songs

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

For those looking to broaden their horizons this weekend, Bowker Auditorium will host a concert of "Folk Songs and Dance Music of Turkey and the Middle East."

Tomorrow night's presentation is part of the Asian Dance and Music Program at the University of Massachusetts and will begin at 8 p.m. Before the concert, Prof. Walter Denny will present a slide and talk show at 7:30 p.m. titled "Musical Presentations in Islamic Art."

The concert will be divided into two parts. The first part will feature folk songs and dance music from Turkey and the Middle East performed by Anatolia and Friends.

Anatolia is a Western Massachusetts–based group of musicians who are devoted to the music of the Middle East. Their performances have won them praise from scholars and critics and many of their shows have been sold out. Members of Anatolia include Edward Hines ('ud, divan sazi, Kaval, clarinet, zurna and vocals), Taner Oktan (saz, percussion and vocals) and Michel Moushabeck (percussion).

Among those joining Anatolia for the performance will be Ahmet Luleci, a native of Turkey and an accomplished folk dance teacher, choreographer, performer and musician as well as Ghada Chamem, a native of Lebanon, where she received vocal training in both near Eastern and Western classical music. Najib Shaheen, an 'ud player, and Mohammad Mesaoud and Bruce Rawan round out the Friends.

Since its inception, Anatolia has graced many a concert hall, presenting concerts not only in the Five College area but also at The Iron Horse and the Boston International Festival.

Anatolia also contributed the soundtrack to a BBC/WGBH documentary titled "The People's Century." The documentary will air in 1998.

The first part of the concert will also feature folk dances from different regions of Turkey by the Turkish folk dance troupe "Kemenje."

Simon Shaheen, considered to be one of the finest cultural ambassadors in the Arab world, will be the focus of the second part of the concert.

The New York Daily News praised Shaheen, calling his interpretations "some of the most sublime Arabic music to be heard this side of the Dead Sea."

Shaheen will perform classical and contemporary Middle Eastern music, including solo improvisations and ensemble works of his own compositions. He will also include pieces from 19th and 20th century Turkish and Arab composers.

Shaheen is considered a virtuoso on both the 'ud and the violin. The 'ud (pronounced ood) is a pear–shaped plucked string instrument and is the ancestor of the European lute. The 'ud has been the central focus of Arabic music since at least the seventh century.

Shaheen boasts impressive credentials when it comes to music. He grew up with western classical music, American jazz and Arabic classical music. He began studying the 'ud at the age of four, with his father, renowned Palestinian composer and music teacher, Hikmat Shaheen.

Shaheen has performed all over the world, with ensembles and as a soloist. In addition, he composes, teaches and records to promote Arabic art.

Tickets for the evening are $20, $15 and $5. Please call the Fine Arts Center Box Office for tickets or information at 545-2511 or (800) 999-UMAS. Bowker Auditorium is located in Stockbridge Hall. Parking available in Lots 45 and 65, or for $1 when you remit your ticket stubs in the Campus Center Parking Garage directly opposite the Auditorium.

Simon Shaheen will be featured at a Turkish culture celebration this weekend at Bowker Auditorium.

COURTESY: ASIAN DANCE AND MUSIC PROGRAM

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
Amherst SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT
MT. FARMS 4 MT. ELIOT'S MALL 584-3153 ROUTE 9 HADLEY
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Vegas Vacation PG
Fools Rush In PG-13
Donnie Brasco* R
Rose wood* R
HAMPSHIRE 6 NORTHAMPTON MALL ROUTE 9 HADLEY 586-7550
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Dante's Peak PG-13
That Darn Cat PG
The Empire Strikes Back* PG
The Beautician and the Beast PG
Star Wars PG
Absolute Power R
Booty Call* R

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
2nd week
Daily at 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.
AND ON
OVER 75 TEN BEST LISTS!
DIRECTORS GUILD OF AMERICA NOMINEE
BEST DIRECTOR - SCOTT HICKS
SCREEN ACTORS GUILD NOMINEES
Shine
ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema House 584 8435

The Merchant of Venice
BO'S STYLE!
Shakespeare's classic tale of revenge & redemption, prejudice & love gets a spin into the 1980s where new money talks greed is rewarded and shoulder pads threaten to take flight!
Band Theater, UMass
Feb. 28, March 1 & 4-8, 8 p.m.
+ 2 p.m. matinees, March 1 & 8
Tickets: $8.50, $6; Call 545-2511
A UMass Dept. of Theater Production

B-Side Records
Grand Opening Sat. March 1st!
We accept all major credit cards
VISA MasterCard
228 Main Street - Across from the Academy of Music
413·586·0556
We are the place for used CD's in Downtown Northampton

Weekly Drink Specials
Vodka and OJ 2.00 16oz.
Jim Beam &Coke 2.00 16oz.
Rolling Rock 12oz. Bottles 1.50
Red Dog 16oz. Drafts 1.50
Friday Bud Night 10-12 Lots of Prizes
1/2 Price Appetizers and Nachos 3-5 and7-11 Friday & Sat
Weekend Dancing Fri-Sat
the food pub
THE PUB
15 East Pleasant St.

Lois sings at Amherst College

By Bradley Skought
Collegian Staff

Long before the famous marriage, the media frenzy, and the movie star comeback there was another Courtney Love. This Courtney Love had nothing to do with Mrs. Kurt Cobain, however. This Courtney Love was a band — a band that was built around the stripped down songs written and beautifully sung by Lois Maffeo.

Courtney Love broke up after only a handful of seven-inch singles and compilation tracks and Maffeo set off on a solo career as Lois (a moniker that refers as much to the band as it does Ms. Maffeo herself).

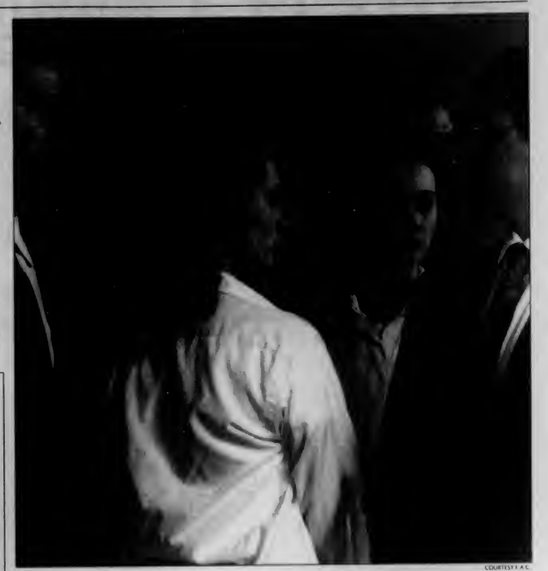
Lois' first two albums, Butterfly Kiss and Strumpet, were similar to the Courtney Love material — sparse arrangements, often only drums and guitar, with Maffeo's acoustic guitar and voice front and center. They're DIY punk-folk albums — pre-cursors to both the independent political/musical stance of the Riot Grrrls and other self- made acoustic wielding songwriters like Ani Difranco.

It wasn't until her third album, however, that Lois really came into her own artistically. Backed by ex-Tiger Trap drummer Heather Dunn, Maffeo brought a more mature and poetic style to Bet the Sky — an album that perfectly captures a mixture of K records' DIY/punk independence and a more subtle, sophisticated pop sensibility.

Since then Maffeo has toured relentlessly, released numerous singles, EPs, a fantastic new full length, Infinity Plus, and generally established herself as a songwriter and performer that matters — an artist of integrity and quality who consistently challenges and delivers.

Infinity Plus, and its companion EP Snapshot Radio, both find Maffeo expanding her musical vocabulary with the help of friends and admiring artists like Fugazi and Elliot Smith. She fleshes out the arrangements with the occasional electric guitar, organ, or bass part. Instead of watering down Maffeo's intense artistic vision, however, these new arrangements only add to the songs — providing a whole new palette of sound and energy to back up the usual stellar songwriting and singing. One recent project with Dub Narcotic Sound System even finds Maffeo playing the role of soul diva — wrapping her silken voice around the bouncy basement funk.

When Lois comes to Amherst College tonight, she brings with her this drive to create and explore. No matter what musicians make up the Lois band tonight, fans can expect nothing less than a collection of brilliant songs delivered with passion and skill. That the concert is free can only add to the excitement of witnessing one of the best musicians around revelling in the spirit of discovery and music.



Lois performs tonight at Marsh Hall on the Amherst College campus at 9 p.m. Admission is free.

COURTESY EMILY WILSON

"Maceo Parker"

Maceo Parker blows his horn as part of a new collection of photographs from UMass student Emily Wilson. The collection can be viewed at the Coolidge Park Cafe at the Hotel Northampton in Northampton.

COURTESY R.K.O.

Shakespeare's "The Merchant Of Venice" will be running at the Rand Theatre starting tonight.

"Merchant" to glitter at the Rand

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

"My Daughter... My Ducats..." One of Shakespeare's most fascinating comedies is being performed by the University of Massachusetts Department of Theatre. "The Merchant of Venice" combines themes of revenge, greed, honor, betrayal and prejudice, with a love story thrown in for good measure.

This newest production is directed by M.F.A. candidate Sam Rush, who has updated Shakespeare's play to a mid-1980s atmosphere. Shylock's Venice is one reminiscent of Wall Street, money talks and "greed is good." To counter, Portia's idyllic Belmont is compared to the Hamptons, the power-elite saunter through perfumed gardens of old money.

Loren Mochari has designed a set fitting for Rush's take on the play — a mirrored wall reminiscent of a Wall Street skyscraper, tightening the comparisons to the '80s without taking away from the play.

"I think directors, along with other theater artists, have an obligation to look at a play and ask how it relates to us. We're using the '80s as a springboard into a fantastical world. 'Merchant' is partly a play about the emergence of capitalism. What better source to use than the greedy '80s?" Rush said.

The Merchant of Venice will be performed tonight and tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in the Rand Theater. The play will also be performed Tuesday, March 4, through Saturday, March 8, also at 8 p.m. Two matinees will also be performed on Saturday, March 1, and Saturday, March 8, at 2 p.m. Tickets are $3.50 for students and $6 for the general public. Reservations are recommended and can be made by calling (413) 545-2511.

Sam Black Church in Noho

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

Throughout the '90s, the Boston hardcore scene for the most part, has been considered dead. While Boston had a thriving scene in the '80s due to the success of bands like DYS, SSD, Slapshot, Eye for an Eye, and Wrecking Crew, by 1989 all, except for Slapshot, had broken up. The worst part being that no real bands have stepped into the slot.

Slapshot is still around of course, but have only played one show in America in the last couple of years. However the one band that has kept Boston's torch burning has been Sam Black Church.

Sam Black Church started out in the late '80s and brought a crossover between metal and hardcore that had became famous during that time period. Sam Black Church is most often compared to the Bad Brains and the likeness has remained. With the help of Taang records Sam Black Church soon stepped into the national eye.

Sam Black Church's best album was the critically acclaimed Let In Life, which managed to combine their raging live sound with excellent production. The album also helped gain Sam Black Church some of the recognition they deserved.

However, it is not within the studio that Sam Black Church has made a name for themselves, but because of their live shows. Touring with bands like the Mighty Mighty Bosstones, Slapshot, Murphy's Law, and other national acts helped bring them into the public eye. It is the hard work that they have put in that gets recognized during their live shows when hundreds of kids come to dance, dive, and sing along to the metal mayhem provided by Sam Black Church.

Fury of V from New Jersey will be opening. Fury of V have made a name for themselves in the New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut scenes. While they definitely lean to the more metal side of the crossover spectrum, their hard riffs combined with breakdown after breakdown should keep the crowd moving.

Local boys Onslaught will be opening as well. Onslaught are one of the few local hardcore bands who have made a name for themselves. They have a demo out on Psyke records and fans of 25 ta Life or Bulldoze will be grooving to these guys in no time.

Sam Black Church, Fury of V, and Onslaught will be playing Pearl Street on Sunday night. It's $7 in advance and $8 at the door. Doors open at 7 p.m.

Writers Needed at Arts the Desk!

And put on your dancing shoes, BABY!

University of Colorado at Boulder
USE SUMMER TO ACCELERATE

YOUR ACADEMIC PROGRESS

Summer session on the Boulder campus is something special. With over 500 campus courses to choose from, it's a relaxed, comfortable learning environment. Classes are smaller. And when you're not in class, you can soak up Boulder's mellow charm. Or explore Boulder's backyard, a high country playground that includes some of the country's most rugged and spectacular terrain.

Summer is a great time to get a jump on the next phase of your educational goals.

FOR EXAMPLE:

VISITING STUDENTS. Take advantage of CU resources to complete or enrich your own degree program.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS. Take a college course for experience, to enhance your college application, or to see if CU is the right school for you.

TEACHERS. Earn recertification credits and tap into everything the University has to offer.

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT. Increase your knowledge base and build skills to enhance your capabilities.

ENRICHMENT. Give yourself the pleasure of an academic challenge at CU this summer.

FOR MORE INFORMATION.
Call 303-492-5146 or 800-331-2801 to request a Summer Session catalog. Or visit our web site www.colorado.edu/conted/Summer

UMass' Best!
1997
Win Cool Prizes
Just By Filling Out A Ballot
Watch For Ballots Coming In Next Week's Collegian

A GREAT BET!

NOT YOUR USUAL DOG & PONY SHOW

LIVE SIMULCASTS!
Thoroughbreds from: Aqueduct, Suffolk Downs, Gulfstream & Santa Anita • Harness races from: Foxboro, Meadowlands & Pompano • Greyhounds from: Plainfield and now Raynham!

2-FOR-1
Dinner Entrees Every Friday Night In Hinsdale's Dining Room!

STUDENT'S DAY EVERY FRIDAY:
FREE Hinsdale Program to college students with a valid ID.

LIVE GREYHOUNDS • SIMULCAST RACING

HINSDALE GREYHOUND PARK
SIMULCAST BETTING 7 DAYS A WEEK!
FREE PARKING • FREE ADMISSION
For Post Times & Info: 1-800-NH-TRACK
Route 119 • Hinsdale, NH
www.trackinfo.com

UNH is women's gym's next hurdle

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team is prepared to take on New Hampshire for the second time this season, with a meet tomorrow evening at 7 p.m. at New Hampshire.

The Minutewomen beat then-No. 13 New Hampshire the last time around, 190.225-189.350, in a tri-meet at Penn State. Since that meet, the Wildcats have dropped significantly in rank, while the Minutewomen have consistently improved, both in rank and scores.

New Hampshire is a big rival for the Minutewomen, and gymnastics is one of its premier programs.

"There has always been a big rivalry, and they have really promoted this meet. They are expecting over 6,000 fans, and there have been signs all over town," UMass coach Dave Kuzara said. "They want nothing more than to beat us."

Tomorrow's meet comes after a four meet home stretch — a stretch in which the Minutewomen beat seven out of eight of their competitors, losing only to Michigan. The Minutewomen are currently 9-2 overall.

Last Friday's meet against Minnesota, Vermont and MIT was the final home meet for the Minutewomen. While they have had a lot of energetic support from the fans, Kuzara is positive about their final two regular season meets away — against New Hampshire and then West Virginia.

After that, the Minutewomen head to Washington, D.C. for the Atlantic 10 Championships and Ohio for the NCAA Regionals.

"We are looking forward to it. This home stretch went really well, but we are happy that we are going on the road," Kuzara said. "It's important that we get a good away score.

"The highest away score we have so far is a 190.225 [against New Hampshire], but we think we'll get over a 194 this time."

Kuzara feels the UNH meet will be a good chance for the Minutewomen to prepare for the NCAA Regionals.

"This meet will be really good practice for Regionals, and each meet is a stepping stone to Regionals," Kuzara said.

Since their last meet against New Hampshire, the Minutewomen have been consistently improving, both as a team and individually. At every meet since then, new school records have been set, and many of the gymnasts have continually achieved career-best performances.

Led by the two seniors, Lianne Laing, who holds the school record in the vault, and Tara Swartz, who holds the all-around and uneven bars records, the team looks stronger and more confident than in their early season meets.

While the Minutewomen have a good chance at winning this weekend, Kuzara doesn't discredit the talent of New Hampshire.

"They have a good chance to beat us. They haven't scored very high, but they are very competitive," Kuzara said. "We can't control what they're going to do, but we feel like we'll come out on top."

In terms of the two team's rivalry, Kuzara said that a win against New Hampshire is important, but the Minutewomen really are looking past this meet to Regionals.

"New Hampshire is really a bitter rival, but I think we've grown past it. We have bigger fish to fry," Kuzara said. "But they're a good team, we have a lot of respect for them."

Men's gym looks for New England win number nine

By Matthew Perrault
Collegian Staff

As far as streaks go, there is an impressive one going on here that doesn't always get press.

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team has won eight straight New England Championships and this Saturday, they will be going for their ninth in Springfield at 1 p.m.

UMass is currently ranked No. 11 and is 8-0, undefeated for the first time, going into this year's championship.

Coming off their latest victories over Syracuse and Springfield, the Minutemen will be looking for senior leadership to help them keep their streak alive.

Seniors Gabe Columbus, Chris Funk, Lorenzo Macaluso and Ruslan Shupak will be competing in possibly their last meet for the University and will looked upon to come up big.

UMass is hot right now as well. Shupak is coming off a record tying performance on rings against Syracuse, scoring a 9.95 and Colombus took first on three events against Springfield. Funk scored a career best against Syracuse with a 9.5 on parallel bars also.

Others worth watching are sophomore Phil Lieberman who has been in the habit of breaking school records this season and freshmen Jeff LaValle. LaValle, an Olympic hopeful who has studied under new UMass assistant and Olympic champion Tim Daggett, will be competing in his first championship and should be the ace in the hole if he performs to the best of his ability.

■ hoops

continued from page 10

3-pointers made and most threes in a game), is still focused on the game at hand.

"Once the ceremony is over, then senior night is done. Then it's just another game," Travieso said. "After that, it's time to play basketball."

The talent and leadership which the seniors bring to the UMass program will also be missed by their teammates.

"[Saturday] is going to be special," Clarke reflected. "Because we went through a lot of adversity this year and we did come together and gel as a team. I'm going to miss Edgar and Carmelo, but once they move on we're still going to try to keep in contact because they have been a big part of my life and they taught me a lot."

As for Weeks, because of a change in Proposition 48 legislation, athletes admitted to school under the rule who are on schedule to graduate this spring have the option of playing an extra year for a total of four years. When the NCAA announced the rule change earlier in the season, Weeks said that he would wait until the end of the post season to decide whether or not he will use his fourth year of eligibility.

"I'll also miss Tyrone, if he decides to move on," Clarke said. "He's one of my best friends here, me and him are very tight. If he decides to move on, it will be a big loss. But I'd wish him the best of luck because I know he can proceed on. All three of them can."

WE LIKE TO WRITE!
What would be better t
riting for Sports at t

■ women's hoops

continued from page 10

points of the game for UMass, which went on a 16-2 run in the first nine minutes to take a 16-4 lead. Duquesne would not die, though. The Dukes began to assert a more fast- paced style mid-way through the first half, and cut the lead to four, 22-18, by the 6:26 mark.

But Van Huisen, who excelled in transition all night, kept pace, knocking down six of seven field goals before halftime. Duquesne kept chipping away, and cut the lead to three, 34-31, at the half courtesy of two jumpers by Hlede in the last minute.

The Dukes would stay within six points for the first 12 minutes of the second half, but UMass turned it on late and buried them. The Minutewomen turned a 55-47 lead into a 66-49 margin by the 3:05 mark. Duquesne was forced to put UMass on the line from there, and the Minutewomen would sink six straight free throws in the last 1:45 to ice it.

"This was a good win for us," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "We did a great job on defense. All year long we've taken pride in our defense. When it comes around, we usually win by a pretty good amount. This is the way you want to end your career at home, with a win."

Carroll, who was named All A-10 first team this week, and local product Beth Kuzmeski made the last home appearance of their illustrious careers last night. Both Carroll and Northampton native Kuzmeski left the court for the last time last night to ovations from the 942 fans in attendance.

"It's the best feeling to win," Carroll said. "You feel like you've built yourself a home for the past four years, and it's nice to see the fans recognize it."

The Minutewomen have a tough road ahead of them. George Washington crushed Temple 78-35 last night, and hosts both the semi-finals and championship game. The Colonials finished 16-0 in conference play this year, only the third time in A-10 history that feat has been accomplished.

GW has not lost at the Charles E. Smith Center in its last 33 games, a homecourt winning streak that currently ranks third in America. In addition, George Washington beat the Minutewomen 83-61 in the Mullins Center on Feb. 2, and features A-10 Player of the Year Tajama Abraham. "They're a good team," O'Brien said. "They have a solid inside game and a solid outside game. We're gonna have to rely on our speed and quickness. But we can't worry about about them so much. We have to take care of ourselves."

JOANNA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

UMass' Crystal Carroll tries to handle the ball as the Lady Dukes try to take it away. Carroll finished with 21 points.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 10

It would be hardly a UMass women's basketball game without a solid effort from Crystal Carroll. UMass' own first team All-Conference player threw in a mere 21 points and grabbed a respectable 11 boards in her last game in the Mullins Center. Any other kind of farewell from Carroll was unexpected, considering her 17-point, 6-rebound average.

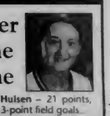
This performance from the Minutewomen's leader was necessary to show George Washington what may be on the horizon if it takes this UMass team lightly in the tournament semifinals.

The last weapon the Minutewomen used liberally in the win was their bench. Yolanda Rayside stepped in for the foul-plagued Kara Tudman and contributed 11 points and six rebounds in her 21 minutes.

Minutewomen coach Joanie O'Brien has been pleased with her team's performance as of late, but stressed that against Dayton it was not playing its best basketball. Last night, the Minutewomen were singing a new tune.

"We just put everything together tonight," senior guard Sabriya Mitchell (six points, six rebounds, and four assists) said. "We played La Salle, we played our best defense ever. Then we went down to Duquesne and acted like we didn't know what defense was. We owed them this, this is our home court."

The Minutewomen will need all of their weapons against No. 19 George Washington; last night they proved that those weapons will be sharp.



Massachusetts 75, Duquesne 60

At The William D. Mullins Center

Duquesne (12-16)
Hlede 7-14 7-9 22, O'Neill 3-5 4-4 10, Thomas 1-5 4-4 6, Wilkins 0-2 3-4 3, Hannan 1-2 0-0 2, Spurlock 2-2 0-0 4, Stekovic 0-0 0-0 0, Naccarato 3-5 1-1 9, Eberhardt 0-2 0-0 0, Howell 1-4 2-2 4, Tate 0-1 0-0 0, Cuppett 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 18-42 21-24 60.

Massachusetts (18-9)
Carroll 6-11 9-9 21, MacFarland 1-6 0-1 2, Tudman 0-6 1-2 1, Mitchell 0-4 6-9 6, Van Huisen 8-12 3-7 21, Kuzmeski 1-2 4-4 7, Madajova 0-0 0-0 0, Rayside 4-6 3-7 11, Garber 0-0 0-0 0, Bradley 3-3 0-1 6. Totals 23-50 26-40 75.

Player of the Game

Kelly Van Hulsen – 21 points, 4 assists, 3 3-point field goals.

Highlights...

Kelly Van Huisen scored a career high 21 points... Crystal Carroll added 21 points and 11 rebounds... UMass pulled away late in the second half with an 11-2 run... Van Huisen scored 15 points in the first half, including the first seven UMass points...Korie Hlede led Duquesne with 22 points.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

Bellefuille. Another freshman has had good success for the Black Bears, goalie Alfie Michaud has stepped to the front with a 11-2 record in 1997, with a 2.43 GAA and .843 save percentage.

Combined with the strong senior class of Jason Mansoff, Reg Cardinal, Dan Shermerhorn and Trevor Roenick (113 total points), along with the historically harsh home-ice advantage of Alfond Arena, UMass will have a uphill battle when they travel north on I-95 to Orono.

Defense, defense, defense.

Forget about it winning championships, it just wins a team games. No matter how successful senior forwards Rob Bonneau (15-30-45) and Warren Norris (18-23-41) have been this season, team defense will have to be the secret to any UMass success in the next few weeks.

In 10 out of the 20 losses the team has suffered this season, goalies Brian Regan and Rich Moriarty have had to make over 30 saves. Also, in 17 out of those same 20 losses, UMass' opponents have outshot the Minutemen.

Simple logic states that if your adversary takes more shots on goal, they will score more goals.

It will be key for Regan to continue his good play, like in last weekend's BC game, but it will be more of an inherent need for his UMass backline mates to clamp down.

JOANNA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Minuteman Gerry Cahill and Maine's Dan Shermerhorn battle it out in one of the teams' earlier games.

MONTCLAIR STATE UNIVERSITY

1997 SUMMER SESSIONS

3-weeks	May 27-June 12 & August 11-28
6-weeks	June 30-August 7
8-weeks	June 16-August 7
Saturdays	June 14-August 16

Plus alternate scheduled courses throughout the summer.

More than 300 undergraduate and more than 60 graduate course sections.

Daytime and evening: business, communications, computer science, education, fine and performing arts, human services, humanities, languages, life sciences, mathematics, natural sciences, physical sciences, social sciences

Plus:
• undergraduate and graduate credit institutes, studios, workshops
• environmental education at the NJ School of Conservation, Stokes State Forest
• global education/study abrdad in China; Ecuador, Peru, Galapagos Islands; Israel; Italy; Spain; and Turkey
• NJ Marine Sciences Consortium courses at Sandy Hook and the Nature Center of Cape May.

For complete schedule and details on how you may

REGISTER BY TELEPHONE APRIL 12-MAY 5
Call or e-mail, or U.S. mail coupon today for the '97 Summer Sessions catalog, which will be available late March. There will be additional opportunities to register by telephone MAY 19-AUGUST 10. Registration must be completed prior to the beginning date of the course.

Tuition and Fees*
1997 Summer Sessions tuition and fees will be established by the University Board of Trustees late in the spring semester. For your guidance, the following tuition and fees were applicable for the 1996 Summer Sessions: $101 per credit undergraduate for NJ resident; $146 per credit undergraduate for non-resident of NJ; $187.50 per credit graduate for NJ resident; $233.50 per credit graduate for non-resident of NJ.
*Tuition and fees are subject to change at any time by action of the MSU Board of Trustees

Check us out: http://www.montclair.edu/Pages/SummerSessions/Summer.html
Phone: 201-655-4352 e-mail: summer@saturn.montclair.edu
Montclair State University, Summer Sessions, Upper Montclair, NJ 07043

Please forward the '97 Summer Sessions catalog (available late March):
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____ (UMA)
Montclair State University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action institution.

Klub Kai
Thursday, Friday, Saturday Nights 9:30pm - 1:00am
DRINK SPECIALS
Fuzzy Navel
Pink Lemonade
Sex on the Beach
12oz $2
DRAFT & BEER SPECIALS
Bud or Bud Light 12 oz. 99¢
Red Dog & Ice House 16 oz. bds $2.00
$2 combo platter
Klub Kai would like to thank all the students for a wonderful grand opening
THURSDAY NIGHT International NIGHT Everyone Welcome!
FRIDAY NIGHT Ladies NIGHT No Cover Charge for the Ladies!
SATURDAY NIGHT College HOUSE PARTY All Students are Welcome!
DRESS TO IMPRESS -POSITIVE I.D. AND PROPER ATTIRE REQUIRED
21+ FRIENDLY•CLEAN•PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
MT FARMS MALL•HADLEY•586-2774

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Sisters of Sigma Delta Tau would like to Welcome and Congratulate our newest pledges: Adina, Aisling, Andrea, Arbell, Astar, Clarissa, Colleen, Gretchen, Jacklyn, Julie, Kelly, Kelly, Laurie, Mireya, Ruthie, Sabrina, Sibyl, Tara and Zoe.

Here's your chance to make UMass feel a little smaller. Come check out ISU. We may be a sorority, but not all sororities are the same! RUSH IOTA GAMMA UPSILON 7:00pm, 3/3, 3/4, 3/5. For more information, call Sara, 549-6461

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Jeep Wrangler black, nice tires,rims. Very reliable. Runs great. $3000 or B/O. Call 256-1080

1988 Ford Escort 5-speed, A/C, 119K, runs well. $1900 or B/O. 533-8413

1986 Honda Civic white, 5-speed, 4-door, excellent condition. $2000 or B/O. 253-3748

1989 DAYTONA TURBO 5-speed, A/C, detach face stereo, T-tops, 88K miles. Asking $3000 or B/O. 549-2643

1987 Ford Escort GT Burgundy, Hatchback, 5-speed, A/C, F/M, sunroof, 104K miles, $2125 or B/O. 256-1238

1997 Plymouth Sundance Excellent body, runs very well. $1800 or B/O. Call 549-4435

EMPLOYMENT

Summer on CAPE COD! The Wychmere Harbor Beach Club and Thompson's Clam Bar is hosting a Job Fair for all summer employment opportunities March 13, 14, 15, 20, 21, 22. Call Amy at (508)432-1000 for details.

Bilingual Tutors/Translators Part-Time paid assistance to student speaking Japanese, Khmer, Vietnamese. Contact: D. Zacarian or C. Capelli (413)549-3890 Amherst Public Schools, An Equal Opportunity Affirmative Action Employer

MARKET RESEARCH
ABT Associate's Inc's, a leading in Social Science Research Firm, Telephone Center located in Amherst is currently seeking telephone interviewers. The Phone Center conducts telephone interviews in the areas of Health and Well-Being, Financial Services, i.e. Customer Satisfaction and Product Satisfaction, Market Trends, Forecasting, etc. The job entails reading from a script and entering responses into a computer system. Computer skills and pleasant phone manner is a MUST. ABT offers flexible schedules and congenial working environment in a corporate setting. Candidates must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Starting salary $5.75/hour with potential to earn up to $7.50/hour. Come gain ground Floor Marketing and Marketing Research experience. Interested candidates please call (413)587-1607. An equal opportunity employer.

WEBMASTER NEEDED For New College Business Html Experience Required. 549-9819

EMPLOYMENT

RESTAURANT
Looking for dedicated people Part-Time/Full-Time for fast food restaurant. Great hours. Must be available year round. 569-1060 New England Job Placement Restaurant Staffing Services.

Summer Camp Positions in upstate New York. Camp Hilltop is seeking caring counselors with skills in swimming, water and land sports, A&C, horses, dance, music, mountain biking, riflery, archery, computers, high/low ropes. Competitive salaries. (800)782-5319

SAT Prep Course Teacher $15/hour. Needed in all parts of Massachusetts. Undergraduate degree preferred. Excellent Verbal and Math scores required. Call (800)808-7737. Please leave your name and telephone number.

FUN! FRIENDLY! Co-ed Summer Camp in the Berkshires seeks new staff. Welcoming and supportive environment. Positions include: General Bunk Counselors, Heads and Instructore for Swimming, Sailing, Water-skiing, Baseball/Softball, Golf, Gymnastics, Lacrosse, Hockey, Archery, Soccer, Music, Pottery, Tennis, Horseback and more. Day Off accessibility to Boston, New York, Montreal. Call Today! Camp Schodeck (800)851-1164, E-Mail Schodack@aol.com

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Wayne(sister half of brother/sister camp), Northeast Pennsylvania 6/23-8/20/97) Have the most memorable summer of your life! Coaches, teachers, students. Pre-requisite: Must love children, enjoy living and working in a group situation. On-Campus Interviews March 11th. Call (800)279-3019

SUMMER JOBS
for the Environment
$2500-$4000/Summer
Campaign for clean air and water
Protect endangered species
Make A Difference
Offices in 33 states
Campaign To Save The Environment
1-800-75-EARTH

Camp Canadensis, Pocono Mtns, Pennsylvania. Excellent residential co-ed summer camp. Caring counselors to teach Video, Photography, Newspaper, Yearbook, Drama, Music and more! Great salaries. 6/21/97- 8/18/97. Call (800)572-8728 for an application

Camp Blue Ridge A Co-ed overnight camp 2 hours north of Atlanta, is looking for enthusiastic counselors. We are hiring lifeguards and WSI, as well as specialists in all sports, water skiing, rappelling, hiking, arts and crafts, riflery and archery. For info. contact Debra at 865-8463

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT- How would you like to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, and get paid? Call (206)971-3554 ext. C50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014.

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)278-4948 ext. C50017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Pelham 2 bedroom Mobile Home Gas, heat. No pets. First, last and security. $500/month. 253-5413

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses. Falmouth area. (508)477-8000

FOR SALE

King Size Bed with headboard. Good condition, $80. Weight machine- great condition, $80. (410)625-7467

Rossignol STS Skis 185 cm. Marker Bindings, Solomon Boots Size 10 1/2. $125 or best offer. Call 253-8609.

Mac Classics Style Writers carrying cases, Works/Word. Call Sarah (413)585-6208

KLH 3-Way 350W SPKRS DBL 12" Woofers, $250/Pr. Call 253-8520

INSTRUCTION

BARTEND with University Bartending 50% Student Discount. On-Campus classes starting soon! Call (800)U-Can-Mix for info.

Boxing Three private 1/2 hour lessons. $69.95 Call (413)732-8817 in Amherst Tues. and Thurs. eve.

LOST

KEYS with Blockbuster, Club Dave's, Coke and Bud keychains. VERY IMPORTANT. Please call Gret at 546-5867

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Call $35. (800)668-4783

PERSONALS

Loopy Theatre guy seeks fun, game playing people to meet at the liquid center of campus.

Deborah,
Here is another clue I am a sophomore. LML
PHI Love,
Your PHI Friend

MANDI C. 3rd clue- a stick of dougblement gum. Guess who?- LML Your PHI Friend

SERVICES

PREP-COURSES
GRE/GMAT
30 hours, $295
American Academy
1-800-808-PREP
(Please leave your name and number)

SERVICES

HIGH-SPEED Internet Comes To The Five College Area! Unlimited local access, no busy signals, free Web Page with account. Call TIAC at (800)644-8732. Student rates available.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. F50016. (We are a research and publishing company)

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '97! CANCUN, BAHAMAS ,JAMAICA AND FLORIDA. 7-meal plan only $19! GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH. Call TODAY! (800)700-0790 www.vagabond-tours.com

This Is The Deal! $294 Panama City, Bus and Hotel. Cancun Only $400. Air and Hotel. Call 256-8724

Party Spring Weekends Price includes Round Trip Motor Coach, 3 days, 2 nights, Luxury Motel Downtown, 1 dinner, 1 breakfast. Departs every weekend- March, April and Memorial Day. Call Select Tours, Hanover, MA. (617)871-0490

Jamaica-Spring Break from $599. Go with whom you can trust. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

TRAVEL

Fort Lauderdale area, Ft. March 8-15, studio, $250/week. (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Europe $156, Caribb./Mexico $189 R/T Worldwide Destinations Airhitch Tm. (800)326-2009 airhitch@intercom.com or www.isi-com.fr/airhitch

WANTED

Two Tickets UMass/Temple- Will pay $$$ 549-8672

CLASSIFIEDS!

Trying to get up the courage to ask out that person you have a secret crush on?

Try a personal; they work!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false information or misrepresentation is subject to actions under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, FEB. 28

Exhibition — "Seasons" by Peter Fladl, a black and white photography exhibition will open tonight at 5 p.m. in the Student Union Visual and Performance Arts Space. Anneliese Messner and Christina Gagnon, graduate students in vocal performance, will give a Lieder Recital accompanied by Shing-Yi Huang at the piano. The exhibit runs until March 28.
Film, discussion — Skin Deep, a video about confronting and transforming racial tensions on campuses in the United States, with a facilitated discussion afterwards, will be held at 5:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803. Great food will be served. Sponsored by the Baha'i Club and Race Talks.
Meeting — The Hindu Students Organization is meeting in the Campus Center, room 903, at 5:30 p.m. Call 548-9097 for more info.
Religious — A Kesher "Service" experience will be held at the Hillel House at 6 p.m.

SATURDAY, MARCH 1

Mission Improvable— The UMass Comedy Troupe will perform an improv show in the Campus Center Basement at 8 p.m. Admission is free. All are welcome from the Five College area.

SUNDAY, MARCH 2

Workshop — The Amherst Children's Services and the UMass Commuter Services and Housing Research Center are presenting a series of workshops for families with children in elementary school. Today's workshop is "Money Matters: Strategies for living on what you make" from 12:30-5 p.m. in the Bangs Community Center in Amherst. The workshops include brunch for all participants, presentations for parents, as well as a program for children including theater and storytelling. Call 545-2309 to register.

NOTICES

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon-2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at 413-323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.
Band wanted — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently seeking a four piece band for the spring production of Fame. The band must include: keyboard, guitar, bass, and drums. Great publicity possibilities. For more information call Heather at 549-3681 or Justin @ 546-0460.
Coffee Shop — Student Valley Productions is holding a Coffee Shop in April. They are looking for any talent coming from the Five College area in music, songs, poetry, skits, comedy, etc. For more information, call Daley at 253- 6514.
Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.
Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www- ureg.admin.umass.edu.
SGA nominations — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the nominations for the positions of President and Student Trustee, along with positions for local Area Governments are now being held. The nomination forms are available in the SGA office. These nominations close on Feb. 27 by midnight, all forms must be turned in by this date, otherwise the candidates are not eligible to run for office.
Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.
Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.
Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.
Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

PYs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent info including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Do you have an event you want to let the campus know about?

Try a For Your Information..

It's easy; just bring down your information (typed please) to the Collegian office at 113 Campus Center basement and we'll take care of the rest.

For Your Information

The best source to find out everything that's going on in the Five-College area.

Take a look and try something new today.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Don't Waste Your Time Standing in Line! Behind Antonio's

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
Save Phil!
Dance Party tonight @ 10!

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1997 — C - Campus

FRIDAY EVENING	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	6	(13)	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ	Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	McLaughlin	Connection	Fourth Estate	First Rights	World at War	"British Victory"
WFSB	3	(3)	News ⓒ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Dave's World	Raymond	JAG "Washington Holiday" ⓒ	JAG "The Game of Go" ⓒ	News ⓒ		Late Show ⓒ
WBZ	4	(4)	News	CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Dave's World	Raymond	JAG "Washington Holiday" ⓒ	JAG "The Game of Go" ⓒ	News			Late Show ⓒ
WCVB	5	(5)	News ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Mass-Lottery	Family Matters	Boy-World	Wall Disney World's 25th	20/20 ⓒ	News ⓒ		Nightline ⓒ
WLVI	56		Full House ⓒ	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★★½ "When a Man Loves a Woman" (1994, Drama) Andy Garcia.			News			Jenny Jones (In Stereo) ⓒ
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Soap Opera Awards (Live In Stereo) ⓒ			Crisis Center "The Center" ⓒ	News		Tonight Show
WTXX	20		Fresh Prince	Martin ⓒ	Judge Judy ⓒ	Real TV ⓒ	★★★ Duck Upon A Time" (1996, Drama)			News	(LAPD)	Real TV ⓒ
WVIT	30	(8)	News	NBC News	Tonight	Hard Copy ⓒ	Soap Opera Awards (Live In Stereo) ⓒ			Crisis Center "The Center" ⓒ	News		Tonight Show
WTIC	61	(11)	Simpsons ⓒ	Roseanne ⓒ	Home Imp.	Seinfeld ⓒ	Sliders "The Exodus" ⓒ		Millennium "Blood Relatives" ⓒ	News	Crisis Center "The Center" ⓒ		Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	(22)	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Soap Opera Awards (Live In Stereo) ⓒ			News			Tonight Show
WGBY	57	(41)	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ	Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Frug. Gourmet	Talking With David Frost ⓒ			Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	(28)	News ⓒ	ABC News	Seinfeld ⓒ	Ent. Tonight	Family Matters	Boy-World	Wall Disney World's 25th	20/20 ⓒ	News ⓒ		Nightline ⓒ
WSBK	38		Beverly Hills, 90210 ⓒ		Seinfeld ⓒ	Mad Abo. You	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks ⓒ	Goode Beh.	News	Martin ⓒ	Mad Abo. You	Real TV ⓒ
WTBS	49		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★★★★ "Goldfinger" (1964, Adventure) Sean Connery, Gert Frobe.					★★½ "A View to a Kill" (1985) Roger Moore.
A&E	69		Quincy "The Hero Syndrome"		Equalizer		Biography: Arnold			★★★ "Rio Bravo" (1959, Western) John Wayne, Dean Martin.
CNN	46	(32)	World View ⓒ		Moneyline ⓒ	Crossfire ⓒ	Prime News ⓒ	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ⓒ		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline ⓒ
COM	63	(30)	Tick ⓒ	Dream On	Working Stiffs	Working Stiffs	★★½ "Necronomicon Dreamcrest" (1994, Comedy) Ryan O'Neal.				1 Night Stand	Allen Reviews	Working Stiffs	Working Stiffs
DISC	48		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings (R)		Wild Discovery: Hyenas		Invention ⓒ	Beyond 2000	Wings (R)		Wild Discovery: Hyenas
ESPN	43		Up Close	Sportscenter		NFL's Greatest	Sportsnight	Outside the Lines		Sportscenter	Nightline	Town Meeting	Sportscenter ⓒ
LIFE	59		Supermarket	Debt	Dish	Pandora	Wire	3 Blind Dates	★★ "Thet Magic Moment" (1989, Drama) Penny Cox.				Dish (R)	Pandora (R)
MTV	45		Ren & Stimpy	Week In Rock	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Tickets First: U2		Music Videos (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Sports (R)	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	44		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug ⓒ	Rugrats ⓒ	Kablam!	Happy Days	Love Lucy ⓒ	Munsters	M.T. Moors	Rhoda	Taxi ⓒ	Odd Couple ⓒ
SCIFI	60		Twilight Zone	Darkside	She-Wolf of London		★★ "Wizzwork II: Lost in Time" (1992, Horror) Zach Galligan.			Friday the 13th: The Series			She-Wolf of London
TLC	62	(28)	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Quest (R)	What a World	Air Bafflo II--Cold War	What Happened?			Quest (R)	What a World
TNT	42		In the Heat of the Night ⓒ		In the Heat of the Night ⓒ		NBA Basketball: Seattle SuperSonics at Miami Heat. (Live) ⓒ					Inside-NBA	★★ "Cyber-Tracker" (1994)
USA	47		Renegade (R) (In Stereo) ⓒ		Highlander: The Series ⓒ		★★ "Shattered Image" (1994, Drama) Bo Derek. (In Stereo) ⓒ			La Femme Nikita "Treason" ⓒ			★ "Sled and the Single Alien"
HBO	50		(5:30) ★★ "Moment Created" (1981, Drama) Faye Dunaway. PG				★★½ "Computer Old Men" (1995, Comedy) Jack Lemmon. PG-13			Comedy Hour, George Carlin.		Comedy Fest	Dennis Miller
MAX	51		★★½ "A Wall in the Clouds" (1995) Kelley Reeves. PG-13 ⓒ				★★ "Screamers" (1995, Science Fiction) Peter Weller. R					★★½ "Days of Thunder" (1990, Drama) Tom Cruise. PG-13 ⓒ
SHOW	52		(5:45) ★★½ "Born Yesterday" (1993) PG ⓒ		On the Set		★★★ "Moonlight and Valentino" (1995) Elizabeth Perkins. R ⓒ			Outer Limits		Outer Limits "Quality of Mercy"		"Raising Cain"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabbie By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Social Norm By Mr. K

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University® By Frank Cho

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Loodoo By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
For an unforgettable weekend, crack an old friend out of his or her shell. You'll both enjoy a few good laughs. Now is a good time to start that self improvement plan you've been delaying. Romantic connections flourish with a little extra attention toward the end of the week.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Planning a special Valentine's Day for your sweetie? Be sure to pay attention to the things he or she isn't saying, too. The simplest gestures of love can be the most profound. A family member offers unexpected insight into a long-standing problem.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Early to bed and early to rise makes this week productive, exciting and lively. Join a new acquaintance at an old haunt for an enjoyable time. Conflict could be brewing in another arena--be sure you're paying attention to the people closest to you.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Enjoy a rousing round of physical activity to cure a case of the midwinter blahs. There, treat yourself and another to a mood-traditional Valentine's Day celebration. A day out could do you a lot of good. Be creative--you'll be proud of yourself for thinking of such a grand idea.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Someone who usually bothers you could be unusually pleasant this week. That's your cue to gently forward your own agenda. If you're tactful, you'll accomplish more than you ever thought possible. Unwind with a quiet weekend at home.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
A faraway friend offers words of wisdom in dealing with a difficult person or situation. Don't be shy about asking for help closer to home, too. Get a second opinion before making an important decision.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
One door closes and another will open shortly. If the changes make you feel overwhelmed, be sure to discuss them with a trusted friend or relative. Ways to gain confidence in your own skills, and you'll be a winner no matter what the outcome is.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Passionate arguments are likely to happy reunions this week, just in time for a little Valentine's Day makeover. Don't compromise your personal goals for the sake of grace, however. Your integrity is your most valuable possession. A colleague becomes a valuable ally.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Unrealistic goals and difficult circumstances could be dragging your mood down. Opt for some more concrete, attainable goals to lighten your spirits. Something as simple as a tasty meal, or a merry laugh, could be all that it takes to change your perspective.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Although you're probably right about something, you may have a difficult time convincing others. Don't dig in your heels. Instead, try the tactful approach. Whatever you do, if you can't get your way, don't resort to saying "I told you so." It clings don't work out.

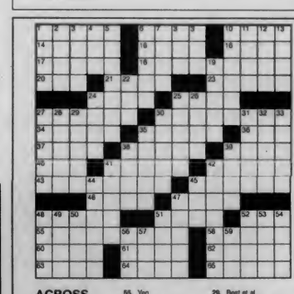
AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A social event ends the week with a bang. You have energy to spare and lots of enthusiasm--why not consider a new activity, like volunteering for a worthy cause? You're in a position now to make a big impact on someone's life.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
It's times like these that can drive a person crazy. Take things one step at a time and try not to dwell upon the failings of others. Polly can be its own punishment; so give yourself permission to rise above. A new relationship shows promise.

Close to Home By John McPherson

The latest in child-care products: fortune diapers.

Quote of the Day



"No brain at all, some of them."

–Eeyore in House at Pooh

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Today's D.C. Menu Call 545-2626 for more information.

	Franklin		Worcester
	LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
	Hot Turkey Sand	Country Style Ribs	Fish Munchies	Beef Strips/ Snow Peas
	Grilled Cheese	Baked Ziti	Mesquite Chix Sand	Fried Shrimp
	Fish Munchies	Charbroiled Chix Sand	Bowties/ Tom or Pesto	Stir Fried Veggies + Tofu
			Tri Bean Casserole	Pastabilities
	Hampshire		Berkshire
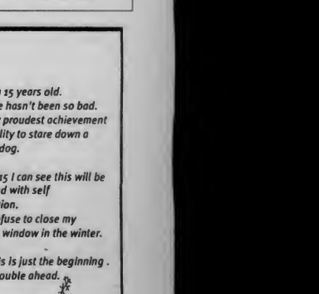
	LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
	Hamburger	Beef Strips/ Snow Peas	Fish Munchies	Beef Strips/ Snow Pas
	Chicken Cutlet	Tilapia Santa Fe	Mesquite Chix Sand	Baked Ziti
	Worcester Breakfast Sandwich		Ravioli	Stir Fried Veggies + Tofu
			Vegan Ravioli	Pastabilities

ACROSS
1. Home of the Heat
6. Marquis de ___
10. Bryan defeater
14. Doll
15. Blind as ___ (2 wds.)
16. "___ Ever Need Is You" (2 wds.)
17. The "Velvet Fog"
18. Kind of pie
20. Urban trains
21. Silent performer
23. Take care of (2 wds.)
24. Thin
25. Big Mama
27. Deep cold spell
30. Colonize again
34. Broth server
36. Pouts
38. Cloth scrap
39. Porcine sound
40. Testaments
43. Early video game
46. Country south of Can.
47. Dean's Rebel Without A Cause costar
48. Armistice
49. Closed again
50. Compatible
53. See
57. Touchstone
58. Ladle's baby brother
61. Twist
62. Curly and Larry's pal
65. Yen
66. Checking out
67. Ending for major or bachelor
68. Winnie the ___
69. Desert plant
70. Like horse after the farrier's visit
84. Pound hound
85. Alacrity

DOWN
1. Small amount
2. Adored one
3. Tells the world
4. Pop's mate
5. Eschew a standard deduction
6. "What Makes ___ Run?"
7. Lover of an Irish Rose
8. QB Manno
9. List abbr.
10. Most docile
11. Sheltered, at sea
12. Motown's trouble
13. One of the Jacksons
19. Some curves
22. Rage
24. The Lennons' mentor
25. Vicky's kin
29. Questions
27. Miller's yield
28. Elevate
29. Blast at
30. Made parallel lines
31. Spackled fish
32. Camelot prop
33. Urged (on)
35. Vigor
36. Stratagem
39. Decorous
41. 1869 Havana harbor casualty
42. Bowling feats
44. Called forth
45. Henry VIII's greatest display
47. "In the Still of the ___"
48. Misses
49. Lane's kin
50. Toward
51. Half-hitch, for one
52. Lab creatures
53. Not repeatedly
54. Yipes!
56. Record letters
57. Chit letters
59. Stingy affirmative



Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

I'm 15 years old.
Life hasn't been so bad.
My proudest achievement is my ability to stare down a snarling dog.

At 15 I can see this will be a life filled with self examination.
I refuse to close my bedroom window in the winter.

This is just the beginning . I smell trouble ahead.

Old rivalry heats up on pivotal UMass Senior Day

Three seniors lead UMass against Owls in crucial game

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow's game against Temple is another gut check for the Massachusetts men's basketball team.

With back to back losses to Dayton and No. 23 St. Joseph's last week, the Minutemen need a convincing win over the Owls in order to sweeten the pot for an NCAA Tournament at-large berth. This year, UMass travels to Philadelphia to compete in an Atlantic 10 Tournament in which half a dozen teams have a legitimate shot at winning.

The only sure-fire way the Minutemen can make the Big Dance is with an A-10 tourney win. You can talk about schedules, power ratings, and rankings but the bottom line is, nobody knows exactly what it would take to convince the men in Overland Park, Kan. that UMass deserves a bid. No matter what strange formula the selection committee uses, a win over the Owls will definitely help.

"It's a must win. We need probably three more wins to make it into the [NCAA] Tournament," guard Charlton Clarke said. "We played well last time we played against them. Coach Flint told us today that we are not going to be able to shoot a lot of threes like we did in the last game because they are going to spread out more. This time the post will be wide open and flash cuts will be wide open."

The last time the Minutemen met the Owls was on Jan. 25 in Philadelphia. It was the last time the two schools met in Temple's famous McGonigle Hall, and despite a rambunctious home crowd, UMass dismantled their hosts 78- 66.

With a seemingly useless zone defense last time around, UMass abused the Owls for 15 3-pointers (a school record) with Travieso leading the way with 28 points. This time around, the Minutemen expect Temple to play a tighter defense on the perimeter.

"This time we know that they are going to come out even further to guard the 3-point shot so the post will be wide open all the time," Clarke said. "We'll do the same thing, except look inside more often instead of shooting threes. If we're wide open, we'll take them, if not we have to look inside."

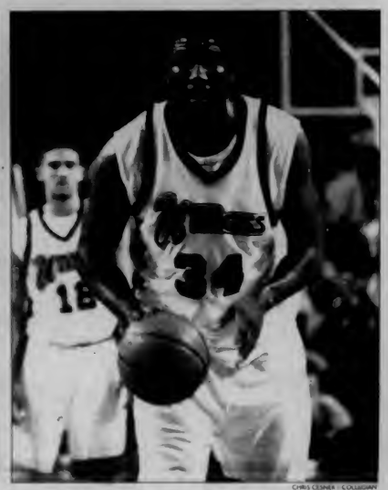
March Madness aside, tomorrow marks another milestone for the UMass basketball program as the school will honor what was undoubtedly its best recruiting class ever as Carmelo Travieso, Edgar Padilla, and Tyrone Weeks don the maroon and white for the last time in the Mullins Center.

These three men, along with would-be senior Marcus Camby, who jumped ship for the NBA, were instrumental in bringing the UMass program into the national spotlight.

"It's a special day and a very important day because we have to win this game," Travieso said. "This is my last year so this game means a lot because it will help us get into the tournament and help us get a higher seed in the tournament. There's a lot of things that are going to be big [on Saturday]. It's also against our biggest rival, as long as I've been here, so it's going to be interesting."

While senior night festivities are important, UMass' leading outside threat, who left his mark in the record books this season (with records in career 3-pointers made, career 3-pointers attempted, single season 3-pointers made, most single season

Turn to HOOPS, page 7



HUY CAO / COLLEGIAN

Edgar Padilla will play before a sell-out crowd in his final home game against Temple.

CHRIS CESMER / COLLEGIAN

Carmelo Travieso's last home appearance is a high-stakes game against one of UMass' bitter rivals.

CHRIS CESMER / COLLEGIAN

Tyrone Weeks could be playing in his final home game tomorrow when the Minutemen wrap up the regular season.

UMass destroys Duquesne in A-10 Tourney

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team had two goals for last night's Atlantic 10 quarterfinal game with Duquesne University. One, they needed a win to reach the semifinals, and move closer to their season-long goal of a first Atlantic 10 Championship.

The other one? Well, that wasn't so lofty of a goal.

With revenge on their minds and a freshman point guard who could do no wrong, the Minutewomen whipped Duquesne 75-60 last night at the William D. Mullins Center, avenging a 85-58 blowout at the hands of the Lady Dukes on Jan. 18 and sending UMass to the conference semifinals. The Minutewomen will now travel to Washington D.C. to play A-10 juggernaut and No. 1 seed George Washington on Sunday.

Massachusetts	75
Duquesne	60

"We put everything together tonight," senior guard Sabriya Mitchell said. "This game was about revenge. We went down to [Duquesne] last time and forgot how to play defense, [and got blown out]."

UMass was led by freshman Kelly Van Huisen, who notched a career-high 21 points, including 15 in the first half. Overall, Van Huisen went 8-for-12 from the field, including a perfect two-for-two from 3-point land, and added four assists and four rebounds. Van Huisen also contained Dukes superstar and unanimous All A-10 choice Korie Hlede, who scored 22 points, but only nine in the second half.

Senior forward Crystal Carroll shined in her last game in the Mullins Center, matching Van Huisen with 21 points and pulling down 11 rebounds. Sophomore center Yolanda Rayside regained the touch she showed midway through the season last night, scoring 11 points and grabbing six rebounds.

Van Huisen started things up for the Minutewomen immediately. The Haverhill native scored the first seven

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOPS, page 7

Minutewomen's guns smoking in tourney win over Lady Dukes

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

Some teams get big performances from individual players in their clutch situations. Sometimes the whole team steps up and brings itself to the next level.

Last night against Duquesne the Massachusetts women's basketball team rose from the their second-place status to assume first-class stature in a win-or-die Atlantic 10 playoff situation at the William D. Mullins Center.

Opposing coaches bring their squads onto the Minutewomen's turf one after another and leave singing the praises of the full arsenal possessed by the home team. The quotes from these coaches usually sound similar to Dayton coach Clemette Haskins' sound-bite after a 62-55 loss to Massachusetts.

"UMass has so many weapons, that's what makes them such a hard team to beat," Haskins said. "You never know who will step up and hurt your team."

Last night there was no question who would take it to Duquesne, simply because just about every player who stepped foot on the court for the maroon and white would be a suitable answer.

Freshman Kelly Van Huisen set the tone early for the Minutewomen, not shying away from the pressure of tournament play. The guard scored the first seven points of the game for UMass, taking a personal 7-2 lead over the entire Duquesne team.

Van Huisen's career-high 21-point effort was not overshadowed by the play of Duquesne's A-10 first team All-Conference point guard Korie Hlede. Van Huisen often found herself defending the junior from Croatia, who led the unbalanced Duquesne attack with 22 points. Hlede has kept some of the A-10's best defensive players busy, lighting them up for game totals of 41 and 38 points, while averaging seven rebounds per game.

Senior Beth Kuzmeski has played some of her best basketball of the season in the late stages, and she continued that trend tonight. Kuzmeski's 15-point and 10-rebound double-double against Dayton was followed capably by seven points, three assists and two steals in 25 minutes of play last night against the Dukes.

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Nothing Duquesne's Sherri Hannan tried could stop Kelly Van Huisen or the Minutewomen in UMass' 75-60 Atlantic 10 Tournament win last night.

UMass visits Maine for HE league finale

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Sometimes there are things in life that have absolutely no meaning what so ever — no matter how hard you look. On the other hand, sometimes you need to take a step back, and the answer just might come to you.

This Saturday night in Orono, Maine, the Massachusetts hockey team will finish off its regular season docket against the Black Bears. On the surface, any meaning to this contest could be long gone and hard to find:

• For UMass (12-20, 7-16 in Hockey East), their eighth place finish in the HE standings is all locked up, and their first round playoff opponent could possibly be the loser of the Boston University-New Hampshire game this weekend.

• For Maine (23-10-1, 15-7-1 HE), a crazy little thing called postseason probation has them making their spring break plans early this year. A late appeal to reverse last August's decision by the NCAA was denied, and the team will be having fun in the sun instead of postseason runs.

Yet, there is that not so distant, and curiously pertinent, meaning to this game. The Minutemen need to keep up the hard work they employed in the last period of their tough 3- 2 loss to Boston College last weekend. Whether their first round playoff game is against the Terriers or the Wildcats, UMass will need every drop of momentum it can get to try and upset one of two nationally ranked teams.

The Black Bears have already been making meaning out of a relatively meaning-less situation. After their appeal was denied, Maine has been the hottest team in the country, mercilessly sweeping UMass two weekends ago (6-4 and 8- 1), and then beating UNH (5-1) and BU (3-0 and 7-2) in three consecutive games last week.

After the denial of his appeal, Maine coach Shawn Walsh made a point to treat these last games of their season as their own playoffs. At this point, if they were not bound for vacation-time in Florida, they could have been bound for not only the FleetCenter in Boston (the HE Finals), but the Bradley Center in Milwaukee (the Final Four).

UMass coach Joe Mallen felt the strength of the Black Bear squad, and now considers them in the same breath with the Terriers and the Wildcats.

"It's just that time of year where the talent of a lot of teams shines through," Mallen said. "Just on the side, that Maine team I saw [two weeks ago] is as good a team as any in the league. I said all year long that there is the top two teams and everybody else, but I have to change that.

"It is the top three and everybody else. Maine is as good as the other two. A 7-2 [win over BU] up in Maine makes you feel a little bit better than 8-1 at home [two weeks ago], because that stunk."

After a six-point explosion in the two wins versus the Minutemen, freshman Cory Larose (10-26-36) has jumped into the lead for HE Rookie of the Year. Larose is just ahead of Greg Koehler of UMass-Lowell, and BC's Jeff Farkas and Blake

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 93 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Monday, March 3, 1997

"Lay a leg over me do."

Cordelia's Dad gave an impressive show at the Iron Horse this past weekend. Check out review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

It's off to Philly

Charlton Clarke scored 16 points to lead the Minutemen over the Temple Owls Saturday (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Croatian teen uses Net for Air Force hacking

ZADAR, Croatia (AP) - Nervously glancing at the desk where his computer was before police took it away, 15-year-old Vice Miskovic explained with a mixture of pride and bewilderment how he managed to hack his way into a U.S. military computer.

"I used some of the hacking programs available on the internet, adjusted them, and, with a bit of luck, managed to break into the computer system of the Anderson Air Force Base in Guam," Miskovic said this week.

"It was a challenge," he said, smiling. "I was curious to see whether I could do it or not."

Miskovic said he searched through the Anderson base files during the month of January, but whenever he wanted to download files, they started to disappear.

He got scared "because I didn't intend to destroy any files, I just wanted to see them," he said, adding that he assumed the files had self-destruction programs installed in them.

On Feb. 5, Croatia's computer crime investigators put an end to Miskovic's search and temporarily impounded his computer. Current Croatian criminal law does not provide for punishment of computer crime.

NATION

Ind. arson fire leaves 150 homeless, 23 hurt

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Apartment-dwellers leapt from their windows when a pre-dawn arson fire swept through a three-story, inner-city complex yesterday. At least 23 people were hospitalized and 153 left homeless.

"There were people coming out of the windows from the second floor and the third floor," said Lt. Vernon Brown, among the firefighters who reached the downtown Canterbury Apartments at 6:40 a.m.

"Firefighters actually caught children that were being dropped from windows by their parents," he said. Residents raced along hallways just ahead of the fire, pounding on doors to wake neighbors, witnesses said. The fire, fanned by a stiff breeze, spread through an attic crawl space linking the four brick buildings.

Eleven people were taken to Methodist Hospital, most for smoke inhalation, including a 2-year-old boy in critical condition after going into cardiac arrest, spokeswoman Joe Ann Meyers said.

At Wishard Hospital, 12 people arrived with smoke inhalation, burns and broken bones, including Anthony Underwood, 37, in serious condition with broken legs from a third-floor leap, spokesman Joe DiLaura said.

By noon, nine of the 23 injured people had been treated and discharged, officials said.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tue	Wed
HIGH: 40 LOW: 20	HIGH: 30 LOW: 15	HIGH: 32 LOW: 18

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 12

Skin Deep facilitates discussion on dealing with race at UMass

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Last Friday evening, Race Talks and the Baha'i Club presented the film Skin Deep, followed by a group discussion on racial issues at the University of Massachusetts.

Approximately 50 students attended the showing of the film, which focused on how racial issues affect college students. The film followed 20 students from campuses across the country who were brought together for a three-day retreat to confront these issues.

According to Nikki Morse, a junior social thought and political economy major and Race Talks member, the film was chosen because it portrayed two students from UMass.

"We chose this movie because it deals specifically with racism on campus and because two of the students in it are from UMass, so it deals specifically with this campus," Morse said.

After the conclusion of the hour-long film, Morse and Phillipe Copeland, a senior legal studies and philosophy major and a Baha'i Club member, led a discussion on the current racial situation at UMass and on ways students can improve it.

The conversation ranged from sharing how students' racial perceptions were shaped in their families to critiques of some administration policies and the idea of institutionalized racism.

Judith Schneider, a senior women's studies major and member of Race Talks, was pleased with the evening.

"Basically, I think the event went really well. I was really excited with the turnout, I just wish the discussion could have gone longer," Schneider said.

She also felt that the conversation was an important step in addressing racism on campus.

"I think that the conditions at UMass need vast improvement. I think the number of students of color [at UMass] is way too low. UMass needs to change. It needs to be more accessible to everyone," Schneider said. "UMass needs to address race issues."

Kelsey Haskins, a junior political science major and Race Talks member, said, "Students need to feel free to talk. Everyone's view should be as valid as anyone else's."

Haskins thought that the film and discussion were a good starting point for students interested in racial issues, but noted that students need to search for solutions themselves.

"People were intrigued and confused at the same time," Haskins said. "I think that people liked opening their minds, but then they are like what do we do next. It's a huge challenge facing you as you leave."

Andrew Susen, a senior anthropology major, said the fact that 50 students voluntarily attended the event on a Friday night shows that people are concerned about racism on campus.

Turn to FILM, page 2

LAUREN BOSKY \ COLLEGIAN

Reflecting on the day
The image of a busy day in Amherst Center is caught by a local store's window.

Amherst College plays host to conference on violence in former Yugoslav republics

By Adam Klein
Collegian Staff

After almost four years of war, the international community is trying to pick up the pieces of a shattered nation. Bosnia-Herzogovina's destruction is understood to have occurred as a result of the policy of "ethnic cleansing."

The current uncertainty regarding the future of Bosnia was the topic of a two-day, grassroots conference last weekend at Amherst College entitled "Bosnia: Road to Recovery?"

One hundred-eighty people from around the world were in attendance, including representatives from many organizations working towards restoring the former Yugoslavia to a state of economic prosperity and achieving peace in the Balkans.

Cease-fire or peace

The conference began with a speech by Stephen Walker, associate director of the Balkan Institute, and Frank McCloskey, former congressman from Indiana and counsel to the Bosnian Federation.

Walker, a former U.S. diplomat who resigned from the State Department in protest over U.S. policy toward Bosnia, said that the one year-old Dayton Agreement has not put an end to the conflict, but rather, has created "a temporary cease-fire."

McCloskey, who served on the Armed Forces and Foreign Affairs committees, said his experience in serving with the Bosnian Federation in the Brcko arbitrations has led him to believe that no clear end to the deliberations is in sight.

The presentations by the two panelists were followed by workshops which allowed audience members to ask detailed questions regarding what the U.S. government is doing to aid refugees in their safe return to their homeland.

Placing Blame

The keynote speech was made by Pulitzer Prize winning journalist and author of A Witness to Genocide, Roy Gutman.

Gutman shared his firsthand experience of last fall's elections in Bosnia and expressed his beliefs regarding the U.N.'s failure to work towards peace in the Balkans.

"The genocide that occurred... was the logical outcome of the concept under which the U.N. forces were deployed in the first place," Gutman said.

He blamed, above all, France for the destruction of Srebrenica and the ensuing breakdown of international support of the rest of the safe areas, which were instituted primarily by the French. The commander of the French forces and former president Mitterand himself were more concerned with the safe return of their own troops than accomplishing a peace-keeping mission.

Gutman calls these troops, which were present only to achieve the appearance of peace, "virtual soldiers." The arrival of the virtual soldier, according to Gutman, allowed the conflict to last for over three years without any real solution, because it allowed the international community to believe that support was being given, when in fact, the U.N. leaders were obviously aware that no reconciliation was in sight.

Gutman also cited the other individual most at blame for the prolonged and senseless genocide as U.N. force commander General Yakushi Asaki, who was ultimately to blame for the coverup following the withdrawal of U.N. forces from hostile areas.

Turn to BOSNIA, page 2

Israeli columnist to speak at UMass's Hillel tonight

Danny Rubenstein, a columnist for Ha-aretz, one of the largest newspapers in Israel, will be speaking tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the University of Massachusetts' Hillel House located at 388 North Pleasant Street in Amherst.

Rubenstein is this year's Hillel Scholar-in-Residence for the Five Colleges. He has covered issues surrounding the West Bank since the Six Day War and has been the Jerusalem Bureau Chief for the Israeli Labor newspaper, Davar.

Rubenstein was also awarded the prestigious Sokolov Prize, which is Israel's highest award for journalism, in 1988, and was the recipient of the Inter-Ethnic award for Understanding and Tolerance. His American tour is being sponsored by the World Zionist Organization.

Rubenstein will be delivering four public lectures. His first, entitled, "Reporting from the Eye of the Storm: Tales of an Israeli Journalist" will be held at the UMass Hillel House.

The second lecture will be held at Smith College at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday evening in 106 Seelye Hall. This lecture is entitled, "Is Israel Coming Apart? Religion, Nationalism and Fanaticism."

At Mount Holyoke on Wednesday at 6:15 p.m. in the Kosher Halal Kitchen, Rubenstein will be lecturing on "The Peace Process After Hebron."

Finally, on Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m. Rubenstein will speak in the Mead Art Museum at Amherst College on "The Peace Process: What can we expect next?"

All of Rubenstein's lectures are free and open to the public.

— Sarah J. Kimmel

Earthquake hits NW Iran; quake leaves 3,000 dead

By Anwar Faruqi
Associated Press

GOLESTAN, Iran — The last sound Hussein Sultani heard from his daughter-in-law was her scream when the earth began to shake.

His mud hut trembled as boulders dislodged from the surrounding hills rolled down onto the village, killing a group of women washing clothes at a nearby stream. Among the dead was his grandson and his 20-year-old daughter-in-law, Mariam.

Not a single home was standing in this village on Sunday, two days after a magnitude 6.1 earthquake left an estimated 3,000 people dead and 2,000 injured in a mountainous region of northwestern Iran.

The Iranian quake was the most devastating of several Asian temblors in recent days, in Armenia, China and Pakistan. Officials gave a lower death toll — 554 — than aid workers and villagers, but government said the casualty figures would surely rise as rescuers arrive at the scene.

Sultani, wearing a skullcap and walking with a stoop, made his way through the rubble with a flashlight searching for his family.

Aid workers had given him a tent and cooking oil.

"I lost my daughter-in-law and her 3-year-old baby as well as my cousin," he said.

Blood stained the snow-covered ground, and survivors huddled around small bonfires in the 19-degree cold. In the distance, howls could be heard from wolves and wild dogs, animals that have attacked corpses and hampered rescuers in other villages.

Ali Darabi, a construction worker in nearby Rasht, said he rushed to Golestan as soon as he heard about the quake.

"I lost my sister and her three children in the earthquake," said Darabi as he carried a burning piece of wood. "We still don't know who has died and who is alive."

In hard-hit Ardabil province, an official told the Farsi-language Kayhan newspaper that 110 villages were affected by the quake. The death toll in just six villages visited by reporters in the province was more than 2,000 people.

Snow has kept aid workers from a string of villages beyond the Sabalan mountains, which they say may be the most devastated. Hundreds of sheep and cows — the livelihood of the farming villages — were buried under landslides and the collapsed walls of houses.

In Shiran, a wealthy farming community of 1,000, only a few people remained. One of them, Reza Azizvand, estimated that half the village's people were killed — including his wife of five months.

"We loaded the dead in bulldozers, dug a mass grave and buried all the dead there, one beside the other," Azizvand said, as he sat in the one room left of his house.

VP Gore's fundraising under fire

By Kevin Galvin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Vice President Al Gore played a central role in raising millions of dollars for the 1996 campaign, making direct solicitations that some Democratic donors found heavy-handed.

A former campaign adviser said Sunday he was "tickled to death" that Gore was so aggressive, and that without the vice president's efforts President Clinton would have lost re-election.

But a pair of Democrats called the solicitations "inappropriate." And Republicans pushed Attorney General Janet Reno to appoint an independent counsel to investigate fund raising within the Clinton administration.

As politicians wrangled over how to address the growing revelations of political fund-raising irregularities, some saw the wrangling itself as evidence that sweeping campaign finance reform is needed.

"Even what's legal now is a scandal," said Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn. The Democratic National Committee said Gore was the main attraction at 39 DNC events in 1995 and 1996 that raised $8.74 million.

"There's nothing surprising about the fact that an incumbent vice president is working hard to re-elect an incumbent president," DNC spokeswoman Amy Weiss Tobe told The Associated Press.

Gore's fund-raising network raised $40 million of the $180 million collected by the DNC for the 1996 campaign, The Washington Post reported.

Dick Morris, a primary Clinton adviser before a sex scandal forced him to resign, said he pushed Clinton and Gore to raise big money in 1995, when polling was unfavorable to the president. Asked on "Fox News Sunday" about Gore's activities, Morris said: "I was tickled to death that he did it. Unless he got on the phone and actually asked people for money, we never would have had the money to be able to win the election."

Clinton would not make direct solicitations, Morris said. Gore's approaches violated no law, so long as he didn't use government facilities to make the calls.

The Post said the three previous vice presidents never made such direct requests for contributions. The newspaper reported that several donors privately complained that Gore's calls were inappropriate.

Many of those contacted operated businesses that relied on government contracts or assistance. Such calls, said White House special counsel Lanny Davis, are "appropriate so long as there's no promise of a quid pro quo."

In one instance DSC Communications of Texas reportedly gave a $100,000 contribution to the Democrats as a "thank you" for the Commerce Department's efforts on behalf of DSC's bid to win a $36 million telecommunications contract in Mexico.

Davis said the Commerce Department's mission is to boost U.S. businesses abroad and that the donation influenced no government action.

"Vice President Gore was part of an effort to compete against the Republicans," Davis said on CNN's "Late Edition."

"He did nothing wrong and nothing illegal. The suggestion of any coercion is completely baseless."

Newsweek reported Sunday that the DNC assembled detailed budgets to project how much would be raised at events including the White House coffee klatches. The budgets were compiled despite legal advice against using any government building for soliciting contributions, the magazine said.

Wellstone and Sen. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., criticized Gore for making the calls but denied Republican claims that the fund-raising activities of Clinton administration officials violated the law.

"I'm not going to be in the business of defending the undefendable, and what is more I do not personally believe it is appropriate for the president or the vice president of the United States to directly solicit contributions," Torricelli said. "It's inappropriate, but it is not a legal issue."

Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., added his voice to the calls for a special counsel, and Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott predicted a move by Reno "is a matter of time."

"If she doesn't comply with the law, we have to ask why not and what is the alternative," Lott said.

In addition to Gore's activities, Nickles said he is bothered by White House coffees attended by Clinton and political contributors and the use of the Lincoln Bedroom as a perquisite for supporters.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor: Chris Conner Production Supervisor: Lorraine Urbanski
Copy Editor: Seema Gangatirkar Production Staff: Chris Lavin
Photo Technician: Lauren Kosky Lauren Goldfarb

■ bosnia

continued from page 1

Bosnian student project

The ethnic cleansing of Bosnia resulted in the assassination of almost all the intellectuals of Bosnia, including doctors, lawyers, engineers and teachers.

As a result, the educational system in Bosnia completely collapsed. Doug Hostetter began a project to bring students over to the United States to educate in order to replenish the supply of specialists who would be able to begin rebuilding Bosnia.

Within weeks, Hostetter was able to obtain passage, visas and scholarships for exceptional students who wished to continue their interrupted education in America.

To date the project has placed 149 students, primarily young adults, in schools across the country. Almost always, the students remain to complete their college educations and desire to return to their Bosnian homeland to contribute to the reconstruction.

Hostetter said that the majority of the work is done by individuals who go out on their own to procure school funding and support. He serves primarily as an advisor.

Azra Sisic, a student at Mt. Holyoke College and participant in the program, said that because people don't know what's going on in Bosnia, appropriate educational support isn't received. As a result of the ethnic cleansing, her friends still in Bosnia "don't learn a lot."

Stories of genocide

Eileen Weiss, cofounder of Jews Against Genocide, a New York based organization which offers support to victims of the ethnic cleansing in Bosnia, said that her organization exists to provide a "Jewish response to the atrocities that occurred in Bosnia."

The sufferings of the Jewish people as a result of the Holocaust give them special insight into the current struggle of those in Bosnia, according to Weiss.

"Ethnic cleansing is not a new subject to [Jews]," Weiss said.

The Words and Pictures museum in Northampton hosted an art exhibit entitled "Fax from Sarajevo" Saturday evening. The exhibit was based on faxes sent to comic artist Joe Kubert by Ervin Rustemagic, Kubert's European representative in Sarajevo. Kemel Kuspahic, former editor of Osloblodjenje, the award winning Newspaper from Sarajevo spoke about his newly published book, As long as Sarajevo Exists.

Mario Susko, professor of English at the University of Sarajevo read poems from his new book, Mothers Shoes and Other Mortal Songs. Smith College student Jessica Catrow said, "I really felt the sadness."

On Sunday, a photographic art exhibit entitled "Zones of Separation: The Struggle for a Multiethnic Bosnia" was on display in the Eli March Gallery at Amherst College.

The destruction of multiculturalism in Bosnia has signaled the world community to the dangers of failing to embrace cultural diversity, according to Glenn Ruga, one of the three photographers of the exhibit who took the pictures over two trips to Bosnia.

The conference was sponsored by PAWSS (Program in Peace and World Security Studies). Michael Klare, director of the program said "the Bosnian War was the most brutal... of the last 50 years.

Klare is concerned that people will perceive incorrectly that the conflict in the Balkans has ended.

"Wars don't end when the last shot is fired," Klare said.

He was surprised that an issue of such national security interest has not been given appropriate media attention.

Anyone interested in supporting any of the organizations or finding out more information should call 586-2415.

■ film

continued from page 1

"People are caring enough to come on a Friday night, just from seeing a flyer," Susen said. "People want to talk about these things, to have a community to discuss them with, and to get involved."

Both Race Talks and the Baha'i Club are Registered Student Organizations (RSOs).

"Race Talks is group that is interested in confronting racism through education and action in the UMass campus," Morse said. "We put on films and bring speakers to campus, as well at initiating campaigns to challenge the administration and our fellow students."

The Baha'i Club, which is made up of student members of the Baha'i religious community from the Five College area, also facilitates programming about racism and diversity.

The Baha'i Club is sponsoring a race unity conference this Saturday, entitled "Foundations of Race Unity," in Campus Center room 163C.

For more information on the conference, call Nadja Schmeil at 256-0227. For information on Race Talks, e-mail Nikki Morse at namorse@student.umass.edu.

Benefit Boogie enters tenth year

Center hopes to raise $10,000 to help victims of welfare cuts

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

The Northampton Survival Center will be holding their 10th annual Benefit Boogie on Saturday, March 8 from 8:30-11:30 p.m. at the Hotel Northampton.

For the third consecutive year, the Boogie will feature Quetzal, an Afro/Andean/Caribbean/North American beat band which has sold-out everywhere it performs. Last year the band attracted a record attendance to the Boogie, with most of those attending over the age of 20.

Carol Rothery, the administrative director of the Center, gave enormous praise to the band's talents.

"It's an overlay of something exotic that you're not used to... they have developed a following," Rothery said.

The Boogie will also feature a raffle with numerous prizes donated by local merchants, surprise entertainment at intermission and a fortune teller to greet guests in the lobby.

The Center is hoping to raise $10,000 from the Boogie, which is its only fundraiser for the year. Due to cuts from government funding sources and the federal Welfare Reform Acts of 1995 and 1996, there is an even greater number of people seeking help from the Center.

Rothery pointed out that those who use the Center range from the elderly having trouble getting by on social security, to highly educated families who have fallen into difficult times.

According to the Center's data, 86 percent of those who use the Center are below the poverty line, which is about $15,000. The Center distributes a standard food box to clients from the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts as well as clothing, household items, books and toys.

In addition to the goods given out, Interviews are held for every client to assess any additional mental or physical help that may needed by referral.

Rothery pointed out the great need for services such as the Survival Center, saying "these places make a community more civil and gentle so that somebody cares about these people."

Tickets for the Boogie may be bought in advance for $8 at Beyond Words Bookshop or the Survival Center in Northampton, or at the door for $10.

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Frame of mind
Clouds brought rainy weather to the UMass campus center yesterday morning.

1-800-COLLECT®

Proudly Sponsors Intramural Sports At

UMass Amherst

★ ★ ★ 1-800-COLLECT® Intramural-Recreational SPORTS ★ ★ ★

SPORTS	ENTRIES CLOSE	PLAYER'S/ CAPTAIN'S MEETINGS	PLAY BEGINS
Softball	March 10	March 24 & 25, 6:00 pm	March 26
Co-Rec Soccer	March 10	March 24 & 25, 6:00 pm	March 26
Volleyball Special	March 11	March 26, 6:00 pm	March 31
Badminton Doubles	March 31	March 31, 6:00 pm	April 7
World Cup Soccer	April 14	April 24, 6:00 pm	April 25
Ultimate Frisbee	April 14	April 24, 6:00 pm	April 25
Tennis Doubles	April 14	April 24, 6:00 pm	April 25

• Officials needed for Softball, Soccer, and Volleyball; call for clinic dates and locations.
• Check with IM Office for meeting locations and for late entries.
• Call 5-0022 for more information or visit our website: http://www.umass.edu/umim

SIGN UP TODAY
Stop by the IM/Rec dept. and receive $9 in FREE 1-800-COLLECT calls

NIRSA Endorsed

See Your Intramural Recreational Department

1-800-COLLECT®
It's Fast. It's Easy. It Saves.

~ NATIONAL/INTERNATIONAL ~

Unrest breaks out in Albania

By Merita Dhimgjoka
Associated Press

TIRANA, Albania — Facing growing anti-government unrest, parliament declared a state of emergency on yesterday, allowing the army to be deployed to ensure public order and weapons to be used to protect public buildings and key roads.

Police, though, will remain the first line of defense in quelling riots and protests that have grown out of public rage over the collapse last month of popular, high-risk investment schemes.

In a televised address Sunday afternoon, President Sali Berisha called the unrest "a communist rebellion backed by foreign intelligence agencies. ... We promise you we will employ all measures under the law, even the most difficult ones, against this rebellion." He gave no further details.

Bending slightly under pressure applied by the protesters, Berisha on Saturday announced that his Cabinet would resign to be replaced by new ministers — still from his Democratic Party but approved by the Socialists and other opposition groups.

But Prime Minister Aleksander Meksi told The Associated Press on yesterday that a new government would not stop Albania's descent into chaos. He said he agreed to step down only because a government must resign "when it's not able to handle a situation."

"The situation is more serious than ever," Meksi said.

The government hopes the political shuffling will mollify protesters, who blame the Democratic Party-led administration for not warning them about the riskiness of the pyramid schemes, in which nearly every Albanian lost money. The schemes pay generous interest rates to early investors but collapse when deposits dry up.

Berisha, who did not say he himself would resign, said the new government would face huge challenges, including restoring public order and winning the trust of Albania's political parties.

By Saturday, Albania's southern region had become a scene of lawlessness. Carloads of weapons were distributed throughout the countryside, and young men in the port city of Vlora fired a constant barrage of bullets into the air.

Meksi said it would take at least a year to regain control of the country's arsenal.

"It will be difficult to gather again tens of thousands of guns that the Defense Ministry left in the hands of criminals, rebels or desperate people," he said.

He blamed "the most extremist elements" in the Socialist Party — the renamed Communists — for the chaos.

Just before the vote, a group of foreign journalists was attacked outside parliament by several men believed by the reporters to belong to the secret police. An Associated Press reporter was violently shoved and staff from the British Broadcasting Corp. and World Television News also were attacked. It was not immediately clear if there were any serious injuries.

Protesters in Vlora, the town 70 miles south of Tirana that exploded in violence on Friday, rejected Berisha's offer of a new Cabinet. They called for Berisha to announce by Sunday night that a government of technocrats would be formed.

If he did not meet the deadline, the protesters vowed they would go to Tirana, the capital, on Monday to press their demands. But after Berisha's announcement, protest organizers urged the thousands of people massed outside Vlora University not to make the march.

"We don't want blood," one organizer yelled through a megaphone.

Inside the university, about 40 students entered the 11th day of a hunger strike aimed at forcing the Democratic Party to step down.

Peruvian president seeks rebel haven

By Michelle Faul
Associated Press

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic — Peruvian President Alberto Fujimori flew Sunday to the Dominican Republic for talks on asylum for the rebels holding 72 hostages in Lima.

Fujimori played down the sudden, one-day visit, saying before he left Peru that "refuge, or an exit to another country, might be necessary at some point and therefore we're talking about this informally."

Hours later, Fujimori arrived on a presidential jet to full military honors, a red carpet welcome and a 21-gun salute. He warmly embraced the Dominican president, Leonel Fernandez, before members of the Dominican diplomatic corps that included a papal representative.

Fernandez, who last month discussed a safe haven for the rebels with Fujimori, and the Peruvian leader went directly from Santo Domingo's international airport to Fernandez's private residence, an apartment in the El Vergel neighborhood, for closed-door talks.

Fernandez's presidential spokesman declined to discuss the purpose of the meeting. In announcing the trip on Saturday, Fujimori's spokesman, Israel Mertz, said only that it was "very important."

Before leaving Peru, Fujimori said that the Dominican Republic might not be an acceptable destination for the rebels, raising speculation it might be considered as a temporary refuge.

About 15 guerrillas seized the Japanese ambassador's residence in Lima during a gala Dec. 17 party. They have freed hundreds of captives but still hold 72 men, including the ambassadors of Japan and Bolivia and several high-ranking Peruvian officials.

Reporters who accompanied Fujimori on the plane said officials had indicated he might also travel to Cuba and Jamaica, both of which also have been named as possible places of asylum.

Officials would neither confirm nor deny the reports, but Fujimori said Sunday morning that he had contacts with other countries "which I will not name."

Fujimori and Fernandez discussed giving refuge to the Tupac Amaru rebels in this Caribbean nation when the Peruvian made an unexpected stopover in the Dominican Republic in early February.

Flooding rocks southern Ohio

By Amy Beth Graves
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Rescuers used helicopters, hovercrafts, boats and dogs Sunday to search for 11 people still missing in flash flooding that washed away cars and homes.

At least two bodies were found following Saturday's flood, caused by up to 10 inches of rain from the same huge lines of thunderstorms that devastated Arkansas.

"Until the water goes down and people get back in their homes, we won't be able to do a damage assessment," state Emergency Management spokeswoman Nancy Dragani said after touring the area in southern Ohio. "There's certainly a lot of water. It's difficult to determine if you're looking at rivers or streams. Some streams are 40 feet wide."

The same storm system killed seven people in Kentucky, three in Tennessee and one in Mississippi, in addition to 24 people killed by tornadoes in Arkansas.

Hundreds were forced from their homes in Ohio and Kentucky, and more were evacuated in West Virginia. Kentucky National Guardsmen were sent to 15 counties in that state and armories were opened as shelters in 17 cities.

Record flooding inundated wide swaths along the Licking River in north-central Kentucky on Sunday.

"It's off our charts," said National Weather Service hydrologist Mike Callahan in Louisville, Ky. "You can't tell how high the Licking River is at Blue Licks Spring because the gauge is underwater."

All that water was flowing downstream toward the Ohio River, which Callahan said could have its worst flooding since 1964 along a stretch from Madison, Ind., to Tell City, Ind., which includes Louisville.

In extreme southern Ohio, eight people were missing after Great Brush Creek left its banks and washed away cars in Adams County, west of Portsmouth, said county emergency director Paul Howelett.

CIA dumps rust from informant list

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than 1,000 clandestine sources have been scrubbed from the Central Intelligence Agency roster after a two-year review into the effectiveness and human rights records of its informants.

The "agent scrub," described by officials who spoke on condition of anonymity, cut back on the CIA's informant list by about one-third. The review's primary focus was to clear the rolls of outdated or unproductive informants, many holdovers from the Cold War years whose information is no longer so eagerly sought by the CIA.

Others were cut because the CIA concluded they were too deeply involved in human rights abuses, terrorism and other acts ofviolence to justify their continuing as informants. Such paid information sources are sometimes referred to as "agents" but are neither CIA employees nor U.S. government officials.

Two government officials confirmed the existence of the agent scrub in interviews Sunday. The weeding-out process was disclosed Sunday in The Washington Post.

A CIA spokesman would not discuss the agent-review process.

Former CIA Director John Deutch, reached at home, said, "I cannot get into agent matters."

Officials who described the agent scrub said Deutch began the initiative in response to vociferous criticism of the CIA over human rights abuses by informants in Guatemala.

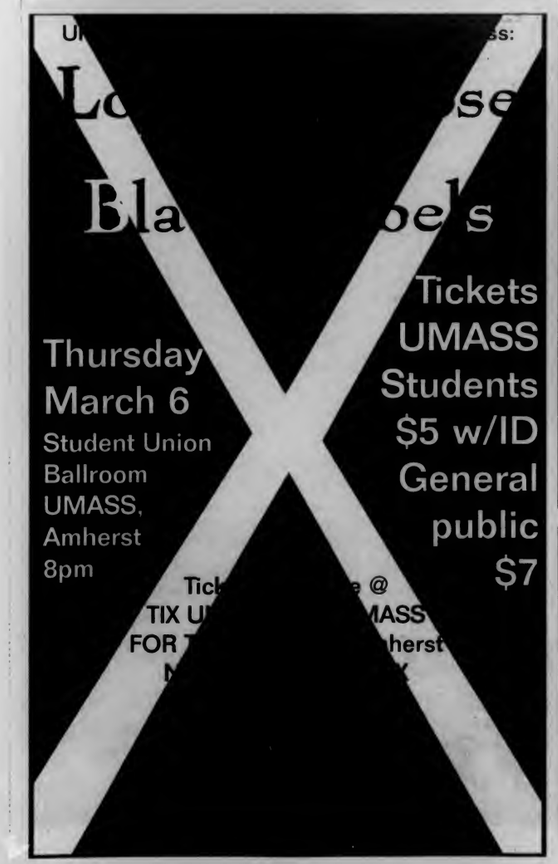
Former Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., now a senator, brought to light the case of Guatemalan Col. Julio Roberto Alpirez and his knowledge of two killings. One involved the death in captivity of a Guatemalan guerrilla married to American lawyer Jennifer Harbury.

Torricelli said CIA files indicated the agency was aware of the killing.

The CIA review of its informants appeared to have been widely known among the tightknit community of former CIA officials.

"There is no question that a review has been under way for some time of all the agency assets and informants," said Vince Cannistraro, a former member of the CIA's clandestine service and one-time director of intelligence programs at the National Security Council.

The review operated on two tracks, Cannistraro said. The first is "To evaluate their usefulness because there has been a feeling that there's been a lot of dead wood," he said. The second judged agents from the human rights perspective.



Though not publicly disclosed, the review has come to the attention of lawmakers on committees that oversee the CIA. Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, praised the CIA in a recent interview for being more honest in its reporting to Congress.

Kerrey said the new openness was evident in increasing numbers of reports in which the CIA informed Congress that agents it was dealing with were no longer productive or reliable and were being dropped from the rolls.

Disclosure of the agent scrub could play an important role in a current battle over Senate confirmation of Anthony Lake as the next director of central intelligence. Torricelli has said he will block Lake's confirmation until he receives assurances that the CIA is abiding by new rights guidelines.

Some current and former CIA officials worry about a prevailing climate of political correctness that threatens to cut off the government from the only people who can provide valuable information on terrorist cells and arms proliferation cartels — the participants.

"Political correctness has really infected the clandestine services," Cannistraro said. "If you're going to be collecting information on bad characters, you're going to be dealing with bad characters."

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN

Stop and smell the flowers!
Nature's finest grow all year round in the Durfee Conservatory at UMass.

NAME THE COMPOST CONTEST!

DEAR UMASS STUDENTS, FACULTY, AND STAFF:

Last semester we told you about a great new Invessel Composting Project being started, where food waste from the dining halls and animal bedding from the Hadley Farm would be mixed together to create a nutrient-rich soil-enhancer called compost. Well, it worked! We have compost, and now we need a name for it! The Office of Waste Management would like you to name the compost. In the summer, the compost will be bagged and the name (picked by you) will be printed on the front of the bag.

Fill in the entry form below, put it in an envelope, and drop it into campus mail addressed to the Intermediate Processing Facility at Tillson Farm Rd. Attn: Cheryl, UMASS - Amherst. Don't forget your phone number so we can contact you. Entries must be received no later than March 14, 1997. We will announce the contest winner after spring break and a prize will be awarded. Any questions call Cheryl at 5-6717.

Your Name: _____ Phone #: _____
First Last

Campus Address: _____

Compost Name: _____

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor Position Vacant Systems Manager
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Raghuram Vadareva Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Laura Stock News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Thang Vo Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Our friend, capitalism

Bryan Schwartzman

Have you ever heard of the Multilateral Agreement on Investments before? Probably not. But the MAI may make you aware of itself, as you search for a job in the coming years, in somewhat the same way that NAFTA it making itself felt through the transport of jobs south.

The MAI is a trade accord that has been quietly developing over a period of years and is expected to be completed by the summer of 1997. The accord will, at first, be relevant to the member countries of the Paris-based Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD.)

OECD can be generalized as consisting of the countries of Western Europe, Japan, Korea and the U.S. — basically, the developed First World. It has grown out of the OEEC, which administered the Marshall Plan in postwar Europe. The OECD (www.oecd.org) focuses on helping member countries "...seek to adapt their domestic policies to minimise conflict with other countries." The MAI is a culmination of this effort: a trade agreement in which members will cede "rights" to corporations for the international movement of capital.

This is in line with the increasing connection between the ideas of "human rights" and "democracy." In looking at recent U.S. posturing toward China, "human rights" are constantly voiced as a principal concern. "Democracy" is posed as a sort of synonym to "human rights," although it is, in current usage, not related to government in accord with the people's wishes. Instead, "democracy" seems to mean "capitalist economic system." We're not supposed to question whether capitalism is what the people want — capitalism is instead presented as if it were one of our "human rights," and any socialized economy a violation of them.

"We're not supposed to question whether capitalism is what the people want — capitalism is instead presented as if it were one of our 'human rights.'"

Daniel Bodah

The MAI will use these conceptions as building blocks in the construction of something we all should fear: "corporate rights." It's obvious, isn't it, that the natural human state is capitalism? Well, then, I guess all those kind-hearted corporations that keep the wheels of the economies of the world rolling are supporting our human rights. And we wouldn't want them to be stopped from doing the Lord's work by the will of the consumers — um, I mean people — now, would we? So obviously, we need to protect their right to provide us with "democracy."

How will the MAI do this? Well, member nations will agree to strike down any laws that are seen to obstruct the free movement of capital between national borders. Multinational corporations will find OECD member countries developing domestic policies, on issues such as taxation and environmental protection, that favor them.

Let's look a little closer at how this could play out with environmental regulations, as suggested by one commentator. Imagine (this may be tough, but please try) that in the fall our Congress responds to the overwhelming desire of the citizens and passes a new package of environmental laws. These laws are intended to prevent corporations operating in the U.S. from dumping their toxic chemicals into our water and air. in fact, the laws are so deeply in accord with the people's wishes that corporations will get more than a slap on the wrist for violations. Dare we imagine a "three strikes, you're out" law in which scofflaw corporations would be forcibly shut down? Well, as long as we're fantasizing...

Obviously, this law would be a nightmare to, say, a German chemical manufacturer operating a toxic plant that plagued the surrounding area with chronic spills. Under the MAI, this company would have grounds for challenging the new environmental law.

What grounds could an international company use to challenge a domestic law like this? Well, the chemical company could argue that the new environmental regulation unfairly restricted their ability to operate across national borders, in violation of the MAI.

Fantasies aside, we in the U.S. probably won't suffer all that much from this accord. This is basically a policy developed by First World countries, and the impact will surely be felt most strongly in the world's developing nations.

For instance, Kenya and India are not members of OECD, and thus are not having any input into the way the accord will operate. Once the MAI is signed, however, countries like Kenya and India will be encouraged to join in and agree to abide by it. In fact, it's easy to see that developing nations could run into economic pressures to conform to the MAI.

What's most disturbing about this whole thing is that there doesn't seem to be any room for the voice of the people. I suppose expressing our opinions to our representatives might have some vague, distant relevance. This agreement seems, however, to be negotiated in the loftier world of international politics. And as with most of the decisions that are really important, the people get no say in how "democracy" will move forward.

Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

Reforming welfare "reform"

Before welfare "reform" legislation was enacted, we had a crisis of poverty in the United States. To many researchers, poverty estimates are extremely low, yet even according to Federal Census statistics, 50 million people live in poverty in this country. That's one of every five. Another 30 million are classified as "near poor." Now thanks to Governor Weld and President Clinton, we are going to see a bad situation get much, much worse. Enacting the current welfare "reform" to combat poverty is what Third World/ feminist activist Vandana Shiva calls, "presenting the disease as the cure."

"'Why don't they just take us all out and execute us? That's what they would do in Cambodia. Here in America, they're just going to starve us to death.'"

Jennifer Fasulo

According to the Massachusetts Coalition for the Homeless, 15,000 legal immigrants will be cut off SSI (aid to the elderly and disabled poor) in the coming year, and Food Stamps in women and their children will be cut off welfare in the next two years. But these are merely the numbers. What it means in human terms, closer to home, is that many of the poor people living in Amherst and Northampton — the elderly, disabled, immigrants and single mothers and their children — who already subsist on poverty-level AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) and SSI incomes will be left with no income or benefits. They will not be able to pay their rent or feed themselves and their children, they will be rendered homeless — permanently.

If you listen to politicians and media pundits rather than to the people who are in these predicaments, you might believe cutting people off welfare is a good thing. Governor Weld says it will force people to go out and "get jobs." This logic is not just ill-informed, it is cruel. People who receive SSI are either elderly or disabled. They get SSI because they can't work. The widespread belief that "anyone can collect disability" is a misconception based on the exception to the rule rather than the rule. The vast majority of people who will be impacted by these changes are people who are elderly or who have serious physical or mental disabilities. People do not "fudge" being elderly.

One local population that will be devastated by these changes is the Cambodian community in Amherst. Many are refugees who subsist on SSI. They have often endured torture, rape and starvation as well as witnessing the rape, torture and murder of loved ones during the Khmer Rouge regime in Cambodia. The psychic and emotional distress of these memories is not an "invented" disability. It is particularly unconscionable for the government to cut off aid to these families when one considers the illegal U.S. bombing of Cambodia during the Vietnam War and other military incursions which helped strengthen the Khmer Rouge regime. We owe a particular debt to those who enter our country because their lives, culture and homeland have been devastated by First World imperialism and destruction.

Furthermore, single mothers who do not have access to economic means, education or job training cannot sustain their families on minimum wage incomes with no benefits. This appallingly obvious fact has been ignored in every "public debate" about welfare. No amount of hard work or "personal responsibility" is going to change the fact that there are not enough liveable wage jobs to go around. One would love to see Governor Weld try to support his family on $10,000 a year — the minimum wage take-home pay for a full-time worker. Then again, this income would be even lower if it were up to Weld, who twice attempted to veto the minimum wage increase.

Full-time minimum wage pay is $1000 below the poverty level for a family of three. It's $4000 below for a family of four. More importantly, minimum wage jobs offer no provision for child care or medical coverage. While the average TAFDC income is even less than minimum wage — an appalling 40 percent below the poverty level — it still offers a skeletal provision of services for children and access to other subsidies that minimum wage jobs don't. This is the primary reason women stay on welfare, not because "they don't want to work," or have a "dependency problem," but because it's the best way to ensure the survival of their families. Moreover, the belief that women who receive welfare "don't want to work" is based on a capitalist and misogynist mindset that disregards and devalues the unpaid work that women do. Raising children is work — work that is vital to the health of any society, in our culture, with the lack of resources, support and value given to mothering, it is some of the hardest work there is.

For some time there has been a major crisis in homelessness in Amherst and Northampton. In 1996, Jessie's House, the homeless shelter in Northampton, received 1200 requests for housing. Out of that 1200, they were only able to house 18 families. What has been the response to the crisis? Build more affordable housing? Increase rental subsidies? Challenge the soaring costs of rent in this area? No. The response has been to kick more poor people off SSI, welfare and food stamps, to create an even larger, more permanent homeless population.

I work in a housing search program in Northampton designed to help low-income families secure housing. This job has always been enormously difficult, as there is a scarcity of affordable housing in Amherst and particularly in Northampton. People often wait two to five years just to get into a subsidized unit. Now there is growing fear in our office that this work will soon become impossible. Recently, a Cambodian man sat in our office, stunned by the news that his income would be eliminated. He sat for a long time without saying anything. Then he spoke in words so chillingly accurate that we were all frozen to our seats. "Why don't they just take us all out and execute us? That's what they would do in Cambodia. Here in America, they're just going to starve us to death."

Weld has recently unveiled his budget for the coming year. To the uninformed ear, it appears that he is addressing the crisis (which he largely caused) by increasing social service spending beginning July 1. But this token gesture is too little, too late and doesn't begin to address the housing problem. Weld gets to look good on paper (if you fail to subtract the numbers he's adding from the numbers he's cut), while poor people continue to be forced into the streets during the coldest months of the year.

Welfare "reform" is not an answer to the crisis of poverty in our country. There is only one way to eradicate poverty, and it is a simple way that we could decide, as a nation, to do at any time. Guarantee all citizens the right to basic human needs — the right to food, housing, the right to care and safety and the right to education. Instead we have chosen to legalize starvation, homelessness and destitution. And now, unless we mobilize quickly and forcefully to do something about it, we are going to live with the consequences, which in the words of one shelter provider, "will be beyond our worst nightmares."

Jennifer Fasulo is a member of the GEO Political Action Committee.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Ecuador, politics, media & context

Unfortunately, our own Student Government Association is not the only political body in the world where recent divisiveness and bickering has hampered the process of governing and impeded social change. This past month the government of Ecuador encountered a presidential and constitutional crisis which tested the legitimacy of the 18- year-old civilian democracy and constitution.

Last summer Ecuadorians were cautiously optimistic that the election of Abdala Bucaram to the presidency on his rallying cry, "Primero los Pobres! (First the Poor)," would lead to a general improvement in both the countries internal and international concerns. However, on Feb. 6 the colorful president was "fired" by Congress on the grounds of "mental incapacity" and the widespread belief that Bucaram's administration was unusually corrupt.

Bryan Schwartzman

The Congress's decision to oust the president sparked two simultaneous debates, the first was whether or not the Congress's decision was constitutional, and the second was who would succeed Bucaram as interim president.

Between Feb. 6 and Feb. 11 the confusion over who should be president thrust Ecuador into the world spotlight (making far more appearances in major U.S. news sources than in a typical week,) and was subject to international scrutiny and pressure to resolve the dispute. Congress had initially chosen its head, Fabian Alcaron, as interim president of Ecuador, but for several days vice president Rosalita Artega maintained that she was the rightful president, before eventually stepping down to resume her role as vice-president. On Feb. 11, Congress once again named Alcaron as interim president, with democratic elections scheduled for 1998. Artega said she fears the new presidency will become "a civilian dictatorship."

Sound confusing? It is at the same time both comic and tragic that a nation had to spend a week watching its leaders squalor for power and display the universality of political immaturity. Yet is also disturbing that some major news sources such as CNN and the New York Times have emphasized the ridiculousness of the recent development, while placing a low key on the complexity and context of developing a nation and establishing a fruitful democracy.

Here is an example of a lead from an article posted on the CNN Web Site on Feb. 11: "Quito, Ecuador (CNN) — While Congress met Tuesday to name Fabian Alcaron President of Ecuador for the second time in five days, acting President Rosalia Artega submitted her resignation and last week's president, Abdala Bucaram, left the country." This lead could almost pass for the outline of a sitcom and not a serious political situation.

On the other hand, a Washington Post article emphasized that Bucaram's dismissal was not simply the will of the legislature but was sparked by a 48-hour, two million person national strike in which Ecuadorians called for an end to corruption and accountability in their democracy. Among other accusations, Bucaram's administration was accused of "pocketing tariffs" acquired while running Ecuador's main port city, Guayaquil.

The Washington Post also stressed the importance that the United States played in the events. According to the Post (Feb. 11, A15) the silence of the United States led to the downfall of Bucaram. The United States found itself placed in the middle ideologically. Democracy and economic measures favorable to foreign investment are high on U.S. priorities for developing nations, where Bucaram had a strong record. At the same time the U.S. government says it commits itself to fighting corruption in governments, where Bucaram's record and reputation where far from strong. The United States has had a substantial interest in Ecuador since vast oil reserves in the country's rain forests were discovered in the '70s.

In the United States, we may take establishing a democracy for granted, but for a country with a complicated past which includes a more recent liberation from colonization, it is delicate and difficult business creating and maintaining a democracy. Since the time of Pizzaro in the 16th century, what is now Ecuador has been subject to European colonization and all that accompanies it. Since acquiring independence from Spain in the 19th century Ecuador has gone through many constitutions and combated a tradition military and often authoritarian rule. At one time the final step in military textbooks was the acquisition of the Presidency. There has also been a historical struggle between struggle between merchants who live on the coast and the middle of the country where traditionalist argued for a strong role for the Catholic Church in the government.

Ecuador has also faced repeated border conflicts with its neighbor Peru, and has been treated as a pawn in the world chess game between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Ecuador's two biggest challenges continue to be raising the standard of living for the 65 percent of the people who live bellow the poverty line, and integrating the historical marginalized indigenous population. In recent years the excavation of the oil in the Ecuadorian Amazon has threatened the very existence of many indigenous tribes.

Ecuador is a beautiful, culturally rich and diverse nation; for instance the Andean Panpipe in its many forums has been played for nearly 30,000 years. Unfortunately the geographic diversity has helped foster the historical divisions of the country. Ecuador has four distinct regions: La Costa, La Sierra, El Oriente and Los Galapagos. La Costa is located right on the Pacific coast; La Sierra is where the Andean mountain chain runs through the country and is home to the capital city of Quito; El Oriente is the where there is tropical rain forest and oil reserves; and the 14 or so Galapagos islands were made famous when Darwin visited them for his evolutionary studies.

So when reading about the political situation in Ecuador, it is important to try and understand the complex factors which exist in Ecuadorian society and not just simply dismiss the politicians as "a bunch of wackos." Just imagine what a foreign newspaper might have to say about Whitewater, Gennifer Flowers, or OJ. It isn't too pleasant, is it?

Bryan Schwartzman is a Collegian columnist.

Letter to the Editor

Tell us the truth, MassPIRG

To the Editor:

I am writing in reference to Stacy Shackford's article entitled "Student's Rights." Miss Shackford's assertion that MassPIRG is a group for the students by the students is unfounded in her article. While she lauds the efforts made by SCERA and "any active ALANA organization," she mentions nothing about the achievements of MassPIRG. She is asking students to support MassPIRG on its intentions, not on actual practice. Although Miss Shackford wrote about the history of MassPIRG, she told us nothing about what it [has] done in even the past year. However that is not what bothers me the most about this organization. If you looked closely at her article you will notice that there are three different names for this organization: MassPIRG, the UMass Chapter of Mass Student PIRG and the UMass PIRG chapter. I could accept this as a minor error, however Miss Shackford is asking us to vote for maintaining the MassPIRG donation on our tuition bills. Now, if Miss Shackford is a member of the UMass Chapter of Mass Student PIRG, why does the name on the tuition bill say MassPIRG? And if this money, upwards of $200,000, goes to MassPIRG and not the UMass Chapter of Mass Student PIRG, what is it used for and why hasn't anyone explained to the students that this money does not go directly to the student group?

I also want to address the manner in which the money is collected. In her article Miss Shackford asks for the students to vote for the "$5 waivable fee" on their tuition bill, yet she never explains that it is a negative check off waivable fee... Seemingly harmless, yet many students, by virtue of financial aid, don't even bother looking at their tuition bill. No other group on campus does this and it is my belief that MassPIRG has an obligation to provide this vital information before asking the students to vote on whether or not to even have the fee on their tuition bills.

I understand the underlying philosophy of the UMass Chapter of Mass Student PIRG. The intent of the group is to empower students. However my understanding of MassPIRG is that it is a lobbying organization dedicated to certain ideals that the paying students have no access to. If a right wing conservative groups were to act in the same manner, taking money from students, would it be allowed to operate in a manner that is as unaccountable as MassPIRG has been? I don't think so.

Matthew Auger
Belchertown

Write.

Let Collegian readers know what you think.

Write a letter to the editor.

Send them to:

Letters to the Editor / c/o Editor Boxes
113 Campus Center Basement
UMass

Arts & Living

Monday, March 3, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

COURTESY MATTHEW CAVANAUGH

The new all-folk Cordelia's Dad packed the Iron Horse on Friday night.

Cordelia's Dad's primal folk out–rocks punk

By Daniel Bodah
Collegian Staff

CORDELIA'S DAD
Iron Horse Music Hall
Feb. 28

NORTHAMPTON — A packed Iron Horse Music Hall got blessed by the acoustic power of the new Cordelia's Dad this past Friday night. The last time the band played here was also the last time they ever played electric music. But none of the punch they pack was been lost in their transition to an all-folk outfit.

One of the things that makes a [illegible] always great when a band can connect directly to the audience despite being surrounded by gear and lights, and being raised up on a stage. Cordelia's Dad keep a sharp sense of humor and a personable attitude at their shows, never building the normal audience/performer dichotomy.

The band has recently added fiddler Laura Risk to the long–standing lineup of Peter Irvine (percussion and vocals), Cash Oss (toy accordion, mountain dulcimer, and vocals) and Tim Eriksen (guitar, banjo, vocals).

Friday's show saw a lot more unaccompanied pieces than shows in the recent past. Eriksen, Oss and sometimes Irvine harmonized through several incredibly loud vocal songs that could maybe be called shouts, and Eriksen took a few on his own, [illegible] excellent voice that complements each other well.

Risk showed what she can do with her fiddle on a couple of solo pieces. One of the particularly interesting things about her style is how she sometimes works her bow softly enough on the strings that you can hear the aural textures of the rosin gripping the stretched gut. It's as if she's about to play so softly that she fades out, but she never loses her grip on the rhythm or the tune.

The band has a knack for digging up gems of raunchy folk with lyrics that are risqué. In "Lay a Leg Over Me Do" we heard the explicit story of a sleepy nighttime encounter involving tight underwear and the knives that undo them. "The Old Spencer Rifle" was hysterical, but also had ominous undertones, making the equation between guns and penises pretty direct. "Queen Jane" raised goosebumps with the tragedy of its sexual mishap, and a new song sung by Eriksen expressed such earnest passions that it he gave it a little disclaimer. "I sense some people wondering whether or not to clap for that one," he said. "You don't have to applaud the sentiment."

This is one busy bunch of musicians. Cordelia's Dad's new album is slated to come out this summer. The band still has strong connections to the Valley (their home area), but has also been spending a lot of time on the road. They recently returned from a British tour, and have also been out west and in Canada.

Oss, Irvine and Eriksen have spun-off the electric side of their performances into the new band lo. They've been touring under that moniker and have an upcoming album with producer Steve Albini. The three also play backup with a new band, Zabe, that does Bosnian folk, pop, and contemporary dance music and was the subject of a recent PBS feature.Don't miss Cordelia's Dad's next performance, coming later this spring at the Black Sheep Cafe in Amherst.

Leticia hits Bluewall

By Greg Sanderson
Collegian Correspondent

LETICIA
Bluewall
Feb. 26

Patrons of the Bluewall Cafe here at the University of Massachusetts had the opportunity to savor a taste of neo– folk rock in the form of one–to–watch band, Leticia. As lead vocalist Leticia herself mentioned, the lunchtime performance on Wednesday of last week was much more of an acoustic set than the band were used to doing. This could perhaps have been due to the size of the stage in the cafe, which was just big enough to accommodate Leticia (playing acoustic guitar), backing vocalist Andrea Talbot and bassist Rhys Davies.

Despite lacking the lead guitarist and drummer that usually accompany them, the three musicians performed a varied and refreshingly original hour–long set. Although the band's first album, No Songs About Trains (1993), tended towards gentle melodies and acoustic folk, much of Wednesday's music pointed to a harder folk rock direction that will be evident on Leticia's new album, Barely, set for release sometime in the next two months on the Blue Rose label. The stand–out songs from the set were in this style, particularly their new single, "Day At The Beach," and "All Hope," which will be a b–side on the single. Also of note was the fabulous rocker "Rope Swing," taken from Leticia's 1995 Vietnam EP.

The band is taking a month off to prepare to tour with their new album, and may well appear later on this year in Northampton. When interviewed recently on WMUA about the band's more rock–oriented approach, they admitted that they had been influenced by British bands such as Oasis, Radiohead and Garbage.

Leticia have strong support from WMUA and in particular from the folk/hard rock show "Dreamline," which airs from midnight to 2 a.m. on Saturday nights. Fans of Leticia will be pleased to know that the new album will be profiled on "Dreamline," along with information about the band's tour dates, and there are plans for the band to perform a full live set on WMUA sometime in the near future.

COURTESY STEVEN VOTE

Leticia brought sounds from their new EP Vietnam last week.

Concert offers taste of Middle East

By Seema Gangadharkar
Collegian Staff

SIMON SHAHEEN, ANATOLIA AND FRIENDS
Bowker Auditorium
March 1

An Afghani carpet, bathed in orange–red light, set the background for an evening of Arabic and Turkish folk songs and dances. Saturday evening's performance marked the first time a concert of Arabic and Turkish music took place on the University of Massachusetts campus.

Sponsored by the Asian Dance and Music Program at the Fine Arts Center, the concert featured Simon Shaheen, a musician widely considered to be one of the premier ambassadors of Middle Eastern music and culture. Joining Shaheen was the western Massachusetts group, Anatolia, as well as the Boston–based Turkish folk dance group, Kemence, and a group of guest musicians.

The guest musicians included vocalist Ghada Ghanem, Najib Shaheen, Mohammed Mesaoud and Bruce Rawan.

The concert was divided into two parts. The first part featured Anatolia and the Kemence Dancers.

Anatolia began their program with a folk song from southern Turkey called "Keranfil Deste Gider." They followed that up with "Uskudar," a folk song hailing from Istanbul.

Edward Hines provided most of the vocals for Anatolia's song, along with playing several instruments including the 'ud, divan, kaval, clarinet and zurna.

Backing Hines up were Taner Oktatan on the saz, percussion and vocals and Michel Moushabeck on percussion. Najib Shaheen, a prominent 'ud player, also provided additional vocals. Rawan, one of the leading qanum (plucked zither) players in the world, and Mesaoud on the reed flute, rounded out the group.

Anatolia captured the flavor of the Middle East in their music. Hines explained that a lot of Turkish and Arabic music was based on microtones, rather than the conventional whole steps and half–steps in Western music. The microtones are notes separated by as little as an eighth apart from each other in tone.

Probably the most distinctive aspect of the music was the unconventional rhythms. Rather than the regular beat associated with Western music, Anatolia's songs featured rhythms that varied both in pattern and volume.

The Kemence Dancers performed three times in the first half of the concert. Their first dance, "Silifke," came from southern Turkey. The dancers, dressed in colorful, native costumes, performed an intricate piece. Their other two dances, "Ben Giderim Batuma" and

Turn to TURKISH MUSIC page 6

DOLORES HUERTA
Co-Founder and Secretary/Treasurer,
United Farm Workers of America
and
DR. VERNON W. BRIGGS, JR.
Professor of Labor Economics
School of Labor and Industrial Relations, Cornell University

IMMIGRATION LIMITS?
PRO AND CON

Wednesday, March 5, 7:30 p.m.
Wright Hall Auditorium, Smith College

Sponsored by the Campus Climate Working Group
and the Hewlett Fund

Are you a person who has trouble staying with an exercise program? If you are looking for a way to effectively alter an already existing program, or begin a new program, or begin a new program especially designed for your unique goals, then join the innovative resistance training programs developed by our unique

Personal Training Staff

Allow our fitness experts to design exercise programs that meet specific needs like:

- Traditional resistance training programs developed for novice or advanced individuals
- How to find a program designed for individuals with lower back pain
- Dance-exercise resistance training programs
- Incorporating meditation while training with weights

The Coordinator will select the most experienced trainer depending on your individual goals

Cost: $50 includes 5 visits with Personal Trainer
initial fitness assessment to determine which program suits your individuals needs, and an orientation session with trainer
Those interested in learning how to conduct a healthy lifestyle, contact Coordinator of Personal Trainers Tinaz Hakim at 259-2011.

The Textbook Annex reminds you to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, SOON!

Before Spring Break!

We are beginning to return unsold text books to the publisher.

Faculty offers night of wonder

By Amelia Catone
Collegian Correspondent

FIVE COLLEGE FACULTY DANCE CONCERT
Hampshire College
Feb. 26

The opening night of the Five College Dance Concert last Wednesday at Hampshire College proved to be a superb sampling of the spectrum of dance genres. With a myriad of nationally acclaimed choreographers, pieces ranged from a ballet pas deux to an improvisational trio who danced, sang and played accordions.

The concert opened with husband and wife dancers Charles and Rose Marie Flachs — both professors of dance at Mt. Holyoke College — performing "Les Petits Riens," a late 18th Century collaborative piece between choreographer Jean-George Nouverre and Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. The original movements and score were lost, but Roger Blum's choreography captured the sparkling essence of Mozart's piece. A ballet pointe piece, the dancers wore simple, yet elegant, costumes of azure designed by Bernard Johnson.

Smith College guest artist Jin-Wen Yu choreographed and performed a modern solo to Chopin's Nocturne Opus 27, no. 1. Glowing candles were interspersed across the floor as Dr. Yu bounded with impeccably strong movements to Chopin's somber, flowing piano.

The number entitled "Nice and Easy" was a modern lyrical piece with music by Shirley Horn. Bill Bob Brown, an assistant professor of dance at the University of Massachusetts, accompanied choreographer — and fellow professor — Rebecca Nordstrom of Hampshire College. The two danced out the difficulties of taking it nice and easy with sensual movements.

Jin-Wen Yu's choreographical work in progress, entitled "Take and Give," featured six student dancers from the Five College area performing to music by Karl Jenkins. Continuing with his theme of props designed by Dan Rist. Yu incorporated hundreds of tissues stuffed into various holes in the dancers' body stockings. Beginning in large brown paper boxes, the dancers tantalized and snatched the tissues from each other, an ironic reflection on consumerism.

Acrobatic poses and lifts permeated the modern piece, as dancers' movements matched Jenkins' intense string composition. This dance, commissioned by the Chinese Information and Cultural Center, will be formally premiered at the Taipei Theater in New York this June.

Inspired by an R. M. Rilke poem, "Die Blatter Fallen" (The Leaves are Falling), was a profound piece by Terese Freedman and Jim Coleman, both Artists in Residence/ Associate Professors of Dance at Mt. Holyoke College. Each dancer had clay covering heads, hands and feet. Resembling aliens, Freedman and Coleman seemed to age as the clay dried and cracked. The piece ended as Freedman slowly chipped off her furrowed visage and it crumbled onto Coleman.

As a form of comic relief, the next piece was an improvised "Trio" from Amherst and Mt. Holyoke. With dancing, singing and accompaniment by accordions, hand drums, a sitar and piano, the group's comedic performance set the mood for the rest of the concert.

Eleven women from all of the Five Colleges closed out the performance with a modern piece entitled "Roll Over..." to Beethoven's first movement from his Eighth Symphony. Choreographed by Terese Freedman, the playful dancers scurried across the floor as others dove into place. A marvelous command of choreography and dance was exhibited.

The Five College Faculty Dance Concert continues through Saturday, March 1 at the Dance Studio Theatre at Hampshire College. All shows begin at 8 p.m. Call (413) 582-5673 for prices and to reserve tickets.

Notorious sites worth the trip

By Ted Anthony
Associated Press

The building is ramshackle, a decaying amalgam of brick and wood that was once a place called Bryant's Grocery. Today it sits unattended in Money, Miss., a silent reminder of a 14-year-old boy's murder.

There, in 1955, Emmett Till, a black youth, said "Bye, baby" to a white woman and was kidnapped, tortured and killed for it. It is one of more than 40 places depicted by photographer Joel Sternfeld in On This Site: Landscape in Memoriam (Chronicle, $27.50, paperback), a book unsettling in its simplicity and its starkness.

For Sternfeld, an event marks a place indelibly. His plain, haunting photos — always devoid of people — evoke the bad things that took place in ways people simply cannot.

There is the corner of Florence and Normandie avenues in Los Angeles, where trucker Reginald Denny was beaten during the 1992 riots. There is the nondescript Morton Thiokol testing facility in Promontory, Utah, where the infamous O-rings on the space shuttle Challenger were tested. And the red seat in the Dallas theater in which Lee Harvey Oswald was sitting when he was arrested.

In a world of object fetishism, where things often seem to mean as much as the people who use them, this is the ultimate extension: the place itself as tangible object, as the only living physical reminder of moments in time when horrible things happened.

Sternfeld's eye on the world is an unusual one, and well worth exploring.

Here's a new idea: Call it "mortiography," or better yet, "Who's Who From Beyond the Grave" — the chronicling of famous people who died young or unnaturally.

It is an interesting premise, one explored in rather excruciating detail by Diana Karanikas Harvey and Jackson Harvey in Dead Before Their Time (Metrobooks, $15.98), a crypsic book that tries to explore the nexus between celebrity and death.

The book is more of an illustrated catalog, really, broken down like a good Health Department mortality-morbidity report into such categories as drug overdoses, accidents, suicide and murder.

Death, of course, has a way of equalizing, so here, Lou Gehrig shares space with Heather O'Rourke, the towheaded child from Poltergeist who died of an intestinal obstruction. Rudolph Valentino is just pages away from corpulent drag queen Divine. And Elvis is followed in short order by Jon-Erik Hexum, the Eurohunk who, in a freak accident, shot himself to death with a blank pistol on the set of his equally ill-fated mid-80s TV show, "Cover Up."

Though Dead Before Their Time lacks focus and would probably work better not as a coffee-table book but as a paperback to plunder when you're just, well, sitting around, it's still a rather impressive encyclopedic look at how — and why, and with whom and under what circumstances — some famous people met their rewards.

■ turkish music

continued from page 5

"Karadeniz Dansi," both originated from the Black Sea coast.

The dancers, with their hands linked the entire time, performed these two dances with a lot of energy and intricate footwork.

The second half of the concert featured Simon Shaheen, Anatolia and Ghada Ghanem.

Simon Shaheen, due to some travel difficulties, had just arrived from Minneapolis at 7 p.m., about an hour before he was to play. However, his late arrival in Amherst did not affect his playing.

Simon Shaheen, backed by Anatolia, performed first on the violin in a composition he wrote titled "Sema'i Kurd Shaheen." He then followed the opener with a "Violin Taqasim" (improvisations).

Simon Shaheen's improvisations on the violin were excellent. His sound was loud and clear and there was a preciseness to each note. Unlike many improvisational artists, Simon Shaheen's playing was very smooth and flowing.

Ghanem joined Simon Shaheen and Anatolia on "Muwashahat: Saharatna El Basamat."

Ghanem, who has been trained in both Near Eastern and Western classical music, delivered a wonderful performance, demonstrating clearly the differences between Western style of singing versus Near Eastern.

Ghanem's voice was very rich and throaty, and flowed soothingly over the words.

Simon Shaheen then performed an 'ud solo, showing off the stringed instrument which most closely resembles the European lute. The concert closed with an Eastern Arabic Folkloric Suite, which was arranged by Simon Shaheen and vocals provided by Ghanem.

Saturday night's concert showcased a wide variety of music and dance from Turkey and the Middle East, showing that art can be a pleasant and relaxing way of learning about another culture.

BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR
American Heart Association. Fighting Heart Disease and Stroke Volunteer.
For more information, contact your local American Heart Association or call 1-800-AHA-USA1

In Celebration of International Women's Month we invite you to...

A Week with Maria Elena Pineda Campesina Artist from Nicaragua

March 3: Opening Reception for The Ideal and the Real:
"Art and revolution in Nicaraguan Campesion Painting"
5:00 - 7:00 pm

March 4: Reception
7:00 - 9:00 pm
Latin American Cultural Center
All staff and students invited for an informal discussion!

March 5: Women Studies Brown Bag Lecture Series:
featuring: Maria Elena Pineda
A Presentation of social, political and ecological issues that inform her art
Augusta Savage Gallery
12:00 - 1:30 pm

These events were sponsored by The Everywoman's Center. The Office of ALANA Affairs, Women's Studies Department, Latin American Cultural Center, Latin American Studies Program, Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund, and the Dean's Office Graduate School.

COURTESY NOYES

Marcus Roberts and his trio played jazz in both suite and twisted hard-bop forms Friday night at the Iron Horse.

Pianist takes jazz for a wild ride

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

MARCUS ROBERTS TRIO
Iron Horse Music Hall
Feb. 28

NORTHAMPTON — Imagination is the key to great jazz. Imagination is something that should flow through all the technical knowledge that a jazz musician holds into a sound all her/his own. There is a problem with the state of jazz nowadays in which all too many players — even those who long ago crafted their own styles — are reverting to the crowd-friendly feel and rhythm of the be-bop style of the '50s. However, for the better part of Marcus Roberts' first Friday night set at the Iron Horse, he stepped out of this constricting norm.

Roberts' trio of himself on piano, Thaddeus Expose on bass and Ali Jackson on drums, played a long suite-like string of melodies and solos that lasted for the first hour or so of the set. Roberts' solos swung between romantic classical balladry reminiscent of Frederic Chopin and boogie woogie and ragtime chops that he may have picked up from Albert Ammons or Jelly Roll Morton. Out of these solos he would lead his accompanists through a somewhat be-bop-ish melody line, but once he had stated a melody, and his associates took up their solos, they left Charlie Parker at the door.

Expose often bowed his bass during his suite solos, evoking a nocturnal, haunting sound. Also, at times he would even furiously pluck the strings in a moment of chaotic free-jazz acoustic bass expertise. Jackson was also in on the non-restrictive show. He used his drums to state the little melodies running through his head. Using drums not only as a rhythmic but also as a melodic instrument is the mark of a player of great abilities.

After the trio's suite, they brought a few friends up on stage. Alvin Batiste, on clarinet, had played the previous night at the Hampden Theatre, and Richard Brown, playing the tenor saxophone was a local Boston player. These two musicians formed a quartet that treated John Coltrane's "Cousin Mary," Roberts' own "Softly In The Morning... Sunrise" and Thelonious Monk's "Raise 4" with great respect and honor, all taking be-bop for a long ride around tight corners at night with the headlights out. A night that featured jazz as it should be played — differently.

UPC is Searching for
The BEST UMASS Band
participate in the
"Battle of the Bands"
April 9th at the Student Union Ballroom
The Winner will Perform at the
Spring Concert May 10, 1997
• • • Exposure to 15,000 Concert Goers • • •
* * * Possible MTV Exposure * * *
• • • Great Competition with other Local Bands • • •
7 Bands Will Be Chosen To Perform
Submissions MUST be in by Wednesday, March 12
Submissions must be made to Jennifer Kenyon, Jennifer Giroux, or Larry Feinberg at the UPC Office - 415 Student Union or call 545-2892

Suppan working to pitch in majors again

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Jeff Suppan felt a little like he was starting over yesterday after last season's elbow injury. He even had an unhappy flashback to his first major-league game.

Minnesota's Matt Lawton hit Suppan's second pitch over the right-field fence. In Suppan's debut July 17, 1995, Kansas City's Keith Lockhart also hit his second pitch for a homer.

"I almost felt like I was throwing against the Royals again," Suppan joked after pitching the first two innings in the Boston Red Sox 12-3 win over the Twins.

Yet the righty who once was Boston's top pitching prospect has come a long way since then — not all of it forward — even though he only turned 22 two months ago.

He had three outstanding minor-league seasons but, starting with Lockhart's homer, had a 5.96 ERA and 1-2 record in eight major-league games in 1995. He began last season with the Red Sox but spent most of it in the minors.

On Aug. 25, he went on the disabled list for the rest of the season with a strained right elbow. New manager Jimy Williams says he's one of several contenders for the fifth spot in the rotation. Suppan's main goal is to stay healthy.

"My only concern is for my career right now," Suppan said. "I'm just taking things slow. Obviously, I want to make the team out of spring training."

"I don't know him unhealthy," Williams said. "I just know him healthy. He's been good here."

Suppan hurt his arm throwing a curveball and said he still is reluctant to throw it in a game, although he's done it in spring training workouts.

Yesterday, he threw only fastballs and changeups.

"I usually don't get a good curveball until midspring training," he said, "I really don't think it should be that much of a mental block but it is somewhat right now."

He gave up three hits and a walk and hit a batter yesterday, but said he felt fine even though he was tired after facing 10 hitters. His immediate goal is to strengthen his arm and make Williams' decision on the starting rotation a tough one.

Suppan's not sure if he'd prefer to begin the season as a starter in the minors or a reliever in the majors.

"I feel I am a starter, but right now it's not my decision to make. That's too far in the future," he said. "I'm just trying to get good quality innings in spring training and build back the arm strength."

In 1994, Suppan tied for the Florida State League lead with 13 wins. In 1995, his 2.36 ERA at Double A Trenton earned him a promotion to Boston but he eventually went to Triple A Pawtucket. In 16 games with Boston, he is just 2-3 with a 6.75 ERA. But he was happy with Sunday's performance.

"It's almost like starting over again, but [I'm] a little smarter," Suppan said. He praised the approach of new pitching coach Joe Kerrigan, who is trying to simplify things by stressing the basics.

"A lot of times, for any prospect, you always have to take a step back when you get to the big leagues," Suppan said. "As you're moving up it's, 'OK, just do well, keep improving, and you go up.' Once you get to the big leagues, you need to win. [They] give you some space, but you need to win."

North Carolina beats Duke as Jamison scores 1000th

By Chris Duncan
Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Antawn Jamison scored 33 points and grabbed 11 rebounds yesterday to lead No. 8 North Carolina to a 91-85 victory over No. 7 Duke, the Tar Heels' eighth straight in the Atlantic Coast Conference after an 0-3 league start.

The Tar Heels (21-6, 11-5) finished second in the conference and have been no worse than third in the ACC standings in 33 seasons. The win also moved North Carolina coach Dean Smith within four of tying the career victory total of Kentucky's Adolph Rupp at 876.

The Blue Devils (23-7, 12-4), who had won seven regular-season title when Florida State beat Wake Forest on Saturday, trailed by nine points at halftime but trimmed the deficit to three on a three-point play by Ricky Price with 11:18 left.

North Carolina used its superior size and inside muscle to push the lead to back to 10 with 8:33 left and to 82-69 with 5:35 remaining.

Duke then mustered a 14-5 run to cut the lead to 87-83 with 1:51 left, but the Tar Heels made four of six free throws in the final 39 seconds to seal the win.

Steve Wojciechowski scored 18 points to lead Duke, while Jeff Capel added 15.

Smith started Webb Tyndall, Charlie McNairy and Serge Zwikker — the three seniors playing in their final home game — along with Jamison and Shammond Williams.

After Duke scored the first five points, Smith replaced the seldom-used Tyndall and McNairy with Vince Carter and Ademola Okulaja.

The Blue Devils built a 26-17 lead with 10:07 left in the half after a 3-pointer by Trajan Langdon.

But a putback by Carter and a layin by Zwikker started a 26-6 run over the next five minutes. The Tar Heels' defense relegated the Blue Devils to perimeter shots during the run while their offense generated shots inside.

Ed Cota's putback with 5:41 left in the half tied the game at 29-29 and Jamison's breakaway layup at 5:26 gave the Tar Heels their first lead of the game, 31-29.

Duke's only baskets during the run were 3-pointers by Wojciechowski and Langdon.

North Carolina led 45-32 with 2:30 left in the half, but Wojciechowski and Capel hit 3-pointers to help Duke draw to within nine at halftime.

Duke has won the ACC title 12 times, including four this decade.

■ minutemen

continued from page 12

Feeding off the emotional momentum of the pre-game ceremony, the Minutemen took care of business, defeating Temple 59-53.

While Senior Day games are looked at as chances for the honorees to fuel the offensive fire and score career-highs, the Minutemen were more interested in a team effort — a fact that was obvious when the final box score was tabulated. Two of the three double digit scorers for UMass were sophomores.

But the seniors who were donning the school colors on their home court for the final time were instrumental in that team effort. Separately each played his role to near- perfection, together they boosted their team.

Weeks, the first of the pre-game honorees, has been a quiet, consistent leader for the Minutemen all season — Saturday was no different. He scored his first points of the day on a turn-around jumper with 10:18 remaining in the first half. For the rest of the half he would add three more from the foul line.

But it was not Weeks' scoring (he finished with nine points) that mattered to UMass. It was his work under the boards and on the glass. It was what he did in the paint to prevent the Owls' inside game from cutting into the Minuteman advantage.

What the Philadelphia native did was pull down 13 rebounds, nine in the game's first frame. He helped shut down Temple forwards Lamont Barnes and Lynard Stewart, who ended the game with two and five points, respectively.

And he scored, one basket in particular with a flourish. When the clock read 4:04 remaining in the game, Weeks took a pass from Charlton Clarke and leapt. What resulted was a one-handed jam, Weeks' first dunk in collegiate play.

Padilla was the second of the program's leaders to take the floor. About a month ago, Flint spoke about the point guard at one of UMass' weekly sports luncheons. He said Padilla's role was to lead the UMass charge, anticipate and create. He said that Padilla should know every position on the court.

This weekend, Padilla not only knew who was on the court, where and how to play in that position, he knew where people were going before they made a move. He anticipated, he created, he led the offense — he was the quintessential point guard.

He finished with only five points, but Flint had said at that same sports luncheon that Padilla's scoring was a bonus if he ran the point well. That scoring bonus came in the form of Padilla's only long distance shot of the afternoon, a trey at 9:43 left in the game that broke a dead-even tie and put the Minutemen up by three, 47-44. It was the shot that gave UMass the lead for good — a shot that sparked the UM offense.

Padilla also contributed to the team concept by grabbing steals and forcing Temple into turning the ball over.

The Puerto Rico native came up with three steals on the day, and was responsible for several of the Owls' 10 turnovers.

Travieso, the final member of the hoop team's Class of '97, is in essence a scorer. His position can be described as an off-guard or as the No. 2 spot, but it is most commonly referred to as the shooting guard. By definition, that means that Travieso gets the ball and Travieso shoots the ball.

Shoot the ball he did, as Travieso connected for 15 points on 5-for-12 shooting. But the guard didn't shoot the ball from just anywhere, he shot from downtown. Every shot Travieso hit was from behind the arc.

He started his attack immediately, hitting his first shot only three minutes into the game. He drained another to give UMass the lead, 18-17, with 9:02 left in the half. Two more came at crucial moments that gave the Minutemen the lead in both situations.

Travieso's final trifecta came in the UMass scoring run which gave the Minutemen the lead for good. Following a pair of free throws from Lari Ketner, every other UMass starter scored. Travieso netted a 3-pointer.

It seemed only right that on the day honoring three of the most instrumental members of their team, the Minutemen beat one of their most bitter rivals. It was appropriate that each of the seniors performed their duties to a tee, executing their jobs near-perfectly. And it was fitting that each of those seniors, whose games have been molded by the concept of team play, stood in the spotlight together.

sam goody musicland
FREE SINGLE
Purchase any two compact discs with a regular price of $9.99 each or higher with your MasterCard® card and receive a FREE CD single or cassette single.
Offer Not Valid Without This Coupon
Offer and coupon valid 2/1/97 to 5/1/97. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® card. Coupon must be redeemed at the time of purchase. Offer does not apply to prior purchases and cannot be used in conjunction with any other coupon or offer. Any reproduction, copy or facsimile will not be accepted. Offer valid on regular-priced, in-stock merchandise only at any participating Sam Goody or Musicland store.
STORES: ENTER MARKDOWN CODE #646
UPC CODE 80100-00646
MasterCard Exclusives FOR COLLEGE

EXPRESS
SAVE 15%
The hottest fashion trends from London to Tokyo—all in one place. Use this coupon and your MasterCard® card to save 15% on everything you want from Express Express. What's new Now
Offer Not Valid Without This Coupon
Offer and coupon valid 2/1/97 to 5/1/97. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® card. Coupon must be redeemed at the time of purchase. Offer does not apply to prior purchases and cannot be used to purchase gift certificates. This coupon cannot be combined with any other coupon or discount. It is valid at all Express stores for Express merchandise only. It is not valid at Structure or Bath & Body Works stores. Associates at Express and its affiliates and immediate family members are not eligible to receive this discount.
AUTHORIZATION #503
MasterCard Exclusives FOR COLLEGE

TWEEDS
SAVE 15%
Save 15% on your first order when you use your MasterCard® card. Call 1-800-433-3600 to request a FREE catalog. Mention code GGWA when making purchase.
Offer valid 2/1/97 to 5/1/97. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® card. Offer void where prohibited, taxed, or restricted. Coupon may not be combined with any other coupon or discount. Offer does not apply to shipping and handling. Limit one order per person.
MasterCard Exclusives FOR COLLEGE

DAY-TIMER
SAVE 50%
"Get organized" and plan your busy schedule with the company that invented the personal organizer. Pay just $19.95 for the complete Day-Timer portable home-leaf system—a savings of 50% when you use your MasterCard® card. System includes:
• Black zippered binder
• Full year of dated pages
• FREE binder personalization
• FREE AM/FM stereo headphones
• FREE shipping
Call Day-Timer, Inc. at 1-800-225-5005. Mention Key #133294 to get this trial offer for students. Use product #APP7529X to order.
Offer valid 2/1/97 to 5/1/97. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® card. Limit one order per person. 100% SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.
MasterCard Exclusives FOR COLLEGE

The Athlete's Foot
SAVE 10%
Save 10% on any purchase of $50 or more when you use this coupon and your MasterCard® card at participating stores. To locate the store nearest you, call 1-800-353-FOOT (1-800-353-3668) or visit us on the Internet at www.theathletesfoot.com
Offer Not Valid Without This Coupon
Offer and coupon valid 2/1/97 to 5/1/97. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® card. Coupon must be redeemed at the time of purchase. Offer not valid with any other offer or discount, a previous purchase. Offer valid at all participating The Athlete's Foot stores in the U.S.
CODE: 10
MasterCard Exclusives FOR COLLEGE

STUDY EUROPE

SYRACUSE ABROAD IN STRASBOURG

EUROPEAN STUDIES CERTIFICATE

COUNCIL OF EUROPE INTERNSHIPS

GENEROUS GRANTS & SCHOLARSHIPS

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
119 Euclid Avenue
Syracuse, NY 13244-4170
1-800-235-3472
suabroad@syr.edu
http://sumweb.syr.edu/dipa

JOHMA KANGANEN / COLLEGIAN

Kelly Van Huisen and her fellow Minutewomen came up short of winning the A-10 Tournament, as they fell to the Colonials last night.

■ minutewomen

continued from page 12

said.

UMass was close early, trailing 10-7 at 15:30 after a Beth Kuzmeski 3-pointer. But the Colonials, spurred on by a raucous crowd, reeled off an 18-2 run, and the Minutewomen never recovered.

"UMass is a dangerous team," said GW coach Joe McKeown, the A-10 Coach of the Year. "Over the last few years, [UMass] has dictated the tempo of the game."

That wasn't the case last night. Because of that, O'Brien and the rest of the UMass squad were left to wonder whether this was the last game for seniors Crystal Carroll and Northampton's Beth Kuzmeski. The two have had remarkable careers.

"A lot was made of the contributions of last year's class," O'Brien reflected. "And they were great. But this class right here helped put us over the edge."

Carroll was a 1,000 point scorer, and had her four years of hard work pay off in the form of a first team all-conference selection this year. Kuzmeski, a sharp-shooter, broke the all-time mark for 3-pointers in a career in her sophomore season.

Sabriya Mitchell, the team's other senior, is eligible to return next season due to a new rule instituted by the NCAA regarding potential qualifiers.

But UMass has a nice crop of young underclassmen to ease the loss of Carroll and Kuzmeski. Freshman Kelly Van Huisen scored a team-high nine points in last night's loss. If UMass does not make the NCAA's, seven players from this year's roster return alongside Van Huisen for next year.

Last night's game saw UMass shoot

■ hockey

continued from page 12

Northeastern at Walter Brown Arena; Merrimack College warmly inviting Boston College to the cold confines of the Volpe Complex; and last season's HE champ in Providence College taking on UMass-Lowell at Schneider Arena.

LISA OLIVER / COLLEGIAN

Rumble and tumble

Write
For Collegian Sports
Now.

This Week in the Campus Center

INFORMATION, NEW PRODUCTS & SERVICES, AND MORE FROM THE CAMPUS CENTER/STUDENT UNION COMPLEX

University Store Stop by for weekly specials!
Save 20%
• WOMEN'S STUDIES BOOKS
• ALL UMASS STUFFED ANIMALS
• ALL TRAVEL BOOKS
(Spring break is coming!!)

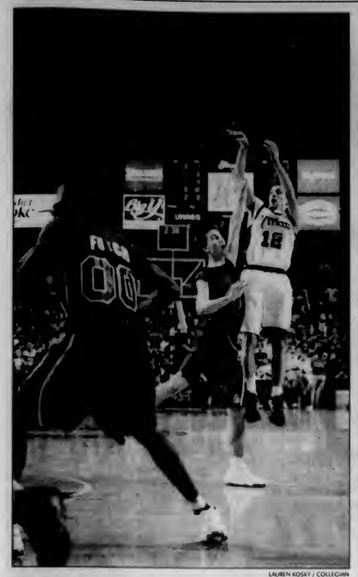
Sterilite Dorm Supplies
Bottles, Bowls, Stacking Crates and more
Save 20%

Save 75% All Pictoral Calendars

Gear Sideline Jackets
reg. $49.99
NOW ONLY $34.99

Campus Center/Student Union
WEEKLY SPECIALS

THE CAMPUS SENDER
224 LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
• Peter Pan Bus Tickets
• U.S. Post Office
• Shipping Service via UPS
• Self service copier
Now Open!
Come in and take a look!
Conveniently located (formerly McGregor Travel)



From Ore Ida and The Blue Wall!
BREW CITY FRIES
AT THE BLUEWALL
11:30 AM - 9:30 PM
BEER BATTERED ONION RINGS, FRENCH FRIES, AND MOZZARELLA STICKS

Depression is an illness- not a weakness.
TREAT DEPRESSION
http://www.save.org

Bucci
HAIRCUTS $10. always
25 n pleasant st amherst 256.0733
145 main st northampton 586.0155

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE™
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Free Info Session
Wednesday, March 5th
7:00pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
Shop Around & Compare!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!!

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Edgar Padilla had five points, three assists and three steals in his Senior Day game.

■ notebook

candidates."

Prosser, however, is not without his backers.

"Skip Prosser," Martelli said. "Because I think he's done the unexpected."

But as Skinner said, there are other candidates.

"As far as Coach of the Year is concerned, I though Phil did a great job," Dayton's Oliver Purnell said. "And I thought Bruiser did a great job of riding his team through the injuries. Skip Prosser, John Chaney had a young club, a young backcourt. It's all going to make for a great tournament."

Player of the Year

There are certainly even more candidates for Player of the Year, and coaches hardly hesitate when hawking their own students.

"He really separates himself from everyone else," Skinner said of his stand-out guard, Tyson Wheeler. "He's had some tremendous games from the standpoint of scoring. I hope people recognize and appreciate that he's an outstanding player for us."

La Salle's Speedy Morris was quick to promote Explorer guard Mike Gizzi.

"I think Mike Gizzi, he brings his lunch pail to work every day and made himself a Division I player," Morris said. "He's done a real good job the last two years. He's no longer a secret, they key on him now."

St. Bonaventure coach Jim Baron mentioned Rashaan Palmer as a possibility.

"I think Rashaan Palmer has had a year," Baron said. "He's been consistent, he's certainly a scorer, he really takes it to the bucket."

Martelli was also interested in creating hype about one of his players.

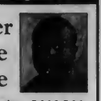
"I think the one player who is our MVP is Rashid Bey, a great point guard in a league of great point guards," he said. "If I had to pick a team in this league I wouldn't hesitate to start a team with Rashid Bey."

• The Atlantic 10 Tournament match-ups have been set, and Wednesday's game are as follows: Fordham and Virginia Tech play at noon; Dayton tips off against St. Bonaventure at 2 p.m.; UMass and La Salle play at 7 p.m.; and Temple and Duquesne square off at 9 p.m.

On Thursday, the winner of the Dayton-St. Bonnie game faces East No. 1 St. Joe's at noon; the Ram-Hokie victor plays East No. 2 Rhode Island at 2 p.m.; the UMass-La Salle winner plays George Washington at 4 p.m.; and the winner of the Owl-Duke game plays Xavier at 7 p.m.

Semifinals will be played on Friday, with a champion to be crowned after Saturday's final.

Massachusetts 96, George Washington 77



Massachusetts 59, Temple 53
March 1 at the William D. Mullins Center

Temple (17-9, 10-6)
Barnes 1-3 0-0 2, Stewart 1-9 3-4 5, Jackson 5-13 1-2 11, Sanchez 7-14 1-1 17, Brokenborough 5-14 3-4 15, Futch 0-0 0-0 0, Dunkley 1-2 0-0 3, Sanders 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 20-55 8-11 53.

Massachusetts (18-12, 11-5)
Clarke 7-16 1-2 16, Weeks 2-6 5-6 9, Ketner 4-5 4-5 12, Padilla 2-7 0-0 5, Travieso 5-12 0-0 15, Mackey 0-0 0-0 0, Smith 0-0 0-0 0, Kirkland 0-0 0-0 0, Babul 0-0 0-0 0, Norville 0-1 2-2 2. Totals 20-47 12-15 59.

Halftime — Massachusetts, 35-32. 3-point Field Goals — Temple 5 (Sanchez 2, Brokenborough 2), Massachusetts 7 (Travieso 5). Rebounds — Temple 34 (Sanchez 8), Massachusetts 29 (Weeks 13). Assists — Temple 4 (Barnes, Stewart, Jackson, Sanchez), Massachusetts 13 (Padilla 4, Travieso 4). Fouled Out — Jackson. Total Fouls — Temple 12, Massachusetts 11. Attendance — 9,493.

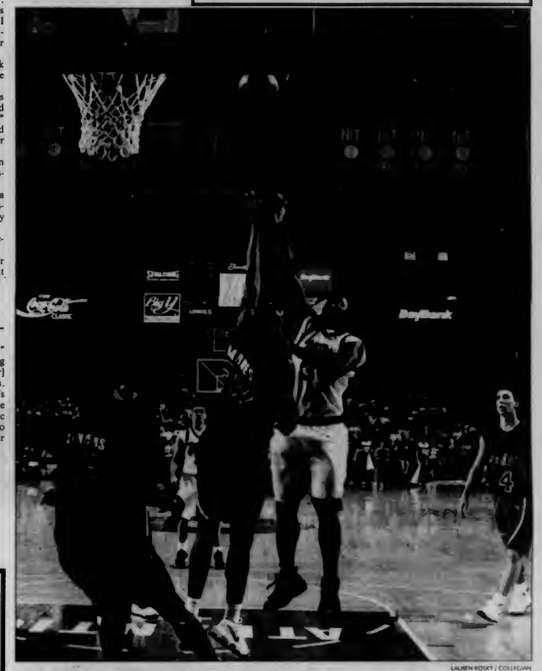
Player of the Game

Charlton Clarke – 7-16 1-2 16

Highlights...

UMass jumped out to a quick lead and controlled a late surge from Temple to beat the Owls for the seventh straight time at the Mullins Center... Charlton Clarke and Larl Ketner took some of the spotlight off of the UMass seniors, who were honored before the game, as each turned in double-figure scoring games... Carmelo Travieso hit five shots from downtown to score all of his 15 points... Tyrone Weeks wowed the Mullins Center faithful with the first dunk of his collegiate career...

■ basketball



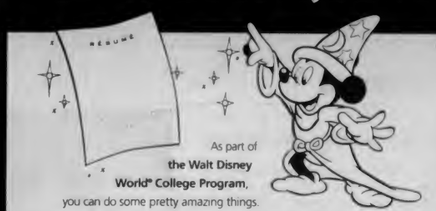
continued from page 12

the court, celebrating the win and sending off the team's three seniors, attention now shifts to the postseason.

"This season has been very special, because the guys never gave up," UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "We've had some tough times with the team, but the guys stuck together and pulled themselves out of it.

"We needed to win the BC game, we won the BC game. We needed to win the Maryland game, and we won the Maryland game. We needed to win this one, so we got this one, our guys have always come through when we really need it."

Now the Minutemen look ahead to the conference tourney in which they will face La Salle in the first round on Wednesday. "We'll watch the tape," Flint said. "Hey, they've got the leading scorer in the conference [Donnie Carr] and they have really good guards. Their guards really play that zone, it's almost like playing against Temple again, but they don't have Marc Jackson and Lamont Barnes. We got to contain their guards and attack their zone."



LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Tyrone Weeks was a monster under the boards for UMass in Saturday's game against Temple, as he pulled down 13 boards.

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
(888) 211-OCMP
Present
Dining Out
COMING MARCH 26
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates call 545-3500

Sure We Build Amazing Theme Parks, But We Also Build Amazing Résumés.

As part of the Walt Disney World® College Program, you can do some pretty amazing things.
• Learn from some of the top managers in the hospitality and entertainment industry.
• Work behind the scenes at the world's number one vacation destination.
• Live with people from all over the world.
The opportunities are priceless! And so is the experience. You must attend our Casting Session to be considered. Start building up that résumé now.
Ask our Representative about special opportunities for those students who speak Portuguese.
INFO SESSION DATE: Tuesday, March 4 TIME: 7 pm
LOCATION: Bartlett Hall, Room 65
FOR MORE INFO, CONTACT: Jeff Silver (413) 545-6265
Also visit us at www.careermosaic.com/cm/wdw/wdw1.html
Walt Disney World Co.
EOE • Drawing Creativity from Diversity

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Here's your chance to make UMass feel a little smaller. Come check out IGU. We may be a sorority, but not all sororities are the same! RUSH IDTA GAMMA UPSILON 7:00pm 3/3, 3/4, 3/5 For more information, call Sara, 549-6461

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Jeep Wreagler black, nice tires/rims Very reliable Runs great $3000 or B/O Call 256-1080

1988 Ford Escort 5-speed, A/C, 119K, runs well- $1900 or B/O. 533-8413

1986 Honda Civic white, 5-speed, 4-door, excellent condition. $2000 or B/O 253-3746

1989 DAYTONA TURBO 5-speed, A/C, defiach face stereo, T-tops, 88K miles Asking $3000 or B/O. 549-2643

EMPLOYMENT

Boichertowo Recreation Dept. Seeking swim coaches (May-July) Experience preferred M-F, EOE, ADA. Call Beth, Day (413)323-0419 Night (413)967-4651

National Parks Hiring Plus Forest, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting Companies. Up to $12/hour. Nationwide Openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext. R180

EMPLOYMENT

MAKE SUMMER MEMORIES JOBS AVAILABLE TOP NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS MARCH 11th.

Positions Available: basketball, softball, roller hockey, tennis, lacrosse, swimming(WSI), sailing(WSI), water skiing, arts and crafts (ceramics, sewing, scenery, woodworking, photography, fine arts), science and nature, pioneering, ropes course and climbing wall, archery, gymnastics, drama, music, horseback riding, and general counselors.

MUST BE ENTHUSIASTIC AND LOVE WORKING WITH CHILDREN AND ADULTS!!!!

PLEASE CALL TO SET UP AN INTERVIEW.

TRAIL'S END CAMP (800)408-1404 (ASK FOR MARC)

Premiere Brother/Sister Camps in Massachusetts Do-Campus Interviews Counselor positions for talented and energetic students in all team Sports, especially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball; 30 Tennis Openings, also Golf, Archery, Riflery, Ropes and Rock Climbing, Weight/Fitness and Cycling, other openings include Performing Arts, Fine Arts, Figure Skating, Newspaper, Photography, Yearbook, Radio Station, Rocketry, Swimming, Skiing, Sailing, Windsurfing, Canoeing and Kayaking. Top salaries, room, board and travel. June 22nd-August 20th. Call for information. MAH-KEE-NAC(boys) 1-800-753-9118 DANBEE(girls) 1-800-392-3752 Recruiters On-Campus Tuesday, March 11th, 10am. to 4pm. at the UMass Day Camp.

EMPLOYMENT

Concessions: Top Boys' Sports Camp in Maine Get in on an exciting, fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist. Openings in: Baseball, Basketball, Soccer, Tennis, Hockey, Lax, Swimming(WSI), Water-skiing and all Water Sports, plus: Camping and Hiking, Ropes and Climbing Wall, Scuba, English Horseback Riding, Archery, Riflery, Arts and Crafts, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top salaries, awesome facilities, mom/board, laundry, travel. Call (800) number now! (800)473-6104 for an appointment for an interview on March 11 in the Student Union Ballroom, 10am-4pm., or E-mail cobbecamp@aol.com or write: Steve Rubin, Camp Cobbcssee (Kah puh-see) 10 Silvermine Dr., South Salem, NY 10590

Do You Love Kids? Top Northeast Residential Camps seek: Activity and Cabin Specialists to live and work with kids ages 7-16. Great facilities, dynamic staff! Flexible, diverse programming in all Water/Land Sports, Creative and Performing Arts, plus full-range of outdoors/experiential activities. Lots of positions available. Contact Andy at: Staff Search, (800)544-5448 for more information/application. Interviewing in Amherst, March 10-11

WEBMASTER NEEDED For New College Business. Html Experience Required. 549-9919

RESTAURANT
Looking for dedicated people Part-Time/Full-Time for fast food restaurant. Great hours. Must be available year round. 583-1080 New England Job Placement Restaurant Staffing Services.

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Camp Positions in upstate New York. Camp Hilltop is seeking caring counselors with skills in swimming, water and land sports, A&C, horses, dance, music, mountain biking, riflery, archery, computers, high/low ropes. Competitive salaries. (800)782-5319

SAT Prep Course Teacher $15/hour. Needed in all parts of Massachusetts. Undergraduate degree preferred. Excellent Verbal and Math scores required. Call (800)808-7737. Please leave your name and telephone number.

FUN! FRIENDLY! Co-ed Summer Camp in the Berkshires seeks new staff! Welcoming and supportive environment. Positions include: General Bunk Counselors, Heads and Instructors for Swimming, Sailing, Water-skiing, Baseball/Softball, Golf, Gymnastics, Lacrosse, Hockey, Archery, Soccer, Music, Pottery, Tennis, Horseback and more. Day Off accessibility to Boston, New York, Montreal. Call Today! Camp Schodack (800)451-1164. E-Mail Schodack@aol.com

Camp Canadensis, Pocono Mtns., Pennsylvania. Excellent residential co-ed summer camp. Caring counselors to teach Video, Photography, Newspaper, Yearbook, Drama, Music and more! Great salaries. 6/21/97- 8/18/97 Call (800)572-8228 for an application.

Camp Blue Ridge A Co-ed overnight camp 2 hours north of Atlanta, is looking for enthusiastic counselors. We are hiring lifeguards and WSI, as well as specialists in all sports, water skiing, rappelling, hiking, arts and crafts, riflery and archery. For info. contact Debra at 665-8463

EMPLOYMENT

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT- How would you like to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, and get paid? Call: (206)971-3554 ext. C50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext C50017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

College Kids Welcome to Cape Cod 1-5 bedroom homes for the season. Reasonable rates. Honey Sperco (508)398-9367, (508)394-2857

1 bedroom in a 3 bedroom apt. Pelham Village. On major bus route. 5 min. from campus/10 min. walking distance. Electric not included $275/month Lease ends 8/97. Starts ASAP. Please call Larry 545-0198

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern, two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856

FOR RENT

Pelham 2 bedroom Mobile Home Gas, heat. No pets. First, last and security. $500/month. 253-5413

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses. Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

New Large Dorm Fridge Price negotiable. Also snowboard with bindings Call 253-9965

King Size Bed with headboard. Good condition, $80. Weight machine- great condition, $80. (410)625-7467

Mac Classics Style Writers carrying cases. Works/Word. Call Sarah (413)585-6208

KLH 3-Way 350W SPKRS DBL 12" Woofers, $750/Pr. Call 253-6520

Mad Crazy Cheap Floppies DD & HD $5, 546-6963

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Niki Love, Suite 306

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Three private 1/2 hour lessons. $69.95 Call (413)732-8817 in Amherst Tues. and Thurs. eve

MISCELLANEOUS

Gorillagrams
Birthdays; Anniversaries, Roses, Balloons, etc. Send the Crazy Gorilla We'll go anywhere, anytime Student Rates Call 256-0287

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)668-4763

ROOMMATE WANTED

Wanted: House or Apartment 4-6 bedrooms near campus for Fall '97. Call Tracey 549-7451 or Deb 549-9503

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

PREP-COURSES GRE/GMAT
30 hours, $295
American Academy
1-800-806-PREP
(Please leave your name and number)

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Spring Break '97 Don't be left out! Space limited! Cancun and Jamaica from $449, Florida from $139. Call STS @ 1-800-648-4849 for the best rates!

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13; 2 nights lodging and round trip bus $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

TRAVEL

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15; studio, $650/week; (413)786-7133 Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $729 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Europe $155. Canbb./Mexico $189 R/T. Worldwide Destinations. Airhitch. I'm (800)326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com or www.is-com.fr/airhitch

Your Ad

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the invention order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the invention order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserving the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS APARTMENT FOR RENT AUTO FOR SALE COMMUNITY EVENTS EMPLOYMENT ENTERTAINMENT FOR SALE FOUND (2 DAYS FREE) HAPPY BIRTHDAY HOUSES FOR RENT INSTRUCTION LOST MUSICIANS MISCELLANEOUS MOTORCYCLES PERSONALS ROOM FOR RENT ROOM WANTED ROOMMATE WANTED SERVICES SUMMER SUBLET TO SUBLET TRAVEL TRANSPORTATION WANTED TO RENT WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, MARCH 3

Lecture — The UMass Hillel House sponsors Danny Rubenstein, columnist and political reporter for Ha'aretz Newspaper in Jerusalem on "Reporting from the Eye of the Storm: Tales of an Israeli Journalist" at 7:30 p.m. in the Hillel House.

Meeting — UVC-TV 19 will have a station meeting at 7 p.m. in the studio located at 216 Student Union Building next to the University Outlet Store. Topics to be discussed include upcoming elections. New members and the curious are invited to come and learn how to get involved with student television.

Workshop — The Learning Support Services will offer a Micro Word for Beginners workshop from 9-10:30 a.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Free. Call 545-5334 to register.

Concert — Local band

TUESDAY, MARCH 4

Slumberland will be performing at the Sights 'n Sounds concert in the Student Union Art Gallery at 8 p.m. Free.

Workshop — The Learning Support Services will offer a Note Taking & Study Skills workshop from 3:45-5 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Free. Call 545-5334 to register.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5

Meeting — the Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

NOTICES

Elections — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the elections for the positions of President, Student Trustee and all local Area Government will be held on March 11 and 12 from 11 a.m.-2 p.m. and 4:30-7 p.m. Locations to be announced.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one-acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon-2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at 413-323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Band wanted — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently seeking a four piece band for the spring production of Fame. The band must include: keyboard, guitar, bass, and drums. Great publicity possibilities. For more information call Heather at 549-3681 or Justin at 546-0460.

Coffee Shop — Student Valley Productions is holding a Coffee Shop in April. They are looking for any talent coming from the Five College area in music, songs, poetry, skits, comedy, etc. For more information, call Daisy at 253- 6514.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6-7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577-5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577- 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

FYI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

UMass, Amherst, Mount Holyoke, Smith and Hampshire

This could be your space
If you have a FYI announcement for a free Five College event, you can take advantage of the Collegian's Free College Community Calendar.

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

Daily Listings sponsored by:

Bueno Y Sano
1 Blotwood Walk in Amherst

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN/Headline News
25	BET
26	BET on Jazz
27	UCTV
28	The Learning Channel
29	TV Land
30	Comedy Central
32	Much Music

Bueno Y Sano 253-4000

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 3, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(12) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		A Laugh, a Tear, a Mitzvah			Israel Beyond	Women's College Basketball:	Big East Semi
WFSB	3	(3) News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Cosby	Raymond	Cybill	Ink (In Stereo)	EZ Streets "A Terrible Beauty"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	(4) News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Cosby	Raymond	Cybill	Ink (In Stereo)	EZ Streets "A Terrible Beauty"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	(5) News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Spy Game "Why Spy?"			"The Apocalypse Watch" (1997, Suspense) Patrick Bergin,			News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Full House	Fresh Prince		Star Trek: Next Gener.		7th Heaven "Halloween" (R)	With Roger	With Roger	News	Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7		NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Foxworthy		★★½ "Lethal Weapon 2" (1989, Drama) Mel Gibson, Danny Glover, (In Stereo)			News		Tonight Show
WTXX	8	(8) Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV (R)	In the House		Malcolm-Eddie	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV (R)
WVIT	9	(9) News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Foxworthy		★★½ "Lethal Weapon 2" (1989, Drama) Mel Gibson, Danny Glover, (In Stereo)			News		Tonight Show
WTIC	61	(11) Simpsons	Rosanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Melrose Place (In Stereo)		Married... With Pauly			News	Coach	Babylon 5
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Foxworthy		★★½ "Lethal Weapon 2" (1989, Drama) Mel Gibson, Danny Glover, (In Stereo)			News		Tonight Show
WGBY	57	(4) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		How Serious is This?				Midlife Survival Guide			Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	(2) News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Spy Game "Why Spy?"		"The Apocalypse Watch" (1997, Suspense) Patrick Bergin,			News		Nightline
WSBK	38	Basketball	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld		NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Toronto Maple Leafs. (Live)					News	Mad Abo. You	Real TV (R)
WTBS	52	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★★★ "Trapped" (1989, Suspense) Kathleen Quinlan, Bruce Abbott,			★★½ "Buried Alive" (1990, Suspense) Tim Matheson,
A&E	43	Quincy "Death of Death"		Equalizer (Part 1 of 2)		Biography: Donald Trump		Patriot		Miss Marple (Part 1 of 2)		Law & Order
CNN	29	(29) World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	63	(28) Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	★★½ "Farrik Bueller's Day Off" (1986) Matthew Broderick,				On Delivery	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	60	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings (R)		Wild Discovery: World-Bats		Science of Twins		Airpower Showdown "Fighters		Wild Discovery: World-Bats
ESPN	49	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Metro Atlantic Conf. Championship				College Basketball: MVC Championship -- Teams TBA				Sportscenter
LIFE	69	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)			"Fatal Deception: Mrs. Lee Harvey Oswald" (1993, Drama)			Intimate Portrait
MTV	51	Howard Stern	J. McCarthy	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)				Road Rules	Daria	Singled Out	Lovelina
NICK	68	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI	66	Star Wars Tril.	Sci-Fi Trader	Time Trax "The Price of Honor"		Wild Palms. "Everything Must Go" (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 3)					TV (R) (In Stereo)	Wings	Wild Palms (R)
TLC	59	(26) Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Extreme Machines			Bermuda Triangle		Futuro Fantastic		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	53	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		WCW Nitro (Live)					Adventures of Robin Hood	WCW Nitro (R)
USA	62	Renegade "Rancho Escondido"		Highlander: The Series		World Wrestling Federation Monday Night Raw					Le Femme Nikita "Escape"	Wings	Wings
HBO	30	(5:45) "Adventures of Buckaroo Banzai"			Testament	★★ "Assistance" (1995, Drama) Sylvester Stallone. "R"					★★½ "The Juror" (1996, Suspense) Demi Moore (In Stereo) "R"
MAX	35	(5:45) ★★★ "Ghost" (1990, Fantasy) Patrick Swayze. "PG-13"				★★½ "Pee-wee's Big Adventure" (1985) "PG"			★½ "Digital Man" (1995) Ken Olandt. "R"				"Calling the Ghosts" (1996) "NR"
SHOW	31	★★ "Robin of Locksley" (1996, Drama) Devon Sawa. "PG"				★★½ "The Quick and the Dead" (1995) "R"					★★ "Machine Gun Blues" (1996, Drama) "R"	On the Set	"Fortunes Wars"

Daily Collegian

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN — Monday, March 3, 1997 / Page 11

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University* By Frank Cho

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

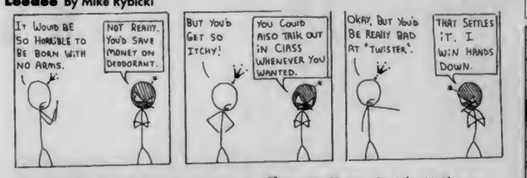
Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Chick Cutlet	Chicken w/ Rice Stuff
Turkey Tetrazzini	Spaghetti/Snozzage
Philly Cheez Stake	Tofu Balls
	Burgers

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Sneeze	Chick w/ Rice Stuff
Spaghetti	Black-Eyed Peas
Hearlty Latin Stew	Meatball Grinder



Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Burger	Chicken w/ Rice Stuff
Chick Cutlet	Spaghetti/Snozzage
Turkey Tetrazzini

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Sneeze	Chicken w/ Rice Stuff
Spaghetti	Shrimp 'n' Snozzage
Wheatball Grinder	Black-Eyed Peas
	Meatball Grinder

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

For The Week Of February 2-8

ARIES
March 21-April 20
If high stress levels are starting to get you down, ask for a little help from someone who knows what he or she is talking about. A partner or friend could be leading you in the wrong direction when it comes to an important decision. Make up your own mind

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Your better judgment may say one thing, but this time you need to listen to your heart. Look both ways before you cross the street, but then go and don't look back! Treat a friend to a sample of your humongous generosity. It'll boost both of your spirits.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Getting back to the simpler things in life could prove to be just the ticket for adding to your happiness quotient. Your professional life may need to take a back seat to your personal life right now. Try a new hobby if you're interested in making a friend

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Exercise is the key to your moods this week. There's no need to go overboard, but a new change of pace will do you a lot of good. Beware of all sales this week. It would be easy to blow your budget on something you don't really need

LEO
July 23-August 23
A small event sets the stage for a bigger change to come. Be sure you're prepared, whether that means calling on friends and family for support, doing a little reading, or just planning ahead. You're unbelievable now- so don't be afraid to get out and do new things.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
A cleaning event leaves you feeling zapped and worn. A long distance acquaintance or friend has some good ideas you could use to replenish your energies. Watch out for someone who isn't quite who they seem to be at first glance.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Everyday details demand most of your time at this point. If you possibly can, don't neglect anything and try to get ahead on some things. You will appreciate the extra free time in the near future. A friend calls with some surprising—and exciting!—news.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Following your first instinct will get you into trouble this week. Enlist a friend to help you step back and examine all your options before making a decision. A romantic interlude improves your outlook when it comes to your personal life.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
You'll succeed at anything you try this week, so aim high. The sky's the limit! Embark upon a new friendship or relationship; try a new hobby—even return to school. As long as you're at it, why not take inventory of your personal and professional skills?

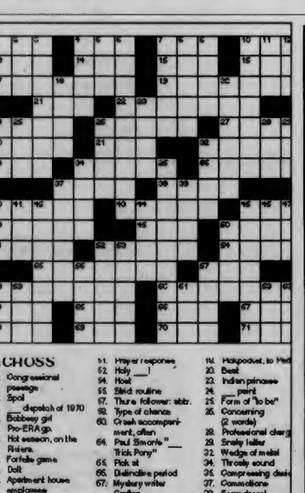
CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
The long, boring, post-holiday stretch is nearly at an end. Be mindful of small changes in a friend's behavior that could signal a need. Your quiet support will be appreciated. Try to get outdoors this weekend, even if the weather's a bit chilly.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Recent unfortunate combine with current obstacles to create a volatile mix. You may feel a bit at loose ends and a bit unappreciated, too. Try not to let it get you down. Instead, spend some quiet time alone and try to gain a new perspective on events.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
A walk through the snow with a loved one means a perfect time to communicate and have some fun, too. Don't be afraid to let the kid in you have free rein. Whether it's a snowball fight or another sports treat, you'll heaven good laugh and enjoy yourself.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson



Determined to keep heating bills to a minimum, Ken had the contractor install a placebo thermostat in the new house.

Quote of the Day

"Preserve your memories because everything else ends up in a garage sale."

-Ferris Bueller
"Ferris Bueller's Day Off"

ACROSS
1. Congressional passage
4. Spot
7. ___ dispatch of 1970
10. Subway girl
13. Pro-ERA gp.
14. Hot season, on the Riviera
15. Portable game
16. Doll
17. Apartment house employee
19. Olden time indicator
21. Saint, in Mozambique
22. Jaffa and Bonilla
25. Electrical measure
26. Stop!, nautically
27. Knotts role on "The Andy Griffith Show"
30. Tried
31. ___ Juan
32. Monica of tennis
33. DDE's party: abbr.
34. Otherwise's relative
35. 15th U.S. president
37. If the ___ fits...
39. News item, for short
40. Prop up
41. Stone- or acid-washed material
45. Flanders and McBain
48. Mesenchyme cells
49. Toothpaste's gp.
50. "I ___ Pretty"
51. Mayer response
52. Holy ___!
54. Noel
55. Staid routine
57. That's Hollywood: abbr.
59. Type of chance
60. Crash accompaniment, often
64. Paul Simon's "___ Trick Pony"
65. Pick at
66. Dalindra period
67. Mystery writer Grafton
68. Wheel group
69. Sinatra ___ whip (2 words)
70. Singer Gibson
71. Cowpotato's nickname

DOWN
1. Conjunction
2. Peace talk?
3. Ballroom dance (2 words)
4. Piece of E-mail
5. Gobbled up
6. Pastid
7. Marxwell and Lanchester
8. Climb
9. "Brian's ___"
10. How kids do most things
11. Motorsled club inits.
12. Gridiron gp.
18. Hodgepodge, to Hadi
20. Beat
22. Indian princess
24. ___ point
25. Form of "to be"
26. Concerning (2 words)
28. Professional clergy
29. Smoky hollar
32. Wedge of metal
34. Throaty sound
36. Compressing dash
37. Commodore
38. Sweetness' ___ tapa
40. Youth gp.
41. Eve's mister
42. Prompted
44. Hearts ___
46. Most macabre
47. FDR or JFK, e.g.
47. Like a fox
50. Dubbing cost
52. Giddens touch tune
53. Greek finale
56. Actress Lollobrigida
57. Noisy quarrel
58. Odalisk's alley
59. One: Spanish
61. Emily Bronte fire
62. Signal
63. Bewitch

Leold (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

My ex-girlfriend Sheila is hassling me about who owns this special gold edition Batman comic book.

She says it's hers.
I think it's mine.
Really I don't care.
I'd just like to totally end this whole thing with her.

This break-up torments me. I can't sleep well. I wish it would go away.

I wish she'd go off and die somewhere. No, I don't mean that. But maybe she could develop a limp. No, no, I don't mean that either.

You know what would be nice....?
A very slight facial twitch
.....
something to remember me by.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, March 3, 1997

▼ SPORTS THIS WEEK

MEN'S HOOP	MEN'S HOCKEY	WOMEN'S WATER POLO	BASEBALL	GYMNASTICS	MEN'S LACROSSE	WOMEN'S LACROSSE
March 5th - 8th Atlantic 10 Tournament @Philadelphia, PA	March 7th Hockey East Tournament @NH 7:00pm	March 7th - 9th UMASS Tournament	March 11th @ [illegible] 1:00pm	March 8th @ [illegible] 12:00pm	March 8th @ FAIRFIELD 1:00pm March 11th vs. HARTFORD @Springfield 2:00pm	March 8th WILLIAM & MARY TOURNAMENT

Whole team shines in UMass' Senior Day victory

Minutemen earn No. 3 East seed in A–10

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's basketball team has had some big wins throughout the regular season. First it was the 63- 59 win over Boston College in January which revived hope in a roller-coaster season. A month later, the Minutemen jumped back into the national spotlight destroying then–No. 10 Maryland 78–61.

On Saturday, the Minutemen earned a 59–53 win over Temple that in a week, may be considered the win which earned UMass an NCAA berth.

In a game whose score was tied nine times from wire to wire, the Minutemen last tied the game at 44 with 10:56 remaining on a pair of Lari Ketner free throws. From then on, UMass pushed ahead for the win.

In fact, the final 10 minutes of play were indicative of the Minutemen's style throughout — a complete team game where all five starters knocked down key buckets along the final stretch.

A pair of 3–pointers by Carmelo Travieso and his backcourt mate Edgar Padilla extended the lead to four (50– 46), leading up to something the William D. Mullins Center faithful have never seen before.

With 4:04 on the clock, senior big man Tyrone Weeks grabbed a pass from Charlton Clarke and registered the first dunk of his collegiate career, ironically enough, in his last home game of the season.

"I just jumped," Weeks reflected. "I wanted to laugh, but there were six minutes left in the game so I waited until there were about two seconds left to laugh. But it was great, now everybody can get off my back about not dunking, especially my teammates."

It was another jam, in the game's final 15 seconds that sealed UMass' win with authority.

Senior Carmelo Travieso (15 points) put up a baseline 3–pointer that clanked off the rim, where Lari Ketner collected the miss in the paint, throwing down a one–handed jam to give UMass a 58–53 advantage.

"I saw Carmelo shooting it up and Jackson had turned his back to me," Ketner said. "So I just had a clear path to the hoop."

To Temple coach John Chaney, the monster jam was courtesy of center Marc Jackson who didn't have his eye on Ketner and the ball.

"He [Jackson] didn't move quick enough to get the ball," Chaney said. "Perhaps he became a victim of sight and flight of the ball."

That play was indicative of the way Ketner (12 pts, 4 rebounds) handled Jackson all afternoon. The UMass center, who plays against Jackson in the pair's hometown of Philadelphia over the summer, knew what he had to do get the upper hand.

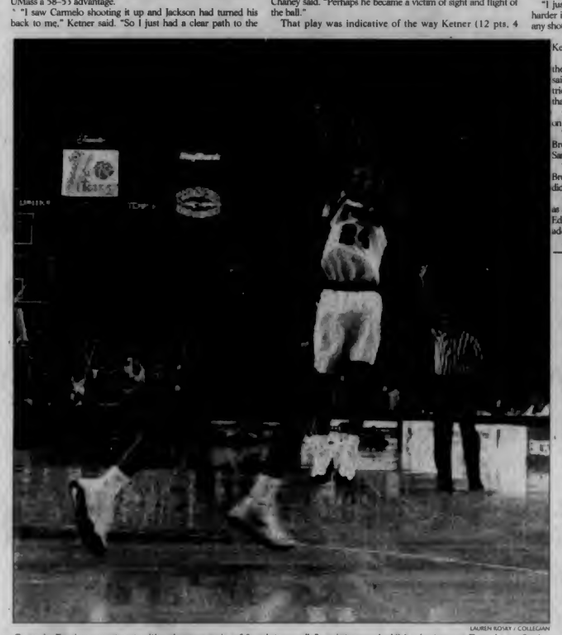
"I got out of rebound position early because I tried to block his shots. But in the end coach told me I had to turn it up and start grabbing some rebounds," Ketner said. "I knew he's not athletic, so I knew he was going to back me in and try to shoot over me or get me with some up fakes.

"I just wanted to stay on the ground and make him work harder in the post so when he did get the ball, he wouldn't get any shots because he was so tired."

Chaney cited the three UMass big bodies (Weeks, Ketner and Imus Norville) as a key in neutralizing his play.

"I talked about Marc in terms of getting underneath their arms and forcing three guys to foul him," Chaney said. "He did get in the center, he did get in traffic, but he tried to shoot a free shot without getting fouled rather than getting in harm's way."

On the rebounding side of the game, Weeks was relentless on the glass, tallying 13 boards in addition to three blocks.



The Temple offense was led by sophomore Rasheed Brockenborough and freshman point guard Juan "Pepe" Sanchez, who combined for 32 points.

"We did a pretty good job on those guys [Sanchez and Brockenborough] down in Philadelphia," Flint said. "They didn't score a basket in the first half down in Philadelphia."

In the first half, neither team opened up a substantial lead as a result of both squads' tough defense. Senior point guard Edgar Padilla was able to convert steals to UMass points in addition to forcing Temple turnovers.

As a flock of fans poured out from the stands onto

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 9

LAUREN ROSEN / COLLEGIAN

Carmelo Travieso went out with a bang, scoring 15 points — all 3–pointers — in UMass' win over Temple on Senior Day.

Seniors, teammates give real team effort

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Tyrone Weeks held one of his little sisters as he put his arm around his mother. Carmelo Travieso was flanked by his sisters as well. Edgar Padilla walked out with his mother and father, who had participated in the same ceremony a year previous.

Three of the Massachusetts men's basketball team's cornerstones were honored before Saturday's game against Temple, as thousands of fans waved signs, balloons and even Puerto Rican flags honoring Padilla and Travieso's heritage.

Weeks, Travieso and Padilla will forever be associated with the pinnacle of UMass basketball, a trip to the 1996 Final Four. They will be remembered in the same context as the most recognizable of Minuteman names — Jim McCoy, Harper Williams, Lou Roe to name a few. The trio will be talked about in the same breath as Donta Bright and Dana Dingle, teammates on that Final Four squad.

It was an touching ceremony, emotional without being overdone. UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint hugged all three players and then showed them a clipboard with some of the plays he had mapped out for the game. He was, in essence saying, "Let's go to work."

Travieso had said two days before the Temple game that once the Senior Day festivities were over, it would be all business. He wasn't kidding.

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 7

Candidates still up in the air for Coach, Player of the Year in A- 10 Conference

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

While the debate over whether or not the Atlantic 10 should receive five bids to the NCAA Tournament rages on, there is also the question over who will be named the conference's coach and player of the year.

Coach of the Year

Xavier's Skip Prosser and St. Joseph's Phil Martelli have been mentioned as likely candidates, as each put together unexpectedly strong seasons.

It makes for a tough choice, but some of the conference's coaches have made their decisions.

"I'm not taking anything away from Skip, but I think Phil is the Coach of the Year," Massachusetts coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "They lost a lot of guys that were very, very important to the program."

Rhode Island's Al Skinner agrees with Flint.

"Coach of the Year? I think the one surprise is Phil," Skinner said. "No one anticipated them doing as well as they have, but there's a couple of

Turn to NOTEBOOK, page 8

UMass falls to Maine & seals up HE playoff spot

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

If you're just a plain hockey fan, you can look at No. 10 Maine's 10–3 win over the Massachusetts hockey team and say, "Hey! You're still on probation!"

Yet, reality and basic journalistic integrity states the truth must be told, even if the victor is staying home and the vanquished will be on the road for the postseason.

The Black Bears continued their recent domination over the Minutemen this weekend in Orono, Maine, sweeping their season series on their own Senior Night. A near– capacity Alfond Arena was witness to their graduating seniors' last game, and Dan Shermerhorn and Reg Cardinal obliged, tallying two goals each in the 10–3 victory.

The Minutemen's own senior class represented themselves on Saturday night, with forwards Warren Norris (1 goal, 1 assist) and Tom Perry scoring a goal apiece. It was Norris who got UMass on the board first, netting an unassisted goal on a breakaway just 3:29 into the game.

But it was Shermerhorn who got Maine right back into the game, scoring a power play goal less than a minute later. The Black Bears went on to score four more unanswered goals, until Perry stopped the bleeding with his power play score at the 10:50 mark of the second period, with junior defenseman Brad Norton and Norris assisting on the play.

After junior Shawn Wansborough's score made it once again a four–goal deficit, freshman Jeff Blanchard cut the margin to 6–3 on another UMass breakaway goal with 1:35 left in the period.

Maine mercilessly came back in the third period, though, scoring four goals (two by Cardinal) to pace themselves to the final of 10–3.

Hockey East Notes: It is official, and after New Hampshire's loss to Boston University on Saturday night, UMass will be heading to Durham, N.H. this weekend for the first round of the HE playoffs. The best out of three series will start on Friday night, and go on through the weekend.

The two teams played to two tight 1–0 and 5–4 contests earlier this season at the Mullins Center, with the Minutemen unfortunately ending up on the losing end. But on Feb. 1, the Wildcats ran rampant on Towse Rink at the Whittemore Center, skating away with a 10–0 win.

The other first round playoff matches are all set for this upcoming weekend, with BU hosting

Turn to HOCKEY, page 8

UM women's hoop falls to powerful GW

By Mike Reiss
Special to the Collegian

WASHINGTON, D.C. — George Washington's Tajama Abraham was recently named the Atlantic 10 Conference Player of the Year. Teammate Noelia Gomez, in the same voting, was tabbed the Newcomer of the Year.

Last night, it was that combination of old reliable and new sparkplug that led No. 18 GW to an 80–39 victory over UMass in the semifinal round of the A–10 Tournament at the Charles E. Smith Center.

Abraham, a senior shotblocking center who has a promising professional future upcoming in either the ABL or the WNBA, scored 23 points on 10–of–15 shooting.

George Washington	80
Massachusetts	39

Gomez, a junior from Madrid playing in her first season at George Washington, added 22 points on 9–of–13 shooting.

UMass dropped to 18–10 on the year, and now awaits a potential bid to the NCAA Tournament. GW improves to 25–4, and plays in the tournament final against St. Joseph's tonight (5 p.m., ESPN2). St. Joe's defeated La Salle in the night's other semifinal to set up the match–up between the league's two No.1 seeds.

GW was the No. 1 seed out of the West, while St. Joe's was top–ranked out of the East. UMass was the No. 2 seed in the East.

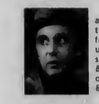
The Colonials have now won 22 straight games, the third longest streak in the nation. In addition, GW has won 35 in a row on its home floor, which is the second longest spree in Division I.

Abraham and Gomez are a main reason for the success.

"In my six years of coaching, this is the best GW team I've ever seen," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 8

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN



Sabriya Mitchell and the UMass women's hoop team could not muster enough power to beat GW last night in the A–10 Tournament.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 94 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, March 4, 1997

Trust and ethics on the silver screen

Johnny Depp and Al Pacino learn the meaning of friendship under unusual circumstances in Donnie Brasco. Check out our review (See Arts & Living, page 8).

Postseason play begins

Tomorrow night, the UMass men's basketball team faces La Salle in the first round of the A-10 Tournament (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Castro offers asylum for Peruvian rebels

HAVANA (AP) — President Fidel Castro, saying he was fulfilling a "moral duty," offered asylum yesterday to Peruvian guerrillas holding 72 hostages in Lima.

Castro's offer came after Peruvian President Alberto Fujimori made a surprise visit to Cuba, seeking Castro's help in ending the hostage crisis, in which rebels have been holding 72 top Peruvian officials since December.

"This is a moral duty, not a position taken merely for advantages," Castro told reporters after seeing off Fujimori, who returned to Lima late yesterday.

Earlier, after a red-carpet welcome that underlined how rarely heads of state visit Cuba and his talks with Castro, Fujimori said Castro had expressed a willingness to accept the rebels if asked to do so.

Fujimori did not say whether such a request was made.

"The discussion was fruitful," Fujimori said, adding that the Cuban leader showed "good will" during three hours of talks. "Cuba is willing to cooperate ... but not to participate as a mediator."

Fujimori said the two "discussed some points that I can't disclose" because discussions on the hostage situation "must be discreet."

NATION

Arizona's English-only law remains undecided

PHOENIX (AP) — The thorny issue of English-only laws was left unresolved yesterday after the U.S. Supreme Court sidestepped an Arizona case that had been expected to decide the constitutionality of such measures in 23 states.

The justices unanimously ruled that the Arizona dispute over efforts to make English the official state language became moot years ago when the state employee who brought the challenge left her government job.

The net effect of the Supreme Court ruling: reinstatement of a 1988 measure that made English Arizona's official language and required state government actions to be taken in English.

The limited, procedural decision also leaves the situation unchanged in other states. In California, that means no additional momentum for an "English only" initiative approved by voters in 1986 but never enforced.

"They didn't address the real issue, but at some point they are going to have to," said California state Sen. Richard Mountjoy, who helped lead several unsuccessful Republican efforts to enforce the initiative.

The court's ruling, delivered in a 37-page opinion by Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, noted that the English-only measure is the subject of another challenge now before the Arizona Supreme Court. The state court "may now rule definitively," she said.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	day	day
HIGH: 35 LOW: 15	HIGH: 55 LOW: 30	HIGH: 40 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

Students take Goodell; demands issued

ALANA students negotiate; Protesters offer reaction to new set of demands on table yesterday's takeover & rally

Humphrey brown III & Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

With tired eyes and high hopes, the small core group of approximately 15 ALANA (Asian American, Latin American, African American and Native American) students, ended their first meeting last night with key University of Massachusetts administrators with promises to continue the negotiations process tomorrow morning.

The six hours of negotiations lasted throughout the greater part of yesterday's student protest. The demonstrators left the meeting resolved to spend the night inside the building they have been occupying for most of the day, until their demands are met.

What began as a non–violent rally, consisting of approximately 175 participants on the Student Union Steps yesterday morning, turned into a peaceful occupation of the Controller's Office in the Goodell building shortly afterwards. The coalition of ALANA and white students had occupied the office since approximately 10 a.m. yesterday morning.

Upon entering Goodell, the group presented a list of demands addressed to Chancellor David K. Scott via a messenger to Whitmore. Deputy Vice Chancellor Marcellete Williams responded on behalf of Chancellor Scott, who is out of the country and will not be back in Amherst until next week.

The list of demands includes various issues facing students of color at UMass including; diversification of the undergraduate student representation, more financial aid and financial aid services and diversification of the faculty and staff.

Other demands included a need for more ALANA recruiters in the Office of Admissions, active outreach for ALANA and first generation low–income students, recognition of ethnicity though American studies, more graduate students of color, better ALANA support programs, an administrative office of ALANA affairs and child care.

The takeover began small as a few students placed themselves in the Controller's Office, clogging the main entrance, while other students continued to rally outside the Student Union. Using the rally as a diversion tactic, students filtered from the rally bit by bit into the Goodell building.

Inside, students sat and waited for administrators to come down from Whitmore to begin negotiations.

The Controller's Office is in charge of overseeing the policies and procedures of the administration, faculty and staff. According to Tom Mathers, associate controller for the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts, the office deals with travel reimbursement, administrative grants, faculty research contracts and annual financial statements.

"We're the hub of the bureaucratic wheel," Mathers said, "We do everything for the general administration of the University."

The students waited for the workers to relinquish their office space. However, according to Mathers, workers were instructed to continue the functioning of the office until they received official word from UMass administration.

"What better way to let the administration know that we need to get them here," said sophomore

Turn to ALANA, page 2

See Related Story, pg 3

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

Yesterday, a large number of University of Massachusetts students took over the Controller's Office in the Goodell Building in response to what they see as growing negligence on the part of the administration against the student body.

The protesters gathered in front of the Student Union Ballroom at 10 a.m., and proceeded to march to Goodell Building. The group of protesters, consisting of ALANA (African, Latino, Asian, Native American) and white students, occupied the Controller's Office in Goodell even after the Administrative Negotiating Team arrived. The occupation continued through the night.

The purpose of the rally was to protest what some students see as a lack of commitment on the part of the University in fulfilling the 1992 ALANA agreements, and to push new 1997 demands, such as an increase in recruitment and retention of students of color, eliminating holds on pre– registration and late fees, and the return of an Upward Bound program to track poor students in college.

Jonan Murchea expressed how he feels the Controller's Office is an ideal place to take over.

"Students of color are being deprived of coming to school because they don't have the money," he said. "We want to accomplish an increase [in the number] of students of color; that's one of our demands," Murchea said.

A band of protesters rallied in front of the building with signs and took turns speaking on a microphone, in an effort to encourage more students to come inside and take a stand.

Many students brought their books to the takeover site or went home to get work, saying it was a testament to how adamant they are in their resolve to have their demands met, even if it meant spending the entire night.

The atmosphere inside the office was at first very serious and tense, especially when the Administration arrived. The later presence of the police added to the true severity of the situation at hand.

The negotiations ensued for hours, and to many it seemed that nothing was being settled. Some observers sensed an air of anxiety and impatience pervading the Controller's Office as students and faculty protesters awaited reports on the negotiation's status.

To keep morale up, students engaged in group activities. Some Native American students drummed, while others listened to music, played cards and made up chants. Study groups were formed for those who needed help with their schoolwork.

Students expressed their opinions on the situation. Natoya Madden, a sophomore

Turn to STUDENTS, page 3

THANG VU/COLLEGIAN

A Controller's Office employee seems a little nervous as ALANA students peacefully protest what they see as the lack of dedication by UMass administration to the 1992 ALANA agreements.

Higher education discussion held at Bridgewater State

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

The first annual Higher Education Student Services Summit was held last Thursday at Bridgewater State College and has been hailed "a complete success" by Stanley Z. Koplik, chancellor of the Board of Higher Education.

The summit is sponsored by the Board of Higher Education to improve financial aid, registration and student billing practices at public colleges and universities.

Administrators from 13 campuses made presentations. The University of Massachusetts Amherst facilitated the only student–run presentation, which was also the most heavily attended.

Coordinated by Sean Carter, UMass–Amherst student trustee, Maurice Caston, Student Government Association (SGA) president and Eleanor Court, associate trustee and Administrative Redesign (ARD) coordinator, the presentation was entitled "Student Initiative for Student Services."

"It [the UMass–Amherst student presentation] definitely made a significant impact. It was really important that we as students were there," Court said.

The conference was mostly attended by administrators.

The forum focused on teaching conferees how to make their institutions a better place to live.

"In November, we [the SGA Senate] passed a motion with the changes we'd like to see. We have been working with the administration to implement student service changes," Carter said

In a proposal written by Carter, the program was said to hopefully "develop the philosophy and processes that communities can use to implement improvements in student services by tracing those methods used by students and administrators at UMass–Amherst."

"It is important to keep the university focused on change, so when people remember their university experience, they remember happy experiences," Carter said.

"Our main theme was having students integrally involved," Court said.

In a written press release, Board Chairman James Carlin said, "The summit looks at serving the people who matter most in higher education: the students. I look forward to supporting this yearly summit throughout my tenure as Board Chairman."

Conference attendees included campus presidents, administrators and student leaders from all 28 undergraduate campuses in Massachusetts.

It is estimated that there were 250 to 300 conference participants. Speakers included Sean Rush, general manager for higher education at IBM North America and Representative Harold M. Lane, Jr., chairman of the Joint Committee on Education, Arts and Humanities.

Professors collaborate on Cold War seminar

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Mathematics and statistics Professor Melvyn Berger and Russian army General Alexi Farfel are presenting a two–part seminar on "Math and the Cold War" today and Thursday.

Farfel, who was head of the Russian Space program during the Sputnik era is also a Holocaust survivor.

Berger is presenting the American side of "Math and the Cold War" today and Farfel will present the Russian perspective on Thursday.

"General Farfel is the ultimate Holocaust survivor," Berger, a professor of contemporary math, Berger said.

According to Berger, when Farfel was 10 years old, his parents were killed and he became an orphan. A man in the Russian army took Farfel under his wings. Later, he spent four years fighting in World War II.

In 1945, Farfel went to military school where he became an excellent mathematician and scientist, Berger said.

Farfel was later sent to the highest ranking military academy in Russia.

He was promoted to general in 1960 and became the head of the Russian Space Program.

Both seminars will be held in Lederle graduate tower in room 121 from 11:15 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Following Farfel's speech on Thursday, a reception will be held at 1 p.m. in the Campus Center room 1001–1002. Refreshments will be served.

"I met General Berger in Orlando and invited him to Massachusetts and UMass to speak," Berger said. "He is a remarkable human being and has so much to offer."

At least 125 dead in Pakistan tragedy

By Kathy Gannon
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Rescue workers carved through the twisted wreckage of a train with blow torches yesterday, trying to reach scores of injured screaming for help. At least 125 people — including 24 children — died in the crash, hospital workers said. Another 450 passengers were injured, 50 of them seriously, when the brakes failed on the express train and it derailed early yesterday morning, Pakistan's state-run news agency said. The accident occurred in eastern Punjab just outside Khaniwal, 240 miles southeast of Islamabad.

"The scene is horrific," said worker Mohammed Zubair. Residents of Khaniwal — the first to arrive on the scene — pulled bodies from the overturned cars and covered the dead in white shrouds. Shops closed and hundreds of people went to local hospitals to donate blood.

The government called in the army to help with the rescue. For more than 12 hours, dozens of injured passengers were trapped inside five overturned railway cars as rescue workers painstakingly sliced through the wreckage.

Ph.D programs ranked among best in the U.S.

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

The graduate creative writing and engineering programs at the University of Massachusetts have been ranked among the best in the country, according to a new reputational survey of Ph.D programs that will be available to the public in the March 10 issue of U.S. News & World Report.

For the first time since the magazine began ranking graduate programs, the UMass creative writing program has been ranked.

The program was ranked No. 10.

The process in which programs were ranked included questionnaires sent to deans, administrators and senior faculty of schools. Respondents were asked to rank the reputation of the school, taking into account the school's scholarship, curriculum and quality of its faculty and graduate students.

Stephen Clingman, English department chairman, said that although he was pleased to have the program recognized as one of the country's best, he was surprised that it was not ranked higher.

"Given our record over the past five or so years, especially the prizes our faculty have won, I think our program is actually one of the top two or three in the country," Clingman said.

He added he is delighted whenever published accounts and rankings recognize the quality of the program, its faculty and graduate students.

The College of Engineering was ranked No. 44 in the country, which was determined by five measures: faculty resources, research activity, student selectivity and two reputational surveys which were distributed to deans and practicing engineers.

Dean of Engineering Joseph Goldstein said, "We have been a top 50 engineering colleges for some years, and it is great to have our quality formally recognized. Our success is due to a first–class faculty who have achieved national stature, and to our fine teaching program."

In addition, the engineering program has been ranked the best public program in New England.

Not all programs are resurveyed every year. In these cases, the magazine carries over earlier rankings. These include the No. 1 UMass Polymer Science and Engineering Department and the No. 22 Computer Science Program and the School of Education ranked No. 34.

The issue of U.S. News and World Report went on news stands yesterday.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor: Mark McGrath
Copy Editor: Mike Burke
Photo Technician: Kenneth Scott
Production Supervisor: Matt McCarthy
Production Staff: Joylyn Lombard
Dan Bodah

■ ALANA

continued from page 1

Cassandra Jean- Denis. "This is their paycheck. This is where everything on the campus body needs to get done. This is their central focusing point and this is where we need to let them know that we're serious."

By 12:15 p.m., the students had filled the majority of the Controller's Office. Sitting on floors, desks, tables and whatever they could find, the urgency to come to a resolution was apparent.

"If we don't protest, things won't change and nothing will get accomplished, because the University administration isn't going to do anything," said demonstrator, Judith Schneider. "The only way it will is if a whole bunch of students get together and just not take it."

The student negotiators demanded that a core group of administrators be present to discuss the demands which they brought before the Chancellor's Office. This core group consisted of Deputy Chancellor Marcellette Williams, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Tom Robinson, Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance Paul Page, Provost Patricia Crosson, Director of the Office of Institutional Research Marilyn Blaustein, and Ombudsman Bob Ackerman. Faculty Senate Secretary John Bracey was also requested by the students as part of the staff's negotiation team, but could not be located to attend the meeting.

When the demands reached Whitmore, Williams responded by sending messengers Ken Burnham, Interim Assistant Vice Chancellor for Enrollment Services, and Joyce Hatch, Assistant Vice Chancellor for Finance and Budget. Burnham and Hatch both expressed a willingness for the administration to meet with the students with the request that the students meet on "neutral ground," away from Goodell.

"We won't budge — the administration has control over everything. As far as we're concerned, every place on campus is neutral ground for the administrators. We will not leave our students so that the administration can break us up," said sophomore rally organizer Resa Singleton.

The administrative negotiators finally agreed to meet with the student negotiators inside of a secured area within the Controller's Office.

By 3:30 p.m., with negotiations underway, the student morale remained hopeful and optimistic. Pizzas and bottled water were delivered to the students waiting for results from the negotiations.

Other students occupied their time by singing Native American chants, dancing, playing cards, and studying.

Protestor Dan Lizana said, "It's a waiting game right now, Whitmore [Administration Building] was locked down this morning, no one came in, they were completely afraid of the ALANA students."

Discussions within the negotiations consisted of heated debates between the ALANA negotiators and the administrative team. Debates centered around areas such as the proposal of the Honors Program turning into an Honors College, the need for more ALANA Support Services and the actual statistical makeup of ALANA students at UMass.

Deputy Chancellor Williams said to the student negotiators, "I am not prepared to respond yes to A [demand], yes to B, yes to C, but I am prepared that, with the current budget process, there are recommendations within it that are consistent with what's here. What I am prepared to do is say what we're doing with the budget in 1998, we will certainly be paying attention to the figures here."

Student negotiators responded with angry rebuttals to Deputy Chancellor Williams' statement. "We're sick of hearing about what you think you're doing. We want a commitment. We want things to change today, not a year from now, not a week from now, but today," said negotiator and Graduate Student Senate President, Deepika Mayra.

The negotiations ended with an agreement on both sides to meet again for a series of three discussions to begin tomorrow morning at 8:15.

Both sides also agreed that discussion could not continue without participation of "middle management" faculty and staff such as staff from the Office of Admissions, Financial Aid Office, Bursars Office, and key faculty involved in American studies programs such as Irish Studies, Native American Studies, Latin American Studies and Asian American Studies. However the administrators refused to call these middlemen in last night, to the disappointment of the student negotiators.

"We've sat down here since 1 p.m. and what have we done? nothing!" said senior anthropology major and spokesperson Njeri Thelwell.

"We'll We've learned that there are an awful lot of committees that don't do anything," said junior spokesperson, Malwin Davila.

The administrative team also refused to pay for food and water or provide bedding for the student protestors.

At approximately 10:30 p.m. last night, UMass police sealed off access to Goodell, going against promises by Deputy Chancellor Williams, that a door would be made available for the protesters to go in and out.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
Roundtrip
TOKYO $799
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
340 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
March 1
A two vehicle accident occurred in parking lot 40 on Hicks Way.
A two vehicle accident occurred on Commonwealth Avenue.

Accident — Pedestrian
Feb. 27
A bicyclist and a vehicle collided on University Drive. No injuries were reported.

Animal Complaint
Feb. 26
There was a report of an injured bat in Collidge Residence Hall.
Feb. 28
The well–being of a dog left in a vehicle in the Campus Center garage was checked on.
March 1
A bat was removed from Pierpont Residence Hall.

Annoying Behavior
Feb. 26
Graffiti was written on a poster in Brown Residence Hall.
Graffiti was written on an elevator panel in Brown Residence Hall.
Feb. 28
A threat was written on the message board of a resident in McNamara Residence Hall.
March 1
Individuals were throwing rocks at Mary Lyon Residence Hall.
March 2
Bottles were being thrown from Pierpont Residence Hall.
Numerous calls were made on a 911 line which were non– emergency. The party responsible was identified and warned.

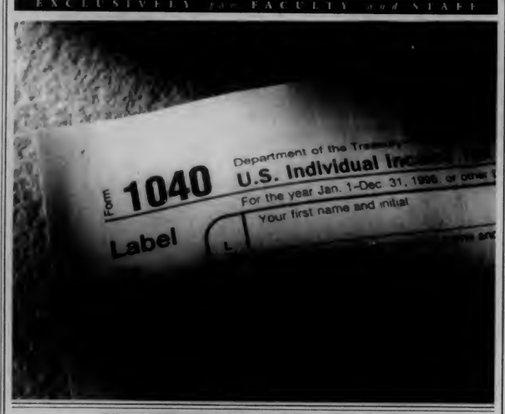
Assault & Battery
Feb. 28
An individual reported an alleged assault by another individual. The report in under investigation.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Feb. 28
The Cluster Office in Brown Residence Hall was broken into.

Disturbance
March 1
Individuals were fighting in the Bluewall in the Campus Center.
March 2
Police responded to a fight in progress in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue and arrested Matthew C. Albertson, 22, 11 Tudor St., Clifton Park, N.Y., for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, resisting a police officer's lawful arrest, disorderly conduct and trespassing.

Family Offenses, Domestics
Feb. 27
Patrick Bellizaire, 23, of Pomfret School Rt. 44, Pomfret, CT, was arrested on domestic assault and battery charges.

Health/Safety Hazard
Feb. 27
A smell of smoke was investigated in Tobin Hall.
Feb. 28
A broken water pipe caused flooding at Durfee Conservatory on Stockbridge Rd.



Larceny
Feb. 26
A parking decal was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 31 on Governors Drive.
Cash and a license was stolen from an individual's wallet in the Campus Center.
Feb. 27
A bicycle was reported stolen on Hicks Way.
Feb. 28
The staff at Goddell Library reported a back pack vacuum cleaner stolen.
March 1
James Connelly, 18, of 28 Baldwin St., Winchester was arrested on University Drive for possession and transportation of alcohol.
An individual reported keys and ID card stolen from Patterson Residence Hall.
A license plate was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 50 on Sunset Avenue.

Noise Complaint
Feb. 28
Daniel J. McNamara, 20, of 81 Main St., Branford, CT, and Peter J. Neliessen, 20, of 47 Raynor Rd., Sudbury, were arrested in Baker Residence Hall for possession of alcohol.
Sean R. Croteau, 19, of 7 Sweetbriar Ln., Andover, was arrested in Baker Residence Hall for disorderly conduct.

Traffic Stop
March 2
Hung X. Pham, 27, of 77 Second St., Pittsfield was arrested for operating a vehicle with a suspended license.

Vandalism
Feb. 28
Windows were smashed in French Hall greenhouse on Stockbridge Road.
A clock was ripped from the wall and smashed in Lederle Research Tower.
March 1
A large window was smashed in McNamara Residence Hall.
A room door was kicked in a damaged in Patterson Residence Hall.
March 2
Bulletin boards were damaged in Emerson Residence Hall.
Two vehicles were damaged in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
Windows were smashed on a parked vehicle on Metal Crafts Building Rd.
A vehicle was stuck in the lawn by the School of Management on Presidents Drive.
March 3
The construction site at Mahar Hall was damaged.

Warrant Service
Feb. 26
Melissa E. DiPinto, 18, of 8 Shady Dr., Burlington was arrested with a warrants.

EXCLUSIVELY for FACULTY and STAFF

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.
Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.
Fortunately, that's a mistake you can avoid with SRAs—tax-deferred annuities from TIAA-CREF. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer an easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less in taxes now. And since earnings on your SRAs are tax deferred, your money works even harder for you.
What else do SRAs offer? The investment choice, flexibility, and expertise of TIAA-CREF—America's foremost retirement organization.
Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Stop by your benefits office or call us at 1 800 842-2888 and find out how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.
Visit us on the Internet at www.tiaa-cref.org
TIAA CREF
Ensuring the future for those who shape it.
CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733 extension 5509, for a current CREF prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money. Date of first use: 2/97
©1997 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY

Don't say it with flowers
Say it with Collegian classifieds
Place a Personal classified from March 10th - March 14th and receive half off
Students 10¢ a word
Call 545-3500 to place over the phone, visit us on the concourse or visit us at our basement office

■ students

continued from page 1

Psychology major said, "I think a rally like this is the most effective way to grab the administration's attention. If we walk by like nothing's happened, then we won't get anything done to support us."

Emie Michaud, a sophomore communications major, voiced her disappointment on the behavior of the Administration in failing to uphold its part of the agreement.

"It's disappointing to me that I'm working hard scholastically and the University has not fulfilled their part financially," Michaud said. "We work hard and make the University look good, but they don't seem to care about us."

Sophomore Cassandra Jean–Denis stated that now was the time to stop what she sees as Administration's cycle of broken promises.

"I do not feel that as a sophomore in this University that this issue could not have been resolved in 1992. There is no reason why any student in 1997 has to be dealing with these same matters over again within a span of five years," Jean– Denis said.

"These are students' needs of which the University was well aware of in '92 and '97. Now is the time to work for the future to ensure closure," Jean–Denis said.

Resa Singleton, a sophomore biochemistry major shared her reasons for participating in the rally. "I've been here for two years, and in that time, I've seen the administration ignore students and treat them as if they weren't a vital part of the University."

"Because of this," Singleton said, "I felt that it was necessary to come together with the Administration and help them fix these problems."

Many students are sleeping overnight until the negotiations start up again. The negotiations ended around 8:30 p.m. and will continue this morning.

Got a tip?
Call Laura Stock, Collegian News Editor or a member of the news staff at 545-1762 and let us know.

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Free Info Session
Wednesday, March 5th
7:00pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
Stop Around & Compare
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!!

A brief history of the ALANA agreements; latest demands continue tradition of unrest

News Analysis

By Christine Soh
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts espouses a policy of "multiculturalism and diversity" but according to many, including yesterday's protesters, the number of ALANA (Asian, Latin American, African and Native American) students and faculty on this campus remains inadequate. Most ALANA students have noticed that the numbers have not really increased over the years. The ALANA agreements appear to be a student led attempt to rectify this situation.

The character of the 1992 ALANA Agreements is such that it represents a profound challenge to University policy. The philosophy of UMass administrators seems to maintain the status quo — a seemingly Eurocentric curriculum; a predominantly white campus; the alleged prohibitory, anti– student campus bureaucracy. The ALANA Agreements are an attempt to change the very nature of UMass, to shake up the status quo and to make this campus truly diverse.

The ALANA agreements are a set of demands that arose out of a series of protests by students of color in 1992. But the protest that occurred this past year was not an isolated incident. They were responses to the obviously hostile and racist atmosphere prevalent nationally and at UMass.

In the late 1960s, students at UMass agitated for the formation of a Black Studies Department. According to the Collegian archives, in 1969, the W.E.B. Du Bois Afro– American Studies Department was created at UMass. This move was parallel over much of the nation and a number of Universities did institute black studies.

In the '70s, as the numbers of ALANA students gradually increased, there was a need for academic support services and cultural centers. Thrust into a predominantly white campus, ALANA students complained of alienation and estrangement from each other. Many found it difficult, given the hostility and racism in the classrooms, residence halls and campus offices. Frustrated students demanded increased resources from the administration.

The protests eventually led to a renovated New Africa House and the creation of academic support services such as, CCEBMS (Collegiate Committee for Education of Black and Other Minority Students) and BCP (Bi–lingual Collegiate Program). The New Africa House served as a "cultural center" and meeting place for students of color.

Over the years, the administration did not maintain the New Africa House both structurally and in terms of services provided. While the administration spends millions of dollars on the Polymer Research Center, the Mullins Center and their own offices in Whitmore, seemingly little resources are spent on the upkeep of the New Africa House. Why does the administration not spend money on buildings that primarily serve students of color?

The '80s were a turbulent time for people of color and poor people in the United States. The conservative backlash led by Ronald Reagan apparently tried to dissolve the Civil Rights gains of the '60s. This led to heightened racial tensions all over the nation. UMass was no exception.

According to Collegian archives, in 1986, after the World Series, a group of white students attacked a group of black students in Southwest Inciting a racial brawl. Unfortunately, such racist attitudes were not exhibited by students only. A few years later, the administration falsely accused a black female student of setting a building on fire. She was later acquitted in a court of law of all wrong doing. Additionally, according to Collegian archives there were countless incidents of police harassment against students of color.

The national climate reached a fever pitch in 1992 when Rodney King, a black man, was brutalized by the LAPD (Los Angeles Police Department) officers. The acquittal of the four police officers by an all white jury sparked a series of protests all over the nation. Again, UMass was no exception.

An estimated 350 students occupied the Whitmore Administration Building demanding that the University of Massachusetts agree to hire 10 new ALANA faculty members (five men, five women) over the next three years. It was a 11 hour sit–in brought about by the Rodney King beating verdict and what, according to Collegian archives, protesters called "a growing trend towards racism on campus and around the country."

This same group of protesters also targeted the Collegian, as they demanded reform within the newspaper and increased ALANA representation.

The Collegian protest made national headlines. As it turned out, there were similar conflicts in the newsrooms about who would cover the Los Angeles riots.

Whether or not the administration hired 10 new faculty of color as requested by the protesters who took over Whitmore on May 1 is unclear. What is clear is that the atmosphere for students of color on campus did not change.

In the first week of October, Memorial Hall was taken over by a group of students protesting Columbus Day: a day that for some, represented 500 years of violence against native people in this country. Among the demands were 40 scholarships for low–income women of color, the setting–up of a program that aids students of color, a teach–in on Columbus Day and a request that the state not recognize Columbus Day as a holiday.

Also, Arlens Barosy a Haitian Resident Assistant from Washington Tower was attacked, and excrement was smeared on his door. Hundreds of students protested by holding rallies outside Washington. Subsequently, ALANA students, both undergraduate and graduate, came up with the first draft of the 1992 ALANA demands. The negotiations conducted between the ALANA students and the administration were mediated by the United States Department of Justice. Thus were born the 1992 ALANA agreements.

Since 1992, students of color on campus have rallied around the points of the ALANA agreements in the forms of takeovers and organized student protest. The administration has since reacted in a seemingly childish way by blaming students for not fulfilling their end of the agreements.

Judging from the protestors statements, this current occupation of the Goodell Building is just another example of the failure of the University to deal with the true issues of multiculturalism and diversity.

Illinois Brand Standard Ground Beef FAMOUS FOR
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
I always get Fish n' Chips at Pete's
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR 'ROUND
http://www.javanet/~mrburger/

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

Career Day
Hotel, Restaurant & Travel Administration
Wednesday
March 5, 1997
9:00am - 3:00pm
Over 60 Companies!!!
All Majors Welcome
Come check out summer jobs, internships and possible career opportunities
Location: Campus Center Auditorium

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE
DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE-WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS
WEEKLY UPDATE
UNIVERSITY CAREER CENTER
SOM MAJORS!
The following companies have listed rewarding co-ops:
Connecticut Conference of Municipalities
Kraft General Foods
Kettering Foundation
Caesar's Tahoe
Lois Paul & Partners
Simon & Schuster
Phoenix Mutual Life
Arthur J. Gallagher
Time, Inc.
Veratec/International Paper
West Chop Club
ALANA STUDENTS
Confused about what to do after graduation?
Not sure what employment opportunities exist which match your skills?
Uncertain about your career path?
Call Ruth Carey 545-4602
Take advantage of our Career Counseling services!
BIG RALLY
Saturday, March 8, 1997
9:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Campus Center Room 163
The University of Massachusetts Community Service Program is sponsoring the fourth annual "Big Rally" Community Service Conference
To register call 545-3327
Come visit our table at...
HRTA CAREER DAY
March 5, Campus Center, 9am - 3pm

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Oulet Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Five years too late

Five years ago an ALANA takeover of Whitmore forced the University of Massachusetts Administration to take a serious look at the increasing problem of lack of diversity on campus.

The two groups signed an agreement for UMass to meet a series of demands posed by the ALANA community. Five years later, the issue hasn't yet been solved.

Yesterday's takeover of the Controller's Office in Goodell signals discontent with the Administration's failure to meet their promises of 1992. Once again, the Administration has proven to inadequately meet student needs.

There is no justified reason why students must be forced to protest and take over buildings for the Administration to hear their concerns. Without the UMass Administration providing acceptable means for student voices of reform to be heard, no other options are left open. The UMass Administration must immediately fulfill all of the demands of the 1992 ALANA agreements and take a serious look at the demands issued yesterday.

We commend the protesters who took over the Controller's Office, for their actions and their effort to improve the University. It is important for all UMass students to realize that the protesters' demands, if met, will improve the overall University community for everyone — not just for ALANA students.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian Editorial Board.

A takeover for all of us

Yesterday's takeover of the Contrqller's Office might prove to be a long needed wake-up call for the Administration that has been dragging its feet on fulfilling the ALANA agreements on 1992.

But even more disturbing than the Administration's inactivity is the general apathy of white students on this campus not directly related to the cause.

Throughout the campus a feeling of curiosity and amusemeqnt revolved around the takeover. Questions arose among many white students over the need for such a drastic move as a takeover.

For the most part, politics on this campus have become ghettoized into specific groups. Groups such as ALANA, GEO and labor have been pigeonholed, or more likely ignored, by the largely white population on campus. Selfish cries of "well how does that affec me" is heard far too often.

Though it's often overlooked, the politics of each of these groups effect everyone at this University and should be taken seriously. Yesterday's rally and subsequent take-over serve as the latest examples.

Yesterday the protesters, led by members of the ALANA community, issued a set of demands. At first look, these demands may concentrate on issues of ALANA interest but in reality, they concern each and every student on this campus.

With demands ranging from alterations in financial aid and admissions to formation of support groups, the UMass student body must realize how these demands may better their educational experience. We can not simply blow these serious worries away and ghettoize the demands as an ALANA issue. They are not — they should be all of our demands.

The predominantly white student body has consistently downplayed ALANA concerns; yesterday's general apathy is simply the latest example.

Look at the overall disinterest in the suspicious death of Anthony S. Nsiegbunam, a 28-year-old graduate student from Nigeria, who was simply found dead in his automobile on Feb. 24.

If Nsiegbunam was an 18-year-old white freshman the campus community would be up in arms. How often do people just die in the cars?

Nsiegbunam may not be a victim of "foul play" at the fault of the University but there have been hundreds, if not thousands, of students of color who have fallen victim to the school's discriminatory policies.

But these discriminatory policies spread across the board — not just towards the ALANA community but also towards the poor and single mothers.

Yesterday's demands called for several key changes to financial aid set-up, intended to transform the current policy. "[Eliminate] the hold on students during pre-registration due to outstanding bursar's bill; Allocate funds targeted for ALANA students and low income students. $2 million annually. These funds are not contingent on G.P.A.; Individualized payment plans for all students per semester, starting Fall '97…"

The demands also single out a vast improvement in the University's distribution of child care including "an implementation of a subsidized flexible child care center in centrally located space with 60 seats, open for 80 hours a week."

Improvements in child care, financial aid and other matters are needed for UMass to fulfill its mission to be a public school — open to everyone.

Thank you to yesterday's protesters and their valiant effort. Hopefully both the Administration and the general student population will soon awaken to these dire needs that affect each and every one of us.

Mike Burke is a Collegian columnist.

In the Army now

Does a child have a constitutional right to be breast-fed?

Most people, upon very little reflection, will agree that breast-feeding is beneficial for any child. Many mothers, if able, will choose to breast-feed their children.

But what if the mother is a pilot in the United States Army? Is the Army under obligation to let the mother go in order for her to be able to breast-feed her child?

Lieutenant Emma Cuevas and her husband, Lieutenant Jeff Blaney, feel so strongly about Cuevas' right to breast-feed their nine month-old daughter, Isabella, that they have filed a complaint in a Washington federal district court on Isabella's behalf.

The complaint reads in part that Isabella is being denied "a constitutional right to breast-feed by having her mother impounded by the government."

Uh, what?

You get the image of Emma Cuevas being held in a warehouse, filed somewhere between cars and other equipment.

In actuality, Cuevas is a helicopter pilot with the Army. She entered West Point as a cadet and the Army agreed to pick up the bill, provided she agreed to serve in the military until May of 2000. Cuevas' education cost taxpayers $500,000.

And now, she wants out.

The dilemma is not whether Cuevas should be able to breast-feed her child. The answer is yes, of course, she ought to be able to. But should the Army allow her to renege on her pledge?

The answer to that question is no.

The debate whether women ought to serve in the Army or not has centered on the conflict between motherhood and military service.

For decades, women fought to take their rightful place in the military. Along the way, women endured sexual- harassment and criticism that they weren't good enough to fill the ranks of the military. Newt Gingrich even went as far to say that the risks associated with trench warfare (last used in World War I) posed a serious danger to women's health.

But despite all this, women have continued to flock into the military, exercising their right to defend their country. The Army has made some allowances for women — they allow women a paid six-week maternity leave. There is no option for unpaid leave.

Cuevas has been lucky. Her male commander has allowed her to go home from work for 2 1/2 hours at midday to nurse her daughter. The problem arises when Isabella becomes hungry earlier than usual and Cuevas is unable to go home to feed her.

Joining the Army is a serious commitment and Cuevas' desire to leave not only undermines that commitment but also weakens the role and image of women in the military.

Women do have an obligation to their families — just as men do. For women, the juggling act is much harder, because despite changes in society's mentality, women are still held accountable for the children.

If a court ruling allows Cuevas to leave the Army, the tradition of mandatory commitments may lose credibility. But more importantly, her actions could destroy the gains women have made — women may lose their hard-won place in the military.

For those who believe that women should not serve, Cuevas' situation will provide enough fuel to block women from entering all branches of the military.

If Cuevar does get her wish, she will be able to take care of her child in the way she wants to.

And if that happens, it will make it that much easier not to take women in the military seriously.

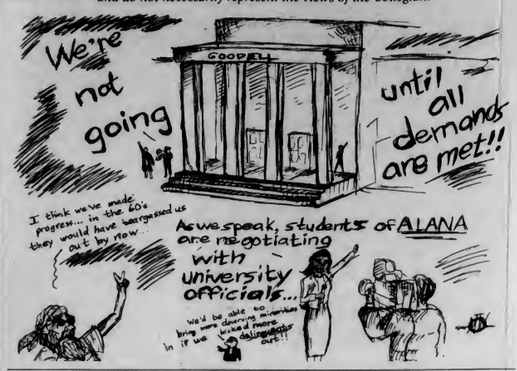
Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Amherst support

To the editor:

We, the members of the Student Policy Committee of Amherst College which to extend our support to the student protest at the Goodell building at the University of Massachusetts has a commitment to all of its students. We support the students in their protest against the current Bursar's and funding policies of the University. We believe that the students followed proper procedure in bringing their concerns to the administration five years ago. At that time, the University agreed that the students' concerns were valid, and together they established the 1992 ALANA agreement.



We support the current protest due to the fact that five years later the University of Massachusetts has not met the terms of the 1992 agreement. Such little progress is inappropriate and shows bad faith on the part of administration. The current list of 16 demands evokes the spirit of the [1992] ALANA agreement. We feel that the current protest is appropriate in light of the inaction exhibited by the University.

As college students, we must have a commitment to support one another when we are misrepresented. Although we are not students of the University of Massachusetts, we support the protest because their concerns are relevant to all students, particularly in the Five College community. Therefore, the Student Policy Committee of Amherst College would like to make a public gesture in support of the student protest currently in progress at the Goodell Building at the University of Massachusetts.

David Brown
President, Student Government
Chair, Student Policy Committee

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

"The Living Document"

Editor's Note: The following is the list of demands, entitled, "The Living Document" given to Chancellor David K. Scott by the ALANA students who are currently occupying the Controller's Office in the Goodell Building. The students maintain they will not leave the office until all of the demands are met.

Undergraduates

1. The percentage of ALANA students for the incoming class to be 20 percent and the overall percentage of undergraduate ALANA students should also be 20 percent.

Financial Aid/Bursar

1. Eliminating the hold on students during pre-registration due to outstanding bursar's bill; starting Fall '97.
2. Allocate funds targeted for ALANA students and low income students. $2 million annually. These funds are not contingent on G.P.A.
3. Individualized payment plans for all students per semester, starting Fall '97.
4. Eliminate all late fees, starting Fall '97.
5. Diversify the Bursar's staff; professional and classified. New hiring should be completed by the beginning of Fall semester 1997.

Faculty and Staff:

1. Diversity Whitmore from the top down; hiring minorities in key positions of power; as positions become available these key positions should be targeted to minorities — at least two candidates who are ALANA be presented to the Chancellor for the next opening for Vice Chancellor.
a. Search committees for faculty and staff hiring should be required to have equal representation of students, including a substantial ALANA student representation.
b. All candidates should be available to answer student questions in the evenings, when there are no classes so that students can easily participate.
c. A block of time will be set aside when no classes are held. All meetings, search committees, etc., requiring student participation shall be held during this block of time.

Admission and Financial Aid:

1. Office of Admissions must hire:
a. a Native American recruiter
b. CCEBMS [Collegiate Committee for Education of Black and Other Minority Students] liaison
c. UALRC [United Asian Learning Research Center] liaison as Assistant Directors for the Recruitment of ALANA students by August '97. The responsibility of all ALANA recruiters will be exclusively dedicate to the recruitment of ALANA students.
2. The four ALANA positions in admissions should be filled at all times. The ALANA admissions personnel should be the sole reviewer and decision maker for all potential ALANA and Trio Program students. These positions MUST NOT be combined.
3. These hires will be completed by April, 1997.

Active Outreach for ALANA and First Generation Low-Income Students:

1. Create a program comparable to the Upward Bound Program with a base budget of $500,000 starting September 1997. This money should not be a result of higher fees.
2. In addition, $250,000 should be given to the program annually.
This program will serve the same population and areas as the Upward Bound Program.
a. This program will be a separate entity from the SUMMA and Talent Search programs (the assistant director of recruitment will run this.)
3. UALRC, BCP, CCEBMS liaisons. These are all Assistant Director positions. These positions report to the Associate Director of ALANA Recruitment.
4. A position of the level of Assistant Director the ALANA transfer students should be hired by June 1997.
5. There be more publications, pamphlets, brochures and videos for ALANA recruitment exclusively.
6. Provide a sufficient, clear budget for ALANA recruitment needs; for open house events, outreach efforts, publications, etc.

Recognition of Ethnicity:

1. The creation or upgrading of the following to Major Department status:
Irish Studies; Native American Studies; Latin American Studies; Asian American Studies.
a. If there is no program in place presently in any of the above, begin the process to establish one.
b. We also demand that the curriculum of each aforementioned department reflect its respective ethnic population on the UMass–Amherst campus.
c. In addition, the University should remain aware of a changing ALANA communities' academic needs and be prepared to adjust and accommodate to serve them.
d. Instructors of said classes should hold tenure track positions.

Graduate Students

1. That graduate percentage, overall, of ALANA students be brought up to at least 14 percent of the graduate student body as verified by an independent audit.
2. At least five more employees involved in rigorous recruitment of ALANA students, including in economically disadvantaged areas and Native Americans.
3. OMGSR [Office of Minority Graduate Student Recruitment] funds be increased to at least $2 million to meet our goals, which include 20 percent minority graduate student body and funds for retention.
4. More employees who do only recruitment.

Support Programs

1. An increase in full time counselors to aid ALANA students with advising services:
a. CCEBMS needs two more full time counselors
b. UALRC needs two more full time counselors
c. BCP need two more full time counselors
2. An increase in funding is needed to fulfill the existing needs of these programs, mainly tutoring. The above mentioned support programs demand a $50,000 increase in base budget.
3. Enrollment Services: full time counselors for these support programs demand same salaries as other advisers on campus.
4. In addition, a Native Support Program should be established on campus, comparable to BCP, CCEBMS and UALRC. This program should be staffed with at least one full time advisor and two graduate student Teaching Assistant positions and work-study positions. This program should be fully functional by Spring '98.

The ALANA Offices Demands

The Administrative Offices of ALANA Affairs:
1. The creation of an administrative office of ALANA Affairs comparable to that of Greek Affairs, the Stonewall Center and the Office of Jewish Affairs.
a. This office will serve as watchdog over University Affairs, including all those issues that affect ALANA students on a graduate or undergraduate level.
b. This administration will meet with the director of this office and with its Office Advisory Board on a regular basis to ensure that ALANA concerns are addressed.
2. The ALANA Office Advisory Board will be composed of ALANA students (graduate and undergraduate), faculty and staff.
a. This Board will provide oversight and approval for the activities of the Administrative Office of ALANA Affairs, including all appointments to this office.
b. This Board will include two representatives of the ALANA Caucus, one each of the following programs including BCP, CCEBMS and UALRC. One representative from the Student Office of ALANA Affairs' Governing Board and one ALANA representative from each union representing the faculty and staff of the representative from the Native American community.
c. The Director of the Administrative Office of the ALANA Affairs will serve as an ex-officio member of this board.
d. This office should be functional by spring '98.

The Student Office of ALANA Affairs

1. This existing office will remain an independent body answerable to the Governing Board of the Office of ALANA Affairs.
a. A full-time office manager and an assistant director will be funded through University administrative funds.
b. All other funding for this office will be maintained through its existing funding mechanisms.

Child Care

1. The creation of child care sufficient to and affordable enough for the graduate and undergraduate students of this University.
a. Implementation of a subsidized flexible child care center in centrally located space with 60 seats, open for 80 hours a week (serving an estimate 240 children at 20 hours a week). This center will serve graduate and undergraduate students and all seats will be dedicated for them, excepting vacancies remaining 30 days after the start of the semester. This center will be implemented no later than Jan. 30, 1998. All fees for this center will be set using the existing state child care sliding fee scales. Oversight for this center will be done in full cooperation with the director of child care and family issues committee.
b. To answer the needs of the more than 2000 student parents of this campus, University will provide $500,000 in child care vouchers for both graduate and undergraduate students administering through existing funding mechanisms.
c. The University will implement a sick-care drop off center and a children's library in the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

Letters to the Editor

1. Make them 400 words or less, typed
2. Make sure to include your name, address, and phone number for confirmation.
Unsigned letters will under no circumstances be printed.
3. Send them to Letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu, mail them to, or drop them by, the Collegian offices:
113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003

Brasco changes gangster genre

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

DONNIE BRASCO
Directed by Mike Newell
with Al Pacino, Johnny Depp, Anne Heche
Playing at Mt. Farms Four Theater

Gangster movies undeniably contain a certain charm that separates them from most other film genres. We root for the ruthless killer by sympathizing with his condition. Oddly enough, we offer compassion. Of course all mobsters must die at the end of a film; they have to pay for their crimes. Yet, we most often identify them as the story's hero and their character becomes glorified. Remember The Godfather or Scarface (or most Martin Scorsese pictures for that matter)? Donnie Brasco conforms to none of these conventions. There are no heroes in this film; everyone is the victim.

It is strange to see Al Pacino in the role of Lefty Ruggiero, a character completely unique from any Pacino has ever played before and perhaps the exact opposite of Tony Mantegne and Michael Corleone (Pacino's other major gangster roles). Johnny Depp as well, has taken a different path than usual as the film's title character. Aside from being his generation's most talented actor, Depp has always been the quiet, unpretentious rebel. As Joe Pistone, a.k.a Donnie Brasco, Depp is aggressive with outward rage.

Donnie Brasco is a true story, and that is most likely the reason why it is so good. It represents the darker side of the mob, but also in many ways, life in general. At the story's core exists a bizzare critique of friendship and how bonds can be made in the most unusual of circumstances.

In 1978, the FBI waged an unofficial war on the mob by sending their agents deep undercover, Pistone's assignment was to infiltrate the Bonanno family. He went under the alias of "Donnie the Jeweler" and studied all he could about his subject. Eventually, he met Lucky, a stooge for up-and- coming crime boss Sonny Black (Michael Madsen). Brasco earned Lucky's trust and used him to bring down Sonny and the entire Bonanno family. However, somewhere along the operation, Brasco's loyalty was altered. He no longer looked at Lucky as his assignment, rather somehow he became his friend.

Lucky Ruggiero is one of the most interesting and complicated characters to appear in a film in quite some time. The fact that he is based on an actual character makes him all the more intriguing. Early on in the film when he and Brasco first really seem to bond, Lucky explains that his son is a junkie, his ex-wife just moved into his building and that he has cancer. The real source of Lucky's problems are that he has dedicated his life to the mob and never even received gratitude. The only things Lucky has to be proud of are his 26 knock-offs and, despite his bragging, he knows that is not much of a consolation.

Brasco, on the other hand, never seems quite sure if what he's doing is the right thing. He merely goes through the motions until things go wrong. His wife, Maggie (Anne Heche), has grown tired of her husband never being home to help her raise their children. Brasco is obsessed with protecting Lucky, and as a result, his family suffers. Lucky trusted Brasco and once his cover is blown, Sonny will kill him for it, and Brasco knows that all to well. More importantly, Lucky has never had a true friend before and is probably the loneliest person Brasco has ever met.

Director Mike Newell, of Four Weddings and a Funeral fame, sets his film's tempo at an entertaining speed and brilliantly creates a sense of 1970s retro style. This is the most untraditional gangster film made in years and the end result is a refreshing look at the genre. Although many of the characters are stereotyped as the same mobster personas found in every other flick, it is the central friendship that is so passionate. Donnie Brasco is a reminder that there is a chance for formulated genres to progress into new directions. A

COURTESY MANDALAY ENTERTAINMENT
Johnny Depp stars as FBI agent Joe Pistone, AKA Donnie Brasco, in the true story of one of the strangest mob infiltrations in history.

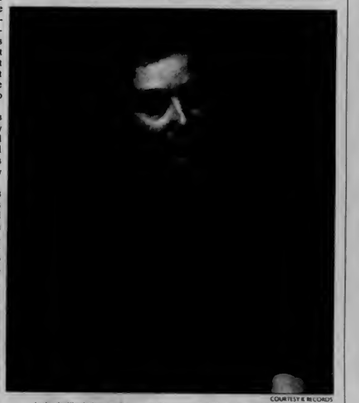
Lois plays inspiring punk rock at Amherst College

By Bradley Skaught
Collegian Staff

LOIS
Amherst College
Feb. 28

The magic of a live performance is the opportunity it provides for both the audience and the artist to share the experience of getting inside the music — of digging deep into the work and meaning of the artist, and coming out somehow reassured, challenged and enlightened.

No performance is more appropriate for this kind of communal experience than the solo performance. Stripped of whatever screens the performer might put up between herself and the audience with a full band, lights and a gigantic stage, the weight of the performance lies entirely with the songs and the artist. Lois' Friday night concert at Amherst College may not have been entirely revelatory, but it was certainly a good case for the power and value of both the solo performance, and for Lois herself.



For the uninitiated, Lois' set was good career retrospective. Every album was well represented and she often dug deep for the odd cover and even a couple of songs from her old band with Courtney Love.

Most successful were the songs from her first three albums Butterfly Kiss, Bet the Sky and Strumpet. The songwriting from that period is graceful and subtle, lending itself beautifully to the intimate, acoustic setting. They also find Lois in her strongest voice — warm and clear with a little room to stretch the melody. "Shy Town," from Bet the Sky, was probably the strongest moment of the evening. Beginning with a few lines from The Smiths' "Sheila Take a Bow," Lois wrapped the song carefully around her gently strummed chords and wove it into a stirring, powerful climax — it was Lois at her best and the rapt attention of the audience was testament to the quality and passion of her performance.

Less successful were the earliest Courtney Love songs, which sounded amateurish and shallow next to the beautiful, poetic shimmer of the Bet the Sky material. The new material, also suffered some from lack of familiarity and recorded arrangements that find Lois exploring new ground —new ground which didn't always translate well to the solo acoustic performance.

Even when the songs didn't hold up, Lois' stage banter and presence were engaging and entertaining. Lois' talents for observation and storytelling are as effective in spoken word as they are in song and she kept the audience laughing and interested throughout. This was especially effective near the end of the set when she gave what was essentially her own "punk rock manifesto"— a belief in the self-created, the self-empowered, and the dedication to doing what you love. It was punk rock as a state of mind and not clothes or strictly defined musical genres.

Lois was dressed in slacks, brown loafers and a tucked-in polo shirt, but her message of personal liberation through punk was no less effective or believable. It worked because she had proven herself through music and attitude. It was a flawed set, perhaps, but at it's best it was an unbeatable display of immense talent, startling beauty, and inspiring personal conviction. Lois matters and delivers.

COURTESY K RECORDS
Lois thrilled the audience with a powerful set last friday night

UMass' Best!

WIN PRIZES!

The Collegian Poll Rules:

1. Ballots must be dropped of at The Collegian office in the basement of the Campus Center or mailed to 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003.
2. No Xeroxed ballots.
3. One ballot per person
4. Ballots must be filled out with reasonable completeness. Ballots less than half of the blanks will be disqualified.
5. Independent Ballot Referees are hired.
6. Decisions of Ballot Referees are final.
7. All Ballots due by Thursday, March 13, 1997.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian's UMass' Best is intended to be a good natured contest among the local community. It is a fun poll based solely on UMass student opinions. This is not a harsh competition with results that have deep and lasting significance. Please do not take it as such, but rather as a basic published poll.

Ballot

Name: _____
Address: _____
Phone #: _____
Student ID#: _____

I. UMass Grub
1. Best Pizza Place _____
2. Best Sub Shop _____
3. Best Place to Go on a Date _____
4. Best Place to Eat if Your Parents are Paying _____
5. Best Ice Cream Shop _____
6. Best Chinese Restaurant _____
7. Best Italian Food _____
8. Best Breakfast (Hangover Cure) _____
9. Best Bagel Shop _____
10. Best Vegetarian Place _____

II. UMass Weekend
1. Best Liquor Store _____
2. Best Coffee Shop _____
3. Best Place to Start the Night Out _____
4. Best Place to Finish the Night Out _____
5. Best Shot _____
6. Best Beer _____
7. Best Drinking Game _____
8. Best Bartender (What Bar?) _____

III. Shops & Services
1. Best Grocery Store _____
2. Best Florist _____
3. Best Clothing Store _____
4. Best Gas Station _____
5. Best Bike Shop _____
6. Best Bookstore _____
7. Best Hair Salon _____
8. Best Place to Work Out _____
9. Best Tan Salon _____
10. Best Place to Buy Condoms _____

IV. Arts & Entertainment
1. Best Place to Hear Live Music _____
2. Best Local Band _____
3. Best Radio Station _____
4. Best Music Store _____
5. Best Place to Play Pool _____
6. Best Cheap Date _____
7. Best Video Store _____
8. Best Movie _____
9. Best TV Show _____

V. Unique UMass' Best
1. Best Thing About UMass _____
2. Best Apartment Complex _____
3. Best Class _____
4. Best Reason to Miss Class _____
5. Best Reason to Hand in a Paper Late _____
6. Best Professor _____
7. Best Place to Read The Collegian _____
8. Best Excuse for Not Graduating in 4 Years _____
9. Best Place to Study _____

FILL OUT BALLOT AND WIN A PRIZE

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Women's Issues

Tuesday, March 4, 1997

Muslim Taliban sect threatens women's rights in Afghanistan

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

Last night, the University of Massachusetts chapter of Amnesty International hosted a guest speaker to address the issue of women's rights in Afghanistan today.

The speaker, who provided the alias "Yalda", lives in constant fear of the terrorist episodes but still feels strongly about addressing the vast atrocities facing women and children in this civil war-torn area.

The lecture began with Yalda reading a prepared speech that directly established a historical recap of the last decade where, according to an Amnesty International brief, "the women have been treated as spoils of war."

These enigmatic problems are the direct result of inner conflict among various Afghan groups whose cultures, according to Yalda, "are too diverse to connect."

Turmoil began in 1994 when the Taliban, a population of "religious students trained and organized in Islamic schools in Pakistan," overran up to 3/4 of the present population of the country. Other factions control the rest.

It was on Sept. 27, 1996 that the Taliban occupied and took over the capital city of Kabul.

Many believed that such occupation would provide a wall of stability in these areas that have been plagued with years of communist factions and inner disorder. Yet, the Taliban has since done nothing but create more pandemonium, especially against women.

According to Fundamental Islamic religious leaders who misinterpreted Islamic principles in respect to the rights of females, "a woman," is portrayed as "a creature whose voice is illegitimate/lawless to be heard by a strange man."

These are the interpretations that the Taliban have used to base their unjustifiable and inhuman decrees.

One such law states that women cannot leave the home without "proper" reason. Yet, this law is ambiguous and constricting. "One woman received bullet wounds for leaving her home in order to take her child to the doctor," an Al brief said.

Immediate implementation of Taliban rule forced girls out of the school and the workplace. Widows and mothers who have lost their male relatives to the war aren't given the convenience of trying to earn a living and pull themselves from the depths of poverty.

"Despite the overcrowding in the hospitals of Afghanistan, most of the female doctors and nurses are terrified to go to work," said a documentary reporter from "60 Minutes."

As well, women aren't allowed to leave the home without being covered from head to toe. "One woman was publicly beaten because her ankles weren't covered," Yanda said.

The Taliban immediately put these rules into effect, threatening the vast majority of women— more than 50 percent of Afghanistan's population with rape, abuse and even death.

"According to the Taliban, these measures have saved Afghanistan," Yanda concluded. "It seems to me so strange that the international law, and some of the international communities on human rights are not standing by their convictions, that they are all silent before these incidents."

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

"Yalda," spoke last night in the Campus Center about women's rights in Afghanistan.

Women used as weapons of war

By Alison Crawford
Collegian Correspondent

The three and a half year war in Yugoslavia is over, but the scars from battle will remain with thousands of Bosnian women for the rest of their lives. Some of their scars are obvious, missing fingers and breasts, others wounds go far too deep to see on the surface. These women are victims of Serbian rape warfare, one of the brutal methods of ethnic cleansing in Bosnia.

Rape warfare is a form of torture which is a sexual manifestation of aggression, not an aggressive manifestation of sexuality. The results are the same as other forms of torture, physical pain, loss of dignity, an attack on the victim's identity, and the loss of self determination over her body.

During the war between the Bosnians and the Serbians, women were taken from their villages, dragged from their homes by Serbian soldiers, and brought to internment camps throughout the countryside. These camps disguised as hotels, cellars, abandoned schools and gymnasiums, served as safe houses for the Serbian soldiers to gang rape their captives.

In the trials conducted by the International Criminal Tribunal at the Hague, it was reported by investigators that "Many women and girls as young as 12 were detained in prison camps where they were forced to cook and clean for the soldiers during the day and were gang raped every night over a period of several months."

While the act of rape warfare is an atrocity against humanity in itself, the reasoning of the Serbian soldiers violating these women is an even greater atrocity. The soldiers, who were often acting under direct orders from commanding officers, raped the women in the attempt to impregnate them. The patriarchal mentality of the Serbians dictates that the child will not have any of the mother's identity, but will be a replica of the father. Therefore these women were incubators for little Serbians. These children are little timebombs, eventually growing up to fulfill their destiny and spread Serbian nationalism throughout the world.

Beverly Allen, a professor of Comparative Literature at Stanford, became an advocate for Bosnian women when one of her students came to her with translations describing the experiences of some of the victims. In her book Rape Warfare Allen states that "women of childbearing age are typically raped to make them pregnant, held until abortion is not safe and then released. During ordeals they are told that they are carrying little 'Chenliks' or 'Serbs'—in essence, this is rape simultaneously to increase the number of Serbs and 'decrease' the number of Bosnians."

"Many women and girls as young as 12 were detained in prison camps where they were forced to cook and clean for the soldiers during the day and were gang raped every night over a period of several months."

When these women are released they inadvertently reinforce the power of the Serbian nationalists. These women are set free during a prisoner exchange so they can move about freely and speak about the rape. This produces fear in both men and women because of the inherent damage done by the rape. However, it also demoralizes the men because they are unable to defend their women against the Serbian soldiers.

Allen argues that this is perfect biological warfare, since "the target population can be specified to perfection (not simply women, but females capable of gestating a pregnancy), storage of materials is hardly a problem, and 'blow-back' onto the attacking troops is, by definition, impossible."

The rape warfare as a method to advance ethnic cleansing is warped from its inception. Ruth Siefert, an expert on the impact that rape warfare has on women, outlined five thesis' explaining the rationale behind its use.

First, "Rapes are part of the Rules of War." She explains that war is a ritualized, finely regulated 'game' of strategy. There are well defined armies, clearly outlined enemies and recognizable procedures at the front (of battle). Bosnians are leaving their homes, and in some cases their country because they are so ashamed and repulsed by what has happened to them. They would rather abandon everything that they know than to return to a Serbian occupied town. The Serbians are achieving ethnic cleansing, and rape is just a technique of winning the war.

Second, "In belligerent disputes the abuse of a woman is an element of male communication." By raping the women of their enemy, it becomes a communication between men of disempowerment.

Third, "Rapes also result from the offers of masculinity that the armies make to their soldiers." By joining the army, the masculinity of soldier is reinforced, it becomes a 'graduation to manhood'. The soldiers are told by commanders to rape, and many enjoy performing the act.

Fourth, "Rapes in wartime aim at destroying the opponent's culture." The reproduction of the Serbian children are one way that the Bosnian culture is undermined, but rape affects the way that the Bosnian people view themselves. Time magazine states that "when a woman is raped in war, she, her family and her community internalize the assault upon their identity."

Fifth, "The background of rape orgies is a culturally rooted contempt for women that is lived out in times of crisis." Rape is borne out of hostility towards women, and because these women are members of the enemy they become the victims of rape warfare. In extreme cases they are mutilated, their fingers and breasts cut off, or their stomachs split open after they have been raped.

Rape is not an act of war that was singular to the Bosnian- Serbian conflict. It has been a tactic of war for centuries, but it was not until the summer of 1996 that the International War Crimes Tribunal considered rape to be an actual war crime. Previously, it was viewed as a secondary offense that was tolerated as general abusive behavior by a soldier. The Tribunal has indicted 52 suspects, and will begin the process of punishing those that committed these crimes.

The victims are coming forward to tell their stories said Jasna Baksic-Muftic, secretary-general of the Sarajevo chapter of the Union of Women's Association of Bosnia. "This could be the first time in history that women are coming forward right after a war to talk about rape." By coming forth and telling their stories they hope to see justice done for the horrors that they have endured.

Abortion in the Third World exposed

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

The Five College Women's Studies Research Center hosted Yamila Azize-Vargas as part of the Colloquium Series in a lecture entitled "Abortion in Puerto Rico and Chile, Extreme Legalities, Close Realities." last Tuesday.

Vargas participated in a study of abortion practices called Foro Abierto Derechos Reproductivos. Chile, where abortion is illegal, has one of the highest rates of abortion in Latin America, and had never had a comprehensive study of health factors of unsafe abortions, according to Vargas.

The project, which reviewed more than 132 files from the Center of Feminine Counseling in Chile, was based on quantitative analysis including age, civil status, income, education, family information and other factors.

The testimonies of the women "are human faces on the statistics," Vargas said. Thirty-five percent of pregnancies end in abortion and 160,000 Chilean women obtain illegal abortions.

Vargas found that "most of the women prosecuted [for illegal abortions] were reported by the hospital." She also found that the health professionals diagnosing women often interrogated them and submitted them to a process of "getting the truth," about illegal abortions they obtained.

After diagnosis, women also experience difficulty getting treatment, endure a fear of being accused or insulted by health care professionals and suffer abuse while being treated. These women also find that the quality of care they receive depends on the person's opinion of abortion, and sometimes results in abortion being performed in a "rude and painful way," according to Vargas.

Vargas told a story of one woman who had to have her arm amputated because of the complications of an abortion procedure. The woman was later sent to jail after being reported to the police by the head doctor at the facility where the abortion was performed. The woman was found guilty and sentenced to three years in prison for having an illegal abortion.

It is this criminalization of abortion that results in "violation of confidentiality which jeopardizes the security and health" of women trying to obtain treatment. This violation is "detrimental to the trust of the health care system," Vargas said. Vargas noted that criminalization of abortion also occurs in other countries such as Argentina, Peru and Mexico.

In Puerto Rico, where abortion became legal in 1973, women could obtain an abortion at any time during her pregnancy. Despite this, Vargas found that most women did not know abortion was legal because there was no information about services published and abortion clinics were forced to use euphemisms. "Publishers did not allow the word abortion in the telephone directory," Vargas said.

Vargas noted the impact of the suppressed information was so successful that even "health professionals didn't even know if abortion was legal." Most of the health professionals performing the abortions in Puerto Rico were over 50 years old and only knew of illegal abortion procedures performed before abortion became legal, according to Vargas.

The result of women not knowing that abortion is legal puts them in a subordinate position and makes it much more difficult for them to "get good care if they think it is illegal," Vargas said.

Concluding her talk, Vargas stated that the audience probably understood the title of her lecture, that women's realities of abortion— legal and illegal were not addressed. She suggested that "feminist groups should not focus on rights issues, but health issues."

Welcome to the first Women's Issue page of the Spring Semester! Continuing with last semester, the goals of this page are to bring awareness of local, national and international women's issues to the campus community.

This page, dedicated to International Women's Day on Sat. March 8, provides information on oppression to women occurring around the world. Although it may seem that women in this country have made significant contributions to women's rights, women around the globe are experiencing inhumane working conditions, prosecution for abortion and rape as a form of warfare.

These issues, although not taking place directly in this country, still effect American women. One woman's oppression is every woman's oppression and we must fight to eradicate all forms

Sincerely,
Michelle Hillman

Women's Issues Writers-

There will be a mandatory meeting for all Women's Issues writers and potential writers Thursday, March 6 at 6 p.m. in the Collegian office located in the Campus Center basement.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Chinese historian DuFangqin and translator.

Pioneer of women's studies and history discusses marriage & family in China

By Kiera Meehan
Collegian Correspondent

Madame DuFangqin, a visiting Chinese professor, historian and pioneer of women's studies in China, spoke last Wednesday about the issues of marriage and family in contemporary China. Problems surrounding these issues led to the start of women's studies programs in China during the 1980s.

DuFangqin described the characteristics that shape the role that marriage and family play in Chinese society such as its high population and low economic class. Their role in society is also greatly influenced by locality and class.

According to DuFangqin, "China doesn't have a women's movement so much as an emphasis on family and women's health." These became important issues when divorce rates in cities soared after economic reform in the 1980s.

"After economic reform in the 1980s, it is now possible to divorce just because you don't like each other. Previously the work unit would try to keep you together even if you didn't like each other," DuFangqin said.

Essentially, economic reform led to wealth which led to divorce which goes against Chinese tradition. So many couples were divorcing that a "moral court" emerged in the cities to judge people who divorce due to economic reasons.

"Some people got really rich in the '80s and sometimes young women became the mistresses of these wealthy men, and so there arose the problem of a third party interfering in marriages. Also, some educated women didn't want to get married, so they became the single women of the cities, while others wanted to escape the limitations of their marriages," DuFangqin said.

DuFangqin described how the escalated divorce rate statistics from 1981 to 1991 affected social relationships in the cities. In 1981, 2.1 percent of marriages in Bejing and 4 percent of marriages throughout the country ended in divorce. By 1992, the numbers had risen to 16.6 percent in Bejing and 7 percent of marriages throughout the country ended in divorce.

In the '70s people in the cities greeted each other by asking "Have you eaten?," in the '80s it was "Have you gotten rich?," now, in the '90s they ask "Have you gotten divorced?" DuFangqin said.

"In the countryside, marriages are more stable, especially in northern areas. Tradition has a stronger hold there. People are ashamed of divorce," DuFangqin said.

Because China is a patriarchal society, a woman must return home if she leaves her husband. Since land is reallocated every five years by the state, a woman can receive no land to support herself or her children if she leaves her husband.

"There is great dependence on family in the countryside. Land is allocated, care in old age, birth quotas... everything depends on family," DuFangqin said.

The one-child policy is another issue that greatly effects the family unit. "In cities, it is pretty much accepted. In the countryside it's opposed by peasants... it threatens their traditions and their livelihood," DuFangqin said.

In the mid-80s the policy was strictly enforced on peasants. However, in the '90s the government is considering the peasants' needs and allowing them more than one child. They are focusing more on women's health and less on fertility.

Since 1982 the Chinese Academy of Science has been focusing on issues of family and gender. A women's federation has also been developed in an attempt to persuade the federal government to pass a law protecting women and children's interests. At their 1984 conference they took the issues of marriage and family as the main issues they wanted to deal with, according to DuFangqin.

In 1985 the Chinese Education Institution established the country's first women's studies program. There are now 20 programs nationwide. One major task of these programs is to introduce western ideas of women's studies.

Men's track falls in IC4As

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts Minutemen will no longer have a roof over their heads, as the last of the track and field athletes still competing participated in their final indoor meet of the season Saturday at the IC4A Championships in Princeton, N.J.

Tom Toye led UMass by placing eighth in the 200 meter dash with a time of 22.17 seconds. Scott Price's time of 22.34 in the same event was good for 11th place. The two sprinters were the only teammates to make the finals in the 200.

Others good enough to qualify for the prestigious meet included sophomore triple jumper Andre Roach (45'11.25), shot-putter Jan Sievens (50'7.50) and the 4 x 400 relay team, consisting of Toye, Price, Dave Cahill and Neil Concepcion.

"I was real pleased with the way it turned out," Toye said of his finish in the 200 finals. "Both Scott and I were lucky to make the finals because our times in the trials were kind of poor. But it was a slow track, and most of the times were slow."

"But it's about the competition, not the times. Going in, you never know how it's going to go. This was a big step. I was happy just to make the final. The fact that Scott and I were the only teammates to make the finals says something about UMass sprinting."

Out of the 52 teams that scored at the meet, the Minutemen placed 52nd. Luckily, it's not about team performance. But of course, one can assume that Georgetown, the IC4A champion, has a pretty respectable program.

"I'm surprised I did so bad," said Roach, who finished 17th. "It was just a fluke. But I'm pretty excited for outdoors. I'm a better outdoor jumper."

The 4 x 400 relay team was a bit of a disappointment, as it failed to make the finals. It's third place finish in the trials was seconds below what it's used to.

"It just wasn't our day," Price said. "I probably should have passed my man sooner than I did, but I decided to stay with him. He was running slower than I had thought. But you can't look back."

Instead, you look ahead to the outdoor season, which looks promising.

"I think it's going to be a real good season," Toye said. "Indoors is geared more toward preparing us for outdoor, anyway. I just hope the weather is good. I think the relay team will do really well."

Price agrees.

"We'll be nasty in outdoors," he said.

■ softball

continued from page 10

one-out walk in the fifth, and held a no-hitter until Angie Long singled to lead off the seventh. The one-hitter was the second of her career.

In a hideously early 8 a.m. game on Sunday, UMass had the luck of the Irish in a 1-0 extra-inning win over Notre Dame. Henderson allowed just two hits and fanned seven in a masterful performance, pitching with the added pressure caused by having no run support. Her effort helped cap a tremendous weekend for the UMass pitching staff.

"We got great pitching performances from both Harry and Liz," Sortino said. "Harry threw an unbelievable game against Notre Dame. Unbelievable. Liz held Texas A&M at bay and you have to be pleased with that."

Using the international tie-breaking procedure — where each extra inning starts with a runner on second — UMass broke the deadlock in the eighth to win it. Katie Kenderski, the UMass runner, was pushed to third by a Tracey Oster bunt and scored on a single to left by Stephanie Marelna.

UMass fell 3-0 to Illinois State to round out the weekend.

"Our defense was better overall," Sortino said in synopsis. "Mandy Gelas [returning from injury] was unbelievable at second base. Balls you thought were base hits, she'd dive, come up on her knee and throw the runner out."

"The hitting, other than the Texas A&M game, was not there. We've got to break out of it. What we need is a game to swat the ball around the field and remember how good we were. Right now it's coming down to keeping our confidence and knowing that we're going to break out of it."

Women's distance medley squad takes first in ECAC's

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's track team has been competing at the Eastern College Athletic Competition since the program's inception in 1975. In all of the events, over all of the years, UMass has taken home first-place honors only once. That happened 10 years ago in 1987, when UMass' Lianne Ambrose was the overall winner in the 500m event.

Last weekend at the ECAC's in Hanover, N. H., UMass did the unthinkable, winning not one, but two events en route to an 11th place finish there.

The Minutewomen's distance medley relay team (11:53.54) of Christy Martin, Shelanda Irish, Lisa Flood and Rebecca Donaghue pulled off the upset of the competition, coming from the slower, second heat to knock off favorite George Mason in a thriller. Donaghue returned only an hour after anchoring UMass' DMR team to victory, in order to win the 1000m event also.

"Eighty-some-odd teams belong to the Eastern College Association, so it's real difficult to win one event, let alone two," coach Julie LaFreniere said.

The DMR team was led off by Martin running the 1200m leg. Despite starting off in back of the pack, Martin picked up her pace, running the fastest race of her life at 3:43.

When Irish received the baton from Martin moments before running the 400m portion of the race, UMass was alone in third place. Irish (56.0) then calmly went out and disposed of the two runners ahead of her, and then built up a solid lead for her team, while distancing herself from the rest of the pack.

"Shelanda looked fantastic, she was so competitive," LaFreniere said. "She went out there and nailed down the two runners behind her."

Freshman Lisa Flood ran an impressive 800m leg of the race. Flood had little trouble maintaining the Minutewomen's lead while running her best time of the season (2:15).

When Donaghue got in there to anchor the DMR for UMass, she blasted the gap open further. Because the Minutewomen were racing in the second heat, they had to wait to see how their times fared in respect to the faster first heat. But when the official time came in, UMass had pulled it off, edging George Mason (11:56.37). Needless to say, the women set a school record in the process.

"The women were very determined and competitive," LaFreniere said. "We were real underdogs, we were not supposed to win it."

Meanwhile, Donaghue had little time to celebrate, seeing that she had but an hour to prepare herself for the 1000m run. When race time came around, Donaghue (2:53.89) forgot about her fatigue and went out and won the race convincingly.

"She's such a talented athlete, everyone was cheering her on because they knew she had just competed in the DMR," LaFreniere said. "Of late, she's been a little flat, but the real Rebecca Donaghue is back."

■ Bruins

continued from page 10

wouldn't be the first time a goalie took a no-name team to the Stanley Cup. Dominik "The Dominator" Hasek may do it this year, and Patrick Roy did it in 1993, the year the B's should of gone to the Big Show.

After a dignified little period in Adam's twelve-year career, he has been banished from wearing the legendary black and gold. He came to the team when they needed him most and performed to the best of his ability.

He now joins Dale Hunter and Peter Bondra in Washington D.C., where he could possibly make the Capitols a team to look out for in April.

It was sad to see Adam go, though it may have been best for the organization. I already miss him. He was a class act, who never stopped hustling, even when the rest of the team had. I never felt as though he was truly respected when he was in Boston, but now he doesn't have to worry about it.

Let's take a moment of silence and remember Adam for all he did for the Bruins. He truly belonged in Boston, sporting the sweater with the big "B."

Now he'll go down as just another great athlete who was swept along the streets of Boston until he wore out his usefulness. Congratulations Oatesy, you have now joined such players as Jose Canseco, Irving Fryar and Roger Clemens. Wear that shirt with pride.

Jonathan M. Place is a Collegian columnist.

DOLORES HUERTA
Co-Founder and Secretary/Treasurer,
United Farm Workers of America
and
DR. VERNON W. BRIGGS, JR.
Professor of Labor Economics
School of Labor and Industrial Relations, Cornell University

IMMIGRATION LIMITS?
PRO AND CON

Wednesday, March 5, 7:30 p.m.
Wright Hall Auditorium, Smith College

Sponsored by the Campus Climate Working Group
and the Hewlett Fund

LOWFAT DAILY SPECIALS
EAT RIGHT
From Our Lowfat Cookbook of the Month
MARCH Lean & Lovin' It
Judie's
http://virtual-valley.com/judies
51 N. PLEASANT STREET DOWNTOWN AMHERST 253-3491

"There is such a thing as a free ride."
Announcing the AT&T "Ultimate Road Trip" Sweepstakes.
Going abroad this school year? AT&T would like to help pay your way.
10 Grand Prize Winners – Round-Trip Air Transportation from the U.S. to the country where you'll be studying.
Plus thousands of chances to win high-quality currency converters (hey, you may find it more valuable than the air transportation).
To enter, call
1 800 257-5424 ext. 300
Or you can enter on-line at http: www.att.com /student_abroad
Do it today.
No purchase necessary. Void where prohibited. Sweepstakes ends 5/1/97. Open to residents of the U.S., 18 years or older, enrolled at a U.S. college or university during the '97-'98 school year and traveling internationally for 14 days or more. See your Study Abroad Counselor or http://www.att.com/student_abroad for official rules and details.
© 1997 AT&T

Right Here Right Now!
The perfect opportunity has arrived for you to begin a career unparalleled by most other industries!
We're Ames. One of the dominant discount store chains in America, with more than $2 billion in sales and 300 stores in 14 states across the Northeast. And, we've recently been named the Connecticut Retail Merchants Association Retailer of the Year!
Assistant Buyer Training Program
Because discount retailing has developed into a complex, dynamic field where farsightedness and strategic planning are essential for success, we've created a formal, 7-week training program for you, that couples comprehensive classroom seminars and on-the-job training with a successful Buyer.
And because we're so dedicated to this program and your success, senior-level management will participate in the classroom training; and experienced Buyers and Divisional Merchandise Managers will work closely with you throughout all phases of your training.
Upon successful completion of the 7-week program, you will become an Assistant Buyer. Then, you'll work alongside a Buyer, assisting in the management of a $20 to $100 million business!
As an Assistant Buyer, you will continue to participate in ongoing developmental seminars, Business Analysis Group Workshops, and other training support programs...all designed to ultimately prepare you for a career in Buying.
We're looking for dynamic, creative, success-oriented graduates with excellent communication, analytical, and planning skills.
If that's you, please come talk to us!
We'll be at UMass to host an Information Session on:
Thursday, March 6th
7pm - 9pm
Contact your placement office for more detailed information or to schedule an interview.
Ames
Ames is an equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V.

The Edwin M. Rossman Alumni Career Forum
Public Health & Health Sciences
Date: Wednesday, March 5, 1997
Time: 3:00 PM
Location: Campus Center 174 -176
Sponsored by:
University Career Center
Umass Alumni Association
This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!
Alumni/AE Panelists:
Ian Wong '91 — Director of Health Services, Babson College, Welsley, MA
Mark Hughes '95 — Provider Unit Manager, Tufts Health Plan, Boston, MA
Martha Mastroberti '91 — Director of Clinical Reporting, Kaiser Permanente, Farming, CT
Scott Chasan-Taber '94 — Biostatistician, Manager of Statistical Programming, Boston Biostatistics, Framingham, MA
For more information, please contact:
University Career Center
545-2224

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Jeep Wrangler black, nice tires/rims. Very reliable. Runs great. $3000 or B/O. Call 256-1080

1988 Ford Escort 5-speed, A/C, 119K runs well. $1900 or B/O. 533-8413

1986 Honda Civic white, 5-speed, 4-door, excellent condition. $2000 or B/O. 253-3746

1989 DAYTONA TURBO 5-speed, A/C, detach face stereo, T-tops, 86K miles. Asking $3000 or B/O. 549-2943

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Sloana YMCA, Lakeville, CT. In search of energetic counselors and supervisors for an unforgettable outdoor summer experience. To set up an interview On Campus March 11, call Sharon Brown @ (800)545-9367

Temporary Positions Available.
During Spring Break
Hadley Office/ On bus line
Earn up to $350
Evening Shifts Available
Also hiring for summer
Call now 584-0215
Ask for Mr. Beril

B.M. Enterprises
PT Positions in Customer Service Dept.
Sales, Service, Delivery
Must have car
M-F 4pm-9pm, Sat-Sun 10am-4pm

EMPLOYMENT

Up to $400 per week
Call 584-7686 Ask for Mr. Cavanaugh
Tues. and Wed. only
10am-4pm

Counselors for co-ed Northeast Pennsylvania overnight Jewish Federation Camp3 hours from NYC!- general, sports, drama, H20 and arts. (800)973-3866

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Work in America's National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3624 ext. N50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

Balchartowa Recreation Dept. Seeking swim coaches (May-July) Experience preferred. M-F EOE ADA. Call Beth, Dave (413)323-0419 Night: (413)967-4851

National Parks Hiring Plus Forest, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting Companies. Up to $12/hour. Nationwide Openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext. R180

MAKE SUMMER MEMORIES JOBS AVAILABLE
TOP NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS MARCH 11th
Positions Available: basketball, softball, roller hockey, tennis, lacrosse, swimming(WSI), sailing(WSI), water skiing, arts and crafts (ceramics, sewing, scenery, woodworking, photography, fine arts), science and nature, pioneering, ropes course and climbing wall, archery, gymnastics, drama, music, horseback riding, and general counselors.
MUST BE ENTHUSIASTIC AND LOVE WORKING WITH CHILDREN AND ADULTS!!!!
PLEASE CALL TO SET UP AN INTERVIEW
TRAIL'S END CAMP (800)408-1404
(ASK FOR MARC)

Do You Love Kids? Top Northeast Residential Camps seek Activity and Cabin Specialists to live and work with kids ages 7-16. Great facilities, dynamic staff! Flexible, diverse programming in all Water/Land Sports, Creative and Performing Arts, plus full range of outdoors/experiential activities. Lots of positions available. Contact Andy at Steff Search, (800)544-5448 for more information/application. Interviewing in Amherst, March 10-11

WEBMASTER NEEDED For New College Business. Html Experience Required. 549-9919

Summer Camp Positions in upstate New York. Camp Hilltop is seeking caring counselors with skills in swimming, water end land sports, A&C, horses, dance, music, mountain biking, riflery, archery, computers; high/low ropes. Competitive salaries (800)782-5319

EMPLOYMENT

FUN! FRIENDLY! Co-ed Summer Camp in the Berkshires seeks new staff. Welcoming and supportive environment. Positions include- General Bunk Counselors, Heads and Instructors for Swimming, Sailing, Water-skiing, Baseball/Softball, Golf, Gymnastics, Lacrosse, Hockey, Archery, Soccer, Music, Pottery, Tennis, Horseback and more. Day Off accessibility to Boston, New York, Montreal. Call Today Camp Schodack (800)851-1164, E-Mail Schodack@aol.com

Camp Blue Ridge A Co-ed overnight camp 2 hours north of Atlanta, is looking for enthusiastic counselors. We are hiring lifeguards and WSI, as well as specialists in all sports, water skiing, rappelling, hiking, arts and crafts, riflery and archery. For info. contact Debra at 665-8463

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT- How would you like to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, and get paid? Call: (206)971-3554 ext. C50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century' with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details st: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.' D40, NYC, NY 10014

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

College Kids Welcome to Capa Cod 1-5 bedroom homes for the season. Reasonable rates. Honey Spareo (508)398-3367, (508)394-2857

1 bedroom in a 3 bedroom apt. Pufton Village. On major bus route. 5 min. from campus/10 min. walking distance. Electric not included. $275/month Lease ends 8/97. Starts ASAP. Please call Larry 545-0198

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern, two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 865-3856

Pelham 2 bedroom Mobile Home Gas, heat. No pets. First, last and security. $500/month. 253-5413

Capa Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

New Large Dorm Fridge Price negotiable. Also snowboard with bindings. Call 253-3965

King Size Bed with headboard. Good condition, $80. Weight machine- great condition, $80. (410)625-7467

KLH 3-Way 350W SPKRS DBL 12" Woofers, $250/Pr. Call 253-6520

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

HAPPY BIRTHDAY CAKES
You are the love of my life.
MISS YOU
Love, Mr. Man

Happy Belated Birthday James, From Your Darlings

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Three private 1/2 hour lessons, $69.95 Call (413)732-8817 in Amherst Tues. and Thurs. eve

MISCELLANEOUS

SEEKING FINANCIAL AID? Get the system to help find FREE MONEY FOR COLLEGE! Detailed profiles on 200,000+ individual rewards from private and public sectors. Call Student Financial Services: (800)472-9575 ext. F50017 (We are a research and publishing company)

MISCELLANEOUS

Gorillagrams
Birthdays, Anniversaries, Roses, Balloons, etc. Send the Crazy Gorilla. We'll go anywhere, anytime. Student Rates. Call 256-0287

New Metabolism Breakthrough Paired Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved Cost $35. (800)668-4782

ROOM WANTED

Wanted: House or Apartment 4-5 bedrooms near campus for Fall '97. Call Tracey 549-7461 or Deb 549-9983

SERVICES

Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

PREP-COURSES GREG/GMAT
30 hours, $295
American Academy
1-800-808-PREP
(Please leave your name and number)

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Spring Break- Still not to late. Lowest prices. Jamaica, Cancun Bahamas, Panama City. Contact Mett 253-6473

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T Europe $169 O/W Fly the world dirt cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL 587-0007

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $550/week. (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $238 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Tutor for CmpSci 401 (501) Please call Greg 549-8969

YOUR AD HERE.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad, as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, MARCH 4

Concert — Local band Slumberland will be performing at the Sights 'n Sounds concert in the Student Union Art Gallery at 8 p.m. Free.

Workshop — The Learning Support Services will offer a Note Taking & Study Skills workshop from 3:45–5 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Free. Call 545–5334 to register.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5

Film — The UMass Objectivist Club will show a videotaped interview with Dr. Leonard Peikoff, a leading authority on Ayn Rand's philosophy on Objectivism, at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 911. New members, Five College students and community members welcome.

Film — The Student Union and Visual Performing Arts Space will feature a film on Frida Kahlo at 4:30 p.m. Explore the various "faces" of art throughout history in a cross-cultural context. Classes are welcome.

Meeting — the Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold this week's meeting at 7 p.m. downstairs in the Campus Center, room 162. Anyone who appreciates or writes poetry is welcome. New members are always welcome. For more information, contact Tim at 546–0562 or Kaye at 546–1459.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hold its third meeting of the spring semester in Room 304 of University Health Services from 5:30–6:30 p.m. All are welcome to attend.

THURSDAY, MARCH 6

Lecture — Barbara Rheinhold, director of the Career Development Office at Smith College presents "Out in the Workplace: To Be or Not to Be." The event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, wheelchair accessible. Sponsored by the UMass Stonewall Center.

Workshop, discussion — Are you graduating and/or looking for a job or internship and have a disability? Are you worried about disclosing your disability? The Peer Mentor Network along with Disability Services and Learning Disabled Support Services are presenting a workshop on "Disclosure: What to do?" from 6–8 p.m. in the Campus Center. Please join the PMN, D.S., LDSS and the campus community for a roundtable discussion on disclosure. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at 413–323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Band wanted — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently seeking a four piece band for the spring production of Fame. The band must include: keyboard, guitar, bass, and drums. Great publicity possibilities. For more information call Heather @ 549–3681 or Justin @ 546–0460.

Coffee Shop — Student Valley Productions is holding a Coffee Shop in April. They are looking for any talent coming from the Five College area in music, songs, poetry, skits, comedy, etc. For more information, call Daisy @ 253–6514.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www.ureg.admin.umass.edu

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center, To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

NOTICES

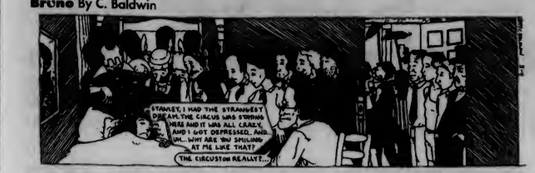
Elections — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the elections for the positions of President, Student Trustee and all local Area Government will be held on March 11 and 12 from 11 a.m.–2 p.m. and 4:30–7 p.m. Locations to be announced.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acter in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative literature, 303 South College, UMass.

PYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network



2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
19 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
28 BET
28 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
38 Much Music

Bueno Y Sano
1 Boltwood Walk in Amherst
Bueno Y Sano 253-4000

TUESDAY EVENING — c - Campus — MARCH 4, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH (2)	10	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ℠		Colin Wilkinson Sings... (In Stereo)				Lord of the Dance
WFSB (3)	3	News ℠	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Promised Land "Downsized" ℠		When the Cradle Falls" (1991, Drama) Linda Gray ℠				News ℠	Late Show ℠
WBZ (4)	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land "Downsized" ℠		"When the Cradle Falls" (1991, Drama) Linda Gray ℠				News	Late Show ℠
WCVB (5)	5	News ℠	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ℠	Roseanne ℠	Ellen ℠	Home Imp.	Spin City ℠	Practice "Pilot" ℠		News ℠	Nightline ℠
WLVI (6)		Full House ℠	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★★★ "Only the Lonely" (1991, Comedy-Drama) John Candy.				News		Jimmy Jones (In Stereo) ℠
WHDH (7)		News		Wheel-Fortune-Jeopardy! ℠		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Fraiser (R) ℠	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) ℠		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	(8)	Fresh Prince	Martin ℠		Judge Judy ℠	Real TV (R) ℠	Moesha (R) ℠	Goode Beh.	Sparks (R) ℠	Sparta (R) ℠		News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV (R) ℠
WVIT	(9)	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy ℠	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Frasier (R) ℠	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) ℠		News	Tonight Show
WTIC (11)	11	Simpsons ℠	Roseanne ℠	Home Imp.	Seinfeld ℠	★★ "Sister Act 2: Back in the Habit" (1993) Whoopi Goldberg. ℠				News		Coach ℠	Deep Space ℠
WWLP (22)	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ℠	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Frasier (R) ℠	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) ℠		News	Tonight Show
WGBY (11)	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ℠		Eight Weeks to Optimum Health (In Stereo)				Living Edens (In Stereo) ℠		Colm Wilkinson Sings... (R)
WGGB (40)	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld ℠	Ent. Tonight	Roseanne ℠	Ellen ℠	Home Imp.	Spin City ℠	Practice "Pilot" ℠		News ℠	Nightline ℠
WSBK (38)		Beverly Hills, 90210 ℠		Seinfeld ℠	NBA Basketball	Boston Celtics at Indiana Pacers. (Live)				News	Martin ℠	Mad Abo. You	Real TV (R) ℠
WTBS (72)		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★★½ "Barjo the Hunted" (1987, Adventure) Benji. Red Steagal.				"Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of the Apes" (1984)
A&E (69)		Quincy		Equalizer (Part 2 of 2)		Biography: Conrad Hilton		Touch of Frost "Penny for the Guy"				Law & Order "Doubles" ℠
CNN (56)	29	WorldView ℠		Moneyline ℠	Crossfire ℠	Prime News ℠	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ℠		World Today		Sports Rpt.	Moneyline ℠
COM (53)	98	Tick ℠	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	Sinbad: Brain Damaged (R)		T. Davidson	Bill Bellamy	Lizards	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC (52)		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Winge "MC-202: The Jet" (R)		Wild Discovery: Two in Bush		Mystery Univ.	World-Wond.	Airpower Showdown		Wild Discovery:	Two in Bush
ESPN (51)		Up Close	Sportscenter			College Basketball: MCC Championship -- Teams TBA				College Basketball: Sun Belt Championship -- Teams TBA			Sportscenter
LIFE (54)		Supermarket	Debt		Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo) ★★★ "Nazi Hunter: The Beate Klarsfeld Story" (1986, Drama)						Living	Mysteries
MTV (35)		Ren & Stimpy	Road Rules	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)		Unplugged (In Stereo)			House of Style	World Tour (R)	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK (50)		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug ℠	Rugrats ℠	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Love Lucy ℠	Munsters	M.T. Moors	Rhoda	Teia ℠	Odd Couple ℠
SCIFI (55)		Twilight Zone	Darkside	Time Trax "Face of Death" (R)		Wild Palms "Rising Sons" (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3)					VR.5 "Simon's Choice"		Wild Palms (R)
TLC (57)	28	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Treasures	America	Secrets of the Pyramids		Future Fantastic "Robot"		Treasures	America
TNT (58)		In the Heat of the Night ℠		In the Heat of the Night ℠		NBA Basketball: Orlando Magic at Seattle SuperSonics. (Live) ℠					Inside-NBA	★★★ "Airplane" (1980)
USA (59)		Renegade "Cop for a Day" ℠		Highlander: The Series ℠		Murder, She Wrote ℠		Boxing: Lonnie Bradley vs. Otis Grant. (Live)				Wings ℠	Wings ℠
HBO (37)		(3:15) ★★½ "Sidekicks" (1993)		Other Mother's (In Stereo)		★★ "Big Bully" (1996) Rick Moranis. PG ℠		Comedy Hour: George Carlin.		"Profile for Murder" (1997) Lance Henriksen. NR
MAX (39)		★★★ "Roxanne" (1987, Comedy) Steve Martin. (In Stereo) PG ℠				"Desire" (1996, Suspense) Martin Kemp. R				★★★ "Natural Born Killers" (1994, Drama) Woody Harrelson. R ℠		★★★ "Animal Inst. 2
SHOW (61)		★★ "The House on Carroll Street" (1988) Kelly McGillis. PG				★★½ "Jason's Lyric" (1994, Drama) Allen Payne. (In Stereo) R				★★½ "Dead Presidents" (1995, Drama) Larenz Tate. R ℠

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

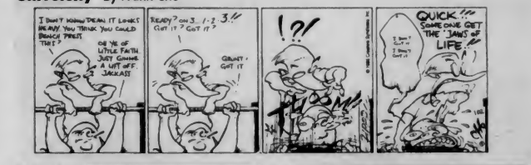
Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

University² By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger	Mandarin Chicken
Hungarian Noodle Bake	Meatloaf
Indian Tacos	Ratatouille
Veg. Indian Tacos	Veal Parm.

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Clam Roll	Mandarin Chicken
Indian Tacos	Lemon Pepper Cod
Ziti	Garbanzo Bean Provencale
Veg. Pasta	Ravioli Alfredo

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger	Mandarin Chicken
Grilled Chicken Sand.	Meatloaf
Indian Tacos

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Indian Tacos	Mandarin Chicken
Brocc & Cauli Casserole	Meatloaf
Ziti w/ Sausage	Garbanzo Bean Provencale
Veg. Indian Taco	Ravioli Alfredo

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
A club meeting is fertile ground for cultivating a new sweetheart. Share your secret aspirations at the beginning of a relationship– you might find a partner in an unusual pursuit.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
A friend's resistance to important plans you have made could signal the need for clearer communication. It would be unwise to simply escalate the argument; rather, step back and consider exactly what your friend has to say.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
If you feel that something unjust has occurred, don't hesitate to take legal action. You may do someone, or even yourself, a great deal of good. Get an expert's advice to help you through any sticky situations.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
An electronic gadget is a source of amusement for you and some close friends, but be aware of time passing—you may be spending more time playing than working. Take a walk outdoors to clear your mind for action.

LEO
July 23–August 23
In making a purchase this week, selecting the highest quality you can afford will save you money over the long run. However, maintain your budget, or you'll run short in the near future.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
If you're feeling unusually accident-prone, consider asking a younger friend for help. You may be able to arrange an exchange that is mutually beneficial between two antagonists.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Paying close attention to directions this week could be downright enlightening, as well as preventing a host of everyday snafus. Don't miss a single detail of the things that are presented to you.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
Maintaining a strong sense of humor will help you ride your way past a number of difficulties this week. An obnoxious co-worker may have a hidden agenda that includes making trouble for you.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
The urge to renegotiate dominates you early this week. Avoid the temptation to overachieve at work; you may spread yourself too thin, and step on a few toes in the process. Ask people how you can help, instead of barging ahead.

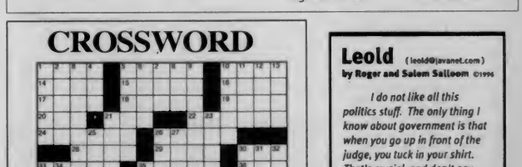
CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
Making a plan and sticking to it is the best tactic to use this week, whether you want to advance your career or achieve a financial goal. Wonderful things are on the horizon for you, so be ready for them.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
A period of stress and achievement may be coming to an end, but do not allow yourself to sink into a time of malaise. Bask in your accomplishments, but look to the future at the same time in order to be ready for even bigger things.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
A change in routine could be setting the stage for romance. Enjoy the tender affections of a person who truly cares for you. An awkward situation eases at work, as shifting politics realign your co-workers into a more cohesive group.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

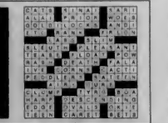


"Hey, Annette! Put this on! He should be coming to any minute!"

Quote of the Day

"We all learn to write in the second grade. Some of us just move on to other things."

–Bobby Knight, on journalists



CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Freud's earliest stage
5. Disaster
10. Understand
14. Portion
15. Uselessness
16. Midwest state
17. Cigar producer
18. Championship
19. Portent
20. ___ standstill (2 words)
21. Profiter
22. Agree
24. Columnist James
26. Actress Bo
28. Harmonized
29. Part of a Civil War signature
30. Swiss mountain
33. Foolish
35. Search e.suspect
36. Singer Clark
37. Thugs
39. Stop pedaling
39. "Walk Like ___" (2 words)
40. From ___ Z (2 words)
41. Juice variety
42. Our Men ___
43. Postal Creed word
44. Human bellows
46. Stone's throw
46. Conscience, sometimes
47. "___ on My Mind"
50. Curling items
52. Songbird
54. Stub spot
55. Volcano output
56. Swashbuckling Flynn
58. Extensive
60. Made a hole in one
61. Cheek brightener
62. Cultivated
63. Painter Shahn et al
64. Ending for home or bed
65. Merely

DOWN
1. Author Wilde
2. TV's "___ 66"
3. Diplomat
4. Meadow
5. Detesting
6. Fanatic
7. Cellars
8. (OW)40, e.g
9. Most lucid
10. Newsstand
11. Alaskan city
12. "Lawyer Marshall
13. Desire
21. Radius, e.g
23. Try to find
29. Sunbathers' desires
26. Madden
27. "Fur ___"
35. Respect
31. Dieter's request to the butcher
32. Confined
32. "___ Dream, Can't It?" (2 words)
34. Defense gp.
35. Chanced upon
35. Police cars
39. There oughtta be ___! (2 words)
41. Fruit tree
42. Material for a marker's tip
45. Old carpentry work
48. Prods
48. Emulate Jimmie Rodgers
49. Squalid
50. Tell off
51. "The ___ is to the swift" (Davidson)
52. Stove chamber
53. Forum robe
57. Degenerate
58. French street
59. Geneva-based UN agency

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Leold (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

I do not like all this politics stuff. The only thing I know about government is that when you go up in front of the judge, you tuck in your shirt. That's crucial, and don't say anything.

The judge and I are going to feel very badly when we see each other. He and I both have very tough jobs.

My dad is always talking about participatory democracy and the political process.

I'm sure this is what my father had in mind.

SPORTS

Tuesday, March 4, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Minutemen meet Explorers tomorrow night in Philly

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts men's basketball team, this year's road to the Atlantic 10 Championship is a little more crowded than those in the past.

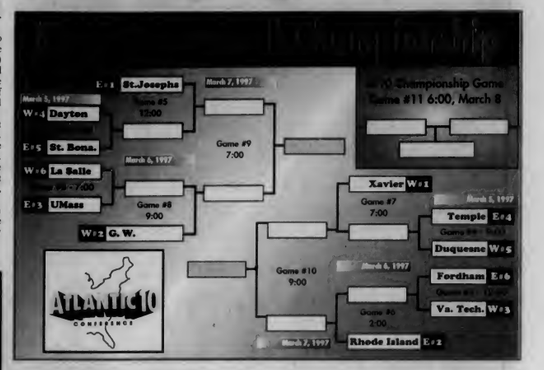
In order for UMass to grab the tourney title, the Minutemen must first get past the No. 6 seed in the West La Salle (10–16, 5–11), tomorrow at 7 p.m.

East No. 3 Massachusetts (18–12, 11–5) won the only regular–season contest between the two teams, posting a 56– 50 victory at the CoreStates Spectrum.

The day's early match–ups will pit West No. 3 Virginia Tech (14–14, 7–8) and East No. 6 Fordham (6–20, 1–15) against each other in the noon game. The Hokies dismantled the Rams on Feb. 8 in New York, 50–32.

"We set college basketball back 100 years with that game," Fordham coach Nick Marcarchuk said.

Dayton and St. Bonaventure tip–off in the afternoon's second game (2 p.m.). The Flyers (13–13, 6–10) have had an up and down year, and earned themselves the No. 4 seed in the West. The Bonnies have recorded a 13–13, 5–11 mark and received the East No. 5 seed. St. Bonaventure won by one at the Reilly Center during the regular season. ,



East No. 4 seed Temple faces off against Duquesne in the nightcap at 9 p.m. Duquesne, which had a 9–17, 5–11 record on the season, was tabbed with the West No. 5 seed.

The Owls beat the Dukes in Pittsburgh (83–68) on Feb. 9 in the teams' only meeting during the season.

The winner of game two (Dayton–St. Bonaventure) will face East No. 1 St. Joseph's (21–6, 13–3) on Thursday at noon in a quarterfinal game. The victor of game one (Fordham–VaTech) will square off against East No. 2 Rhode Island (18–8, 12–4) at 2 p.m.

The top two seeds out of the West will play in the later games. West No. 1 Xavier (21–4, 12–3) will face the Temple–Duquesne winner at 7 p.m. in their quarterfinal; while the UMass–La Salle victor will play West No. 2 George Washington (14–12, 8–8) at 9 p.m.

The semifinals will be played on Friday at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m., with the finals being contested Saturday evening at 6 p.m.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Lan Ketner and the Minutemen are off to Philly to compete in one of the toughest A–10 Tourneys in recent years.

Looking at the A–10 teams at large

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

CHRIS STAMM

The postseason is upon us, and unlike the past five years, the only definite way the Massachusetts men's basketball team can land a spot in the NCAA Tournament is with an Atlantic 10 Tournament victory. This year however, bringing back the big trophy from Philly will not be a cake walk. With the conference touting some of the best talent in years, which teams deserve an at large bid into NCAA's barring a tourney win?

Massachusetts (18–12, 11–5)

I'm a glass is half–full type of guy, thus I'm not writing off the Minutemen's chance in the A–10's Championship bracket. However, should they fall along the way, I still think at this point in time they'll get the nod from Overland Park. Why?

Strength of schedule. Look across the conference and you'll find that nobody plays a schedule as tough as the Minutemen. This season, top ranked opponents have included big boys Wake Forest, North Carolina, Fresno State, and Maryland in addition to nationally recognized foes such as Virginia, California, Georgetown, Connecticut and Boston College. While UMass may have dropped some of the early contests, keep in mind that they were without the services of Carmelo Travieso, Edgar Padilla and Tyrone Weeks at various stretches in the early going. With the exception of two late losses, they have been one of the hottest teams in the nation. With a win over La Salle, they'll get a chance at the Big Dance.

No. 16 Xavier (21–4, 12–3)

Their record doesn't lie. On top of the numbers, the Musketeers hold the No. 1 spot in seven categories. While they don't have names in the top three of any major categories, they have a handful of guys that rank in the top 10. With a national ranking since the early going, they're a lock.

St. Joseph's (21–6, 13–3)

This up–and–comer deserves a spot. The last time the Hawks made NCAA's was 1986, but this year, they've earned the No. 1 spot in the A–10 East. Besides, they've tangled with some big guys themselves. While they lost to the likes of Duke, Villanova, Tulsa and Louisville, anyone who watched them sweep UMass on The Deuce knows that they've created a true hoop haven on Hawk Hill.

Temple (17–9, 10–6)

As much as you hate to admit it, John Chaney has done a great job with a fairly young team. The wise old owl represents all that is good in college hoops while still leading his squad through a rigorous schedule.

Have a Cigar

As good as it would be for the league, Rhode Island and George Washington are out. The Rams play a garbage non– conference schedule with their biggest win coming over Providence. Oh, and they lost to Seton Hall and Iona — back to back. As for GW, they haven't been able to win more than two in a row all season long.

Softball battles midnight rains in Ga.

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

One of Crash Davis' many musings on the great game of baseball in Bull Durham was that "Sometimes you win, sometimes you lose and sometimes it rains."

The Massachusetts softball team saw a lot of each of these three things this past weekend, posting a 2–3 record at an NFCA Leadoff Classic in Columbus, Georgia whose schedule was essentially rendered on the fly after massive rains cancelled most of Friday's action.

Consequently, UMass did not face its intended foes, but rather discovered that it would now face No. 6 South Carolina, the eventual tournament champion, just a matter of hours before the teams took to the field at 10 p.m., highlighting a challenging slate.

But, down by the Chattahoochee River on a Friday night, while most UMass students were making pyramids of cans in the pale moonlight, the Minutewomen put forth their best effort of the year in a slim 1–0 loss to the Lady Gamecocks.

"We played one of the best games we've played in two years against South Carolina," coach Elaine Sortino said. "We were on top of things and lost on a heartbreaking ball in the mud on a swinging bunt that led to the only run."

While Danielle "Harry" Henderson and Sky Brown matched each other pitch–for–pitch on the mound, the Lady Gamecocks pushed across the game's lone run in the bottom of the second. With runners on second and third, Chanda Lee's swinging bunt emerged itself in the wet field, enabling Carrie Elliott to cross the plate.

UMass hung tight with USC throughout the contest and made one final run at the victory in the top of the seventh inning. While much of America had its eyes on either David Letterman or Jay Leno's final guest of the night, USC had its eyes on Kim Gutridge at third base with two outs and Kelly Buckley at the plate. Buckley ripped a shot with "triple down the line" written all over it, that was snared by a diving Leanna Troesh at first base, ending the game.

After falling 6–0 to No. 13 Southwestern Louisiana on Saturday, UMass took its second game of the day behind the strong left arm of Liz Wagner. The junior southpaw took a no–hitter into the seventh before settling for a complete– game one–hit shutout in a 3–0 win over Texas A&M.

UMass gave Wagner all the support she would need in the first when it pushed across two runs on consecutive singles by Gutridge, Sam Cardenas, Chris Martens and Buckley.

Wagner was perfect until issuing a

Turn to SOFTBALL, page7

Oates traded to Washington, Harry Sinden strikes again

Johnathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

He was known around the league as a quality player and the one who set up Brett Hull in the late '80s and early '90s. When the rumor broke out that he might be coming to Boston, interest arose all around the state. Then in 1992, Harry Sinden set up the deal and brought Adam Oates to the Boston Bruins. Dandy.

How perfect the scenario was: Oates would be along side top–notch right winger Cam Neely, and would help the team out tremendously on face–offs and special teams.

"Oatesy," as the team called him, was better than his record, taking the helm as the top player for the Bruins, finishing in third place behind Mario Lemieux and Pat Lafontaine in total points in the '92–'93 season.

Since that year, the last chance the B's had to go all the way, Boston has not been a team worthy of note. (But in this city, we always make them sound like they're well on their way to winning it all.) Ever since losing Neely to a career–ending injury that would never allow him to return entirely with good health, courtesy of Ulf Samuelson, the team has been wasting away in limbo waiting for the next "Great Hope" to fall in its lap. And the team has stunk.

Then, all of a sudden, Oates did what no athlete in his right mind should do, he spoke out about the management of his team; namely Sinden and Mike O'Connell. How dare he.

He is only the best all–around player on the team and one of the best in the league. He's one of the most consistent men in the league, in terms of winning face–offs and all–out competitiveness. He killed penalties as well as scored on power plays and is one hell of team leader. So when he spoke out about the team, how does the brass respond? They took it as a cry for more cash. He may have had the right to speak up, but that's not what management expects to hear from one of their leaders.

So Saturday night, Oates was traded to the Washington Capitols alongside Rick Tocchet and Bill Ranford. In return, the Bruins claimed Vezina Trophy–winning goaltender Jim Carey (I won't even grace this column with a wise crack about the comedian), along with forward Jason Allison and center Anson Carter. Also included are future draft picks (look for the specifics of the trade in this week's NHL column).

As it stands now, it seems that the Capitols got the better end of the stick, but let's hope the money Sinden has freed up will get the Bruins a major contender. With the newly acquired young talent, look for the Bruins to be a tough team to face within the next few seasons. But don't bet on it. You never know, it

Turn to BRUINS, page 7

UMass gymnasts pounce on Wildcats

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Women's Gymnastics team continued its winning streak this weekend, beating the University of New Hampshire Wildcats for the second time this year, 192.925–192.375 in Durham, N.H. Their overall record is 10–2, with one meet left in the regular season.

The Minutewomen are currently No. 1 in the Atlantic 10, and were No. 20 nationally going into Saturday's meet. This win should help them move up in their national ranking.

"It's going to help us a lot," said UMass Coach Dave Kuzara. "We are going to maintain our No. 1 ranking in the region and it looks like we are going to jump to No. 15 in the polls."

Saturday's meet was the first time the Minutewomen have been away in quite some time. Coming off of an incredible home stretch, the Minutewomen were very confident they would beat New Hampshire. And though their overall score was lower than in their previous wins, where they had been scoring in the 194 range, they proved that they still can compete well on the road.

Kuzara had his own thoughts on why the team didn't do as well as when they were home.

"I think it was more about being on different equipment. I don't think we were overconfident... I think it was we were in a different arena and we had been home for a while and people were not taking control.

"They were being tentative so it throws your balance off and it throws your timing off... we were having a little problem with their floor, even though their floor was great and I just told them they just had to be super aggressive," Kuzara said.

Yet the Minutewomen still churned out impressive performances. Mandy Mosby won the all–around with a 38.775 and Dianne Laing, Betsy Colucci and Penny LeBeau tied for first on the vault with a 9.750. Tara Swartz finished second on bars with a 9.825.

And the sophomore class never ceases to impress. The top place on the balance beam went to Anita Sanyal (9.875), who is also ranked No. 8 nationally on the beam. Michelle LoPresti, Denise Johnson and Rokia Madore also competed well.

Kuzara plans to utilize this meet as a stepping stone for the weeks to come, to get his team focused and prepared for their post–season.

"It was good practice to be away — it was a different rotation than we're used to and all that was great practice," Kuzara said. "We have two weeks to train now so we should be able to set up real nicely for West Virginia, A–10's and Regionals."

LISA M. OLIVERI / COLLEGIAN

Michelle LoPresti prepares for the floor exercise.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 95 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, March 5, 1997

Thespian anti–Semitism?

Is the classic work of Shakespeare blatantly anti– Semitic, or is he a victim of modern day PC–ness. Read about the debate (See Arts & Living, page 8).

Let's get this party started right

Edgar Padilla and the Massachusetts men's basketball team starts A–10 tournament play tonight versus LaSalle. For the scoop (See Sports, page 14).

WORLD

German police attack anti–waste protesters

DANNENBERG, Germany (AP) — Police dragged away thousands of demonstrators early today who staged a sit–in at a train station in hopes of blocking the last leg of an atomic waste transport.

After a day of violent confrontations with police, some 4,000 demonstrators gathered last night on a street near the train station in this northern German town, pledging to stop the waste from getting to its final destination in the nearby town of Gorleben.

But hundreds of officers blocked off the area after midnight, ordering the crowd to disperse.

Getting no response, they began hauling the demonstrators behind police lines one by one, preventing them from returning to their comrades. The protesters did not resist.

Authorities said they planned to go ahead with the shipment of the nuclear waste soon after daybreak today, having secured a road from Dannenberg to the storage site in Gorleben despite pitched battles with protesters the day before. They made some 250 arrests.

Clashes continued late into the night, however, with as many as 500 demonstrators attacking police with slingshots and Molotov cocktails.

NATION

Military faces yet another sex scandal

ABERDEEN, Md. (AP) — An Army trainee caught in a sex scandal at Aberdeen Proving Ground said yesterday that military investigators coerced her into revealing she had sex with a drill instructor.

Pvt. Toni Moreland said she only told military investigators she had sex with Staff Sgt. Marvin Kelley because they said he would be jailed on a rape charge if she did not admit they had consensual sex.

"They basically coerced everything I said out of me," said Moreland, 21, of St. Louis. "They called me a liar and this and that. They said he was accused of raping me. They kept calling me a liar, saying my roommates had already told them that I did [have sex with Kelley]."

Moreland initially told the Army she did not have sex with Kelley but later admitted it. She faces a court–martial on charges of lying.

John Yaquiant, a spokesman for the training facility 30 miles north of Baltimore, would not comment on Moreland's allegations that she was coerced.

Kelley has not been charged and Yaquiant wouldn't confirm or deny he is under investigation.

The Associated Press found no telephone listing for Kelley in the Aberdeen area and Yaquiant wasn't sure if Kelley was still stationed at the facility.

Seven drill instructors at Aberdeen have been charged with sexual harassment, rape or consensual relations with recruits.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 30	HIGH: 50 LOW: 30	HIGH: 45 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword .....page 13
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 12
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 14

Occupation of Goodell Building continues; University rejects protesters demands

Five Colleges support rally

Discussion stalls between sides; protest continue

By Mark McGrath & Christina Paletto
Collegian Staff

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

Yesterday evening, the ongoing occupation of Goodell Building by protesting students was bolstered by supporters from across the Five College area.

The Five College demonstrators, including students from Amherst, Smith, Hampshire and Mount Holyoke colleges organized at Amherst College and together walked from the town common to Goodell, chanting, "The students united will never be defeated," as they passed through the Campus Center.

The Five College contingent was made up of undergraduate and graduate students, faculty members and alumni who offered different reasons for their participation.

"It's for the students. I think they've got a very clear case here. Enough broken promises," said Rick Griffith, a professor of classics from Amherst College.

"We came out because I think students should fight for their rights," said Ann Campeau, a comparative literature major from Smith College. "This is definitely a Five College issue and is not unique to UMass. I think the minority issue is very important. They need to address those issues because diversity is important on every campus."

Joshua Wolff, an Amherst College student and editor–in– chief of the underground publication The Indicator, assembled a special edition for the event and compared the events of Goodell with his experiences at the University of California–Berkeley.

"Berkeley is the UMass of the west," Wolff said. "There are 175 people here and they've been here much longer than the people in Berkely ever stayed and they've got support from the outside that they never got in Berkely."

During the rally, a number of students spoke to the crowd. Brad Davidson, candidate for SGA president and general manager of WMUA took the microphone and contributed his support.

"This is what we have to continue here today and I'd just like to say to all of you... give it up for yourselves right now," Davidson said. "Because this is a beautiful thing. Not just black, not just white, not just Latino, not just UMass, everybody out here coming together for one cause. That is a beautiful thing right there."

Kola Olusunde, a member of Alphi Phi Alpha and an active participant in the sit–in, pointed out in his speech how the rally coincided with an anniversary and coined the movement the "Massachusetts March."

"[Monday] was six years to the day that Rodney King was beaten," Olusunde said.

"We are right now as students of minority at this campus having violence perpetrated on us. It is a form of financial violence... to withdraw us when we don't have the buck." Olusunde said.

He also warned the ralliers that they will have to question themselves.

"You need to ask yourself — what exactly are you prepared to do personally to send a clear message that what has occurred and what is

Turn to RALLY, page 2

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Brad Davidson broadcasts for WMUA from inside Goodell, as ALANA and white students rally for support from other Five–College students Tuesday evening.

Day two of the ALANA (Asian, Latin American, African and Native American) and white student takeover commenced last night with admittedly little progress on the negotiation process.

After spending all day and night inside Goodell on Monday, the student protestors were able to rally support from several different organizations from Amherst College, Smith College and Mount Holyoke College. This coalition of students are also planning a campus–wide student walk–out at 10:30 a.m. today.

Negotiations were scheduled to begin at 8:15 yesterday morning. However when the Administration arrived at the table, student negotiators expressed concern that Deputy Chancellor Marcellete Williams and Acting Provost Patricia Crosson, who were not in attendance, be present. Both of whom were a part of the administrative negotiation team Monday afternoon. Williams is the highest ranking administrator involved in the negotiation process.

Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, Tom Robinson said that as he understood it, Monday's agreement on yesterday's first meeting, would not include Crosson or Williams. The students disagreed.

"We wanted everyone to be here, I don't think they're taking it seriously."

Turn to PROTEST, page 2

UMass bids for Honors College

Scott submits papers to create a Commonwealth College

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Chancellor David K. Scott submitted the University of Massachusetts at Amherst's concept paper for the creation of a Commonwealth College at UMass Amherst to the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education on Monday.

The concept paper offers a broad plan for transforming the existing honors program at UMass into an honors college which would become the Commonwealth College for the UMass system.

According to Deputy Provost Norman Aitken, the concept paper draws heavily on the special report of the Academic Matters Council (AMC) of the Faculty Senate on the creation of an honors college at UMass.

The AMC composed their report in response to a request from the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education for submissions of concept papers from any campus or group interested in sponsoring a plan for a Commonwealth College.

The Board outlined the primary objectives of the Commonwealth College to be: improving the quality of public education in the Commonwealth, promoting public awareness of the quality of public institutions of higher education in the Commonwealth and providing a small, affordable and public option for the Commonwealth's most highly motivated, talented and achieving undergraduate students.

"Additional objectives of the Commonwealth College include recruitment and retention of high ability students from diverse socio–economic, ethnic and racial groups and incorporation of internships, service learning and public service within the curriculum.

Aitken said that the large pool of resources already in place at the UMass–Amherst campus makes it the most logical choice for the location of a Commonwealth College.

"Our basic proposition is that we have a very strong honors program in existence now," Aitken said. "There are approximately 1600 honors students on this campus and we are already drawing excellent high school students now.

"We would like to enhance our program and change it into a college. We already have a lot here, and it makes a lot of sense to invest money here where there is already a critical mass of honors students," Aitken said.

The concept papers calls for doubling the number of academically talented students at UMass, establishing a full time recruiter for honors students, expanding the number of honors courses offered and the number of faculty teaching honors classes, creating a post–graduate fellowship office for aiding students in their application to prestigious fellowship such as the Rhodes, Marshall and Truman, increasing scholarship funding for honors students and designating physical space for the honors college.

"I think an honors college would be an excellent addition to the campus," Aitken said. "It is a national trend. Almost all flagship institutions are creating or enhancing honors colleges. It is very important that we create an honors program to attract more honors students to the campus."

Support for the concept paper

Aitken also felt that there is a lot of support for an honors college at UMass from the faculty and administration and noted that the AMC special report was endorsed unanimously by the Faculty Senate at their Feb. 20 meeting.

"I think that there is very strong support. It [AMC special report] was passed unanimously by the faculty senate. All the students I have talked to think it is a good idea," Aitken said. "The administration is very positive in supporting it."

Turn to HONORS, page 2

Conference to discuss service learning

By Laura Forster
Collegian staff

The fourth annual "Big Rally" on community service will take place this Saturday, March 8 in the Campus Center with the dual purpose of getting students involved in community service and to discuss whether service learning should be a mandatory part of the curriculum at the University of Massachusetts.

Sponsored by the UMass Community Service Program, the conference will begin with registration promptly at 9:30 a.m. and go until 3 p.m. Deputy Vice Chancellor, Marcellette Williams will commence with a welcome address, followed by a panel discussion made up of two students and two faculty members, concerning the issue at hand.

Attendants will then be broken up into smaller groups to further discuss conclusions and suggestions which they will share with the administration. This feedback is new to the conference, and was based on suggestions by various student groups such as MassPIRG, SHARE and the Boltwood Project.

After a lunch break, the Massachusetts Campus Compact (MACC) will give a presentation about how to involve UMass students in their "student network" of community service throughout the state.

Five workshops will be conducted concerning topics such as charity and social change, community service and career planning, recruiting volunteers, the UMass Community Service Council and service learning courses at UMass. Participants are to pick one workshop of their choice to attend.

Karen Elam, the conference coordinator, said that the conference will examine whether service learning is valuable and how the University would go about adopting it into the curriculum.

In pointing out the benefits, Elam said, "Service learning can allow students to put theory into practice and practice what they are learning while providing a service as well."

The Conference will be held in Campus Center, room 163. The deadline for registration is free and ends today. Interested students should call the Community Service Program at 545–3327 to register. Lunch will be provided.

Everywoman's Center brings Nicaraguan painter, speaker

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

Nicaraguan painter, cultural organizer and articulate speaker, Ms. Maria Elena Pineda, will be a guest presenter to celebrate International Women's Month.

Pineda, sponsored by the Everywoman's Center, will lecture and exhibit work by Solentiname artists in Augusta Savage Gallery, New Africa House today at 12:15 p.m.

Pineda will present her experience as a woman, as an artist and as a campesina during the Sandinista and post– Sandinista periods Nicaragua.

Born and raised in Solentiname, an archipelago of 38 islands in Lake Nicaragua, she has organized and hosted over a dozen special exhibitions in Managua and numerous foreign countries including Japan, Chile, Finland and Mexico. Her work has been shown in over 50 national and international exhibits.

Pineda, considered one of the finest and most admired painters in Nicaragua, has received many awards including a national certificate of artistic achievement in 1996, from the President of the Republic, Violetta Chamorro. Her work has also been chosen for reproduction in posters, calendars and greeting cards.

President of The Solentiname Association of Artists and Craftspeople and director of The Solentiname Gallery, Managua, Nicaragua, Pineda has been an active cultural organizer for the artists and craftspeople of Solentiname.

The people of Solentiname were introduced to various crafts in an effort to improve their situation of poverty in the 1960s by Ernesto Cardenal. The people began to paint about the struggles of their daily lives and their beautiful natural surroundings.

The work of the artists of Solentiname features a strong, spiritual, ecological and political commitment that has evolved from their history, experience and their process of artistic expression and development.

The work of the Solentiname artists will be shown on the University of Massachusetts campus, at the Augusta Savage Gallery in New Africa House during the month of March.

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Let me see you sweat!

Michelle Oulette and members of the UMass Theater Guild rehearse for this spring's production of Fame ,which will take place in Bowker Auditorium on April 3–5.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor: Mike Burke
Copy Editor: Lisa Oliveri
Photo Technician: Lauren Koski
Production Supervisor: Marc Dionne
Production Staff: Dan Bodah & Matthew Guilmette

■ rally

continued from page 1

happening to us daily is unacceptable? What are you ready to do?," Olusunde asked.

Tom Taffe, one of the student negotiators encouraged the ralliers to keep up the protest.

"The longer you stay here tonight, the deeper and stronger the message becomes to this University," Taffe said. "They can no longer dismiss the rights of students and sweep you under the rug. We are working in dignity and respect with the administrators, with the space we occupy, with the police we deal with. Always with dignity and respect. That's how we started and that's how we will end."

Amanda Gilman, the president of Smith College's Student Government Association presented the protesters a letter of support on behalf of Smith, which read, "We recognize the danger of allowing any college administration to ignore past promises, while turning its back on the continuing needs of the student body."

Most speakers who addressed the demands of ALANA students felt that this rally was not just a movement of students of color, but a movement of all students.

"This is a unity issue. You don't see much Five College unity. That ends here. We're all here together. We're here to support UMass," said Tom Gray, president of the Amherst College class of 2000, which donated about $100 worth of food to the students who are occupying Goodell.

ray continued, "I'm happy with the results because this is a demonstration of unity and a demonstration of the entire Five College system which will not tolerate the breaches of trust on the part of the administration. All the colleges in this area have problems of this nature and together with unity we can solve all of these problems."

Maurice Caston-Powe, president of the UMass Student Government Association (SGA) also addressed the crowd of supporters, "This is a peaceful protest, but that does not mean it is a quiet protest.

"If you guys can just yell as loud as you can, so that you can shake Chancellor Scott in Scotland or Mexico or wherever he is... we're going to change the way they think about students."

In addition, protesters have announced a walkout for today's classes. They want concerned students to walk out of their 10:10 classes and to convene on the lawn of Goodell so that the rally at 10:30 a.m. may continue.

David DuCille, a WMUA disc jockey who manned the microphone throughout the rally, was pleased with the outcome.

"This was a rally for students. Anybody who was down here saw that, that it was students," DuCille said. "You can't describe the feeling, when I was on the steps and I just saw all the people come by, it was incredible... that much support behind [us]... to see this campus come together for something other than a basketball game."

■ honors

continued from page 1

Will Brinkley, a senior communications and environmental science major, said, "I think it would make UMass a better school. It would make my degree more valuable. I would like to see it, definitely."

Kerry Pond, a senior environmental science major also favored creating an honors college at UMass.

"I'm an honors program and it sounds like a good idea to me," Pond said. "It may help to get rid of the partying reputation that UMass may have had, which would be a great step for the school."

Dominica Perez, a senior political science major and honors student, was concerned with how an honor college would impact ALANA (Asian, Latin American, African and Native American) students.

"As an ALANA student, I am always a minority in the honors program. I think that if they [the administration] takes into consideration the needs of the ALANA community and recruit more ALANA students, it could be beneficial," Perez said. "They need to take measures to investigate recruitment of ALANA students. It needs to reflect the concerns and needs of all the students on campus."

Future

Aaron Spencer, chair of the Board of Higher Education's subcommittee on Commonwealth College, said that the concept papers would be distributed to his committee this week.

Spencer said that the subcommittee will be considering the plans in meetings later this month, and will most likely make its recommendation to the Board at their April 15 meeting at Mt. Wachusett Community College.

Several other schools and groups have submitted concept papers, including North Adams State College and Fitchburg State College.

"Our understanding is that we have a lot of proposals," Spencer said.

■ protest

continued from page 1

said student negotiator and Graduate Student Senate President Deepika Marya.

The Administration agreed to call Williams and Crosson while students continued with the meeting. Administrators present at the first meeting included, Bursar Daniel Maguffin, Assistant Director for Financial Aid Lana West, Assistant Director of Counseling and Processing Sheila Konieczny, from the Academic Support Services; Ken Burnham, as well as Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance, Paul Page.

"We've asked you to be here to aid the Administration in some of the decision making process that is required. You should have the necessary information at your fingertips that they [the administrators] doesn't have," student negotiator Njeri Thelwell said.

Thelwell continued by asking the Administrative team if they had any time to consider the demands that the student sent to them, or if they wanted to comment on the demands.

The Administrative team had no comment.

The student and Administrative negotiators then spoke at length on the demands by the students concerning Issues of the Financial Aid and the Bursar's Office. One such demand includes eliminating the hold on students during the pre- registration period due to outstanding bursar's bills, starting Fall 1997.

Bursar Maguffin said that this demand was not possible to implement as a blanketed-type rule at the present time.

"An across the board elimination of the hold placed on students with outstanding bills is not possible, because we need to have some sort of structure... to ensure that the students who do pay their bills on time have the privilege of registering early." Maguffin said.

Graduate student protestor Tom Taft, responded to Maguffin's comments, "You said the key word, privilege. That those with the money get the classes first and those who don't, do not get it first. This is a public university, and you're prioritizing the privileged, and that is precisely why you're sitting at this table now."

Both sides arrived at a standstill concerning another demand by the students which called for the allocation 2 million dollars annually for ALANA and low income students, not based on GPA.

According to Acting Director West, the University currently does not have the funds to give the allocation to the students.

"The University does not have a money tree, therefore the money resources are relatively limited, the Chancellor and his executive group mekes decisions based on needs of the institution and if there were dollars available, we would have a good chance to get the money there," Robinson said.

"You're making it sound like it's a gift," responded student negotiator Resa Singleton.

"In some ways it is." answered Robinson.

According to Burnham, the University is not mandated to provide institutional funds to financial aid as a state university.

"You have resources, we see it in the paper when John Calipari was here, you forked out one million dollars to pay this man to coach basketball... myself and nine other students raised money to bring Mr. Louis Farrakhan here, and people did not want him to come, we brought him anyway because we found the money, what does that say? Those who look hard enough will find," Thelwell said.

The group agreed to recess while the administration provided the University of Massachusetts FY 1998 budget request for the students to review.

In a meeting of the student negotiators during the recess, the group agreed to forgo the set schedule, asking instead that the administration provide a response to each of the student demand in writing. The administration agreed to this point and spent the better half of the afternoon drafting this document [see page 6].

At 4 p.m. the student negotiators held a press conference outside of the Controller's Office. Students present fielded questions from press organizations such as, The Union News, Channel 22, Channel 40, and WCVB/TV — Boston.

At the same time the press conference was being conducted, the administrative written response to the student demands were given to the group.

While student negotiators reviewed this document, a group of approximately 400 Amherst College and Five College students held a rally in support of the students occupying the Goodell Building. UMass protestors inside the building crowded around a small window to look at the group of protestors outside. Police were instructed to not allow anyone inside the building. Some protestors outside Goodell chose to camp out on the front steps of the building in a show of solidarity.

Inside, the student negotiators reviewed the administrative response finding it unacceptable. By unanimous consensus, they agreed that each of the administrative responses ran counter to their demands. When both sides reconvened, Williams presented the administrative response to the demands, whereupon student negotiator Singleton conveyed student dissatisfaction with the document, saying that they would not negotiate until an acceptable agreement can be raced — even if it means bringing in the Chancellor or the President of UMass. The meeting convened shortly after that.

The evening ended with students preparing for yet another night inside of the Controller's Office. The student negotiating team will be holding a press conference at 11 a.m. today in the Goodell Building.

According to Student Government Association President Maurice Caston, security has been beefed up to three officers per door. Earlier workmen were also instructed to re-core all the locks on the doors of the fourth floor, the floor which houses the Controller's Office which students have been occupying for the past two days. The students are not prepared to leave until all their demands have been met.

According to one protester, one of the administrative negotiators said that the administrative team spent most of the afternoon discussing ways in which to vacate the students from the premises, including use of police. A bus was also seen parked by some students inside Goodell, rumored for transport of the protestors to a holding facility.

In a statement issued by the UMass News Office, Williams said, "We appreciate the respect that students have shown employees and their workspace. We are hopeful the sit-in will end tonight and that the dialogue will continue in the upcoming days and weeks in a different setting."

Williams would not comment as to whether the Chancellor, who is out of the country, allegedly on vacation in Mexico, has been contacted or has issued any specific statement regarding the student takeover.

Correction

Yesterday's Collegian incorrectly reported on the ranking of the graduate creative writing department in U.S. News & World Report. The department has a M.F.A. program, not a Ph.D. program.

Also in Friday's issue, Martin F. Jones' Ed/Op column, titled "Surviving the Holocaust" had a misprint in the last sentence of the third paragraph. The sentence should have read, "...with their parents."

The Collegian regrets these errors.

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY
Providing answers. Saving lives.
Order Daffodils Today!
Daffodil Days-March 18-23
UMass
I would like to order ___ bouquet(s) of daffodils @ $5.00 each= $ _____
I would like to order ___ bouquet(s) in a vase @ $10.00 each= $ _____
Total= $ _____
Name: _____ Daytime Phone#_____
Please make your check payable to the American Cancer Society and mail to:
American Cancer Society, 53 Capital Drive, West Springfield, MA 01089 or phone 413-734-6000
Thank You!!

HINDU STUDENTS ORGANIZATION
PRESENTS
"HOLI: THE FESTIVAL OF COLORS"
SUNDAY MARCH 9 2PM
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
FREE ALL ARE WELCOME
PLEASE DRESS APPROPRIATELY FOR THE TRADITIONAL HOLI CEREMONY WITH COLORS
SPECIAL THANKS: SGA, ISA EKTA, NATARAJ DANCERS & THEIR FRIENDS, AND THE ASIAN DANCE & MUSIC PROGRAM
CATERED BY INDIA HOUSE, NOHO
FOR MORE INFORMATION CONTACT ANANT AT 548-9097 OR HINDU@STUAF.UMASS.EDU

Summer Internships

Earn $3,000 for 10 weeks

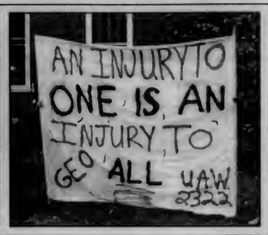
Interested in spending a nontraditional summer?

We offer a challenging 10-week program designed to see if you've got the interest and aptitude to be a Marine Officer.

Available to underclassmen.

Women and minority students encouraged to apply!

For additional information, see Capt Peters or GySgt Thompson at the Campus Center, Thursday 6 March 1997 or call 1-800-255-8762



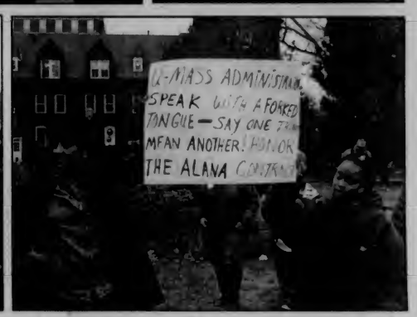


Photo Essay

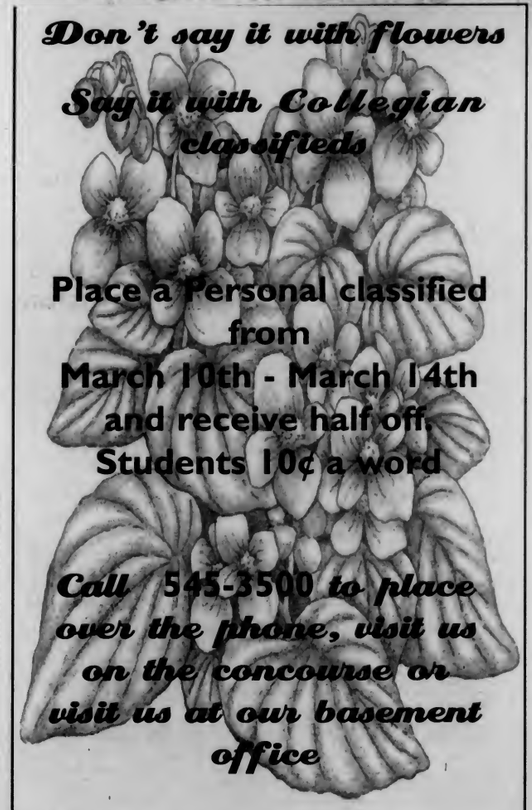

by Lauren Koski

The two day takeover of the Goodell Building reached a climax yesterday as an estimated 300-400 students united at an early evening rally including a large contigent from the Five College system who had marched in from Amherst Common. Speakers included Prasad Venugopal, a physics graduate student. On Monday the protesters issued a series of demands of the Administration. At press time none of the demands had been met.

Don't say it with flowers
Say it with Collegian classifieds

Place a Personal classified from March 10th - March 14th and receive half off. Students 10¢ a word

Call 545-3500 to place over the phone, visit us on the concourse or visit us at our basement office

Positions Available

The Collegian is accepting applications for:

- Associate Finance Manager
- Associate Advertising Manager
- Associate Business Manager

Sophomore students encouraged to apply, all will be considered.
For more information call Alycia Hines at 545-3500, or come to the Collegian located at 113 Campus Center Basement

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief — Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager — Josh Sylvester Production Manager — Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager — Lita Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lita Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
"Position Vacant" Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
"Position Vacant" Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Students: stand up & walk out

Yesterday's rally on the front steps of the occupied Goodell Building played the wide and diverse support for the student takeover of the Controller's Office. The demands that have been made on the Administration obviously effect the campus as a whole, and not just the ALANA community. For this reason we urge the whole of the campus community to examine the issues, and support the protesters in their fight against an Administration unwilling to improve campus life or address student rights.

As students at this University you must closely examine why the take-over has reached its third day. This cannot be dismissed as simply an ALANA issue or a UMass issue. As Amanda Gilman, Student Government President of Smith College said, "It's the commitment that you [UMass protesters] have shown serves to remind all of us that we as students have an important role to play in the ongoing struggle to make our schools, and our society, into one which reflect our values of justice and equality for all."

This morning at 10:30 a.m. students are urged to participate in a campus wide walk-out to show support for the protesters in Goodell. We must show the Administration that we indeed care about student rights on campus in any way possible.

We also urge the UMass mens basketball team to display a sign of solidarity with the demands set forth by the students on this campus. Anyone who remembers Georgetown Basketball Head Coach John Thompson's walk-out in protest of Proposition 48 understands the power of protest on the national stage. The administration will love the publicity.

It has been five years since the Administration signed the 1992 ALANA agreements, now is the time for action. Last night the Administration made a weak attempt to satisfy the demands of the students. This was an insult to the campus community. The students must be taken seriously and we urge all to take the time to understand the issues at hand.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian Editorial Board.

No rest for the righteous

For all of you who have never had the honor of participating in a protest, I would like to take this time to give you a perspective, my perspective, on what it's like. Picture this.

It took a minute for you to realize the severity of the situation, but it eventually sunk in.

"We weren't going anywhere for a long time."

Upon hearing those words for the first time, your initial reaction is to say,

"Damn right, we ain't!!"

Twelve hours later, you begin to realize that they were serious and you just might find yourself sleeping on the floor, cursing the Administration and wishing you had listened to your parents and gone to a historically black college. That's just a part of the many sacrifices (i.e. sleep, cleanliness, sanity) you make when you have to fight for what you believe in.

You think you should know a little bit about protesting, because you come from a long line of demonstrators that stems back a few hundred years. From the Civil War to the Black Power Movement, at least one member of your family has participated in some kind of revolutionary action in this country.

So, you figure you should be well equipped to handle the kind of revolutionary action taking place on this campus without any kind of stress or strain, right?

Wrong

To put it simply; You are HEATED!

Heated at the fact that you have to sit, sing, chant, stomp, march, yell, wait, negotiate and fight for programs and aid that should've already been in place on this campus to begin with. Now, you begin to realize how your father and uncles felt when they protested during the '60s and '70s.

Inside the Goodell building, you're on edge. You never know what's going to happen next. You smell and want nothing more than to take a nice, long, warm shower, but understand that in order for this thing to work, it's going to take a real dedication to the agenda.

You curse the day you signed your acceptance letter and you begin the search for a spot where you can do some kind of studying.

The students that had been negotiating with the administration for the past four hours, finally come out to bring you up to speed on how things are going and if our demands are being met.

They're not.

You give a sigh, go back to your tiny niche and begin to ponder as to when everything got so twisted.

When you first decided to come to UMass (from the grand ol' sovereign state of Texas) you thought that you were coming to a university that went beyond race barriers and focused on preparing young minds to take us into the next millennium. You really believed in UMass. You liked the idea of diversity and multiculturalism being emphasized and pushed.

Little did you know they were pushing it right out the door.

Needless to say, you had been fooled, bamboozled, hoodwinked and lead estray. You were conned into believing that you actually meant more to the powers that be of this campus than a quota fulfillment.

You were terribly wrong.

As you continue to reflect, your train of thought is momentarily broken by the chant of some 400 student from Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges as well as UMass students. You rush up the stairs, push your way to the front of the window and bear witness to one of the most beautiful sights you'll ever see. You realize that students all over support your efforts and you feel a little better in knowing this.

However, you also notice the police officers outside, at all the exits, and the ones that have taken post inside the building itself. You don't particularly like cops too much, because you've seen enough abuse of police power, to last you a lifetime. You get a little uneasy.

The thing that has you heated the most, other than the incredibly slow pace at which the administration is dealing with the demands, is the fact that the university in which you attend is one big hypocrity. It preaches multiculturalism, but practices

Humphrey brown III

Eurocentrism.

The powers that be have done an excellent job, making the wrapping real nice and pretty with words like, diversity, equality and opportunity. Yet, in all reality, when you get past the glitter, you have homogeny, discrimination and oppression.

This is something that you're not particularly used to, because when you were in the South, there was no question as to who was on your side and who wasn't. The racism was pretty blatant and everyone knew who they were up against.

Here, it's a little different. It isn't so in-your-face. Racism and discrimination kind of sneak up on you and kick you where it hurts. People try so hard to make you think they're on your side, when the whole time they're hoping you fail.

Thinking about it starts to get you more upset than you already were so you get up and look for something to munch on. Of course, you can only find another piece of fruit, so you decide to wait until more food arrives.

As you listen to you're stomach express it's grievance for not having been fed, you begin to realize how low down some people can really be and how you have no respect for anyone that claims to support you, but would rather deport you.

You find that you would have more respect for someone who was real with how they felt, even if they were wrong, than someone who talked like a King, but thought like a Klansman.

You're frustrated, but you realize that, no matter what, you aren't going to leave until the administration adheres to the entire "living document".

As you settle in for some rest, on the very floor you've been trying to avoid, you understand what it means to struggle. You understand what it means to fight. You like to believe that the events that take place in the next few days will change the face of UMass forever.

Then, you get a flash of Chancellor Scott in a kilt, playing golf and you scream. Realizing you were only dreaming, you place your head back on the floor and begin to count, not sheep, but the number of times you've had to go to Whitmore to fix your financial aid. You're asleep in no time.

Humphrey brown III is a Collegian columnist.

The white choice

For the past two days, the media has portrayed the take over of the controller's office in Goodell as a concern of the ALANA community.

While many of the demands do affect the ALANA community, as two white, anti-racist individuals, we feel the white community has as much, if not more, responsibility to deal with these issues.

T. Cincotti & K.M. Thoennes

Since the beginning of the takeover, many white students have been passing the rally with little more than a blink of an eye. Because these demands are labeled as "ALANA issues," white students may not feel these demands are pertinent to their lives. We feel they are.

We, as white people, are able to operate daily, without race affecting our education. It's easy for us to forget, with our white privilege, that many people of color are struggling everyday on this campus for the basic right to an education.

We do not experience being followed through stores, singled out in class, harassed by police/security or any other type of discrimination because of our race. It's easy to forget we're white.

Because everything in our society makes it easy for us to forget, it's all the more important for us to remember.

Students of color encounter racism on this campus daily — whether they realize it or not. While some white students see this, there is very little action among us to end it. It's hard for whites to know what to do, but that does not give us an excuse to do nothing. In fact, it is imperative that white students get involved.

White people created racism in America, and though time has passed, we still benefit from and perpetuate this institution. As a result, it is crucial that whites participate in anti-racist action.

This is exactly why we have been in the basement of the Goodell building for almost 48 hours. Many of our ancestors helped create and support racism in this country, which is why it is so important to help dismantle it. For the weight that people of color bear every day, there is absolutely no excuse for whites to remain silent and still.

Long after negotiations in Goodell have ceased, racism will still happen on this campus and everywhere. It is important to continue anti-racist action, even when there isn't a rally.

Begin by confronting racism every time you see it, educating yourself on the history of this racist country and, most importantly, really listening to people of color. Racism cannot end without active participation of whites.

It's time to finish what we started.

Tina Cincotti and Katie M. Thoennes are UMass students.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Activism replaces apathy

A specter is haunting the University of Massachusetts. The specter of student activism. Recently the Collegian has swollen with condemnations of student apathy, and pleas for student self-empowerment. The question has been asked, "For how long are the students at the University of Massachusetts content to be ruled and controlled by a mysterious and seemingly omnipotent administration? For how long is this administration to be allowed to exclude students from decision making? For how is it to ignore the students' voice?"

"The student takeover of Goodell has restored in me at least, a faith and respect for UMass students."

Kristy King

Yesterday morning, the answer came back loud and clear: NO LONGER! ALANA students, members of the GEO and newly formed VEO stood up and demanded that the University recognize that this University belongs to us, the students. For five years now, the administration has been waffling on promises it made to ALANA in 1992 and for even longer, has been endeavoring to ensure that students have as little influence as possible over the future of their university. It has become evident to everyone that we will not stand for it any longer! The student body has awaken its voice, and the administration has been forced to listen.

In Goodell, the atmosphere is electric. More and more people are wandering into the Controller's Office, anxious to include their voice in the surging voice of a united UMass campus. Hundreds of students — black, Latino, white, Asian, Native American, male, female, graduate, undergraduate, UMass, Amherst College — swarm about with University staff and even alumni in a dynamic throng of energy. Many students have been in Goodell for over 30 hours, but tired eyes and fatigued bodies have done nothing to dampen the spirit of empowerment. Instead, students group together to chant, sing, talk and even study, maintaining a level of enthusiasm which cries out to the administrators, "We demand to be heard!"

We all know how easy it is to become self-absorbed and alienated from greater social concerns on a campus of this size. We all know how easy it is to be overwhelmed by the stench of red tape that wafts out of Whitmore. We all know how small and insignificant our voice can feel beside 28,000 other student voices; we all know how easy it is to relinquish responsibility for this campus, to behave like dependent children, unable and unwilling to make decisions for ourselves.

We all know that the cost of attending UMass is greater than at almost any other state school in the country. We all know that UMass buildings are dilapidated, that there are not always enough seats in lecture halls to accommodate each of the students. We all know that this University houses a disproportionate number of white students, faculty and administrators. We all know that many students work one or more jobs to keep themselves in school. We all know that when students graduate from the University of Massachusetts, they will owe tens of thousands of dollars in students loans.

We all know that most students will be unable to fund lucrative and satisfying employment after graduation, ensuring that their loans will be a burden for years and years. We all know that the top 50 administrators earn over $100,000 a year, while graduate employees barely earn enough for basic subsistence. We know that we feel powerless, overlooked and alienated. But until Monday, we didn't know how to give voice to our concerns.

Must we take over entire buildings each time we wish for the administrators to remember that their University belongs to us, and that without us there would be no University? Must we march on Whitmore each time the administration seeks to capitalize as what they perceive to be our apathy?

Apparently so. Our University is ours, fellow students. We have a legitimate right to partake in the decision-making that occurs on our behalf. We have a right to hold the administrators to their promises, we have a right to make demands of the University and a right to be heard. Tuesday night, that we, as members of the UMass community, do indeed have a loud, united voice.

The students take-over of Goodell has restored in me at least, a faith and respect for UMass students. By uniting together, students have shown the administration that we are not children. We are not merely social security numbers and tuition-payers and we are not nothing but obstacles in the administrators' quest to make money. We are intelligent, empowered and awake. We have demands, and the administration must heed them. We students are serious about our right to exercise our voices at this University, and we have demonstrated, in one building, on one University campus, a triumph of the human spirit.

Kristy King is a UMass Student.

Collective action for ALANA

No justice, no peace!"

These were the chants that echoed from the front of the Goodell building to the other side of campus, as protesters stressed their concerns for the second day.

I cannot vocalize the internal pride I have felt in watching ALANA students uniting to form a collaboration. Forming a joint effort in motivating each other. As students of color, we have been very focused on the purpose of what this demonstration is about.

"The efforts of this peaceful protest will not be in vain. This collective action collaborative that has formed with the students in this protest has started a wave of action."

Allana Todman

African American's, Latinos, Asians and white students, have made an imperative decision to combine in a collective action effort to confront the University's inability to take the needs and issues of the ALANA community seriously.

Increase in financial aid, funding for more faculty members, and diversity within the educational curriculum, are just some of the many pivotal demands that the student protesters have been fighting.

With bags under their eyes, many of the student protesters who participated since 10:30 Monday morning, have been organizing for a total of 30 hours.

Students have become "tired."

The student protesters' fact of being "tired" parallels with how Rosa Parks expressed she was tired before she was arrested for refusing to give up her seat in the front of the bus.

With administration hesitating to produce documentation on definitive efforts to attain most of these demands that have been on the ALANA agreements since 1992, students have become more indignant.

For so many years misguided information has been given to us, that student protesters have decided that no matter how long it takes that they want real plans to resolve these demands.

The integrity and assertiveness of this protest has placed visible views to not only the UMass campus, but the Five College areas as well.

Amherst College has shown full support from the SGO, rallying students from their campus to march to Goodell in support of the protest.

They have also donated funds to contribute to the donation of food supplies.

Mount Holyoke and Smith have also shown their full magnitude of support, holding signs outside of Goodell in the spirit of the protest.

President Maurice Caston-Powe, Student Trustee Sean Carter, and Senate speaker Brian Tirell showed their support for the protest, but the majority of UMass senators have yet to show any kind of collective effort to offer their support up to this point.

With their general meeting tonight, it will be interesting to see whether or not the SGA Senate will address the concerns of the student protestors.

Pro-student caucus has also neglected to show their support as well.

This lack of concern among organizations such as these that are supposed to represent the University student body, definitely needs to be addressed.

As students of the ALANA community we are equally part of this student body as students at UMass. We have control over the organizations that represent us as students.

The efforts of this peaceful protest will not be in vain. This collective action collaborative that has formed with the students in this protest has started a wave of action.

With UMass–Dartmouth being impacted with the student protest, and with consistency, student protesters not backing down, they have decided to take similar actions to fight for the injustices they are experiencing as people of color.

Overall this protest is not marginalized by any means to only ALANA students, but is for the enhancement of all students on campus.

For too long we have settled for what we can "receive," and by having this protest we are "claiming," our education.

History has proven that collective action is the most effective and influential tool needed for change.

With the approach that the ALANA students and other supporters from the Five College areas are taking, I'm hopeful that this struggle is worth everything that we as a student body can offer to it.

As a student peeked through the window from inside of Goodell and realized the impact of collective action she stated, "Out of nowhere people from Smith College appeared with about 150–200 people. This appearance sparked so much motivation that I became teary eyed."

Allana E. Todman is a Collegian columnist.

Aura of a takeover

We're tired. We're hungry. We stink. We're passionate and we're inspired.

"Hey there's food in the corner. Share it out, y'all!"

Outside, the crowd ebbs and flows, and the issues are on everyone's tongues. Working class. ALANA. Privileged. Elite. The words are hot — demanding attention, discussion and more attention.

"Anyone need to smoke a cigarette? Who needs a smoke?"

Inside, the issues are different. Food. Bathroom and phone access. Diapers. Guarding the doors. Yet the energy level remains intense. The announcement that the administration has responded to almost every demand with the negative fazes no one.

"Does anyone have a quarter? Ten cents? I need to call my husband, let him know where I am. Please."

"It looks like we're in here for another night," said a friend.

Surprisingly, this announcement is met with cheers, not groans.

"We need to find out what people need for the night. Blankets, diapers, whatever."

Looking around the Cohtroller's Office, people have set up makeshift beds in office alcoves. Some families have taken over cubbies and put up signs that read, "This is our temporary home. Please respect our privacy."

Says one man on a cellular phone, "I might not be home at all tonight. Can you walk my dogs?"

Occasionally, chants ripple through the room, renewing everyone's energy: "One love!," "If you say no, we won't go!," "We're students" and "United? We will not be defeated!"

Niko Chauls

People amuse themselves playing cards, talking about basketball, drawing up protest signs. A small few even dance around a tiny Walkman equipped with speakers.

"Don't mess with me, man. I'm multicultural! That's right!"

Yet, despite the long sit-in and the dismal responses from the administration, when asked to describe the atmosphere in the room, students were inspired. Tom Brennan, "Hopeful determination." Diego Benavente, "Community. Togetherness. Sisterhood. Brotherhood." Yomara Veley, "Captivating. Energetic. Magnificent."

The students determined, the protest continues.

Niko Chauls is a UMass student.

A takeover to take back

Let me try and verbalize my frustrations with this ongoing battle with the University especially issues concerning ALANA students. Since yesterday, I believe, students have been negotiating with University officials to try and resolve the contents of a contract agreed upon back in 1992. I have read the terms that the ALANA community brings to the Administration. Their demands are reasonable. The University just chooses to dance around in circles until the clamor dies down.

"There has to be some way which students can get a break from the University."

Albertina Fernandes

I can relate to the empty promises or misinformation that this University has led me to believe. I can begin with my experiences with trying to adjust to this rather large campus as a first year student. It all started with the Financial Aid office. They didn't give me enough financial aid because my parents had made too much money. A preposterous claim.

My parents are hard-working immigrants who came to this country from Cape Verde to provide me and my siblings with better opportunities. They don't look at the fact that I have five other siblings for whom my parents are financially responsible. Yes, they own a house but we also need a place to live. They would have preferred me to come from government housing so that I would be eligible for more financial aid. I'm sorry that I don't quite fit the needy criteria of a student in need of aid.

Financial Aid doesn't understand that have 1 two others sisters in college. My parents can barely manage making ends meet. They would love to just whip out a check to cover my tuition every semester but they have more pressing issues like mortgage and groceries. My parents know the value of an education that is why we are here in America but monetarily we are still lacking.

There has to be some way which students can get a break from the University. I had the Bursars put a hold on my bill which prevented me from pre-registering for any of my classes. I also had accumulated another $50 as result of not paying my bill on time which really didn't help my already in debt situation. As result of this I couldn't get first pick of my majors classes. The sob stories we tell can run thousands of pages in the Collegian.

There is no uniqueness to this story just sadness. I know the daily hindrances I must face to see the next light of day. This University makes it all the more arduous to have any kind of academic concentration.

Students, especially students of color, are subject to endless amounts of red tape. I have to stand up and be the voice that tells the trials and tribulations of students of color. These students have devised peaceful protests and sit-ins to some how remind the Administrators that we haven't forgotten the horrific obstacles they put in our paths to try and discourage us. As students barricaded themselves in Goodell, they chanted "Say No, We Won't Go!" after hearing that the negotiating committee were denying our concerns. We, as students, protest the non-action of the University. We will stand our ground adamantly until some kind of resolution has been met. We will urge the other four colleges to join in the remonstration.

We already have the support of UMass–Dartmouth. Their students have followed in the same step. We need the media to lift the veil off of the travesties that students here have been enduring since the breech of contract. Our powers allied together can generate enough outcry so that the Chancellors' office can decide or not decide to take action.

Many students have been inside Goodell since Monday at 10:30 a.m. and have stayed overnight — leaving to go home only to shower and take care of other pressing issues. We have been inconvenienced time and time again to deal with the crookedness of the University. We know that without our voices to dispute uneven distribution of funds, under-representation of people of color on this campus as far as faculty and students, we would be "up a creek without a paddle."

The University has failed to understand the needs of students (not just people of color), not because we need hand-outs but because we feel that we have no bearing on this University. We are not included in any changes or additions that take place on this campus. We have little or no say as to what programs are being taking away due to lack of funds.

I propose this question to Chancellor Scott. Do you think by setting hurdles, you are lowering our morale? We knew of this struggle from the time we could make out pictures. We know that we are in for a long haul. Throw at us all your tactical strategies for they will only hinder us temporarily. We know that taking over Goodell may have set you back a tiny bit but we will find other ways to take back what should have been our right all along.

Albertina Fernandes is a UMass student.

Shut up and just get along

What is that noise pollution coming from the direction of Goodell?"

As I was walking down Orchard Hill this morning, I was greeted by loud, obnoxious words coming from the other end of campus. I was surprised at the volume of this massive noise so early in the morning. Then I realized it was that rally being held outside of Goodell. I listened and heard nothing of real importance. All I could tell was that someone was, as usual, "bitching" about UMass — except this time it was being broadcast to the entire campus and there was absolutely no way of turning it off. Throughout the day I listened more; later I found out the facts about this so called "demonstration." I have to say that I am outraged at such a useless attempt to get attention. Because when it comes right down to it, all it is, is a cry for attention.

"As for the minority movement, haven't we heard enough? I admit I was a little shocked to find out there are only approximately 500 black students enrolled here. Then I started thinking, how many Hungarian students are enrolled here? Because that is what I am. I haven't met a single Hungarian yet. How many red heads? How many Asian students? How many French, Jewish, Irish, Muslim, green- eyed, art majors, males, handicapped, feminists, geniuses, messy, rich, Catholic, city dwellers, poor, out-of-state, gay, feminist, (the list could go on) students attend UMass. Until people start seeing people as people, until we start seeing the individual, we are never going to make any progress toward Martin Luther King, Jr.'s great dream.

Bridget Dolezsur

As for the minority movement, haven't we heard enough? I admit I was a little shocked to find out there are only approximately 500 black students enrolled here. Then I started thinking, how many Hungarian students are enrolled here? Because that is what I am. I haven't met a single Hungarian yet. How many red heads? How many Asian students? How many French, Jewish, Irish, Muslim, green- eyed, art majors, males, handicapped, feminists, geniuses, messy, rich, Catholic, city dwellers, poor, out-of-state, gay, feminist, (the list could go on) students attend UMass. Until people start seeing people as people, until we start seeing the individual, we are never going to make any progress toward Martin Luther King, Jr.'s great dream.

"Hey Nikki, you're black," I told her. She just laughed at me and made a blonde joke, but the point is — I didn't see Nikki as black or anything else. I saw her as Nikki. It is unfortunate that only 500 black students attend UMass, but how many applied? I personally know that my minority friends didn't want to come to UMass. They went to "better" schools. (Nikki is at UNC–Chapel Hill if you're wondering). And getting money just because you are another race? Isn't that a direct example of racism. I am sick of the whole race thing. I am tired of –isms, views on sexuality and I am tired of feminists. (Though I'm sure I could be called one at times).

WAKE UP, UMASS and the world for that matter. We are one. We are people. The more you rally about how different people are, the more divided we become.

If there is anything that we as UMass students should be rallying about, it should be that less than half of our tuition (that doesn't include room and board) goes toward our academic education. "Excuse me, why are we here again?" So my fellow UMass individuals, if you are planning to take over Goodell again and pollute the air with nonsense to get attention, at least do it for something important. Peace, love and happiness.

And finally, would everyone stop complaining about UMass. Personally I am grateful to have the opportunity to be here.

Bridget Dolezsar is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Smith College supports protesters

To the Editor:

We, the students of Smith College, support the students of the University in their current struggle. The Smith College Student Government Association stands behind the demands that the ALANA groups have brought before their administration. We recognize the danger of allowing any college administration to ignore pas: promises, while turning its back on the continuing needs of the student body.

The educational mission of any college or university must extend beyond the classroom. The experience of a college education must serve to both broaden and challenge the minds of each student. This can only occur in a community which values diversity and embraces the inherent worth of each individual. It is incumbent upon the administration to provide for this experience by taking steps to amplify the voice of all students within their community, simplify the steps through which students finance their education and increase the presence of people of color, both students and faculty, at the University of Massachusetts. In this way, the University will demonstrate that it exists for its students and for society, rather than believing that the students exist for the University.

It is important to remember that the University of Massachusetts does not exist in a bubble. Similar situations exist at several of the other institutions in the Pioneer Valley. We applaud the leadership that the UMass students have shown in holding the administration accountable to assurances that were given five years ago. We understand the risks that accompany this action, and we applaud your dedication. The commitment that you have shown serves to remind all of us that we as students have an important role to play in the ongoing struggle to make our schools, and our society, into one which reflects our values of justice and equality for all.

The students of Smith College recognize that your struggle is our struggle. Therefore, we stand behind both your actions and your objectives.

Amanda Gilman,
SGA President
Liz Kennedy,
President of Class of '97

Graduate Student Senate Support

To the Editor:

The Graduate Student Senate passed a resolution fully supporting:

A. Student takeover of Goodell Building.

B. ALL Demands of students.

C. Call for a walkout, March 5, 1997 at 10:30 a.m.!

We call upon the faculty and staff to support student demands and the walkout.

We call upon the administration to meet and implement the demands of the students in Good Faith.

The Graduate Student Senate
Executive Committee
Amherst

A call to action

To the Editor:

We, the undersigned, are a group of undergraduate, white, anti–racist activists, who are participating in the take–over of the Controller's Office in Goodell.

We would like to send a message to the other white students at UMass about their obligations to address the concerns raised by the protest. These are not optional. This is not a choice. And these are not simply ALANA issues. This protest addresses financial aid, equal access to education and child care issues as well.

But as white people who benefit from institutional racism, we do have a greater obligation to fight against this form of oppression than those who are targeted by it. It is your white privilege which allows you just to walk by Goodell. Many white people believe that race is no longer an issue in the [United States]. However, the fact is that most of us are here as a result of the invisible form of affirmative action that is white privilege. Any mass movement in the pursuit of human rights benefits the quality of the human condition as a whole. Consider this a call to action.

Tina Cincott
Northeast
This letter was signed by 13 other people

Protesting the protest

To the Editor:

Is the enemy of my enemy my friend? In the case of the recent student take–over Goodell, I would have to say, no. First of all, I don't directly think of the UMass administration as my enemy. Sometimes I wonder about certain things, such as why I pay a $20 computer use fee when I can only get on after midnight, but that does not make Whitmore my enemy. The students, however, who have decided to take over the Controller's and the Procurement Office in Goodell are my enemy.

First of all, their protest has no effect whatsoever on the operations of those two offices. Today, during my free time, I went to Whitmore to find out about how that takeover affected me. I got to talk to Tom Mathers of the Controller's office. He explained to me what happens in each of the offices, and what they are responsible for. When he was done, I asked him if the take–over had in any way crippled what these offices do. His answer, "no."

"We live in a virtual world," he said as he explained that all this does is slow down the paperwork somewhat. So the students who are currently "camping out" in Goodell are fooling themselves and others by claiming that they are stopping up the system. During my talk with Mr. Mathers, he told me that paperwork was processed as usual today, just from different locations.

So there we have my first gripe — that they do not really know what they are doing. Now let me move into some different turf — their demands. I will agree that there are some good ideas on this list, and I will also admit that presenting a greater number of demands on the list that you know you don't stand a chance of getting is not smart. Demand no. 9 from their summary of demands states that there should be a "creating of a block of time with no classes so that the students may participate on University committees." Let us think about this for one minute. Done? Good. It will NEVER happen. They will look at students' schedules, and see schedules like mine. Tuesdays and Thursdays, I am 100 percent free up until 1 p.m. I call that a pretty big block of time that I myself scheduled. If you are going to do things like this, you have to have everything planned out well in advance.

The main point I disagree with is no. 12. Financial Aid is partially drawn from the money that colleges get in from the tuition of their other students. Is it fair then to say that I, who am an out–of–state student, already paying $16,000 (approx) a year to go here, and who does not qualify for financial aid, should have to pay more so that financial aid can be increased? I think not.

Finally, I just wish to state that I do respect them for having the initiative to stand up for what they believe in, but there are better ways. Using a protest rally as a distraction to take over an office which functions just as well on spare computer terminals throughout the school is not the right way to present your demands.

Martin A. Lessem
Sylvan

Reaching the boiling point

To the Editor:

Coffee has been brewing in the kitchen of Goodell for two days and the aroma has been permeating the dorms, the classes, the establishment and the entire environment of this valuable Institution. Students, saturated with regular coffee, were allowed to serve some of the social science classes which adorned the realities of the demands negotiated like a wake–up call in preparation for a mid–term exam. With tranquility and all intensity, the aroma penetrated the local and international arenas and stimulated a [cushiony] warmth, which unveiled the distorted strategies of establishment to cultivate the facts as a minority or race issue.

Students of UMass, this is an imperative situation which concerns every one of us. Why should students be forced to result in transforming Goodell into a kitchenette where the coffee of truth is brewed and [the] establishment is seduced against their will to take a sip? Why didn't establishment honor the agreement which was set with the students in 1992? Like the dawn of a new day, the truth unfolds as clearly as the dependable sun in the sky. Students are not respected. It seems like we are merely customers who have no rights to participate in our development.

Students of UMass, every one of us is unique and special. We are blessed with creative abilities which must be actualized through active participation. If we are constantly being denied the rights of active involvement in the decision processes which concerns our welfare, then how can we reach our full potentials? The importance of respect and irresponsible attitude which administration has adopted towards students are the crucial factors at stake now. It is said "the youth of today are the future of tomorrow" and if that is so, then why are they inhibited within their own world where they can make significant contributions toward the development of living conditions at this university?

To the students who did not wish to drink Goodell's instant coffee of truth, we urge you to get involved in one way or another. It's your responsibility to get the right facts because [there] is much work to be done in Goodell's kitchenette. The chores of cleaning and maintaining the kitchen will certainly unveil the truth about the injustice which the cooks are experiencing. We all know that "it is only those in the kitchen who are experiencing the heat." So come out and participate. You have a right to get involved whether [you] drink Goodell's coffee or not.

Tony Jno Baptiste
Northeast

Battling apathy

To the Editor:

First off, allow me to congratulate Mike Burke for [describing] what I have found to be true time and time again at this University: "If it doesn't affect me, I don't care." The protest orchestrated by the ALANA students and their supporters is something that at its base affects students campus wide. Though white students and students of color have obvious differences they are all struggling to attain the same goal, the negotiators, I did a mass phoning [on Monday] night and was astounded to get a voice mail response from a white student saying in no uncertain terms, "I don't care." I couldn't believe that someone actually took the time to be this ignorant and apathetic to the plight of fellow students. This same student would probably rally and protest if the cause was no beer at Spring Concert. The unfortunate truth is that it's not only students battling against the Administration, but also students battling against the apathy of other students.

Gladys Oyola
goyola@acad.umass.edu

Statement of solidarity

To the Editor:

The W.E.B. Du Bois Club CPUSA of Amherst fully supports the student takeover of the Goodell Administration Building at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst on Monday to further pressure the campus Administration on issues of financial aid and affirmative action.

The 175 students who demonstrated solid leadership in taking the action and putting forth a list of 16 demands to the Administration deserve the support and encouragement of every student, staff and member of this University community, as well as the support from outside this community.

After years of blatant racial discrimination of students of color by the UMass Administration, students and administrators hammered out the ALANA Agreement in 1992 after students were forced to take over the Whitmore Administration Building to have their voices heard. With less than 70 percent of the student body composed of non– white students, the initial demand for a 30 percent enrollment of students of color was negotiated down to 20 percent. Despite this compromise on the part of students, the Administration five years later is still not able to fulfill this meager percentage not to mention their inability to fulfill other aspects of the 1992 agreement.

Faced with an Administration unable or unwilling to act on affirmative action issues as well as the sky–high costs of higher education, meager federal resources or resolve, and the increasing privatization of University public resources which transfers control of such resources over to private corporate interests, students were compelled to act to wake up the campus and the nation to the problems of public education: the increasing racist discrimination utilized to exclude students of color, the exclusionary high costs of higher education which amounts to class discrimination directed against poor and working class students, the perpetuation of a racist curriculum which excludes the histories and contributions of peoples of color, and their unwillingness to provide child care services, orientation services, as well as the failure to diversify administrative staff and faculty on campus.

UMass students have initiated a wake–up call to students around the nation to fight back against racial and class discrimination by demanding an increase in enrollment and retention of students of color as well as working class students. We demand the Administration break with the vestiges of white supremacy and revamp the curriculum to include the histories and contributions of non–white peoples the world over. We will not be quiet at the ruling class attempts to revert back to the all–white strictly upper–class university of the past. We will act and we will be heard!

The W.E.B. Du Bois Club CPUSA calls on all students to demonstrate your support for the UMass student actions by sending a note of support to the UMass Daily Collegian at the following email address, letters@oitvms.umass.edu, and by coming out to Goodell Building to join the demonstration and protests actions.

Fatimah Ihsan
Colin S. Cavell
Prasad Venugopal
W.E.B. Du Bois Club CPUSA

Administration responds to protesters' demands

Editor's Note

A coalition of ALANA students met with President Marcus A. Kuumba and other administrators on Monday, March 3rd to discuss a list of demands presented by the students. Both sides met for three hours and reached a consensus on most of the demands. The ALANA demands will be represented in this box and the Administration responses will be represented in this box.

For purposes of clarity, the demands have been numbered and lettered.

The administrauon genuinely shares the students' concerns about the learning environment for minority students on this campus. It is not unreasonable to desire and request such things as greater diversity in faculty, staff, administration and student body; more scholarship and financial aid for ALANA and low income students; and additional funding for targeted ALANA and low income students; and additional funding for targered ALANA programs.

In the past five years the administration has demonstrated a commitment to these concerns by increasing the diversity of our students, faculty and staff, and by increasing our institutional contribution to financial aid for students to more than $10 million a year, an unusually high amount for a public institution.

In a university this large and complex, planning and budgeting cannot be done ad hoc. There is a process and framework established for making budget decisions regarding the many competing needs for limited resources. It would be irresponsible to abandon this process.

The concerns of the students have been heard and duly registered. They will be given full and serious consideration in the established budgeting process.

Preliminary estimates of the costs for the March 3rd student demands total $13 million.

Undergraduates

1. The percentage of ALANA students for the incoming class to be 20 percent and the overall percentage of undergraduate ALANA students should also be 20 percent.

1. The University commits to sustain efforts to assure continuing to meet the 20% goal of entering undergraduates, as calculated according to federal reporting standards. With successful recruition and retention efforts, we hope to reach a 20% overall proportion of ALANA students within 5 years.

Financial Aid/Bursar

1. Eliminating the hold on students during pre–registration due to outstanding bursar's bill;

1. The University commits to continue the process implemented in Fall '96 that has dramatically reduced the number of student withdrawn for financial reasons. We will also look for ways to further reduce the numbers of students in this situatoone.

2. Allocate funds targeted for ALANA students and low income students. $2M annually. These funds are not contigent on G.P.A.

2. The University has increased the amount of institutional funds available for financial aid to $10,500,000, an unusually high amount for a state institution, the bulk of which is not contingent on GPA. We know there are insufficient funds available for financial aid and are committed to continuing to increase the total. The five–year Capital Campaign includes $10,000,000 for financial aid.

3. Individualized payment plans for all students per semester, starting Fall '97.

3. The University has and will continue to assist individual students in meeting their financial obligations. in addition to reducing the numbers of students described in No. 2.

4. Eliminate all late fees, starting Fall '97

4. The University does not believe it is fiscally responsible to eliminate all late fees.

5. Diversify the Bursar's staff; professional and classified. New hiring should be completed by the beginning of Fall semester 1997.

5. The University will not create new positions to accomplish this goal, but agrees that diversification of the Bursar's staff is a high priority as positions become available.

Faculty and Staff:

1. Diversity Whithmore from the top down; hiring minorities in key positions of power; as positions become available these key positions should be targeted to minorities — at least two candidates who are ALANA be presented to the Chancellor for hte nest opening for Vice Chancellor.

1. As acknowledged in discussions yesterday, every effort will be made to ensure a diverse pool of candidates for the two vice chancellor positions currently in search. The Chancellor shares the students' concern for diversity at this level within the University administration.

a. Search committees for faculty and staff hiring should be required to have equal representation of students, including a substantial ALANA student representation.

a. The faculty and administration have primary responsibility for faculty hiring. Students are always welcome on search committees through student governance bodies.

b. All candidates should be available to answer student questions in the evenings, when there are no classese so that students can easily participate.

b. The University will communicate to departments the students' desire to meet with candidates and suggest that departments consider scheduling candidare sessions in the evening.

c. A block of time will be set aside when no classes are held. All meetings, search committees, etc., requiring student participation shall be held during this block of time.

c. The University will ask search committees to ensure student members can attend committee meetings. In addition, we will ask the Space and Calendar Committee to review the feasibility of setting aside a block of time during the day during which no classes are scheduled.

2. Each department be required to submit a plan to the chancellor and the negotiating team outlining their plans for ethnically diversifying the faculty in the departments. The ALANA faculty on tenure track should match in proportion to the impending increase of ALANA students, starting September '97. Departments should be informed in Spring '97 so that the plan is implemenented by September '97.

2. Deans, on behalf of the Departments, have already submitted plans to the Chancellor as part of the strategic planning process. When conducting searches departments are provided with availability data and encouraged to take all measures possible to increase departmental diversity, particularly where under–representation exists. Recent hiring of tenure track faculty has been greater than 20 percent ALANA. We will continue to use special programs to sustain this rate, with particular emphasis on those areas which are under–represented compared to availability and in which there is high ALANA student demand. (For additional information, see attached information from the Office of Equal Opportunity and Diversity).

a. This committee will take on the task of overlooking hiring practices which include: the writing of job description; make up of search committee; posting of positions.

a. This is the role of the Office of Equal Opportunity and Diversity. This office will consult with Human Resources and departments as needed.

4. Complete review of all hiring procedures meeting with a report due by May 15, 1997. This committee will consist of 50% ALANA students and 5 ALANA faculty members (i.e. at least, one Native American, one African American, one Asian American, one Latin American.)

4. The University is unable to respond to this demand without further discussion to clarify its intent.

Admission and Financial Aid:

1. Office of Admissions must hire:
a. a Native Americau recruiter
b: CCEBMS liaison
c. UALRC liaison as Assistant Directors for the Recruitment of ALANA students by August '97. The responsibility of all ALANA recruiters will be exclusively dedicate to the recruitment of ALANA students.

1. We expect to have these positions filled as Assistant Directors of Admissions no later than August 1997. The significant proportion of their recruitment activities will be devoted to recruiting students from their respective communities.

2. The four ALANA positions in admissions should be filled at all times. The ALANA admissions personnel should be the sole reviewer and decision maker for all potiential ALANA and Trio Program students. These positions MUST NOT be combined.

2. The Native recruiter position has had CCEBMS liaison responsibilities removed from it to permit greater focus on the Native community. In addition, Admissions has added a position dedicated to liaison with CCEBMS. No ALANA student will be denied admission without a review of his/her application by an ALANA staff member. Every effort will be made to keep these positions filled.

3. These hires will be completed by April, 1997.

3. These hires will be completed by August 1997.

Active Outreach for ALANA and First Generation Low–Income Students:

1. Create a program comparable to the Upward Bound Program with a base budget of $500,000 starting September 1997. This money should not be a result of higher fees.

1. The institution will re-examine the feasibility of submitting an Upward Bound grant application in the next application cycle as it did this cycle. Our ability to do this depends on support for the program in the local communities.

2. In addition, $250,000 should be given to the program annually. This program will serve the same popultion and areas as the Upward Bound Program.

a. This program will be a separate entity from the SUMMA and Talent Search programs (the Assistant Director of Recruitment will run this.)

2. We will continue to support the SUMMA Program that has broad participation in the Springfield school system. We will also seek renewed funding for the Talent Search Program in the next funding cycle.

3. UALRC, BCP, CCEBMS liaisons. These are all Assistant Director positions. These positions report to the Associate Director of ALANA Recruitment.

3. This is the current job title and reporting line for these positions.

4. A position of the level of Assistant Director the ALANA transfer students should be hired by June 1997.

4. The ALANA Assistant Directors of Admissions can assist in the recruitment of transfer students.

5. There be more publications, pamphlets, brochures and videos for ALANA recruitment exclusively.

5. Re–examining current publications, pamphlets, brochures and videos for ALANA recruitment will be a top priority for the person to be hired with responsibility for Admissions and Enrollment Services publications. We expect this position to be filled by August 1997.

6. Provide a sufficient, clear budget for ALANA recruitment needs; for open house events. outreach efforts, publications, etc..

6. The institution makes every effort to assure that there are sufficient funds available for these activities.

Recognition of Ethnicity:

1. The creation or upgrading of the following to Major Department status: Irish Studies; Native American Studies; Latin American Studies; Asian American Studies.

1. Irish Studies: There is one faculty member in the English department teaching relevant courses, as well as other Five College offerings.

2. Native American Studies: The Native American Studies Certificate Program is in the proposal stage at the Faculty Senate. It has been endorsed by the Provost's Office and we are optimistic that it will be in place for Fall '97.

3. Latin American Studies: There is a certificate in Latin American Studies. There is a proposal to add Latino to the title and we presume they will be adding course work and, potentially, a certificate in the future. Subject to the appropriate governance review, the Provost's Office will support this.

4. Asian American Studies: No proposal for a certificate exists at this time, but the campus has been working to increase the number of courses available in Asian American Studies.

a. If there is no program in place presently in any of the above, begin the process to establish one.

b. We also demand that hte curriculum of each aforementioned department reflect its respective ethnic population ont he UMass Amherst campus.

c. In addition, the University should remain aware of a chargin ALANA communities' academic needs and be prepared to adjust and accomodate to serve them.

d. Instructors of said classes should hold tenure track positions.

Graduate Students

1. That graduate percentage, overall, of ALANA students be brought up to at least 14 percent of the graduate student body as verified by an independent audit.

1. ALANA students are currently over 15 percent of the reported graduate student body.

2. At least five more employees involved in rigorous recruitment of ALANA students, including in economically disadvantaged areas and Native Americans.

2. [blank]

3. OMGSR funds be increased to at least $2 milllion to meet our goals, which include 20 percent minority graduate student body and funds for retention.

3. An increase has been requested by the Graduate Dean to supplement increases the past two years due to the latest GEO contract.

4. More employees who do only recruitment.

4. [blank]

Support Programs

1. An increase in full time counselors to aid ALANA students with advising services:
a. CCEBMS needs two more full time counselors
b. UALRC needs two more full time counselors
c. BCP need two more full time counselors

1. While we appreciate the need for additional staffing for these programs, there is no funding to fill these positions

2. An increase in funding is needed to fulfill the existing needs of these programs, mainly tutoring. The above mentioned support programs demand a $50,000 increase in base budget.

2. We recognize the need for additional tutorial support and an increase is part of our budget planning for FY 98.

3. Enrollment Services: full time counselors for these support programs demand same salaries as other advisors on campus.

3. Salary and position levels have just been reviewed for these staff. Both levels and salaries have been adjusted.

4. In addition, a Native Support Program should be established on campus, comparable to BCP, CCEBMS and UALRC. This program should be staffed with at least one full time advisor and two graduate student T.A. positions and work–study positions. This program should be fully functional by Spring '98.

4. [blank]

The ALANA Offices Demands
The Administrative Offices of ALANA Affairs:

1. The creation of an administrative office of ALANA Affairs comparable to that of Greek Affairs, the Stonewall Center and the Office of Jewish Affairs.

a. This office will serve as watchdog over University Affairs, including all those issues that affect ALANA students on a graduate or undergraduate level.

b. This administration will meet with the director of this office and with its Office Advisory Board on a regular basis to ensure that ALANA concerns are addressed.

2. The ALANA Office Advisory Board will be composed of ALANA students (graduate and undergraduate), faculty and staff.

a. This Board will provide oversight and approval for the activities of the Administrative Office of ALANA Affairs, including all appointments to this office.

b. This Board will include two representatives of the ALANA Caucus, one each of the following programs includ BCP, CCEBMS and UALRC. One representative from the Office of the Student Office of ALANA Affairs' Governing Board and one ALANA representative from each union representing the faculty and staff of the representative from the Native American community.

c. The Director of the Administrative Office of the ALANA Affairs will serve as an ex–officio member of this board.

d. This office should be functional by spring '98.

The Student Office of ALANA Affairs

1. This existing office will remain an Independent body answerable to the Governing Board of the Office of ALANA Affairs.

a. A full–time office manager and an assistant director will be funded through University administrative funds.

b. All other funding for this office will be maintained through its existing funding mechanisms.

The administration's desire to discuss this issue is a matter of record. If studens are prepared at this time to consider the issue, the administration will be happy to work with the students to set up a mechanism to address it.

Child Care

1. The creation of child care sufficient to and affordable enough for the graduate and undergraduate students of this university.

a. Implementation of a subsidized flexible child care center in centrally located space with 60 seats, open for 80 hours a week (serving an estimate 240 children at 20 hours a week). This center will serve graduate and undergraduate students and all seats will be dedicated for them, excepting vacancies remaining 30 days after the start of the semester. This center will be implemented no later than Jan. 30, 1998. All fees for this center will be set using the existing state child care sliding fee scales. Oversight for this center will be done in full cooperation with the director of child care and family issues committee.

b. To answer the needs of the more than 2000 student parents of this campus, University will provide $500,000 in child care vouchers for both graduate and undergraduate students administering through existing funding mechanisms.

c. The University will implement a slck–care drop off center and a children's library in the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

We recognize there are current unmet needs for Child Care. This is a concern shared by students and the administration. In order to plan a response, the Chancellor has just appointed a committee to develop a proposal. Both SGA and GSS have been asked to appoint members.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Jewish Affairs

Wednesday, March 5, 1997

Esteemed Israeli journalist delivers lecture at Hillel

By Sarah J. Kimmel
Collegian Staff

On Monday evening, Israeli reporter and journalist, Danny Rubenstein, gave a lecture at the University of Massachusetts' Hillel House entitled, "Reporting From the Eye of the Storm: Tales of an Israeli Journalist."

Rubenstein is this year's Five College Hillel Scholar–In– Residence. He has been a reporter for Ha'aretz, one of the largest newspapers in Israel, for 20 years. He has covered the issues surrounding the West Bank and Gaza Strip since the Six Day War In 1967.

In 1988, Rubenstein was a recipient of the prestigious Sokolov Prize, Israel's highest award for journalism. He also has been honored with the Inter–Ethnic Award for understanding and tolerance. He has been the Jerusalem Bureau Chief for the Israeli Labor newspaper Davar.

During Rubenstein's lecture and discussion he spoke of several experiences he had as a journalist in the one of the most heated areas of the world. He focused on the changes regarding Israeli–Palestinian relations in Israel since the Six Day War.

Rubenstein said that in the 1960s, Israeli reporters were asked not to recognize the Palestinians as such and to call them Arabs. In addition, Palestinian reporters did not recognize the State of Israel. According to Rubenstein, this mutual lack of recognition and willingness to reject each other prevented a successful peace process.

"Once we recognized each other we were ready to compromise. This represents a major change," Rubenstein said.

In his talk, the journalist also discussed his views on Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's decision to pull out of Hebron. He said he feels that there are weaknesses and strengths on both the Israeli and Palestinian sides and for that reason the peace process is now imperative.

"The Gulf War was a catastrophe for the Palestinians... half a million people lost their jobs and/or left the country. All funding was stopped, the PLO was out of business," Rubenstein said.

He expressed his feelings that the Israelis were in a similar situation. Out of weakness the two groups must decide to work things out.

"I see the peace process having a good, solid basis. Once both sides are ready to recognize each other and give legitimacy, it will have a good outcome," Rubenstein said.

He said he feels that the solution will come in the form of a petition between the two states.

Rubenstein said, "I think Netanyahu, or any Prime Minister, doesn't have many choices. There is one option and that is this kind of petition."

Rubenstein is also the author of a book about Yassir Arafat. He spoke in his lecture about how he is planning to update the book, as well as translate the novel from English into Hebrew. Rubenstein said he feels that Arafat is much less hated by the population of Israel than he has been in the past. Rubenstein attributes this recent change in the Israelis' opinion to the assassination of Yitzak Rabin. Rubenstein said he believes that when Rabin was shot he was made into a martyr.

Rubenstein said, "Everything he did became more legitimate. Rabin shook hands with Arafat and people are realizing that if Rabin did it then it can't be wrong... This means that the atmosphere on both sides is different."

During the question and answer session of the lecture Rubenstein touched upon several issues such as the separation of secular and orthodox Jews in Jerusalem, Israeli–Syrian relations and where the city lines of Jerusalem should be.

Rubenstein will be speaking tonight at 6:15 at Mount Holyoke College in the Kosher Hallal Kitchen in Elliot House and again on Thursday evening at 7:30 at Amherst College in the Mead Art Museum.

COURTESY STAFF

Israeli journalist, Danny Rubenstein, speaks to UMass at Hillel about his experiences in the Middle East.

Anti–Semitic hate crimes still a campus problem

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

A Baker resident discovered to her dismay, a swastika scrawled on her door on the evening of Thursday Feb. 6. The police came to investigate, and students mobilized in response to the incident.

Despite this hate crime, the number of anti–Semitic incidents is declining both on a national level and at the University of Massachusetts, according to University officials.

The number of reported anti–Semitic incidents on campus have held constant at about 10 per semester, said Larry Goldbaum, the director of the University's Office of Jewish Affairs.

Despite the national decline, reports from the Anti Defamation League (ADL) demonstrate an increase of anti– Semitic incidents in Massachusetts last year from 85 to 106.

"Every act of anti–Semitism reaches beyond its victims to the community at large," said David H. Strassler, ADL national chairman. "We are encouraged that these acts have been met by strong community responses — from Jewish and non–Jewish — we have said no to hate."

In response to the recent graffiti in Baker, the resident assistants (RA) and resident directors of upper Central discussed the incident, said Robin Carus, an RA in Chadbourne who was on duty the evening of the incident.

"Hate mongering isn't directed toward one person, it's meant to shock everyone," said Carus, a junior theater and communications double major.

The crime exacted such a response, said Carus who is Jewish. A groups of students who live in upper Central are planning to remember Yom ha–Sho'ah, Holocaust Memorial Day on May 4.

Goldbaum spoke to the staff about the history of anti–Semitism and how to combat it.

"We're not that far removed from the Holocaust," said Goldbaum. "We're still only 50 years since it happened — that's recent in historic terms."

Anti–Semitism was an institution of Western Civilization that prevented Jews from entering varying facets of society and certain professions for about 2000 years, Goldbaum said. Most people are unfamiliar with the Inquisition, and pogroms — the slaughter of innocent Jews.

The legal institutions that supported anti–Semitism crumbled during the civil rights movement, added Goldbaum.

"Everyone knows about racism, but they don't know about anti–Semitism," Goldbaum said.

Unlike racism, anti–Semitism is not a daily problem for Jews. It historically follows the cycles of the economy, Goldbaum said.

Unlike other campuses, the University is one of about three other schools nationwide that monitors the problem, said Grant Ingle, director of the Office of Human Relations. Every three years, the University surveys students.

The last survey was conducted in fall 1994, and the results improved since the previous one in 1991. The University will conduct the survey again this fall.

The number of Jewish students who were actually harassed decreased from 51.5 percent in 1991 to 29.4 in 1994. About 45 percent of non–Jewish students reported talking about anti–Semitism in class which is more than the 28.4 percent in 1991.

Jewish students grew more confident in the University's ability to handle anti–Semitism from 52.1 go 64.3 percent.

Although student groups brought anti–Semitic speakers to campus such as Louis Farakhan in 1994, the problem has improved, Goldbaum said.

If there was a serious problem with anti–Semitism on this campus, then Jewish students would not come here, Goldbaum said. Jewish students have a high graduation rate, and a low transfer rate, he added.

"It's a shame that [the incident] happened," Carus said. "Most students would never do this."

Holocaust survivors seek the return of stolen property

Sarah Kimmel

It is no secret that during the Holocaust many families were separated and many lives were destroyed. When the Nazis invaded the Jewish ghettos and when the prisoners entered the concentration camps, all of their worldly possessions were taken by their oppressors. Gold wedding rings were torn from lovers' fingers and placed in banks. Since the War over two million dollars worth of gold have accumulated in Swiss bank accounts.

During and after World War II, the Swiss bragged that they were playing a so–called neutral role in the war, yet they did not hesitate to take the stolen gold and put it in their banks. Some of the Jews also placed their money in these Swiss accounts for safe–keeping prior to the Holocaust. Now, 50 years after the war's end these Individuals and their descendants are in the process of trying to recover the stolen property.

According to the recent article in the Feb. 24 issue of Time titled, "Echoes of the Holocaust," several individuals who have survived the Holocaust or had relatives who were in the camps are taking steps to retrieve their finances.

Bert Linder, an 85–year–old Holocaust survivor is one of the survivors who is struggling to get back his lost funds. In 1942, Linder's gold wedding ring was taken from him by the Nazis. This action separated him from his wife and 10– month old son who were later murdered in Auschwitz.

Linder hired a lawyer to investigate the situation. He threatened to sue the Swiss banks if they did not create some sort of reparation fund. His lawyers wrote letters to the banks and threatened again to place lawsuits. Finally, the banks came forward with a promise to supply funding for those who suffered financially in the Holocaust.

Time tells of several people who, like Linder, were financially cheated during World War II. Rudolphine Schlinger's husband William had Swiss bank accounts in which he deposited funds prior to and during the Holocaust.

Naomi Weisz Nagel, 56, is the daughter of two Holocaust survivors. Today she is trying to retrieve the money but bank officials insist that there is no record of their account. Even though Nagel had the identification of an account number at a specific bank and despite the fact that she hired a Swiss lawyer, she is still being refused the restoration of her parents' money.

Today there are approximately 12,000 Holocaust survivors who are attempting to sue four Swiss banks in a 20 billion dollar class action suit. This suit was filed last October and it is the largest attempt to recover the stolen property of the survivors.

The United States did take some action in this mission for justice. Code–named Project Safehaven, this U.S. intelligence operation is trying to track down Nazi gold that was being smuggled out of the Third Reich.

Previously secured papers that discussed Project Safehaven have been declassified after the mandatory 50 year waiting period. Now there are some steps that are being taken to bring back the funds. Edgar Bronfman, heir to the Seagram's spirit enterprise, has also been a member of the World Jewish Congress. Bronfman is truly a Jewish leader. He led the campaign that fought to make the former Soviet Union allow Russian Jews to emigrate and he also ended the career of Kurt Waldheim, the former president of Austria, because of war crimes.

Bronfman told Time, "Part of my life and part of the things that I want out of life is to be a Jewish leader."

Bronfman wanted to ask the Swiss Bankers Association to investigate the missing accounts of Holocaust victims. The bankers stated that they would turn over $32 million that was discovered in 774 accounts since the war if they could close the matter for good.

Instead of agreeing with the bankers and accepting the offer, Bronfman decided to move to higher sources to get assistance. A meeting with President Clinton was made and the men discussed the issue in its entirety. The President was extremely helpful in the pursuit for the funds and made Senate hearings for Holocaust survivors to testify. There was evidence that the Swiss did service the Reich.

Three weeks ago the Swiss gave in a little. They announced that they would create a $70 million humanitarian fund for the remaining survivors and the families of the victims that did not. Then the Swiss government said that they would oversee the fund, but that it would not sink any of their public money until its investigation had been completed. On Feb. 5 the Big Three Swiss banks finally announced the Holocaust Memorial Fund.

Many people criticize Bronfman's actions because there are now strong signs of anti–Semitism in Switzerland. Bronfman will not be turned down, he told Time Magazine, "If we did not put pressure on them, nothing would have happened. I think about it. But Jews do not make anti– Semitism. Anti–Semites make Anti–Semitism. If we are going to give them an excuse to yell at Jews, OK. But there is a moral issue here... and that issue is the truth."

No matter what the Swiss bankers decide to give to the survivors and their families, it can in no way be a substitute for the pain and anguish that they have suffered in the past 50 years. So much more than just dollar bills and bars of gold was taken from them. Now, it is only the truth and their memory that will bring peace of mind to those who are still living with the after affects of the Holocaust.

Sarah J. Kimmel is a Collegian columnist.

Netanyahu: Israel to go ahead with West Bank redeployment

By Gwen Ackerman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel will go ahead with the first of three scheduled troop withdrawals from West Bank rural areas after the Cabinet meets this week, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said yesterday.

The prime minister did not say how much land the Palestinians would get in the transfer. But he said that even after the three redeployments, the Palestinians will not end up with the 90 percent of the West Bank they seek.

The Cabinet will decide the scope of the first withdrawal, which is supposed to be completed by Friday.

"The implementation will begin immediately after the decision is made," Netanyahu told Israel radio.

The Cabinet is expected to meet tommorow to authorize the withdrawal. Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai said the redeployment would be carried out within 48 hours of a Cabinet decision, the Yediot Ahronot newspaper reported.

There had been speculation the first withdrawal would be delayed, increasing tensions already high because of Israel's decision to build a new Jewish neighborhood in disputed east Jerusalem.

Israel has already withdrawn from major Palestinian cities in the West Bank, retaining only a small part of Hebron, and has granted partial autonomy to about 28 percent of the West Bank and most of the Gaza Strip.

Under the agreement reached in January between Netanyahu and Yasser Arafat, Israel is to carry out three additional pullbacks from the West Bank by the end of 1999. The final status of the West Bank, Gaza and Jerusalem is to be determined in talks on a permanent peace settlement, scheduled to start next month.

According to Yediot Ahronot, Israel intends to hand over between 6 and 10 percent of West Bank in the first redeployment, while the Palestinians are demanding 20 percent.

The prime minister did not give any indication of how much of the West Bank Israel ultimately intends to hand over.

On Monday, President Clinton met with Arafat in Washington and criticized Israel's decision to go ahead with the 6,500–home Har Homa housing project in east Jerusalem, saying it "builds mistrust" between Israelis and the Palestinians.

Diplomats from European countries were expected to call on Israel to avoid actions which could change the status of Jerusalem when the U.N. Security Council met yesterday to discuss the housing project.

Arafat also was scheduled to meet yesterday with Secretary-General Kofi Annan.

The Palestinians want to establish a capital in east Jerusalem and fear massive Israeli construction will block that option before the city's final status is negotiated.

Netanyahu said Clinton's reaction had been expected and added that Israel intended to go ahead with the construction.

"We are going to build," Netanyahu said. "If it weren't for the legal restrictions, the bulldozers would have been on Har Homa yesterday and not just two weeks from now."

A failed attempt to learn Hebrew

Daniel E. Levenson

I don't know exactly how I came up with the notion that taking a Hebrew class would be a good idea. In fact, it turns out that my brilliant idea was anything but. In fact, of all the linguistic nightmares I have endured this tumultuous, tortuous episode was by far one of the worst.

My approach from the beginning was probably all wrong. I figured that since I went to Hebrew school as a young boy that I was more than adequately prepared for Hebrew at the University of Massachusetts. Boy was I wrong!

If the study of Hebrew could be compared to sports, I was playing stickball in the backyard, while my class was something akin to the World Series. I was clearly out of my league.

I found that much to my dismay — almost completely Hebrew illiterate — the degree to which I did not understand Hebrew was ridiculous.

But still, there were at varying points in time, glimmers of verbal hope, small signs that perhaps I was making progress on my journey to understanding the language of my people.

Each day the class would travel along through language outer space at the speed of light while I was left standing at the launching pad.

I was in serious danger of failing. One of my friends tried to tutor me, and for a while that did help. But soon I found myself sliding backwards into the same dark abyss where my intellect was forced to wander aimlessly amid algebra and other great mysteries of the known Universe.

In high school I took three years of Spanish and a year of Latin. I can still speak and understand a decent amount of the former, but as for Latin, my understanding of the language is as dead as the people who actually spoke it. Semper Ubi Sub Ubi! is the only thing I can remember, that of course, and Agricola, Agricolum... I still twitch when I think about declining verbs.

When I say that I can't speak Hebrew, I mean that I could in no way carry on any sort of conversation. I can, however read letters, words and sentences in the Hebrew language, meaning I am physically able to pronounce them, but don't go asking me what they mean. I can say, "I study at the University of Massachusetts," which, although I am impressed that I can say that, is really no great accomplishment.

After the semester was over I decided to check with the people over in Whitmore and try to find out if I really needed to take a language here at the University.

It turns out I didn't, since I took Spanish up to the fourth level in high school. So, in essence I blew an entire semester on a course that I didn't understand or need to take.

What did I learn form this experience? Well, it would be easy to say nothing and simply move on.

But I do think I picked up at least one little nugget of wisdom — in the future, before I jump into a class, I'll check with Whitmore first.

Daniel E. Levenson is a Collegian columnist.

JEWISH AFFIARS IS ALWAYS LOOKING FOR WRITERS

come down to the campus center basement today!

Arts & Living

Wednesday, March 5, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

LAUREN KOSTY/ COLLEGIAN

Theater professor, Harley Erdman discusses the Jewish aspects of The Merchant of Venice.

Shakespeare's Merchant anti–Semitic or not?

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

Nearly 400 years after the death of playwright William Shakespeare, there are still interpretations and intentions of his comedy A Merchant of Venice. Two questions most often asked about the play, which is currently being performed by the Theater Department at the Rand Theater are: is the play anti–Semitic and if so, should it be performed?

Yesterday afternoon at the Rand Theater, the Theater Department's Educational services organized a panel where theater professor Harley Erdman and M.F.A. candidate Sam Rush, who is directing the production of A Merchant of Venice, discussed the issue. One essential question that has never been fully resolved is whether Shakespeare was propagating stereotypes with the play, or whether the play forces the audiences to confront and challenge its own prejudices.

Both speakers agreed that the play should still be performed, but they differed on what degree of anti–Semitism the play contained.

The debate centers around Shylock, the comic foil of the play who is a greedy money lender, and his daughter Jessica, who deserts her father and marries a Christian. Erdman presented a paper in which he said the play is essentially anti–Semitic, but under favorable circumstances in which historical and textual contexts are considered, should be performed.

"Whatever redeeming features Shylock portrays, his negative qualities are forever linked to his being Jewish," Erdman said.

According to Erdman Shylock is referred to as "Jew" more often than his real name. The character also spends much of the play trying to get his hands on a pound of the "hero," Antonio's flesh, resembling a common belief of the time that Jews were somehow "flesh eaters."

Erdman said that whatever credit Shakespeare takes for challenging the assumptions of his society, he must also take the blame for falling in line with them. He also clarified that he felt Shakespeare was Anti–Jewish and not anti–Semitic. This means that Shakespeare's problem were with Jewish beliefs and values as he saw them, and was not based on racial ideology.

Erdman then discussed the history of the play's performance, describing Shylock's portrayal as having undergone three distinct phases. When the play was first performed, Shylock's comic element was emphasized — he was treated as a devil figure wearing a red wig. In 1741 there was a drastic change to the character — Shylock was played as a fearful, vengeful character. Finally, Erdman added that the 20th century began portraying Shylock as a psychologically acute, sympathetic character who's vengeful rage is simply in response to the way he is treated by the hypocritical Christian society.

"The character of Shylock emanates from Christian fantasy," Erdman said, so rather than play Shylock as real, he would like performances to incorporate this historical understanding, while also realizing that Shylock is only part of this complex play.

Following Erdman's presentation, Rush delivered a brief response saying, "Shakespeare paints in an infinite palate of gray, I choose to believe he was asking us about our values."

Rush said that the hypocrisy with which the "kind" Christian characters act towards one another and Shylock would have presented a challenge to the current audiences.

One important fact brought up, contrary to popular beliefs, Shakespeare may have indeed had the opportunity to encounter Jews living in London. Despite in ordinance which expelled Jews from England earlier in the 16th century, there were several hundred Portuguese Jews living in London.

Smiths tribute depressing

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

VARIOUS ARTISTS
The World Still Won't Listen: A Tribute to the Smiths
Chord Records/Too Damn Hype Records

Unlike most cover compilations, The World Still Won't Listen is unique because the bands covering the Smiths sound nothing like the original band. The Smiths were famous for their stargazing take on British pop merged with Morrissey's brilliant and morbid lyrics. The bands on this compilation are all known for their fast paced hardcore punk rock.

So what happens when you merge two styles of music that sound nothing alike? Well, you get some brilliant songs, some okay songs and some that are flat out miserable. The problem with most of the songs on this compilation is that they are trying too hard to sound exactly like the Smiths. However, because these bands lack a vocalist with Morrissey's ability, it often sounds silly.

The best track is H2O's cover of, "Heaven Knows I'm Miserable Now." It's almost unfair to put H2O on compilations with other bands as they consistently blow away the competition. By adding a sense of humor to the song, along with Toby Morse's vocals, you have a killer track.

Tied for second is either the Business doing "Panic," or Vision's take on "Stop Me If You Think That You've Heard This One Before." The Business add an Oi flavor to "Panic" and hearing Mickey Finn croon "Hang the DJ, for the music that they constantly play says nothing to me about my life," makes you wonder if the song wasn't originally intended to be an Oi anthem.

Vision gets points because they cover one of the Smiths's best songs. Vision, like the Business and H2O, succeed because they don't try to sound like the Smiths and just play a good melodic hardcore take of the song. Vision also adds a killer breakdown to the end that helps hammer down their cover as a hardcore song.

Subzero covering, "What Difference Does It Make," Dare to Defy doing, "Shoplifter's Of The World Unite" and Slapshot strutting their stuff on, "Bigmouth Strikes Again" also succeed. These three bands are successful because they stick to a hardcore formula and realize that they will never sound like the Smiths. It is also hysterical to hear the gruff voiced trifecta of Choke, Lu and Les trying to sound like Morrissey.

After those three tracks the rest of the compilation falls off. Down By Law, Screw 32, Youth Brigade, the Meatmen and 59 Times the Pain all contribute unmemorable tracks. Those bands just try too hard to sound like the Smiths and come off about as exciting as watching paint peel.

Lament covering, "Back To The Old House," Walleye doing, "There Is A Light," Sweet Diesel on "Handsome Devil," A.C. on, "You're Gonna Need Someone On Your Side" and Edgewise on "Half A Person" all win the award for butchering beyond belief the songs they cover. Not only aren't these bands decent when they play their own material, Leeway being the exception, they are terrible when they try to play the Smiths. Most people would rather walk around with broken glass in their underwear then hear the aforementioned songs.

Overall, the compilation is decent. It's almost worth it just to have the Vision, H2O and the Business songs. Then again, a large part of this album is just filler and makes you really want to listen to the original versions. The Smiths were an original and innovative band and it doesn't make sense that most of the bands on this compilation went for such a straightforward approach. C+

UMass' Best!

The Collegian Poll Rules:

1. Ballots must be dropped of at The Collegian office in the basement of the Campus Center or mailed to 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003.
2. No Xeroxed ballots.
3. One ballot per person
4. Ballots must be filled out with reasonable completeness. Ballots less than half of the blanks will be disqualified.
5. Independent Ballot Referees are hired.
6. Decisions of Ballot Referees are final.
7. All Ballots due by Thursday, March 13, 1997.

WIN PRIZES!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian's UMass' Best is intended to be a good natured contest among the local community. It is a fun poll based solely on UMass student opinions. This is not a harsh competition with results that have deep and lasting significance. Please do not take it as such, but rather as a basic published poll.

Ballot

Name: _____
Address: _____
Phone #: _____
Student ID#: _____

I. UMass Grub
1. Best Pizza Place _____
2. Best Sub Shop _____
3. Best Place to Go on a Date _____
4. Best Place to Eat if Your Parents are Paying _____
5. Best Ice Cream Shop _____
6. Best Chinese Restaurant _____
7. Best Italian Food _____
8. Best Breakfast (Hangover Cure) _____
9. Best Bagel Shop _____
10. Best Vegetarian Place _____

II. UMass Weekend
1. Best Liquor Store _____
2. Best Coffee Shop _____
3. Best Place to Start the Night Out _____
4. Best Place to Finish the Night Out _____
5. Best Shot _____
6. Best Beer _____
7. Best Drinking Game _____
8. Best Bartender (What Bar?) _____

III. Shops & Services
1. Best Grocery Store _____
2. Best Florist _____
3. Best Clothing Store _____
4. Best Gas Station _____
5. Best Bike Shop _____
6. Best Bookstore _____
7. Best Hair Salon _____
8. Best Place to Work Out _____
9. Best Tan Salon _____
10. Best Place to Buy Condoms _____

IV. Arts & Entertainment
1. Best Place to Hear Live Music _____
2. Best Local Band _____
3. Best Radio Station _____
4. Best Music Store _____
5. Best Place to Play Pool _____
6. Best Cheap Date _____
7. Best Video Store _____
8. Best Movie _____
9. Best TV Show _____

V. Unique UMass' Best
1. Best Thing About UMass _____
2. Best Apartment Complex _____
3. Best Class _____
4. Best Reason to Miss Class _____
5. Best Reason to Hand in a Paper Late _____
6. Best Professor _____
7. Best Place to Read The Collegian _____
8. Best Excuse for Not Graduating in 4 Years _____
9. Best Place to Study _____

FILL OUT A BALLOT FOR A CHANCE TO WIN A PRIZE!

Jazzman wows Noho

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

JAMES CARTER
Iron Horse Music Hall
March 2

NORTHAMPTON — James Carter is quite an intriguing jazzman. He appeared with his quartet Sunday night at the Iron Horse Music Hall in a very colorful, matching outfit that ensured his and his band's audience that they most likely wouldn't be hearing the same old traditional be–bop that is the common style for young jazz–men today.

He started off on a somewhat odd footing, as he played an almost dixie–swing fast–paced tune called, "1994 Stomp" which featured his soprano saxophone style. The way he attacked the instrument produced a very rapid staccato sound, not unlike trumpet playing. In this way, Carter certainly had a hold on what sound he wanted, and also knew that he was going to have fun attaining that sound and playing with it. For "1994 Stomp," at least, the people at the Horse should've cleared a dance floor.

Jaribu Shahid opened up "Portrait Of Jeanine" with a nice bass solo which embraced echoing harmonics. This solo led into a vamp over which the main theme was laid by the band, with Carter now blowing out on a baritone sax. Pianist Craig Taborn's solo during this second song was certainly un–daunted and drove ahead with comforting assurance. During Carter's own solo, he displayed his love for the Albert Ayler style of free jazz, tearing up one reed in the process. His playing was fierce, but in a certain sense poetic — this may be one major reason why he is often thought of as a "young lion" in the jazz world.

The band carried on into a more hard–bop oriented piece, which Carter picked up his tenor for. He and drummer Tani Tabal — who held a steady beat all night, despite his solos lacking true vision — ripped it up for quite a while just between the two of them before Shahid and Taborn came in torpolish it all off.

Then came a sweet ballad, with Taborn's tender soloing opening it up. The piece was bluesy to a certain point, even. Shahid took his first real mid–song solo, with good feel for melody. Finally, the band finished off with another hard upbeat piece, with tenor playing free once again. After his accompanists left the stage, Carter remained up in front of the crowd, having a little fun with his instrument, sounding off little pops and atonal whistles of one sort or another.

The impression gained from Carter is that he is a man eager to make his own mark on the jazz scene, and he's not afraid to shout to be heard.

Interested in reviewing performances, books, CDs, or writing about local events?

Come write for the Collegian Arts Desk!
It's great fun!
It's good experience!
It will look super on your resume!

Come to the Collegian or call 545-1491 and talk with Jeremy Brothers today!

COURTESY OF ROADRUNNER RECORDS

Vision Of Disorder is just one of the new crop of bands that are integrating punk with hardcore.

Making hardcore fun by bringing in punk rock

Well there's really nothing too exciting going on in terms of new releases, and while there are a whole bunch of shows going on we'll save those for feature stories. So instead of providing you with news, I'm going to occupy your valuable time with some insightful views on the split between punk and hardcore.

with Adam Dlugacz

When the hardcore first came about in the early '80s it was synonymous with punk. While bands like Minor Threat, Agnostic Front, Bad Brains, Faith, Black Flag, DYS, SOA and Cause For Alarm were considered hardcore, they were very closely related to the punk scene. It wasn't uncommon to see bands like Agnostic Front playing with The Exploited or Bad Brains to play with the Dead Kennedy's. In the mid– '80s Bad Brains played with Sonic Youth and Firehose at Amherst College. So while hardcore was considered to be a little bit faster, there was no real split between the two.

In the late '80s, with the emergence of the youth crew scene typified by bands like Youth Of Today, Gorilla Biscuits and Bold coupled with bands like Leeway, Agnostic Front, Judge and Breakdown letting metal creep into their sound, the split between hardcore and punk began. Hardcore bands stuck to their scene, while punk bands stuck to theirs — although bands of both genres were still occasionally playing with each other, it was becoming rarer.

This brings us up to date, where punk and hardcore bands play together about as often as David Duke and Jesse Jackson go for a drink together. Hardcore has become stereotyped as slow, metallic music with depressing lyrics about the end of the world which is my main problem with the genre. Bands have forgotten that what made hardcore so special was speed, intensity and fun. Whatever happened to that PMA? Didn't Gorilla Biscuits sing "High Hopes"?

I think hardcore bands have begun to take themselves too seriously. While punk bands like Strung Out, Good Riddance and AFI have managed to keep the political lyrics, their songs are fun to sing along to and they make you want to move, not sit in your room and cry. It is that aspect that I think too many hardcore bands today are missing. I mean, most kids in these bands come from suburban middle class families, so I have trouble imagining their lives are as bleak as the members of bands like Earth Crisis, Bloodlet, Turmoil or Despair, or any of those bands make it out to be. Sure earlier hardcore–punk bands like Black Flag and Minor Threat realized the problems in this world, but they made you believe you could do something about it. The only band that has even come close to capturing that spirit has been Sick Of It All on Built To Last.

We need to follow in the path that punk has taken and make hardcore fun again. I know most of you are thinking that all punk bands sound like NOFX or Bad Religion, however the same could easily be said of all the chugga chugga bands you love so much. It's good to see bands like H2O, Screw 32, 88 Fingers Louie, Murphy's Law and V.O.D., or closer to home bands like Hallraker and Fastbreak remembering that the split between hardcore and punk should not be the wide chasm it has become today. Remember, hardcore did not come from Slayer or Napalm Death, and remember it's about being open minded not militant, that it's about keeping your head up and having PMA, not writing five minute funeral dirges about how your life is over because your girlfriend dumped you. Let's really try to unite the scene.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

DOLORES HUERTA
Co-Founder and Secretary/Treasurer,
United Farm Workers of America
and
DR. VERNON W. BRIGGS, JR.
Professor of Labor Economics
School of Labor and Industrial Relations, Cornell University

IMMIGRATION LIMITS?
PRO AND CON

Wednesday, March 5, 7:30 p.m.
Wright Hall Auditorium, Smith College

Sponsored by the Campus Climate Working Group
and the Hewlett Fund

The Edwin M. Rossman Alumni Career Forum

Public Health & Health Sciences

Date: Wednesday, March 5, 1997
Time: 3:00 PM
Location: Campus Center 174 -176

Sponsored by:
University Career Center
Umass Alumni Association

This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!

Alumni/AE Panelists:

Ian Wong '91 — Director of Health Services, Babson College, Welsley, MA

Mark Hughes '95 — Provider Unit Manager, Tufts Health Plan, Boston, MA

Martha Mastroberti '91 — Director of Clinical Reporting, Kaiser Permanente, Farming, CT

Scott Chasan-Taber '94 — Biostatistician, Manager of Statistical Programming, Boston Biostatistics, Framingham, MA

For more information, please contact:
University Career Center
545-2224

WPI student bugs Microsoft

WORCESTER — An engineering student at Worcester Polytechnic Institute has gotten an unexpected lesson about the impact of science on society.

While working on a class project, Paul Greene uncovered a major security flaw in computer giant Microsoft Corp.'s popular Internet Explorer program. Then he posted the information on the Internet.

"I haven't slept in 48 hours. We have had more than 60,000 hits on our Web page, and I have more than 100 telephone messages stacked up," the 28-year-old junior from Fall River said in a telephone interview yesterday with the Associated Press.

"The reaction has been incredible. And all I wanted to do was write this little paper," Greene said.

The flaw could allow a Web site operator to secretly run programs or destroy files on someone else's personal computer.

Microsoft's programmers are scrambling to fix the bug in the company's key Internet product, which is used by millions of people worldwide to access the Web.

It started with an assignment to demonstrate how scientific techniques can be used in marketing. The students were told to develop a survey assessing the effectiveness of the school's freshman orientation program.

While trying to share files with three other students, Greene mistakenly created a "shortcut," a device used to start other programs. "Then I got to wondering what would happen if I tried it," he said. And suddenly he found he was able to run programs on the other computers.

"I called over my roommates — computer science majors Brian Morin, 22, of Brattleboro, Vt., and Geoffrey Elliott, 20, of Nashua, N.H. — and their mouths just dropped open," Greene said.

"At first we thought this is real neat stuff," he said.

"Then the implications set in, and we realized that you could rain absolute terror on someone's machine," Greene said.

Last Thursday, the trio posted an e-mail note on Microsoft's bulletin board dealing with program bugs. When they didn't get an immediate response, they messaged some on-line magazines.

By Sunday night, they still hadn't been able to rouse any interest in their discovery, so they posted their information on a public Internet bulletin board along with some harmless programs developed by Morin and Elliott to demonstrate the flaw.

"We've been bombarded ever since," said Morin, a senior who runs a software-consulting company with three offices as well as being a full-time student.

"We decided to move quickly on this, because it affects us personally," Morin said.

"It's my business and I love Microsoft products," he said.

"But it puts so much at risk that it's scary. We never wanted to be malicious and we tried to be discreet, but we figured the quickest way to get it resolved was to go public. At least if they know about it people can take precautions."

UNO'S PIZZA
AMHERST
256-8911
VISA
BUFFALO WINGS
10 BUFFALO WINGS $8.99
TIP TOP SAVINGS
LARGE 1 TOPPING PIZZA & 2 COKES $11.99
BONUS
$1.00 OFF ANY MEDIUM PIZZA OR $2.00 OFF ANY LARGE PIZZA
LARGE DOUBLE
2 LARGE 1 TOPPING PIZZAS $15.99
DOMINO'S IS BEST
MEDIUM 1 TOPPING PIZZA & 2 COKES $8.99
MEAL DEAL
MEDIUM 1 TOPPING PIZZA, TWISTY BREAD & 2 CANS OF COKE $9.99

Spring Break
Hartford Travel Services
Cancun from $449
Jamaica from $449
Florida from $139
STS STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES Toll free 1-800-648-4849 http://www.ststravel.com

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
TOKYO Roundtrip $799
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs–immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

MJ soaring; Turner gets new deal

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

CHICAGO — It's been fun, 'Nique. Catch up to you soon, Hondo. Big O? Gotta go.

One by one, the NBA's big-time scorers are being overstepped by Michael Jordan. The Chicago Bulls' star is seventh and climbing after racing past Dominique Wilkins on Monday.

Just how high will Air Jordan fly?

He should surpass John Havlicek and Oscar Robertson and climb into fifth place by the end of the season, should ascend to third if he returns for 1997-98, and could catch Wilt Chamberlain for No. 2 if he stays around for two more years. Only Kareem Abdul-Jabbar seems out of Jordan's reach.

"You're not surprised at the incredible amount of scoring Michael does," coach Phil Jackson says. "With Michael, just about anything's possible."

Gunning for an unprecedented ninth league scoring title as he tries to take the Bulls to their fifth championship in seven years, Jordan obviously isn't slowing at age 34. He's scoring 30.8 points a game in his 12th season, down only slightly from his NBA-record 31.9 career average.

He put in 31 Monday against Milwaukee to give him 26,277 points — 19 more than Wilkins.

"That's a lot," Jordan said with a shrug and a smile. "I feel old. Some of the things I've done over the years are starting to add up."

Wilkins is San Antonio's top scorer this season but is expected to miss several games with a hamstring injury. Assuming Jordan stays healthy and maintains his 31-point average, 'Nique has little chance to catch him.

Within two weeks, Jordan should pass Havlicek, who has 118 more points. Robertson, 433 points ahead, should fall behind Jordan next month.

Jordan trails No. 4 Elvin Hayes by 1,036 points and No. 3 Moses Malone by 1,132. If Jordan returns next season, and he has hinted that he will, he'd likely zip past Hayes and Malone before the calendar turns to 1998.

That would leave the Big Two of Chamberlain and Abdul-Jabbar. Chamberlain is 5,142 points ahead of Jordan; Abdul-Jabbar 12,110.

"The scary part about it is: What happens if I hadn't retired for a year and a half and hadn't been hurt in my second year?" said Jordan, who quit the game in October 1993 only to return in March 1995. "I'd probably have Wilt Chamberlain yelling at me even more."

The only player other than Jordan to average 30-plus points over a career, Chamberlain has criticized Jordan's accomplishments while making the talk-show circuit to promote his new book. Chamberlain contends the league isn't as strong now as it was in the '60s and '70s.

"It's his competitive juices still flowing," Jordan said. "When I'm 60 years old, I'm pretty sure I'll be just as competitive.

"I respect him. He's given me motivation to chase what he's done. I don't try to get into a confrontation with him about what he did in his era and what I do in this era. It's all debatable who's the greatest," Jordan said.

What if some kind of time machine would make it possible for the 6-foot-6 Jordan to play the 7-1 Chamberlain with each in his prime?

"I would win," Jordan said.

Chamberlain retired in 1973 with 31,419 points in 14 seasons. Figuring another 700 points for Jordan this year, it would take two more productive seasons for him to surpass Chamberlain.

With Scottie Pippen to be a free agent after next season, with Jackson's status in doubt beyond this year and with Jordan determined not to outstay his own excellence, the prospects of Jordan sticking around for 1998-99 are uncertain.

As for catching Abdul-Jabbar — who scored 38,387 points in 20 seasons — forget it.

Jordan would have to play five more years at near peak efficiency, and he has pretty much ruled that out.

"I don't even know what will happen after this season," Jordan said.

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) — Norv Turner got additional job security as coach of the Washington Redskins yesterday when he signed a three-year contract contract extension.

Turner, 44, reportedly was signed to an original 5-year, $3 million deal in 1994. The extension, for an undisclosed sum, takes Turner through the 2001 season.

"From my standpoint, you look around and see a couple of situations this year where coaches decided for whatever reason they wanted to be somewhere different. Hey, I want to be here," Turner said. "Jack Kent Cooke has shown he wants me to be here. So we worked something out."

Cooke, the team's owner, needed less than two months to work on the renegotiated contract. He reiterated yesterday in a statement released by the team that as long as he is the owner, Turner will be the Redskins coach.

"In my experience in professional sports, I have not met a more talented coach, and motivator of men than Norv," Cooke said in the release.

"Norv and I are convinced that with the opening of the Redskins' new stadium, the Redskins face an era of success not dissimilar to that which brought much glory to the great Redskin teams of the '80s."

Turner's teams have improved from 3-13 in 1994 to 6-10 in 1995 and 9-7 last season. But last season, they started 7-1 before losing six of their last eight games.

Turner will take the team into a new stadium being built in suburban Maryland.

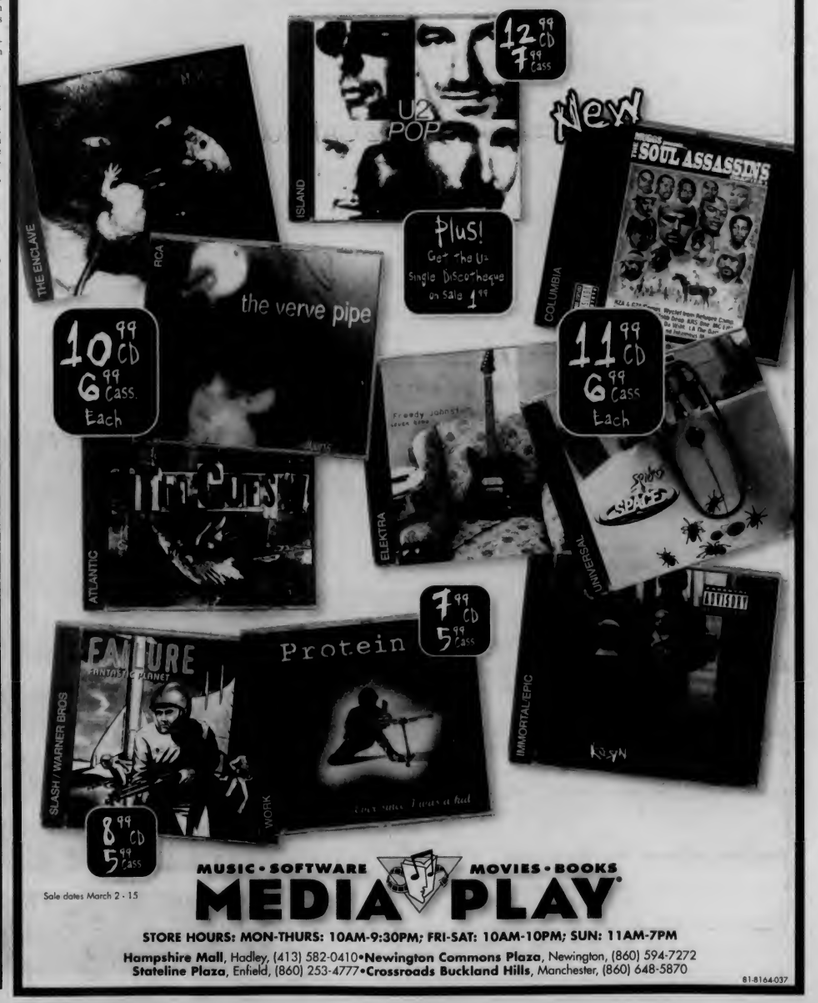
The last time the Redskins made the playoffs was 1992 in Joe Gibbs' final campaign. Turner replaced Richie Petitbon, who went 4-12 in his one season.

Turner's extension is just one of many coaching moves the team has made this offseason.

The Redskins have overhauled their defensive staff after the team finished 28th defensively out of 30 teams last year.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

See ya in Durham...



The hockey team heads up to New Hampshire to face UNH in first round Hockey East action.

Check out the Collegian's web page @ www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Of course we've got the new U2.

Who doesn't?

We've also got everything else.

Sale dates March 2 - 15

MUSIC • SOFTWARE MOVIES • BOOKS

MEDIA PLAY

STORE HOURS: MON-THURS: 10AM-9:30PM; FRI-SAT: 10AM-10PM; SUN: 11AM-7PM

Hampshire Mall, Hadley, (413) 582-0410 • Newington Commons Plaza, Newington, (860) 594-7272
Stateline Plaza, Enfield, (860) 253-4777 • Crossroads Buckland Hills, Manchester, (860) 648-5870

81-8164037

UM men's gymnasts win at N.E's

COURTESY MELISA RELATIONS

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team captured it's ninth straight New England Championships title over the weekend.

By Matthew Perrault
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team continued its prolific success this season by clinching their ninth straight New England Championship.

UMass destroyed the field, with their closest opponent, Springfield, 25 points behind. The Minutemen's score of 226.95 was their second highest away score and was "more important than the victory itself" according to UMass Coach Roy Johnson.

"This was one of the best meets of the year. This is my best team ever, no question. Our ranking of 8th is the highest ever [by a men's gymnastics team]," Johnson said.

The Minutemen did the unthinkable, capturing at least the first three spots on every apparatus and even more on others. It was a complete domination of every event.

Sophomore Steve Pryor came up large for UMass, taking the NE all-around title with a score of 56.00. He nipped fellow teammate freshmen Jeff LaValle by 1.2 points. Pryor's score was his highest away score and helped to propel him to No.22 (tied) in the country for all-around.

"Steve Pryor was awesome. He had his highest away score ever," Johnson said.

Other Minutemen first place finishes were Jeff LaValle on parallel bars (9.7) and floor (9.7), senior Ruslan Shupak on the vault (9.750) and rings (9.8), sophomore Brad Leclair took the pommel horse (9.7) and sophomore Phil Lieberman captured the high bar (9.55).

"We were happy with our performance overall. We still have some room for improvement," Pryor said. "This is a good start for us in the post season because we have two of our biggest meets [ECAC's and EGLC's] coming up before Regionals. We want to win the EGLC's, that's something our team has never done and qualify as a team for Regionals."

Along with a No. 8 national ranking and Pryor's all- around rank, the Minutemen have four other gymnasts who are ranked among the top 25 in the country on their apparatus. Lieberman is No. 13 on floor and No. 21 on the high bar./Leclair is ranked No. 19 (tied) on the pommel horse, Shupak is No. 12 (tied) on vault and No. 6 (tied) on rings and LaValle is No. 16 (tied) on parallel bars.

UMass has a few more stepping stones before they can look ahead at a national title run which looks like a long and difficult road.

"We have to win both the ECAC's and EGLC's, something we have never done, before we can go for a National Championship," Johnson said.

Next up for UMass is the ECAC's at William and Mary in Williamsburg, Virginia on March 8. There, UMass will battle teams like Army and other divisional foes that the Minutemen have already beaten this season.

Any less than victory will be a huge disappointment for this talented squad, but they are staying level headed.

"We need to strengthen up on the pommel horse and high bar, but it's not going to be a problem, only something we need to work on," Pryor said.

London Florence Madrid Semesters Japan Costa Rica

SYRACUSE STUDY ABROAD

• Generous grants & academic scholarships
• Coursework, internships & more
• Business programs in 3 countries
• Placement in foreign universities

ZIMBABWE • ENGLAND • ITALY
HONG KONG • SPAIN • FRANCE

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY • 119 Euclid Avenue • Syracuse, NY 13244-4170
1-800-235-3472 • suabroad@syr.edu http://sumweb.syr.edu/dipa

UMass Student Legal Services Office

FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!

545-1995

CALL TODAY!

922 CAMPUS CENTER

■ NHL

continued from page 14

After trading away their disgruntled franchise forward in Jeremy Roenick to Phoenix for all-flash, no-smash Russian forward Alexei Zhamnov earlier in the season, the Hawks seemed to be destined for the basement.

Their success has not been the result of the Russian Flash In The Pan, but rather a local kid, Tony Amonte. The ex- Boston University Terrier has emerged from the shadow of fellow Eastern Mass. star Roenick, and is now in the top 10 of the league in goals scored (34).

Hey, I don't like the guy just because he is a hairy, Wookie-esque kind of dude like myself (but, it is a bonus), but because he is a player. He has been lost in the shuffle in both New York and Chicago since his departure from BU five years ago. Then-Ranger, and now-no other team in the NHL, coach Mike Keenan was just a little too whatever ("harsh," possibly?) on Amonte, and he was dealt to Wayne and Garth land in March, 1994.

But Chicago was not as accommodating, and forwards like Roenick, Bernie Nicholls (now in San Jose), Joe Murphy (now in St. Louis) and last year's rookie sensation Eric Daze kept him from getting into the offensive flow. Three of those four players are now long gone, and Amonte's scoring touch hasn't been too far to find.

It was nice to see an Original Six team take out a Par Five team in Phoenix the other night, as the Hawks beat the Coyotes at America West Arena by a 4-0 score. It was good to see Amonte pick up a short-handed goal, but it has not been good to see their franchise defenseman, Chris Chelios, on the sidelines with an injured knee.

If they lose him just for a little bit down the stretch, then the rest of the defensive core, and Amonte, will have to pick up a lot of his inimitable leadership. If he has to, I won't be surprised if the one with the locks does pick up the slack, and I ain't talking about bagels, people.

• It's all been said... and I bet you were wondering when I would get to the biggest trade in Boston Bruins history since the 1976 trade of Phil Esposito to the Rangers for Brad Park and Jean Ratelle. Ooh, was that big.

And don't ask me if I remember it, because... I do. I almost cried when I pulled a Esposito card out of a Topps pack with a Ranger uniform on him.

But talking about how much of a loss Adam Oates, Rick Tocchet and Bill Ranford are to the team would now be pointless. You want to know why? Because, every media outlet known to man has beat that into the ground, so it's all been said... let's just get to who we got from the Washington Capitals, and see what they bring, OK?

Forward Jason Allison has been a major influence in the junior ranks, but his NHL time has been pretty minor. For London of the Ontario Hockey League, the 1993 draft pick of Washington (17th overall) scored over 140 points in his final season. But since then, he has been moving back and forth from Landover to Portland (AHL) due to inconsistent play. But, he'll get the playing time in Boston, and his skills will get a chance for some needed polishing.

Forward "Dancin'" Anson Carter is fresh out of CCHA's Michigan State, where he was an All-Conference selection and a Hobey Baker Award candidate for the Spartans. Along with ex-Terrier, and current Edmonton Oiler, Mike Grier, Carter is one of the top young players of color in the NHL.

The major upside of the deal is in last season's Vezina Trophy Award winner, goalie Jim Carey. Even with his offseason this campaign, his numbers are better than Ranford's (17-18-3, 2.75 GAA), and he is a lot younger. Another local boy, and a Catholic Memorial alum along with Minutemen Gerry Cahill, Tiger Holland and Keith O'Connell, the Weymouth native will be the anchor in the Bruins net for years to come.

So, wasn't that enlightening? Aren't you the better for it now? Well, at least, I'm relatively the happy man for it because this column's finished. In my opinion, this is a good trade, because it makes room for possible free agents in the future like... Amonte.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

In a Celebration of International Women's Day

- Everywoman's Center -
- Women's Studies -

FREE FREE FREE

&

"Something Every Friday" presents

Sister Song '97

featuring vocalist
Semenya McCord
with
Onawumi Jean Moss/Storyteller
Ellen Powell/bass
Abby Rabinovitz/flute
Lorena Marmer/vocals
Claire Arenius/drums
Yasko Kubota/piano

Also featuring The UMass Female acapella group "Meanwhile"

Friday, March 7, 1997
Student Union Ballroom
University of Massachusetts
FREE 8:00pm FREE
FREE

"the Preacher's Wife" to follow performance

WASHINGTON HOUSTON
The Preacher's Wife

Tonight

Retro Night

Music of the 70's and 80's

Weekly Drink Specials

16oz. Red Dog Drafts	1.50
16oz. Jim Beam & Coke	2.00
16oz. Vodka and Orange Juice	2.00
12oz. Bottles of Rolling Rock	1.50

NEW HOURS
1/2 Price Appetizers & Nachos
3-5 pm Wed-Sat 7-11 pm

No Cover Charge

THE PUB

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE

50% Off!!

Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.

Free Info Session
Wednesday, March 5th
7:00pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst

Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover

Ship Aboard A Cruise Line

1-800-U-CAN-MIX

Act Now! Space is Limited!!

QB Manning to decide on football draft

By Tom Sharp
Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Peyton Manning, by far the best professional prospect among college quarterbacks, will announce today whether he intends to return to Tennessee or enter the NFL draft.

Manning, son of former NFL and Mississippi quarterback Archie Manning, said yesterday he will announce his decision in a 1:30 p.m. EST news conference on the Tennessee campus.

If he comes out, Manning is likely to be the first pick in the April 19 draft, either by the New York Jets, who have that choice, or in a deal with a team like Atlanta or New Orleans, which covet him.

Indications are it would be the Jets.

The other likely number one is offensive tackle Orlando Pace of Ohio State. Jets coach Bill Parcells has indicated he is satisfied with left tackle Jumbo Elliott, whom he coached with the New York Giants.

Manning did not have to declare his intention to enter the draft on Jan. 10, the deadline for most undergraduates, because he is scheduled to graduate this spring. That gives him until April 4 to make himself eligible for the draft.

Manning holds Tennessee records for career passing yardage, touchdowns, completions, attempts, completion percentage and numeroua single-season marks. He has been mum about his plans since the Vols' 48-28 victory over Northwestern in the Citrus Bowl on New Year's Day.

"I don't have to rush," Manning said after the season. "I want to take my time. I feel I've earned the right to take my time, research it and make the best decision possible."

Archie Manning, former Mississippi and New Orleans Saints quarterback, has fielded most media calls for his son over the last two months. Archie has said even he wasn't sure what his son intended to do.

"I don't want to be the center of this, or even the up-front person," he said in early January. "But it's important to keep some of the pressure off Peyton."

Archie said he provided his son with a package of information to study on agents and salary caps.

Only one other college quarterback, Jim Druckenmiller of Virginia Tech, is considered a first-round prospect. Danny Wuerffel, the Heisman Trophy winner from Florida, is projected at this point to go around the fourth or fifth round.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

FOR RENT

Excellent 4 bedroom/2 bath apt. on bus line. Beginning 6/1/97. Call 253-6301 4 info

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Volkswagon GTI $400 or B/O. Call Kelly @ 253-7096

1987 Chevy S10 Pickup standard, 4-speed, 4 cyl. 126K, runs and drives. Part or restora $1500 or B/O. Call 549-8347

1993 Saturn 4-door, 5-speed, no A/C, airbag, CD, power roof, ABS, 115K, excellent condition, $5500 or B/O. 545-1408 or 967-3738

1990 Honda CRX Si standard, new tires, red, moon roof, 83K miles, $5500 or B/O. Call Darsk at 549-9766

1987 Jeep Wrangler black, nice tires/rims. Very reliable. Runs great $3000 or B/O. Call 256 1080

1988 Ford Escort 5-speed, A/C, 119K, runs well. $1900 or B/O. 533-8413

EMPLOYMENT

Drivers Wanted College students, anyone to sell Good Humor Ice Cream from one of our vending trucks. Work outdoors this summer. Be your own boss. Rts available in your area. Earn $750-$50 weekly. Male or female. Apply now Call! Call Mon-Sat 9sm-3pm daily (203)366-2641

Camp Sloane YMCA, Lakeville, CT. In search of energetic counselors and supervisors for an unforgettable

EMPLOYMENT

outdoor summer experience. To set up an interview On Campus March 11, call Sharon Brown @ (800)645-9367

Temporary Positions Available
During Spring Break
Hadley Office/ On bus line
Earn up to $350
Evening Shifts Available
Also hiring for summer
Call now 584-0215
Ask for Mr Barri

Camp Canadensis, Pocono Mts. Pennsylvania. Excellent residential co-ed summer camp. Caring counselors to teach Video, Photography, Newspaper, Yesrbook, Dreme, Music and more! Great salaries 6/21/97-8/18/97 Call (800)572-6228 for an application

B.M. Enterprises
PT Positions in Customer Service Dept
Sales, Service, Delivery
Must have car
M-F 4pm-9pm, Sat-Sun 10am-4pm
Up to $400 per week
Call 584-7698 Ask for Mr. Cavanaugh
Tues. and Wed. only
10am-4pm

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT. Work in America's National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3624 ext. N50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

Belchertown Recreation Dept. Seeking swim coaches (May-July) Experiance preferred- M-F, EOE.

EMPLOYMENT

ADA: Call Beth, Day (413)323-0419 Night (413)967-4651

National Parks Hiring Plus Forest, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting Companies Up to $12/hour. Nationwide Openings Call (919)918-7767 ext. R180

MAKE SUMMER MEMORIES
JOBS AVAILABLE
TOP NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP
INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS
MARCH 11th
Positions Available: basketball, softball, roller hockey, tennis, lacrosse, swimming(WSI), sailing(WSI), water skiing, arts and crafts (ceramics, sawing, scenery, woodworking, photography, fine arts), science and nature, pioneering, ropes course and climbing wall, archery, gymnastics, dreme, music, horseback riding, and general counselors
MUST BE ENTHUSIASTIC AND LOVE WORKING WITH CHILDREN AND ADULTS!!!
PLEASE CALL TO SET UP AN INTERVIEW
TRAIL'S END CAMP (800)408-1404
(ASK FOR MARC)

Do You Love Kids? Top Northeast Residential Camps seek Activity and Cabin Specialists to live and work with kids ages 7-16. Great facilities, dynamic staff! Flexible, diverse programming in all Water/Land Sports, Creative and Performing Arts, plus full range of outdoors/experiential activities. Lots of positions available. Contact Andy at Staff Search, (800)544-5448 for more information/application. Interviewing in Amherst, March 10-11

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Camp Positions in upstate New York. Camp Hilltop is seeking caring counselors with skills in swimming, water and land sports, A&C, horses, dance, music, mountain biking, riflery, archery, computers, thigh/low ropes. Competitive salaries. (800)782-5319

FUN! FRIENDLY! Co-ed Summer Camp in the Berkshires seeks new staff. Welcoming and supportive environment. Positions include: General Bunk Counselors, Heads and Instructors for Swimming, Sailing, Water-skiing, Baseball/Softball, Golf, Gymnastics, Lacrosse, Hockey, Archery, Soccer, Music, Pottery, Tennis, Horseback and more. Day Off accessibility to Boston, New York, Montreal. Call Today! Camp Schodack (800)851-1164, E-Mail Schodack@aol.com

Camp Blue Ridge A Co-ed overnight camp 2 hours north of Atlanta, is looking for enthusiastic counselors. We are hiring lifeguards and WSI, as well as specialists in all sports, water skiing, rappelling, hiking, arts and crafts, rifflary and archery. For info. contact Debre at 665-8463

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT- (How would you like to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, and get paid? Call (206)971-3554 ext. C50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group., 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

College Kids Welcome to Cape Cod 15 bedroom homes for the season. Reasonable rates. Honey Sperco (508)398-9367, (508)394-2857

1 bedroom in a 3 bedroom apt. Fulton Village. On major bus route. 5 min. from campus/10 min. walking distance. Electric not included. $275/month. Lease ends 8/97. Starts ASAP. Please call Larry 545-0198

Felham 2 bedroom Mobile Home Gas, heat. No pets. First, last and security. $500/month. 253-5413

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-8000

FOR SALE

New Large Dorm Fridge Price negotiable. Also snowboard with bindings. Call 253-9965

FOUND

A Watch Friday night at 21 Hobart. Contact 253-6679 w/ a description.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

To the sexiest guy at The Sub: Have a great birthday and don't feel old-

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

I love you with or without AARP! Love, Tracey
P.S. Myrt thinks you are sexy too!

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Three private 1/2 hour lessons, $69.95. Call (413)732-8817 in Amherst Tues. and Thurs. eve.

LOST

Gold Bracelet Name and date engraved. Sentimental value. 546-1699

MISCELLANEOUS

SEEKING FINANCIAL AID? Get the system to help find FREE MONEY FOR COLLEGE! Detailed profiles on 200,000+ individual rewards from private and public sectors. Call Student Financial Services (800)472-3575 ext. FS0017 (We are a research and publishing company)

Gorillagrams
Birthdays, Anniversaries, Roses, Balloons, etc. Send the Crazy Gorilla We'll go anywhere, anytime. Student Rates. Call 256-0287

ROOM WANTED

Wanted: House or Apartment 4-6 bedrooms near campus for Fall '97. Call Tracey 549-7461 or Deb 549-5983

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Spring Break- Still not to late. Lowest prices. Jamaica, Cancun Bahamas, Panama City. Contact Matt 253-5473

Caribbean/Mexico $169 R/T Europe $169 O/W. Fly the world dirt cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL 587-9001

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $150/week. (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Tutor for CmpSci 401 (501) Please call Greg 549-8969

Everybody's Favorite

THE COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00
min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5

Film — The UMass Objectivist Club will show a videotaped interview with Dr. Leonard Peikoff, a leading authority on Ayn Rand's philosophy on Objectivism, at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 911. New members, Five College students and community members welcome.

Film — The Student Union and Visual Performing Arts Space will feature a film on Frida Kahlo at 4:30 p.m. Explore the various "faces" of art throughout history in a cross-cultural context. Classes are welcome.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold this week's meeting at 7 p.m. downstairs in the Campus Center, room 162. Anyone who appreciates or writes poetry is welcome. New members are always welcome. For more information, contact Tim at 546-0562 or Kaye at 546-1459.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hod its third meeting of the spring semester in Room 304 of University Health Services from 5:30-6:30 p.m. All are welcome to attend.

Film — Latcho Drom ("Safe Journey"), a sound and image symphony depicting the nomadic culture of the Roma (Gypsy) people. The Multicultural Film Festival will screen the film at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Auditorium, room 231.

THURSDAY, MARCH 6

Lecture — Barbara Rheinhold, director of the Career Development Office at Smith College presents "Out in the Workplace: To Be or Not to Be." The event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, wheelchair accessible. Sponsored by the UMass Stonewall Center.

Lecture — "Math and the Cold War — Russian Style" presented by General Alexei Farfel, Ret., will be held at 11:15 a.m. in Room 121, Lederele Graduate Research Tower.

Meeting — Kesher, Hillel's Reform group, is having its first meeting at 6:15 p.m. at the Hillel House. All are welcome. Help us plan upcoming events and brainstorm.

Workshop, discussion — Are you graduating and/or looking for a job or internship and have a disability? Are you worried about disclosing your disability? The Peer Mentor Network along with Disability Services and Learning Disabled Support Services are presenting a workshop on "Disclosure: What to do?" from 6-8 p.m. in the Campus Center. Please join the PMN, D.S., LDSS and the campus community for a roundtable discussion on disclosure. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

FRIDAY, MARCH 7

Conference — The University of Massachusetts Baha'i Club will sponsor a two-day conference on "Foundations of Racial Unity," starting today at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 1009, and continued tomorrow from 11 a.m.–6:30 p.m. Keynote speakers will be Dr. Robert Henderson and Dr. Joy D. Leary. All are welcome. Free to Five College students, $10 all others.

Religious — The UMass Hillel House will hold a Shabbat Service led by USY Reunion Group at 6 p.m. All welcome.

NOTICES

Elections — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the elections for the positions of President, Student Trustee and all local Area Government will be held on March 11 and 12 from 11 a.m.–2 p.m and 4:30–7 p.m. Locations to be announced.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one-acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at 413-323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Band wanted — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently seeking a four piece band for the spring production of Fame. The band must include: keyboard, guitar, bass, and drums. Great publicity possibilities. For more information call Heather at 549-3681 or Justin at 546-0460.

Coffee Shop — Student Valley Productions is holding a Coffee Shop in April. They are looking for any talent coming from the Five College area in music, songs, poetry, skits, comedy, etc. For more information, call Daisy at 253-6514.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web begining March 3 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester. A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

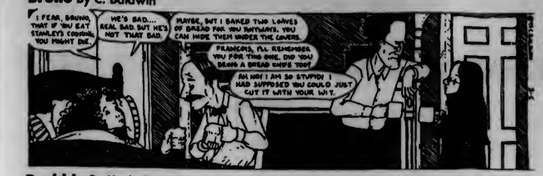
Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

PMs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PM, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:



HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN/Headline News
25	BET
26	BET on Jazz
27	UCTV
28	The Learning Channel
29	TV Land
30	Comedy Central
32	Much Music

Bueno Y Sano
1 Boltwood Walk in Amherst

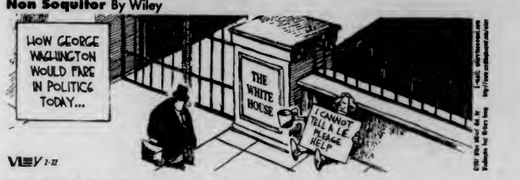
Bueno Y Sano
Pick-up
253-4000

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Social Norm By Mr. K

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University² By Frank Cho

Speedy² By Todd Hartzler

Today's D.C. Menu Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Chicken	Roast Pork
Hot Corned Beef	Turkey Divan
Ravioli/Sauce	Hot & Spicy Veg. Pasta
Vegan Ravioli	Pastabilities

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Chicken	Rost Pork
Fettuccini/Sauce	Cheese Spinach Strudel
Tomato Meat Sauce	Korean BBQ Tofu
Vegetable Lo Mein	Pastabilities

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger	Roast Pork
Chicken Cutlet	Turkey Divan
Mac. & Cheese

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Chicken	Roast Pork
Fettuccini/Sauce	Turkey Divan
Ratatouille	Hot & Spicy Veg. Pasta
	Pastabilities

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Leold (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

I just got out of history class. I don't understand it.

The ancient Greeks said, "Perfect the mind and body." The modern Greeks say, "Hey let's open a restaurant."

The ancient Romans said, "I came, I saw, I conquered." The modern Romans say, "Let's design shoes and pinch girls."

The ancient Hebrews said, "Let my people go." The modern Hebrews say, "Keep those people here."

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Setting lofty goals ensures that you'll make great achievements. Plan a course of higher education to further a career goal. Focusing your eyes on the prize makes things happen more quickly.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
A vacation could provide an opportunity to develop a new talent. Don't be afraid to ask for input from others if you're not sure what something means. Ambition in the workplace leads to rewards.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
A good friend helps you achieve a goal that seemed impossible before. Thank them in a special way. If you're planning to try something new, make sure you have all the paperwork in order before consulting a professional.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Rehearsing your plans to advance helps you make a strong presentation. You'll reap the rewards later—meanwhile, just ...ask in the approval. Spending quiet time ensures your batteries will be recharged.

LEO
July 23-August 23
A promising romance could continue to go your way, with the proper care and attention. Don't hesitate, or you could break your momentum. An active weekend provides ample opportunity to socialize.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Early in the week, try to get preparations out of the way for a holiday event. A testy sweetheart may be feeling neglected. Patience and TLC will ease the situation.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Planning for a major purchase could be monopolizing your attention—be sure not to ignore other areas. It's central to maintain balance throughout your life, especially now.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Changes that have been happening at breakneck speed probably seem normal to you. Spend time with someone dear to you, to revitalize and refresh yourself. A passionate interlude is its own reward.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Asking for guidance from a wise person could be the step that alters your outlook in the long run, so don't be afraid to seek help. Open your mind to new possibilities, and you could experience an epiphany.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Pay close attention to your hunches—they could be valuable sources of information on what to do next. You'll learn more from watching a person do something than you will from their explanations, so pay attention.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A frazzled feeling may mean that you're experiencing holiday overload. Try to find a quiet corner—then, don't permit anyone or anything to disturb you for a reasonable amount of time.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Taking care to watch your vitamins and get enough sleep will help you stay in the holiday spirit and keep you healthy. Visiting with close friends proves to be more fun & less expensive than elaborate plans.

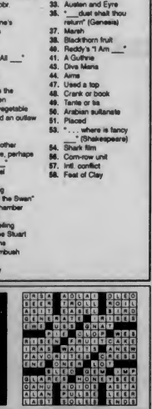
For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

3-5

Hoping to instill more pride in academics, Oakfield High devised report card T-shirts.

Quote of the Day



"No day but today."

–Mimi, RENT

ACROSS
1. Setting for La Dolce Vita
5. Call on
10. Maura Kea's alma mater
14. Word of agreement
15. Japanese city
16. SSS classification (2 words)
17. Gourmet cheese variety
18. Pool shifters
20. Dour
21. Artifice
22. Actor Williams
23. Sir's companion
25. "___ Make a Deal"
27. Farm group
29. Ladled receptacles
32. "Bonanza" star Greene
33. Court figure
34. Big bird
36. Nobelist Wiesel
37. Stooges
38. Lohengrin prop
39. Great Scale note
40. Forty___
41. Aware
42. Repeat performances
44. Tout de suite!
45. Iowa State city
46. First name in fashion
47. Steps: Italian
50. Hodgepodge
52. After JFK
56. Cool Hand Luke star
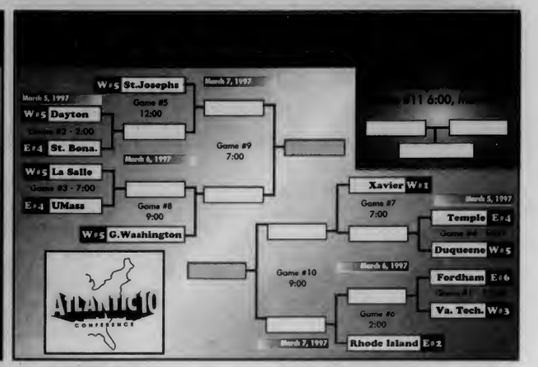
58. Where Pinsey worked
59. Jimmy Carter's alma mater: abbr.
60. Expect
61. Had at one's fingertips
62. Serves
63. Peels
64. "Against All ___"

DOWN
1. Emulates the Merry Men
2. Gumbo vegetable
3. She loved an outlaw
4. View
5. Toms
6. Horus' mother
7. Will locals, perhaps
8. "I Like ___"
9. Price label
10. Scratchy
11. Regarding
12. "___ and the Swan"
13. Baking chamber
19. Absolute
21. Hit the ceiling
24. Last of the Stuart sovereigns
25. Lies in ambush
26. Amor
27. Jocularity
28. Actress Esther
29. ___ and Caicos Islands
30. Vermont's locale
31. Stylish
33. Austen and Eyre
35. "___ dust shall thou return" (Genesis)
37. Marsh
38. Blackthorn fruit
40. Reddy's "I Am ___"
41. A Guthrie
43. Diva Maria
44. Aims
47. Used a tap
48. Crank or book
49. Tante or tia
50. Arabian sultanate
51. Placed
53. "___ where is fancy ___?" (Shakespeare)
54. Shark film
56. Corn-row unit
57. Intl. conflict
58. Feat of Clay

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

SPORTS

Wednesday, March 5, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian



UM face LaSalle in A–10's tonight

Rookie of the Year
Donnie Carr, G
LaSalle

Player of the Year
Marc Jackson, C
Temple

Coach of the Year
Phil A...
St.

UM faces new challenges to reach A-10 finals

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — The road to the Atlantic 10 championship begins tonight for the Massachusetts men's basketball team, as they face West No. 6 seed LaSalle in the first round at the CoreStates Spectrum at 7:00 p.m. If the Minutemen should take home the tourney trophy and it's accompanying automatic NCAA berth, they will have to win four games in four days. However, before the Minutemen look ahead, they will first have to focus their attention on the Explorers. The last time two squads met in January, UMass escaped with a 56–50 victory.

"They got the leading scorer in the conference [Donnie Carr] and they have real good guards, they really play that zone," UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "It's almost like playing Temple again, although they don't have Mark Jackson and Lamont Barnes. We've got to contain their guards, and we've got to attack the zone."

If last weekend's 59–53 win over Temple and its infamous zone is any indicator, the Minutemen should be comfortable e-ploiting the Explorers defense. In Saturday's win, UMass capitalized on a superb inside–outside game. Carmelo Travieso lit up the board with 15 points from behind the three–point line, while Lari Ketner banged down low for 12 points.

In year's past, the Maroon and White have entered the conference tourney unafraid. Their basic philosophy was like that of an ancient epic, "We came, we saw, we conquered." According to Flint, things are different this time around.

"Obviously we went into the last four tournaments thinking OK, let's just go into the A-10 tournament and then go on to the NCAA's because we didn't feel as though anyone could beat us," Chuckling, Flint continued. "I know that's kind of cocky, but when you have the kind of guys that we had you could do that.

"The league has gotten a lot better since then. [In past years], our thought of it was, the only teams that could beat us in the Atlantic 10 was Temple," Flint said.

"That thought pattern is a lot different now because, hey, that's why we have a chance to get five teams in the NCAA tournament. Now you go into the tournament and it's a toss–up. Anybody can win. Even though St. Joe's and Xavier are the favorites, you have seen how close all the games have been the entire season, and how guys have played each other. Now, a lot of people are away from their homecourts and it's a little bit different," Flint said.

Should the Minutemen dispose of LaSalle tonight, they will face George Washington, (who earned a first–round bye as the No. 2 in the West), tomorrow evening at 9 p.m.

A-10 Notes...

Rashid Bey of St. Joseph's was named Player of the Week in the final week of A–10 play. LaSalle's Donnie Carr was named Rookie of the Week, breaking his own freshman single scoring record last week.

Chris Cesnek - Collegian

Edgar Padilla and the UMass men's hoop team starts defense of their A–10 tournament title tonight against LaSalle.

Pittsburgh disses Johnston; The upside of "The Trade"

Yes! Today, I am a relatively happy man.

"Why, oh wise, Wookie–esque one?," you might ask.

Well, the Pittsburgh Penguins management finally realized that Humpty Dumpty, I mean, Eddie Johnston, was not the coach for them, and dumped his sorry butt off the bench. GM Craig Patrick will take over the coaching duties for the rest of the season, and hopefully get the Pens off of their recent losing skid, losing eight of their last nine games.

"But why are you so bitter, oh Ostensible Outcast of the hockey gods?," you might ask.

Well, it just pains me to think that with the caliber of talent the Pens boast (and no, just due to highlighting overkill, I will not list their team for you), they can be behind the Buffalo Sabres in the Northeast Division standings. Just with this fact, and for all those Sabre–rattlers out there, you have to give Buffalo coach Ted Nolan a new contract. Flat out.

The team just does not play good, sound fundamental hockey. With the caliber of talent the Pens boast, the only person the responsibility of good, sound hockey can fall on is the head coach. The coach has to motivate his players, no matter how good they're supposed to be, or who you're best friends with (i.e. Mario Lemieux), and especially in our day and age, no matter how much money they make.

Come on, three players behind your goal on a power play? Get freakin' real, please. I mean, relatively speaking, Bruins coach Steve Kasper should have been dumped a long time ago, with the much more glaring mistakes that have been committed by his team thls season.

And now, Johnston has gone the way of ex–Red Sox GM Lou Gorman, and has been given that no–mind job somewhere in the management office. Hey, look out! You might just find Johnston handing out the donuts in the media room before games. No, I will not go to Jim Schoenfeld– esque lows, and tell him to have another donut, you...

• The playoff race in both conferences are pretty damn tight right now, and the bubble is about to burst. But the surprising team of the Western Conference does not lie in the warm Southwest of our land (i.e. Phoenix), but in the butt–ugly, windy cold of the northern Midwest — the Chicago Blackhawks.

JORMA KANSANEN ON THE NHL

Turn to NHL, page 9

Men's lacrosse aims for NCAA's

Team expects to rebound after missing '96 tournament

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Last year, the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team sat at Rafters watching the selection show for the NCAA tournament. When UMass' name was not among the 12 tabbed for postseason play, the emotion from the players was evident. Some more in disbelief, some were angry, but all were disappointed.

MEN'S LAX
SEASON PREVIEW

This Saturday, the 1997 version of the Minutemen will start its season in hopes of returning to the NCAA tourney.

"I tried to tell the guys not to think of it as revenge. Let's do it for ourselves," UMass Coach Greg Cannella said. "In doing so, we'll prove to everybody what kind of team we are."

If UMass is to make a return to the tournament, it will rely on the experience of its veterans. That won't be a problem for the Minutemen, who welcome back 10 seniors and as many juniors.

Whether opponents start with the UMass front line or the goal, the scouting reports will read the word experience. Senior Breendan Glass will be the leader of the Minuteman attack, while junior goalie John Kasselakis will anchor the UMass defense from his spot in front of the cage.

"We have a large group of seniors that have provided discipline and leadership," Cannella said. "It is Glass who will get the most attention from opponents."

The two time honorable mention All–American has led the team in goals in each of his three seasons, tallying 33 goals and adding 15 assists as a junior last year. That assist total was three more than the previous years combined, a result of opponent's double and even triple teams.

"What I've seen from him over his four years here has only been hard work," Cannella said. "I think he's probably one of the best attack men in the country because of his work ethic."

Glass will be joined on the attack by senior Ken Sussi, junior Chris Martens and sophomores Mike McKeefrey and John O'Connor. O'Connor is a transfer from St. John's, who came to UMass after the Red Storm dropped its lacrosse program. He will likely be called on to fill the big shoes left by Buddy Hoffman, who scored 25 goals from the crease last year.

The Minutemen have the advantage of not only attack leader in Glass, but in an experienced core in the mid–field as well.

Senior Jim Kennedy, the top returning scorer in the mid– field, had a breakthrough season last year after switching from defensive–mid field.

Jay Robbins, also a senior, is another who lends valuable experience to the UMass squad. The Minutemen's leading face–off man will literally go head to head with opponents for the third straight year.

Fellow seniors Casey Costello, returning as the team's fifth leading scorer, and Chris Gronde, will also be mainstays in the UMass mid–field. Mike Del Percio and Jay Negus also return to boost the Minutemen.

After short stick defense, Todd Swokolowski and P.G. Massey will be counted on to key the transition game, while long stick middies Chris Robbins and Eric Sopracasa will be looked on to fill the spot left by All–American Dennis Kelly.

At close defense, three starters return for the Minutemen. Greg Macdonald, All–American candidate Harold Drumm, and Adam Waxer, who converted from defensive mid–field, will shoulder UMass's defensive duties.

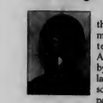
All–American candidate Kasselakis brings a wealth of experience to the goal. The junior played every game last year, and finished eighth in the nation in goals against average (9.52).

"Experience means a lot," Cannella said. "He's a real leader in the cage. You have a quarterback on offense, he's our quarterback on defense."

The Minutemen will need that strength and experience as they enter what could be their most challenging schedule ever.

Seven 1996 NCAA teams — two final four squads — are on the UMass path.

"Anybody on our schedule can beat us," Cannella said. "We have to come prepared for every game."



Courtesy Media Relations

Greg MacDonald and the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team hopes to he NCAA bound by the end of the season.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 96 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Thursday, March 6, 1997

One down, three to go

Lari Ketner and the Massachusetts men's basketball team opened up A–10 tourney play by beating LaSalle last night. For the scoop (See Sports, page 16).

Reggae Rebels set to rock UMass

The Black Rebels and Loose Caboose are bringing their reggae music to the Student Union tonight and Arts & Living has the full scoop (See Arts & Living, page 6).

WORLD

Unrest in Albania causes violence

SARANDA, Albania (AP) — Government jets bombed a southern town yesterday and anti–government militants commandeered tanks and fired off anti–aircraft guns as weeks of unrest erupted into an armed revolt in southern Albania.

The two sides fired at each other across a river east of Vlora, the city at the center of the conflict. Albania's foreign minister, meanwhile, acknowledged that the situation in Vlora, Saranda and Delvina was "out of control."

Yesterday's bombing near Saranda and a major security operation launched by the government reflected President Sali Berisha's determination to quickly end the growing insurrection.

At least five T–55 tanks and half a dozen armored personnel carriers manned a checkpoint yesterday near Fieri, 35 miles south of Tirana. Other government checkpoints also were set up.

In Rome, Italian Foreign Minister Lamberto Dini said his Albanian counterpart, Tritan Shehu, told him the insurgents had captured three tanks and many other weapons and aim to seize Tirana, the capital.

NATION

Cronkite dismayed by Religious Right

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter Cronkite, whose balanced delivery of the news made him a fixture in American homes and a cornerstone of journalism, cast impartiality aside to write a fund–raising letter attacking the religious right.

The retired broadcaster, who for two decades anchored the CBS Evening News, singled out the Christian Coalition's Pat Robertson and Ralph Reed for "wrapping their harsh right wing views in the banner of religious faith."

"My principal thrust here," Cronkite said in a telephone interview yesterday, "is to try to help establish that they do not speak for what I believe is the majority of Christians in the country."

A Christian Coalition spokeswoman said Cronkite was entitled to his opinion.

Response to the letter, sent to 400,000 homes last week as part of a fund solicitation by the Interfaith Alliance, has been strong. Alliance spokesman Jon Paone said more than $100,000 had been received in just over one week.

As a journalist, Cronkite wrote, he often had strong opinions but, "I tried not to communicate them to my audience."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 25	HIGH: 45 LOW: 30	HIGH: 40 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds.....page 14
Comics.....page 15
Crossword.....page 14
Editorial.....page 4
Personals.....page 14
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 16

Over 1,000 students rally outside of Goodell in support of protestors

By Bryan Schwartzman
& Roghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

Early yesterday morning, a class on the University of Massachusetts campus began apprehensively, with many students unsure of what would happen at 10:30 a.m. The feelings of the students turned from apprehension to action when a student in this small class said "I don't know what the rally is about, I'm here to learn."

According to junior journalism major Chris Seaman, the events described above incited his class so much that the teaching assistant from the class brought them to the rally. On the way to Goodell, Seaman said, the students encouraged a large percentage of 300 students in a nearby lecture hall to join them.

Students from Seaman's class joined with more than 1000 other students and assembled in front of the Goodell Building while music from loud speakers blared music by Bob Marley. According to many of the students at the walkout, they came to show support for the efforts of the more than 200 students holed up inside for the past three days.

According to many of the protest participants and negotiators who addressed the crowd for much of the day, the large student turnout helped boost the morale of the students inside Goodell.

Shortly after the organizers started their speeches to rally support for the protestors, a large contingent of students from the neighboring Five–College community were met with loud cheers.

The contingent consisted of students from Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke and Smith colleges who declared immediately their solidarity with the efforts of the students at UMass.

"Multiculturalism and issues of racism and economics are important to me," said Amy Armstrong, a junior studio art major at Smith. "I couldn't just sit in class. I think that the UMass students have guts [for taking this action]."

A microphone and podium were set up on the steps of Goodell accommodating a wide array of speakers. During the course of the day, students used the mics to let the crowd know of the efforts of UMass–Dartmouth and the interest of the media in the events unfolding on campus.

Amidst reports of radio stations and news organization inquiries into the demands of the students, Tariye Isoun, a former UMass student who is currently attending Amherst College took the mic and said that her parents, who live in Nigeria, called to ask her about the takeover at UMass.

Many of the protestors were angry about the inadequate coverage in both the New York Times and the Boston Globe. Students stood at the podium holding up copies of the papers pointing to the small amount of space devoted to the protest.

In addition, a theme that was repeatedly emphasized throughout the day was the feeling that the demands affected all students regardless of economic background or ethnicity.

"They [the students] are fighting for everyone's rights. It is not just their job, it is our job as well," said senior STEPC major Sandra Wechsler. "Because the doors are locked [to Goodell]. We need to [be out here to] show support where we can."

Three faculty members of the women's studies department stood up to address the crowd. They stressed the importance of collective action — a united effort among students at UMass, the faculty and the Five–College community.

They asked teaching assistants to come into Goodell to tutor the protestors inside. Late yesterday a letter from the director of the women's studies department was sent to the Collegian and is printed in the letters to the editor section.

"This is a state university and it should be our university," said David Nunez, a graduating senior who was involved with the ALANA students protests in 1992.

"[Being here] is about supporting those who are being oppressed by this institution," said junior Anne Mcbride of Mount Holyoke.

Jennifer Bitras / Collegian

Tilda Kapuya, junior, was one of the many Mount Holyoke students to join the rally in front of Goodell yesterday.

Administration believes they are making headway

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Amidst student allegations of an inactive Administration, Deputy Chancellor Marcellette G. Williams said, yesterday, that the administrators are working hard to meet the demands of the student protestors.

"We were here at 7:30 a.m. today and worked last night [Tuesday] until 11 p.m. We are trying to hear the students' disappointments with what we brought over yesterday and draft a new document," Williams said.

Williams was referring to the administration's first response to the student protesters' list of demands, which were printed in yesterday's Massachusetts Daily Collegian. She said that the executive committee of the University of Massachusetts, composed of Provost Patricia H. Crosson, Williams, and all of the vice chancellors, had worked all day yesterday to prepare a new response to the demands, taking into consideration the students' comments on the first response.

According to University Spokesperson Kay Scanlan, University Ombudsperson Bob Ackermann delivered the administration's revised response to the students at Goodell at 8 p.m. last night.

Scanlan said the University administration would not be entering into further negotiations with the students until this morning.

"What I believe the question the students are asking us is 'is diversity a priority to you? If it is, show us,'" Williams said. "We are trying to be responsive to that now."

"These discussions are forcing us to look at and articulate more clearly what our priorities are," Williams said. "Diversity is a high priority for the administration."

Many students, however, expressed disappointment with the University's lack of a formal press statement regarding the protest and the fact that the administration did not meet with the students face to face at all yesterday.

"They have not issued a statement yet, which is ridiculous, No one has bothered to come today, even though 1,000 students walked out of class today," said Stacy Shackford, a sophomore classics major and student government senator.

Students battle elements to support protest efforts

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Standing in the pouring rain, approximately 150 students attended the rally last night to offer continuing support in the ALANA and white student takeover of the Goodell Building, and secondly to kick–off the sleep out. More than 10 tents were set up and close to 50 students said they were staying all night to support the protesters locked in Goodell Building.

Although the rain did not seem to keep supporters away, many student felt that it did stop some students from sleeping outside and staying all night.

"The rain is going to keep some people away — the fence sitters," said Kari Anderson, a junior history major.

Anderson said he was not involved in the protest from the beginning because he was uninformed but over the past few days he had taken time to gather information and ask questions.

"I agree with many of their demands. When the University makes an agreement with students, you expect steps to be taken in five years," said Anderson.

Anderson also commented that as a white male with no economic problems, "I am not fighting for myself. I am fighting for my brothers and sisters who have never had the same opportunities I have."

Graduate astronomy student Brandon Tingley said, "I think the protesters have a lot of valid points. I strongly believe that college for in–state students should be free. It's very hard for people to advance socially and economically after high school if you don't have the money to attend college."

Theresa Bettoncourt and a friend who has been involved with the protest since Tuesday said they bought a $90 tent last night so they could par-

Turn to SLEEP OUT, page 3

Day three: little progress made

Morale inside occupied building remains high due to support

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

With both sides playing the waiting game, little headway was made in the negotiation process surrounding the ALANA and white student takeover of the Goodell Building. The takeover of the Controller's Office in Goodell, which began Monday, moved into its third day.

Students inside Goodell continued to occupy the building as they have for the past three days — peacefully. For them, the day broke from the "norm" when a campus wide student walk–out of classes and rally held in front of the Goodell Building collected almost 1,500 students at its height. Groups from the Five College area also showed a presence. A second rally in support of the takeover is scheduled today, at 11 a.m.

At around 4 p.m. the student negotiators held their second press conference. Negotiator and graduate student Rodina Cave read from the student negotiators' official response.

"Let us make it sufficiently clear that we stand firm in our resolve and will not succumb to the administration's tactics nor will we waiver in the face of adversity. The morale in this building is only increasing. We have an informed sense of purpose and a constantly renewing sense of commitment," Cave said.

Students inside the building said they were overwhelmed by the support shown by the rally. Many gathered around the only window available facing the front of building to shout words of encouragement. The negotiating team were also allowed to exit the building to address the crowd. Many expressed gratitude for the support being shown and asked for aid in providing food, clothing and blankets.

Several of the protestors outside Goodell stayed late into the night in the rain in show of solidarity. At approximately 10 p.m. last night, roughly 150 protestors were still gathered outside of Goodell, and several tents had been set up for the evening as well.

With the Goodell Building officially shut down — no one being allowed inside, and phone lines cut off, the protestors said they anticipate that the food and supplies will soon be cut off. "Soon" seemingly had not yet arrived, since throughout the night food supplies, clothes and toiletries were brought inside in large quantities.

Student negotiators spent yesterday waiting for an official response by the Administration to their refusal of the written response given to them by the Administration Tuesday night. The negotiation team spent most of the day anticipating the response they might receive from the University administration as well as planning their own strategy in the negotiation process.

Ombudsperson Robert Ackermann issued a letter yesterday afternoon, addressed, "To the ALANA students (and their supporters) in Goodell." stating his position in the negotiation process.

"Monday, when the Deputy Chancellor called to ask whether I

Turn to GOODELL, page 11

Jennifer Bitras / Collegian

Play time...
Vicki Williams, an undeclared junior, watched the rally in front of Goodell while her dogs, Chad and Chelsey, played in the grass.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor: Jacob W. Michaels Production Supervisor: Josh Sylvester
Copy Editor: Raghuram Vadarevu Production Staff: Sam Smullin
Photo Technician: Jennifer Jutras Lean Latino

Disability workshops to be held

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

Students with learning, physical, or mental disabilities are invited attend a workshop on March 7 to discuss how they can approach disclosing their disability to employers.

Sponsored by the Peer Mentor Network, the Learning Disability Support Services and Disability Services, the workshop is being done for the second time due to the high praise it received last year from students.

Kregg Strehorn, a graduate assistant and co-facilitator of the workshop, said that this discussion is a "hot topic" for students because so many of them have what are called "hidden disabilities."

Strehorn explained that besides physical and mental disabilities, many are unaware they may have learning disabilities that hinder their study habits and how they are taught.

In addition, Strehorn said that even those students aware of their disabilities do not always take full advantage of the services available on campus or what they can do to help their situation.

Strehorn noted that one false presumption of these individuals is "that when they leave the campus they will leave their disability behind."

The Peer Mentor Network, which consists of about 15-20 graduate and undergraduate volunteers, works to create a community for students, helping them decide which classes to take and how to approach professors.

This event is expected to bring about 30 people in attendance representing a variety of groups including alumni, students and case managers to discuss research and current events articles which pertain to the issue.

The workshop will begin at 6 p.m. and run until 8 p.m. at the Campus Center. Information about the room number of the workshop can be obtained Thursday evening from the Information Desk in the Campus Center..

SGA meeting cancelled last night

Motions were not discussed because of lack of senator turnout

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Last night's Student Government Association (SGA) meeting was adjourned before any motions could be discussed, due to lack of quorum.

Twenty-four senators were present; 26 are needed to reach quorum and conduct a meeting.

Speaker Brian Tirrell, along with members of the SGA ALANA Caucus and various other SGA senators were not present due to the protest in the Goodell Building.

Announcements that did occur before quorum was called included a request by SGA Presidential candidate Sen. Lia Wong (Northeast Residential Area) for all senators to support the protest at Goodell Building and attend the protest after the meeting.

Sens. Wong, Stacy Shackford (Central Residential Area), Stephanie Parenti (Orchard Hill Residential Area) and Emilie Codega (Central Residential Area) were present for this announcement, and then left before quorum was called.

Sen. Philip Milson (Sylvan Residential Area) felt that this was unacceptable, especially for Wong as a presidential candidate.

"I feel it's shameful that leaders of the Student Government Association feel it's necessary to sacrifice their duties in support of a cause that only supports a small percentage of the student body. I feel these senators have the opportunity to do so much more at a [SGA] meeting than at some takeover of a building. That's not how you get things done," said Milson.

Another announcement regarding the lack of knowledge about the upcoming SGA meetings was made, along with the presentation, to the senate, of a petition allegedly signed by 500 undergraduate students.

"I talked to 500 people today and 15 knew about the election," said Chris Gasbarro, President of the UMass Outing Club.

"We need time to get to know the candidates; it's being overshadowed by this Goodell thing," Gasbarro continued, before requesting that the election be postponed by 21 days and the nomination process be reopened.

The petition was rejected by the senate because of various constitutional laws that would prohibit the election to be postponed.

The term of the SGA president begins on April 1.

"It [postponement of the election] can't be done in the easy, expedient way that he wanted," said Ashavan Doyon, Secretary of University Policy.

Candidate debates to be held on UVC

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Two debates featuring students running for the offices of Student Government Association (SGA) President and Student Trustee will be held tomorrow and Monday night, at 7 p.m. in the UVC-TV 19 studio.

Both events are open to the public.

The debates will prelude the SGA elections to be held March 11 and March 12.

Candidates will be asked questions by a panel including representatives from WMUA, UVC and the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

The SGA presidential candidates include Brad Davidson, Brian McManus and Lia H. Wong. R.J. Lemar, Rob McDonald and Brian Tirrell are running for the office of Student Trustee.

Official tickets are not appearing on the ballot, however McManus and Lemar are running as an unofficial ticket, as are McDonald and Wong.

Voting will take place March 11 and March 12 from 11 a.m. – 2 p.m. each day and then will reopen between 4:30 – 7 p.m.

Polling stations for Orchard Hill Residential Area and Central Residential Area students will be located in the Franklin Dining Hall.

Students living in Sylvan and Northeast Residential Areas will be required to vote in Worcester Dining Hall.

Residents of Southwest South (Cance, John Quincy Adams, Pierpont, Moore, Patterson, MacKimmie, Washington and John Adams Residence Halls) will vote in Berkshire Dining Hall, while residents of Southwest North (Thoreau, Coolidge, James, Emerson, Kennedy, Melville, Prince and Crampton Residence Halls) will vote at Hampshire Dining Hall.

Commuter and Greek Area students are required to vote in either the Newman Center or the Hatch.

THERE WILL BE A MANDATORY WOMEN'S MEETING TONIGHT AT 6 P.M. IN THE [illegible] OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER. [illegible] WRITERS MUST ATTEND [illegible] WRITERS ARE WELCOME. [illegible] STORY IDEAS, MOTIVATION AND ENTHUSIASM!

HINDU STUDENTS ORGANIZATION
PRESENTS
"HOLI: THE FESTIVAL OF COLORS"
SUNDAY MARCH 9 2PM
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
FREE ALL ARE WELCOME
PLEASE DRESS APPROPRIATELY FOR THE TRADITIONAL HOLI CEREMONY WITH COLORS
SPECIAL THANKS: SGA, ISA EKTA, NATARAJ DANCERS & THEIR FRIENDS, AND THE ASIAN DANCE & MUSIC PROGRAM
CATERED BY INDIA HOUSE, NOHO
FOR MORE INFORMATION CONTACT ANANT AT 548-9097 OR HINDU@STUAF.UMASS.EDU

In a Celebration of International Women's Day
- Everywoman's Center -
- Women's Studies -
FREE FREE FREE
&
"Something Every Friday" presents
Sister Song '97
featuring vocalist
Semenya McCord
with
Onawumi Jean Moss/Storyteller
Ellen Powell/bass
Abby Rabinovitz/flute
Lorena Marmer/vocals
Claire Arenius/drums
Yasko Kubota/piano
Also featuring The UMass Female acapella group "Meanwhile"
Friday, March 7, 1997
Student Union Ballroom
University of Massachusetts
FREE 8:00pm FREE
FREE
"the Preacher's Wife" to follow performance
WASHINGTON HOUSTON
The Preacher's Wife

UPC is Searching for
The BEST UMASS Band
participate in the
"Battle of the Bands"
April 9th at the Student Union Ballroom
The Winner will Perform at the
Spring Concert May 10, 1997
• • • Exposure to 15,000 Concert Goers • • •
* * * Possible MTV Exposure * * *
• • • Great Competition with other Local Bands • • •
7 Bands Will Be Chosen To Perform
Submissions MUST be in by Wednesday, March 12
Submissions must be made to Jennifer Kenyon, Jennifer Giroux, or Larry Feinberg at the UPC Office - 415 Student Union or call 545-2892

Two SGA candidates attend Hillel forum to debate Jewish issues

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

On Tuesday night, Student Government Association (SGA) candidates were invited to the Hillel House to address the University of Massachusetts Jewish community and entertain questions.

The forum lasted about 45 minutes and was held in the Hillel House lounge.

Brian McManus, SGA presidential candidate, and R.J. Lemar, SGA trustee candidate, who form an unofficial ticket, were the only candidates to attend the forum. The remaining four candidates were involved with the student takeover in Goodell Building.

Jaime Resnick, Hillel President, felt that this was a chance for the candidates to explain how they and SGA in general will support Hillel should they get elected.

"There are many issues being debated at UMass currently, and it's the feeling of many Jewish students that many Jewish needs and concerns have been ignored," Resnick said.

The UMass Hillel board voted to invite the candidates to this forum Tuesday night.

"The issue at hand is that we've had no one advocating on behalf of the Jewish community. The goal [of this forum] is not to discuss campus-wide activities. The goal is to discuss Jewish issues, period," Resnick said.

Candidates were given a list of questions that would be asked addressing such issues as funding for Hillel, anti- Semitic articles in the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, and the role of the Office of Jewish Affairs in the campus community.

Hillel House currently has a yearly budget from the University of $5,000.

"Limited funds received by Hillel House can't be expected to combat what's going on on this campus," Lemar said.

"We need to make sure that the Office of Jewish Affairs gets equal funding. If I do see a budget that is unfair, I will be on the senate floor yelling as loud as I can," McManus said.

McManus claimed that many of the organizations at UMass receive more money because they have friends within the senate.

"SGA is very divided. Politics come into play when they decide who gets what money," McManus said.

About 20 students attended the forum, and were able to ask questions of their own after the formal questions had been answered.

"I think what the issue is how will the SGA be proactive instead of reactive in the future," said Joshua Gray, Hillel Council member.

"To be more proactive we need to be informed. In order to be proactive, we need things like this [forum]," Lemar said.

The Collegian was discussed as continuously containing anti–Semitic columns, and questions were raised as to how the candidates would deal with this within their administration.

"Anti–Semitic articles within the Collegian is a serious problem. The Collegian is a student–run newspaper. The Developing Nations page continually contains anti–Semitic paraphernalia. If I were president, I would personally go down to the Collegian and ask formally to end the page," said McManus.

McManus and Lemar also voiced their opinions on the state of SGA and what needs to be done about the problems within the senate.

"In SGA we've seen a mess of things that should not be tolerated. Concerns that people have need to be brought to our attention," Lemar said.

"I can promise you that when a student comes to me with a problem, I will do my best to make people aware of the problem and lobby senators," McManus said.

Two debates are scheduled between the candidates tomorrow night and March 10. Both debates will be in the UVC studio at 7 p.m.

Student government elections will be held March 11 and March 12.

"Poster War" divides the town of Amherst

A 10 year battle over postering is dividing the local businesses and area residents

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

For over 10 years a "poster war" has created a bitter feud between Amherst residents and business owners who are trying to create a less cluttered atmosphere in the downtown Amherst area.

The town government of Amherst is pledging to create some middle ground to please both sides.

Tomorrow at the Bangs Community Center a group of approximately a dozen people are expected to hold a public meeting to discuss the new opposing measures suggested by Amherst's town government.

John Furbish, who is spearheading this coalition for postering rights and responsibilities, is an ongoing supporter for freedom of speech and expression, especially in college towns.

Some supporters of this pro–poster movement find that posters add to the atmosphere, the democracy and the qualities attributed to Amherst center.

Yet, town officials disagree. The Town Commercial Relations Committee was assigned by the Select Board to execute the 1992 Downtown Action Plan, a collective document from hundreds of community residents. Essentially, this plan calls for the town to "develop and install a comprehensive system of signs, directories and kiosks for the downtown."

For over a decade, this is exactly the plan of action that town manager Barry Del Castillho has advocated. Since entering office, Del Castillho has been vigorously opposed to the posters that have been placed along the downtown streets.

Approximately three years ago Del Castillho, along with other town employees and resident businesses began their own coalition against postering.

According to the Daily Hampshire Gazette, on Nov. 18, 1996, the town of Amherst placed a ban on postering along a 191–foot traverse of downtown space until an official kiosk was erected for public use to display posters and announcements.

According to Robert Brooks, chairman of the TCRC in the Amherst Bulletin, "Kiosks are the most important pedestrian signs in the system and serve many purposes. They display directional signs and maps to help visitors orient themselves and find public services and historical sites."

The first of many kiosks, funded partially by the town of Amherst and cooperating business owners who would like to improve the town's appearance, is planned to be available within the month of March. It will be located on Main Street just outside of the Subway deli.

The ultimate goal of the TCRC is to eventually shift the majority of posters and advertisements from the many various light poles, trash receptacles, and newsrack boxes to the remaining two to three sides of the kiosks.

"All of this will be concentrated on attractive, strategically located, multi–purpose structures," Brooks said. "And downtown Amherst will have charm for all its citizens."

Margo Parrot of the Amherst Bulletin said she thought otherwise. "Posters on lamp posts are as much a part of the charm of Amherst as Emily Dickinson," Parrot said.

Along with the kiosks and the bans are circulating advertisements looking to recruit a group of senior citizen volunteer "unposterers" to likewise enforce town rulings.

For now, the volunteer militia is encouraged to rip down once every two weeks the posters and advertisements that are posted above the streets.

"Clean–up, they say, is more important than free speech or any integrated approach to posters," Furbish said. "The less opposition there is, the more they'll do."

Yet, according to Del Castillho and various town officials, clean up is a priority and a majority decision.

"We're running the town on behalf of the majority," said Amherst selectman Hill Boss. "It's unfortunate that those who are out of step with the consensus don't know when to give up the fight."

$100,000 scholarship fund available for UM students

By Julie Siegal
Collegian Correspondent

Project Vote Smart, a national organization whose main goal is to provide people with access to information on candidates and official elections, is offering up to $100,000 in scholarship funds to University of Massachusetts students.

The funds, which are made available through grants from the Hearst Foundation, have been released by the Project's founding board, which includes former senators Barry Goldwater, George McGovern, Mark Hatfield and Bill Bradley, and other prominent national leaders.

"These scholarships enable University of Massachusetts students to work with interns from colleges across the country for a semester or term, to improve the political climate for everyone," said Ann Yoders, National Internship Coordinator.

"Armed with the computers and phones of our Voter's Self–Defense System, our interns fight political hype every day, by requiring candidates and elected officials to be accountable for their campaign statements and actions while in office," she said.

Yoders said that students from all fields of study at UMass are encouraged to apply for internships at Project Vote Smart this year. Their work at the Project might focus on researching hot current issues, tracking campaign finance donations, gathering campaign issue positions, or compiling voting records and performance evaluations of candidates and elected officials at the federal and state levels. Students serve as researchers on the Voter's Research Hotline (1–800–622–SMART), and maintain and update the Vote Smart Web site (http://www.vote-smart.org).

"We accept students from all over the country," said Elise Senter, a staff member in the Boston office. "The students work for credits and also just to gain experience. They can also match their interests with their work whether it be in computers, public relations, research, or administrative business."

Yoders said, "We are very interested in diversifying our staff to reflect the information needs and demands of the American public. We find it astounding that young citizens are labeled as apathetic and uninterested in government and politics.

"Our interns are the most idealistic, enthusiastic group of people in the country today, and they constantly inspire the rest of us to work harder in our efforts to improve the political climate for everyone," she said.

The Project accepts 40 interns for their office in Corvallis, Ore., and only two to three interns for the Boston office.

Project Vote Smart is a non–partisan, non–profit organization that is funded entirely through foundation grants and the donations of over 50,000 members. Students wanting more information about internship and scholarship opportunities should call Ann Yoders at (541) 754–2746 or e-mail at intern@vote-smart.org.

Daffodil sale to benefit American cancer society

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

Beginning the week of March 18, the American Cancer Society (ACS) will be selling daffodil bouquets to benefit cancer patients and research around the nation.

In order to accommodate the spring break schedule of the University of Massachusetts campus, the ACS will be selling these "flowers of hope" bouquets during the following week of March 24, so that UMass students can take advantage of this renown celebration.

"The ACS has hosted these 'Daffodil Days' for 16 years now," said Noyem Zeroogian, Field Executive in Hampshire and Franklin counties for the ACS. "It's an annual, national project."

The ACS, with over 3,000 active volunteer units, is the largest private funder of cancer research in the United States. In 1995, over 76 percent of the funds allocated throughout the 42 Massachusetts ACS centers were divided among the areas of cancer research, education, and patient services.

Accordjng to Zeroogian, people will be given the chance to buy a bouquet of 10 daffodils for $5.

"For $10, you'll be able to purchase a bouquet and a vase," Zeroogian said.

Vice Chancellor John Feudo and Michele Girard Basora of the Alumni Association endorsed the Daffodil Days project.

"UMass hasn't been involved for several years," Zeroogian said. "You can order flowers as early as March 7 to be delivered to the concourse on March 24."

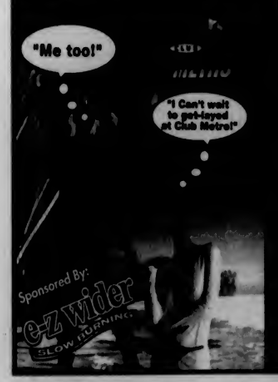
Even if you don't pre–order, flowers will be on sale on the Campus Center concourse March 25–26 for walk up purchase.

Despite the fact that ACS is extending the selling campaign to accommodate UMass, students will not be given the opportunity to participate in their new program. The Gift of Hope, which delivers daffodil bouquets to local patients.

"Only during the week of March 18 will bouquet buyers around the country be able to buy a $10 gift of flowers and vase to be sent anonymously to area cancer patients," Zeroogian said. "Still, it's a great new program."

The American Cancer Society is comprised of over 2.5 million volunteers. With proceeds from fundraisers like Daffodil Days, the ACS is capable of providing related services such as skin cancer screenings, mammograms, and stop smoking workshops.

"Programs like this have raised millions," Zeroogian said. "It's a well received project."



Collegian Graphics reminds you to ... Buy a classified... and ... Eat A Good Breakfast

The Textbook Annex reminds you to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, SOON!
Before Spring Break!
We are beginning to return unsold text books to the publisher.

Something Every Friday Presents
The Preacher's Wife
Thursday, March 6
Student Union Ballroom
8pm & 10pm
FREE
Denzel Washington
Whitney Houston
A PENNY MARSHALL FILM
The Preacher's Wife

Flava Boy Productions
presents
Get-Layed
at Club Metro
Saturday, March 8 • 9pm-2am
Tropical Drink Specials and Giveaways!
18-21: $8 • 21+: $5
I-91 North or South Exit 18 turn Left
1/4 mile up on right above Car Wash
INFO LINE: 413.582.9898
492 Pleasant St. Northampton, MA 01060

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Over ~500~ Microbrews
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines
MICROBREWS
Sam Adams Lager $8.99 12-pack bottles
Ipswich $5.99/six (Ale &Dark Ale)
North Country Brewing $4.99/six (Pale Ale, Stout, Maple Amber)
Pilgrim Ales 64 oz bottle $4.99
Cider Jack Hard Cider $4.99/six Regular & Cranberry
BEER SPECIALS
Busch & Busch Lt 30-pk cans $11.99
Lite 30- pk cans $14.99
Icehouse & Red Dog 12-pack bottles $6.99
Bud Dry case bottles $9.99
Keg Special
1/2 Keg Rolling Rock $45.00
LIQUOR SPECIALS
Captain Morgan $8.99/750 ml Spiced & Coconut
Luksusowa Polish Vodka $9.99/750 ml
Jagermeister $8.99/375 ml
Jack Daniels $11.99/750 ml
Jack Daniels Country Cocktails $3.99/4-pack All flavors
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers - Ice - Mixers - Mini Kegs - Beer Glasses

DAILY COLLEGIAN

The Student Voice Since 1890

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Simsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Yo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life; became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Jeanne Dixon on Goodell

Columnist's note: Hello, readers. You are about to read a humor column about a serious matter. Some of you may have walked by the Goodell rally and off–handedly dismissed it as an ALANA, a single mothers' or grud student issue. If you have, you're missing the point.

Should the rally still be going strong when you read this today, swing by and take a listen. If you hang around for as little as a half–hour. I'm almost certain you'll hear something that applies either to you or someone you know here at the University of Massachusetts.

Don't be the citizen in Hitler's Germany who turned a deaf ear to the cries of his Jewish neighbors being taken away in the night, because ultimately, it will come back to boot you in the...

As for today's piece, it starts right here.

C. Taylor Conner

Shortly before her demise, astrologer Jeanne Dixon pulled off a feat worthy of Nostradamus. The late syndicated columnist actually predicted the Goodell protests — and she documented them day by day. We at the Collegian were lucky enough to obtain a copy of this astounding transcript, printed in excerpts as follows:

Day Four: Chancellor Scott still out of town. Protestors now number 5,000. Prominent campus radio personality first to report dorm walk-out has been announced. Southwest shows up in full force, resulting in many people collapsing from overwhelming CK One fumes. Talks stalled when UMass higher–ups complain about font used for list of demands.

Day 10: Chancellor remains a no show. Number of protestors reaches 10K. Administrators request booze, preferably Beefeater martinis. Southwest contingent more than happy to provide 45s of Colt Ice. Negotiations still at a standstill, as University officials say they believe the word "the" should be omitted from the demand document.

Day 18: As expected, Chancellor is still nowhere to be found. Most Massachusetts school have sent representatives to the rally, boosting the total number of protestors to 150,000. UMass officials begging for stronger poison. To oblige, Central dormitory reps whip out the rolling paper and the blue stuff from Cali. Progress is little in negotiations, as administration refuses to give up any ground until the acronym "ALANA" is changed to "HALANA" to accommodate those scholars of Hungarian descent.

Day 31: MTV arrives on the scene for their hastily planned "Rock 'n' Jock Protest Jam." Administrators tripped out the whole time. Perpetually miffed Harvard–educated Rage Against the Machine headlines, drawing an additional 50,000 to the million–plus already in attendance. "Bulls on Parade" lyric improvisation — "Rally 'round the Goodell/ With a pocket full of demands" — drives the crowd wild. Unfortunately, no negotiations can be held since no one can hear anyone else talk.

Day 40: Rumors of a Scott sighting turn out to be a hoax. New England universities and colleges have broadened their support, raising the protestor tally to over five million. Junkie UMass officials still requesting beefier intoxicants. Butterfield residents take off their belts and sterilize their needles in accordance with the request. Administrative nitpicking in the conference room — this time over the true meaning of "student" in the context of neo–nihilistic existentialism — continues.

Day 69: No Chancellor, no cry. Strung–out University negotiators agree to all demands, asking only for "one more taste" in exchange. Over 10 million protestors rejoice. MTV takes live Rage video out of heavy rotation, prepares to shoot "Rock 'n' Jock Rehab" at the Betty Ford Clinic. To no one's surprise, administrators are the first to sign up.

Day 70: Scott emerges from burrow near Campus Pond, in which he'd been hiding — surviving only on swan feathers and smooth pebbles — for the duration of the rally. The final protest tally is calculated at 11 by the University– hired team of "experts" who had in 1995 surveyed the Million Man March.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

Journalistic junk

'Minority Students Protest at UMass." "UMass Protest Over Diversity Continues For Third Day." "UMass Students Occupy Offices." Blah Blah Blah.

For the last three days, the local and national media have grossly misrepresented the student occupation of the Goodell Building on this campus. Prestigious papers such as the New York Times and Boston Globe and local papers like the Daily Hampshire Gazette have done a cursory job in covering the takeover. Their coverage leaves readers with tidbits of information that ultimately lead to a skewed and cloudy view of reality on this campus.

Mike Burke

The Boston Globe's coverage of the rally and take–over follows in the newspaper's tradition of inadequate and often inaccurate reporting of the University of Massachusetts. Yesterday's Globe failed to mention why the student protesters rejected the Administration's offers. It simply reduced the matter to faceless demands "for more minority students, employees and aid at the campus." It failed to put a human, a student face on the takeover. What about child care?. Admissions? Outreach? Support programs? Maybe the Globe has been spending a bit too much time trying to hack into the University's computers to steal the academic records of the basketball team.

The New York Times, on the other hand, published a brief Associated Press story that underestimated the size of Tuesday's rally, while only making brief mention of the demands for "more racial diversity" before dabbing into a brief history of the 1992 occupation of Whitmore.

The most disappointing example of the print media coverage falls on the back of the Daily Hampshire Gazette. This daily paper serves as a main source of news in the Pioneer Valley. There is no reason for its futile coverage which can be characterized as little more information than a wire story from the Associated Press.

All three newspapers are distorting the truth to suit their needs. Take a look at their headlines trying to focus entirely on the race issue as the main source of tension on campus — "Minority Students Protest at UMass." As anyone that has neared the occupied Goodell Building in recent days could tell you the takeover is not just about race relations but student rights and justice. Unfortunately, the media doesn't want to admit this simple fact.

Minorities are scary, right? And students too. And especially minority students?

Besides distorting the race issue, the print media outlets have overlooked the student side of the conflict. Besides Daniel Lizana and Andrew Susen, the protesters' views have largely been ignored. On the other hand, University Spokesperson Kay Scanlon has appeared all over articles.

How can you accurately cover a student protest without listening to the students?

On Monday, the leaders of the takeover issued a three page list of demands which have been taken severely out of context. When the students refused to accept the Administration's concessions on Tuesday, the Globe simply claimed talks stalled. No protesters' views were taken — just the Administration's. Business as usual.

Fortunately not everyone is relying on the Boston Globe and the Daily Hampshire Gazette for information; while local TV networks as well as Boston's WCVB and WBZ and CNN have been covering the student rallies and protests. The TV coverage may not be perfect but at least it puts a face on the issue.

It is our job as students at the University to relay news as to what is actually occurring at the Goodell Building, especially if we can not rely on the "real" newspapers. Write letters to the editor of these newspapers; talk to friends and family; and most importantly learn to view all news with a critical eye.

Mike Burke is a Collegian columnist.

What about the less privileged?

As students continue to occupy the Goodell building, demanding increased access to higher education for students of color and low income, we must examine the context in which this action is being taken. The University does not exist in a vacuum, and its policies reflect those of the society in which it functions.

Sam McAfee

The purpose of this institution is not to educate you per se, but rather to provide you the tools with which to market your labor power in the economy, an economy which is rapidly transforming.

For the last 15 years, the average real wage (adjusted for inflation) has been steadily declining, as enterprises seek to increase their profitability by laying off more workers. While more and more people are forced to compete for fewer and fewer jobs, investors and CEOs increase their own salaries and bonuses. The stock market breaks a record every month, illustrating the renewed profitability achieved by downsizing.

As the labor market swells with people competing for the remaining jobs, the government cuts programs for the poor and unemployed, and lays off its own workers, perpetuating the competition for jobs and the decline of wages. Since people of color are over represented in low income communities, they suffer in particularly acute measure.

The problem is exacerbated by privatization. The government decreases funding for education, when it is most needed, pitting white students against students of color for rapidly diminishing financial assistance. Cut off from state revenue, the school is forced to cater to big business for its capital needs. The same businesses that have been downsizing now seek lucrative contracts with state institutions in order to further enhance their popularity.

In these and many other ways the University obediently serves the interests of the wealthy and elite. The political action being taken on this campus MUST NOT CEASE with a largely symbolic take over. We must not be satisfied with an' agreement the administration will surely disregard. Alternatively, students should continue to organize for social change on campus, against privatization and [the] exclusion of students of color, within the broader framework of the global economy. There is a bitter struggle ahead and this is only the beginning.

Sam McAfee is a Collegian columnist.

Voice your opinion, electronically! letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu
note: all policies that apply to normal letters to the editor still apply to e-mail letters

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Homemade revolution

The University of Massachusetts has become the site of a struggle — a struggle for the soul of our nation. Those students inside Goodell are warriors, freedom fighters for the cause of democracy and justice. They have occupied the building, in peace, because they have no alternative. The University has not lived up to an agreement they signed five years ago, and today is the last day students will allow this to continue.

As students, we must tell the Administration that we will not be silent and marginalized. As a generation, we must tell the nation that we will fight for the cause of justice. The site of this struggle is our campus; the meaning of this struggle transcends this campus and students. Today, we are dedicating ourselves to the achievement of a society in which class and race are no longer barriers to individual freedom.

Craig O'Connor

We are smashing the color line and burning the class line; we are beginning a revolution, of the heart, mind and structure of our nation.

We will no longer accept a society which rewards those born into a privileged class.

We will no longer stand passive in the torturing ruins of inequality and racism. The many years in which America has violated the purposes to which it was born are over; a new day, a new nation and a new world are being forged inside and outside the walls of Goodell.

Public universities were created in this nation as a means to broaden and make secure the possibilities of democracy. An institution like ours must be a symbol of integrity to a nation which calls itself democratic and just. Our University should be the site of a commitment to overcoming class barriers; it should be the place where all people, regardless of color and place of birth, are welcome. It should stand as an example of the deepest meaning of the word democracy — that the people have the power to fashion and control the society in which they live.

When the students demand that the University should be a certain way, provide certain services and respect everybody's needs, the Administration has a moral duty to listen and respond. The fact that students were compelled to take such an action as the occupation of Goodell demonstrates that the University has not fulfilled this moral purpose. All students, regardless of background and position in society, should rally together, in unity and in support; the struggle being waged is our struggle and the people inside are our brothers and sisters.

This is a moment of creative conflict — we can further the meaning of democracy and destroy the power of injustice by standing with our warriors.

This protest is not happening in a bubble. America is a nation in which many are kept from the dreams they hold merely because they were born with a certain color or into a family without wealth. Over the last 20 years, the average wages for an American worker have dropped by 20 percent; at the same time the productivity of the average worker has increased. That means more people are creating more wealth while receiving fewer wages. Where has this wealth gone?

In the same period of time, the number of millionaires and billionaires have exploded — they are getting rich off of our labor. The stock market has been reaching record highs every week — since the rich put their money where it is safely out of reach of the working people. They are becoming wealthier and more powerful as the rest of us become poorer and marginalized.

The help that low–income people receive is being destroyed by our government in front of our eyes. The story is multiplied for people of color and women. We are a nation of class lines and racial barriers.

The students in Goodell are demanding that the right to an education be extended and secured for the people who are being hurt by our economic system — especially people of color and people from the working classes. The issues involved are not simply issues for students but are related to the deepest meaning of the society we live in.

Lets us come together and declare that America and our University will be free of class and racial discrimination. Let us unite and proclaim that the reign of privilege and inequality is over. With solidarity and collective action we can change our school and our society. Together we can begin a new democratic revolution and create the society of which we all dream.

Craig O'Connor is a UMass student.

Vacationing terrorists

So, you've taken over a building.

Now what?

I mean, you've received media coverage, you've received support from the other campuses in the area, and you've drawn a temporary stalemate with the administration, so I ask the question again.

Now what?

I'll tell you what now.

Bob Dunn

The problem with the protest where it stands now is that it doesn't hurt the university where it counts: the moss, the pocketbook. So I propose a simple plan that, if implemented, will not only draw attention to your particular plight but will draw a much more immediate response because it will cause financial hardship at the same time. Clip and save, future civil revolutionaries!

The first thing any good social terrorist should do is take a nice vacation, in order to relax and formulate a plan of action. The best place for vacation deals right now is inside of Goodell. Many of the protesters have refused to budge until all of their demands are met. Well, seeing as they'll be there for a good long time, several of them probably have plane tickets that they're not using and they'd probably be willing to part with them cheap. I heard that a round trip ticket to Cancun is going for as little as 10 calzones and a copy of Hustler.

Once resident, implement your plan of subtle, social terrorism a step at a time, beginning next semester, and you'll see results by Halloween and no one has to take over a building or miss classes.

One: Organize the undergraduate population to underpay their semester bill by $20. That's all. Just one thin Andy Jackson from every U–grad student next semester will mean approximately $340,000 missing from university coffers. They certainly can't boot out everyone, now can they? The beauty is, if the university does cave in to your demands, you only have to cough up 20 bucks to settle your outstanding debt.

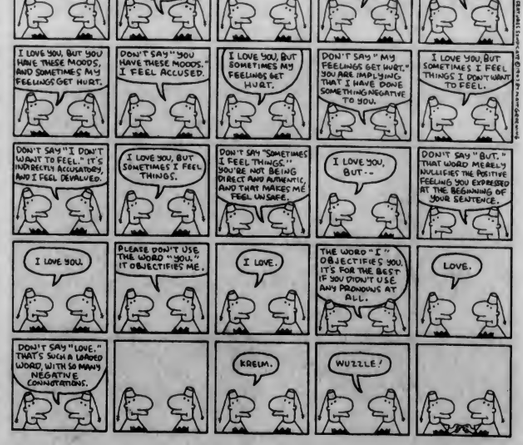
If this seems too big of a task to get off the ground, try to get the incoming freshmen to underpay by 20 and get the outgoing seniors to overpay by the same amount. By the time the entire mess gets figured out, Chancellor David K. Scott would be willing to let Pamela Lee Anderson speak at commencement if it meant everything would be put back to normal.

Two: If the prospect of organizing about 17,000 people into willingly defying the university seems too daunting of a task, remember a smaller statement sometimes speaks louder. Get everyone in IQA to flush all of the toilets at the same time. The resulting mess and increased volume at the water processing plant should attract enough attention to make the powers that be see things your way.

Three: If organizing an entire building seems like too much work, try organizing a floor. Convert your entire dorm floor into a new religious order. Draw up a formative text and make sure that observing your new religion requires the burning of candles, the use of hot plates, the presence of illicit drugs and kegs of beer, loud music and open doors at all times. Once the complaints start rolling in, hide behind your new religion and promise to disband it if and only if all of your demands are met. Cry "persecution!" and let slip the dogs of war.

Four: Remember that protests don't have to be on a grand scale to get things done, either. Simple harassment tactics used in conjunction with a larger protest can be even more effective than one or the other on its own.

For example, what if everyone decided to go to the dining commons for dinner, grab a tray of food and then strategically strip to their ID, making the card unreadable?



— What if everyone decided to take their garbage and deposit it on the Chancellor's lawn until he sees things their way?

What if a large enough group of people decided to have all of their calls forwarded to the Chancellor's office for an entire day?

Tactics like these work because they tick off people who aren't necessarily directly involved with the larger protest. Results tend to come faster if the powers that be receive complaints on several different fronts insted of just one. Sometimes the best way to fight the machine is to slow it down to a dead crawl by pouring sand in it.

Subversive harassment and antagonism in order to get things done are old tactics, but they work. Get the great beast hoping mad enough and they'll usually do what you want in order just to be left alone. Just make sure that you don't engage in harassment simply for harassment's sake. As far as protest goes, sincerity goes even further.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Our Money's Worth

This rally shouldn't be happening.

We should have all been enjoying the nice weather yesterday, sitting on steps and conversing.

We should be in class engaging in intellectual discussions about politics, sciences, mathematics, and other subjects.

We should all be saying, "What's up?" as we pass by each other in the Dining Commons, talking to one another to get our minds off how bad the food is.

Gregory H. Casimir

Basically, we should be trying to do something that our parents worked hard for, hoped for, and even prayed for: to be college students.

However, that all ended when the Administration of the University demonstrated a complete lack of commitment to an agreement made five years ago. Instead, they've forced us to stop our daily college routines to become civil rights fighters. But the thing that annoys me is that we're fighting for the things that made us come to UMass in the first place.

Straight up, we need to get a new brochure!

I'm writing not just as an upset student, but as a dissatisfied customer. Quite frankly, we've been hoodwinked, bamboozled, led astray, and run amuck.

What we're getting is not what's being advertised. The financial aid process is nowhere as smooth a process as was suggested, nor does staff of Whitmore approach students with kindness and courtesy.

"Well, I'm sorry, sir. We can't offer you any more financial aid. I guess you'll have to go home (all the way back to Idaho). Come back next semester when you have the whole $2,000. Good day." Yes sir, service with a smile.

We didn't get into UMass on C.O.D.s; our money had to be paid in advance before they even considered giving us the keys to our dorm rooms. Yet despite the annual increases we're charged, especially as out–of–state students, we continue to pay. But, where are the services that we're paying for; that our parents are paying for?

Whitmore is pulling a Psychic Network scam, and Chancellor Scott is our resident Dionne Warwick. "We see good things in your future: a good financial aid package, excellent academics, and student diversity. That'll be $4,000 the first semester, and $6,000 each additional semester."

What, did they think that once they signed the dotted line we'd be happy and forget about what was agreed upon five years later?

The Administration has been playing us for fools. But this rally is happening because we got hip to their little game. As the old proverb goes, "Kick my ass once, shame on you. Kick my ass twice, then I deserve it." But, there will be no second time. We're out to get what we deserve, and if we have to kick them to do it, then so be it. "Bend over and brace yourself, Our size 25,000 is coming through."

If the Administration isn't going to treat us as people with feelings, then at least be professional and treat us like businessmen paying money for a four year deal.

And if they don't want to do business with us any more, then fine, we'll leave.

Just give our money back when we do.

Gregory H. Casimir is a Collegian columnist.

The power of words

If you take the time to think about it, words are remarkable things. Little ones like of, to, we and so. Big ones like strepthrothricin and machicolation. Funny ones like ventriloquist and flatulate. I think we could all agree that these units, varying combinations of a mere 26 letters, are able to achieve a startling degree of specificity and diversity. Just 26 letters, and we have a word for most anything we would need a word for.

Mark McGrath

Many times, we take words for granted. Here we have the very basis of our entire system of communication, without which we could very well live like our Homo Erectus ancestors did a millennia ago.

When was the last time you stopped to think about the words you utter as gifts? After all, without them you would barely be able to communicate your own ideas, never mind trying to understand the ideas of others.

How do words work? Even if I knew, I would be unable to fit a halfway decent explanation in this limited space. Apparently, your eyes see a written word, or your ears hear a spoken one and your brain translates that cue to a mental image or a feeling through which you are somehow able to make sense of the world.

It is even more remarkable to examine the power that words possess. They dominate our society to an incredible degree. They are literally inescapable. You'll find them on signs, movies, radio and television. The very fact that you are reading this column proves that these words, at least temporarily, have power over you, a power you probably never even noticed.

In addition to communicating ideas, words can arouse feelings within a person. For example, when I hear the word cheesecake, my eyes light up and my mind is left with a feeling that cannot be described. It is as if the word opens up a hole in my soul which must be filled by a nice big slab of squishy yellow bliss — with strawberries, of course.

Others are undoubtedly "turned on" by different expressions, like Disneyland or paisley. I still haven't figured out how the words Tom and Cruise, when used together are able to bring women to their knees, but that's a column for another day.

Because of a words' potential to tap into a person's deepest emotions, those who are able to corral them possess an unbelievable amount of power. A writer or orator of skill can mold his or her audience's response with the very words they choose to use.

In the 1960s, Martin Luther King Jr., perhaps the most skilled orator in American history, helped bring down the institution of segregation with words — words which conveyed his ideas so accurately, effectively and unconditionally that a group made up of seemingly powerless followers were able to overcome some of the most difficult and firmly entrenched institutions of the South.

Words do indeed have a power over us. Through words we can express, understand, learn, be heard, touch others and be touched ourselves.

The flip side of this is of course the power words possess to hurt the people who are subjected to them. The very same factors that contribute to the usefulness of words can have directly opposite effects. Unfortunately, we hear words used for this purpose every day, words like "nigger," "kike" and "faggot."

Whether or not a person using these words is willing to admit his or her intentions, those who take a moment to think about them will come to realize that they can only cause harm.

Given the fact that we have a choice over what words come out of our mouths, I can't even comprehend what makes these people use them. Maybe it's just ignorance and stupidity.

My goal in writing this column is to illustrate the power of words, to make you think about what they are and what effects they can have on others. All too often, I hear people defend inexcusable misuse of the wrong kind of word with the claim that "they're only words" or that "others don't have to listen," but in truth these words are so much more than they are given credit for.

The moment we are able to realize that the words we choose greatly influence everyone and everything around us is the moment when we may truly appreciate the power of words and begin to use them to change our world for the better.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Just a slice and Bon Jovi, please

This campus has been all fired up the last couple days over the takeover in Goodell. Newspapers and TV crews from Boston, national headlines and round the clock speeches have the focus on UMass. Now, of course, they've got me all riled up, ready to fight the world. Here is a list of my demands. If they're not met, I will organize a sit–down demonstration at the first bar I find, and stay there until the administration sees the light, or until I pass out in a drunken haze. Either way, I just want to do my part to help the cause.

Luke Meredith

Antonio's

I ask only that they lower the price of a slice of cheese back to $1. $1.25 is still reasonable, but there was a principle involved. A $1 bill used to be all I needed to have dinner. Now that extra quarter just kills the beauty of it. I have the quarter, (most of the time), but some of the love is gone.

The fourth floor bathroom in Goodell

I wasn't kidding when I said it was the best bathroom on campus. Now that it's been taken over, I hope that the protesters are being gentle to my baby. Those toilets were made with love. I ask only that they survive this week.

The elevators in Southwest

Now, I don't go to the West much anymore since I moved off–campus, but I had to go last Friday, and I spent half my time sitting in an elevator on the 22nd floor of IQA. Why was I stuck there, people? Is there a reason they never work? I ask only that they work like any other elevator in this world. You'd think with 5,500 students in a living area the size of my backyard that good elevators would be a necessity. But I guess asking for that is a little too much at a school where "Cavatelli Supreme" is one of the best choices in the dining halls.

(Actually, I used to love Cavatelli Supreme. Maybe "Southern Fried Steak" is more appropriate. That stuff is nasty, and I can't think off the top of my head of an animal that can be hunted to get "Southern Fried Steak.")

A plane ticket to Daytona Beach

Is this selfish? I don't think so. See, I have a place to stay during spring break if I could just fly to Dayton Beach, for free. Why? Because I'd really like to get out of here, and I have no money. I ask only that if you find it in your heart to provide a poor, struggling college boy with a ticket. Just make sure it isn't from Valu–Jet, O.K.?

Bon Jovi at Spring Concert

Is it too much to ask? Think of it. You're sitting in the middle of the field by the campus pond, hot, tired and needing to be revitalized after an afternoon of crap bands (Machinery Hall, anyone) and too many people bumping into you. You're ready to call it a day when, like a gift from heaven, the lights go down, and you hear the opening part of "Living on a Prayer" followed by Jon Bon Jovi jumping out from under the stage and screaming, "Are you ready to rock, Amherst?!" That would be fantastic. Of course, I ask only that we even have a Spring Concert. Getting that might be the real prayer.

I have to say, this whole thing has been pretty trippy the past couple of days. This must have been what the '60s felt like, fighting the man and all. I just hope they can extend this "walk–out" thing until spring break, so I can get some sleep.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

UMass Boston behind protesters

To the Editor:

In accordance with recent events that have evolved on the Amherst campus, I would like to extend on behalf of the [University of Massachusetts] Boston campus student body, our full support.

The issues of concern to Amherst students are ones which we at the Boston campus understand and sympathize with. Enhanced administrative services such as child care, advising and library services are legitimate concerns of the student body and should be addressed by the administration immediately...

David C. Croft
UMass–Boston Student Trustee

Culture schmulture

To the Editor:

It is Wednesday afternoon and I am reading the Collegian on the 9th floor of the library. This activity is quite rare since every other Wednesday I am at my work–study job in Goodell. I guess you know by now why I am not there. I was not on campus this week until today, so it was news to me. I parked my car down near Boyden Gym and walked up that crazy hill. I tried walking in the side door, but a woman cop stopped me and told me I wasn't on her list, like I wasn't cool enough to get into a club. But this club was my job, my second job, the one I work at for 10 hours a week to put gas in my car.

Well, I was ripped. I walked up to the front of Goodell to check out this rally, and even stayed awhile. Maybe I did feel a little "Rah–Rah" inside me, but I just kept it to myself. Sure I hate parking fees, tuition hikes, my car being towed to a garage and having to pay $70 to get it out; I hate a lot about UMass. But I also hate bad drivers, annoying scary horny bar boys, breaking a fingernail, and chapped lips. So as I sit here reading our school paper, I think about all the things that anger me, and how I should hold my–own–private–Idaho–rally to voice my opinions.

Then I started thinking about how maybe I should write for the Collegian. But as I think about it, I realize I can't. Not only would it interfere with my currently–on–hiatus Goodell job, but also there is no place for me, I am white. I am heterosexual. I am not Jewish, or Catholic, or Protestant, or Muslim. I am of mixed European heritage, and I am middle class. What would I have to contribute? There is no "White Hetero Girl affairs" page.

But does this fact make me angry? Not really. I was born a white girl, so there is not too much I can do there. But yes, I will get pissed when my color will prevent me from getting a job or getting into grad school, which I guess is because us "white folk" have always had it easy.

But I was born 22 years ago, and lived in this body for that entire time. I know nothing else. What some white dudes did 200 years ago does not make a difference when I am trying just to wake up somewhat happy every morning.

Except for the fact that now there is a rally in my workplace, so I can't earn the money that puts gas in my car. That makes me angry. This "white privilege" is not as wonderful as some writers seem to believe; it seems more like a burden. Like I should feel ashamed because I am a white female. Like that dumb Kory girl from "Real World San Francisco" thought she would be cooler if she was more "cultured;" translation, not white.

Culture schmulture. This is who I am, too bad. I am just a regular ol' white girl trying to earn some cash. It's just not happenin'

Jesse Pompei
Southampton

Protesters: go home, but good job

To the Editor:

I said nothing at the start of this protest, although I knew that ALANA students were wasting their time. Whether or not to waste one's time, I figured, is a matter that surely each student should be allowed to decide for themselves. After three days, I think that it has gone on for too long, and now the students have managed to rouse Five College students to join their slumber party. I'd like to invite each of those students to go home and accomplish nothing there, where at least they'll be out of the way.

I've noticed that many of these demands involve the allocation of new funds, while others suggest dropping fees, and rendering bill–paying optional. It seems that the protesting students think these funds can be easily mustered, or won't be missed. An attractive assumption is that this University is rich, and that it sits on millions of dollars rather than meet the ALANA demands. But this is simply not the truth. These funds are simply not available, as unfortunate as that is. I am sure that UMass would love to fund every worthy program that we could conceive, but they haven't the resources to do so.

As students of a public University, we pay for everything just as students of private schools do. Before new jobs can be created and huge sums of money can be tossed about, the state must find a way to raise that money. They may raise our tuition, cut from other areas, or raise fees for things like parking. But make no mistake, you and I will pay. I admit that waste exists within the UMass budget, and I admit that the budget is too small, but these are not problems that can be corrected by having a sleepover in Goodell.

The protesters should try to eliminate the problems that prevent UMass from meeting its demands. Chancellor Scott and his minions, though, are ineffectual, not only because they are incompetent, but because they have no power in many situations. This is clearly an issue for the statehouse. Only by getting Governor Weld's attention can we hope to fund all of the necessary departments and programs on our campus. And only through UMass President William Bulger can we eliminate unnecessary spending and waste. Of course, ALANA's bulldozing tactics would quickly land them in jail in Boston, but I have full confidence that the protesters' collective heads can devise some other scheme.

There is considerable ruckus on this campus, so I'm sure there will soon be some settlement. But I predict the final word will be from UMass, and the settlement will bear little resemblance to ALANA's list of demands. Let me congratulate the students in advance for a well–deserved, albeit very small victory. I suggest that next Spring, when energies are high once again, ALANA should aim at a more profitable target.

Ryan Meech
Central

Collegian praised for coverage of rally

To the Editor:

I am a TA at the School of Management, and I am writing to commend the Collegian on their excellent coverage of the takeover of the Goodell Building.

It is extremely important that students on campus be made aware of the issues that are being raised by the protesters, and more importantly, the context in which this extreme action is embedded. To me, this protest represents the culmination of a long dialogue, and epitomizes the frustration of the students at the utter disregard that the administration has shown for less extreme attempts at resolution. As a teacher on campus, I feel it is my duty to bring this issue to the attention of the students I teach, and I feel that the coverage provided by the Collegian is extremely helpful in anchoring discussion.

I also commend you on your unsigned editorials in support of the protesters. A good campus newspaper should be at the forefront of campus opinion, and in this case, the Collegian emerges with its reputation enhanced.

Raza A. Mir
raza@som.umass.edu

Group of protesters' behavior disrespectful to class

To the Editor:

Before I begin, let me assure you that this is not a letter expressing my personal views on the "ALANA" protest. Instead, I'd like to say how and why I disagree with the actions of a certain group of ALANA supporters to recruit people for the 10:30 walk–out (yesterday) morning. As I was sitting in my 10:10 art history class in Thompson, wondering why I was awake and listening to the professor drone on about gothic architecture, I suddenly heard shouting and chanting coming from the hallway outside room 104. I, along with the entire UMass population, am aware of the current protest by ALANA members, the sit in and I also was aware of that morning's protest. The noise didn't please me. It wasn't until these same people started banging the doors that I became annoyed.

"God," I thought, "the mid–term is soon and I'm so behind in this class. Why can't they shut up?"

Not only did they not shut up, but continued until about 7 or 8 supporters came yelling into the room. They paraded onto the stage, passed the professor, up the aisles, and out the back doors, chanting "Walk out! Walk out!" over and over.

What boggled my mind at the time and what pissed me off the most is that this display served no practical purpose. Not only did no one get up (everyone seemed to find the whole thing annoying and amusing) but these same people who are talking about students' rights completely violated mine and everyone else's in that lecture — the right to our expensive UMass education.

This action was not just rude but its only purpose was to create an anarchist environment. Why was it necessary to enter an in–session class and interrupt students and a professor who had already chosen to be there instead of at the rally?

I am not suggesting that ALANA members, or any other group, has no right to assembly or free speech. I applaud ALANA for their action in an era where there seems to be little activism when compared with our parents. What I do not support, however, is needless, annoying displays of revolution in the middle of a lectures on Chatres Cathedral. Call me anal, call me unsympathetic, but the fact is that if you have the constitutional right to peaceful protest and rallying, we have just the same right not to join you.

It doesn't mean that we don't care about child care or other issues, only that some of us had other agendas at 10:30 Wednesday morning. I was passing my course. So long live democracy, long live free speech — but not during art history.

Susanne Enos
Orchard Hill

Solidarity, not division

To the Editor:

Out of disgust, I am writing the "racially conscious" students/readers of the Collegian. The word "minority" has to be decades out of date, and if no one else is enraged when Channel 7 reports "minority takeovers" on campus, then there is truly no hope.

Solidarity is next to nowhere; yet diversity still makes sense? What the [hell] is up when one of the most colorfully–cultural circles on the east coast continues to class culturally? Segregation has never worked. In a time where stupidity could hardly run more rampant and competence seems to require ignorance, simplicity should easily be grasped. Yet we find the need to further divide ourselves and allow ourselves, even more disturbingly, to be divided. There is far too much sanity three miles circumferentially from where I now sit to avoid turning this around.

Matthew E. Paquette
Amherst

Women's studies supports protest

To the Editor:

We are writing to express our support of the recent ALANA–organized student sit–in at Goodell. We agree that the administration has not followed through adequately on the accords they developed with ALANA students in 1992. The student demands are important issues of social justice that the University community ought to be addressing, including more programs, support and greater numbers of faculty and students of color on campus. Autonomous academic and cultural programs are important to marginalized people, as we at Women's Studies know from our own experience. Increases in financial aid, the creation of a scholarship fund for poor and working class students and first generation college students, and the establishment of a flexible child care center are all necessary to guarantee access to a university education.

The University administration claims that its mission goals include access to all and a commitment to multiculturalism and diversity. Yet tuition and fees have been soaring in recent years, welfare reform has cut back state supports for single mothers, student multicultural services (such as CCEBMS, BCP, UALRC) have been cut and low income students are regularly visited with holds on their preregistration, involuntary drops and late fees due to their inabilities to pay their tuition bills on time.

We admire the students taking leadership roles in this action to insist that the University live up to its stated goals. In recognition of their serious commitment we call on faculty not to penalize students for missed class work and to allow students to make alternative arrangements to complete their assignments. We call on campus departments and representative groups to support these demands, and urge faculty and staff to sign the various petitions supporting the principles of the student protests.

Ann Ferguson
Director, Women's Studies

Arts & Living

Thursday, March 6, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Marvin's Room could have been a nicer place

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

MARVIN'S ROOM
Directed by Jerry Zaks
with Meryl Streep, Diane Keaton, Leonardo DiCaprio
Playing at The Pleasant St. Theater

The Academy Award Nominations are out, and small films which might never have gotten widespread release are being given greater attention. Such is the case with Marvin's Room, with Meryl Streep and Diane Keaton as estranged sisters who reunite after not speaking for 20 years.

The movie also features an impressive ensemble cast — Robert DeNiro, Gwen Verdon and Dan Hedaya — that extends beyond the principle actors.

At the forefront of all this attention is Best Actress nominee Diane Keaton. Marvin's Room is a perfect vehicle for her, allowing her to pull out her patented goofy grin, which subsequently won her a Best Actress in 1977 for Annie Hall. As Bessie, the middle-aged spinster who is diagnosed with Leukemia, she spends her days caring for her bedridden father (played by Hume Cronyn in a bizarre casting — he doesn't have any lines, he just sits in bed and chews on Yahtzee dice) and her simpleton aunt (Verdon) who is infatuated with a soap opera. Bessie eventually calls upon her sister Lee and Lee's two children to test for bone marrow compatibility.

Streep plays the estranged sister Lee with a sense of hostile defensiveness. Unfortunately, Streep gives the same defensively hostile performance she's been doing for the past 20 years because no one bothered to tell her that Scott McPherson's play "Marvin's Room," which the movie is based upon, is a dark comedy.

As Lee's unbalanced son, Leonardo DiCaprio offers dangerous tension as he spars with Keaton, who tries to get him to open up to her. DiCaprio, as usual, looks earnest and like he's working very hard, and any humor that is meant to come with his character is lost. For example, the opening scene shows DiCaprio setting his mother's house on fire, which was most likely just simply referred to in the stage production.

Many of the problems that come with Marvin's Room seem to arise with the translation between stage and screen and director Jerry Zaks' sad idea of how dark humor can be mixed with melodrama. One noteworthy sequence shows the principal characters in Disney World, mainly interesting because the Magic Kingdom has probably never appeared to be such a miserable and scary place — after Bessie starts to bleed, Goofy carries her to safety in Mickey's cottage — kudos for Zaks for trying something new.

There are funny moments to the film, but they seem cheap and forced. DeNiro is as deadpan as he gets as Bessie's substitute doctor. As the doctor's receptionist, Hedaya (Clueless) has an amusing cameo, but it's all too brief — like most of the film's humor. B-

Loose Caboose set to groove

By Tim Gleeson
Collegian Correspondent

The Student Union Ballroom will be converted to a reggae haven tonight as local acts Loose Caboose and the Black Rebels will take control of the scene with their majestic vibes and nice-time reggae beat. This tandem act, brought to UMass by University Productions and Concerts, should not be missed as they are certain to deliver hours of dancing music to make you move and please music lovers from all over the valley.

Loose Caboose, led by singer/songwriter/keyboardist Ras John Rubicam, is well known throughout the Pioneer Valley and, having originated in 1975, they are one of the most enduring and respected reggae acts on the entire east coast. Their list of accolades runs long, which is fitting of the depth of their talent for playing such rhythmic reggae vibrations. They have played with such acts as Burning Spear, Culture, Toots and the Maytals, and countless others. Caboose has opened for Reggae Sunsplash in Western Massachusetts, toured the United States and the East coast several times and have had the honor of being the first reggae act ever to perform at the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in Cleveland, Ohio.

Throughout the years Caboose have always remained close and true to the Pioneer Valley; they can often be found performing throughout New England. Most recently, they played a stellar act at the Northampton Center for the Arts, where Caboose performed dazzling numbers off their most recent album, Caboose Ha Fe Move, which was recorded at the legendary Tuff Gong Studio in Jamaica. The band also performed some very special, classic renditions of Bob Marley tunes. Indeed, the Caboose will make you move, they never miss.

The other stars of the night shall be equally as bright. These are the Pioneer Valley based, righteous reggae artists, the Black Rebels. The band has been based in Amherst since 1994 — although their roots run much deeper. The Rebels originally formed in Dakar, the capital of West Africa's Senegal, in 1984 and since that time have been creating an innovative, multicultural, and rhythmic blend of roots music. The founding members, PMD, Dr. Jeannot, and Ras Makonnen hail from rich musical backgrounds well enriched by four years of performing about Dakar, including a spot at the Reggae Sunsplash festival.

In 1988, Jeannot emigrated to the United States and the others soon followed on the path which eventually led to the formal regrouping of the Rebels in 1992 and two years later their establishment in the Valley. The Rebels now boast a deep line up of musicians in a tightly knit collage of instrumental and vocal wonder. The band continues to take their music to higher levels and have released two albums, To Be Continued and Thank U Jah, which are shining examples of their musical blend, cultural and spiritual message.

A musical message which they are excited to spread. Indeed, band member Ras Toph has let it be known that himself and the band plan to bring the music to full hit as the band is coming off good vibrations from a recent Northampton show by fellow Senegalese countryman, Babas Maal, and these vibrations must continue.

Loose Caboose and the Black Rebels are no strangers to each other as the Valley's reigning reggae heavyweights and they have performed together in the past. Their paths will once again join for this show which is sure to combine for a night full of good times and dance as UMass gets a treat of roots, rock, reggae right in the center of campus.

Loose Caboose and the Black Rebels will perform tonight at the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets will be $5 for students and $7 for the general public. Tickets are available at Tix Unlimited, For the Record-Amherst, Northampton Box Office, and all Strawberries outlets. The doors will open at 8 p.m.

Brian Quinn and Justin Tomsovic in Sam Shepard's "Angel City" at Amherst College.

COURTESY AMHERST COLLEGE

Shepard's "City" bites into Hollywood

By Julia Casson
Collegian Staff

Angel City, a "moving picture show in two acts," will be presented in three performances this weekend by the Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance.

The audience will be taken through the glitz, the glamour and the allure of Hollywood through the eyes of a beginner screenwriter as he struggles to create the ultimate disaster movie. A six person cast creates a passage through the truly strange world of movies and film.

The play was written by veteran actor and playwright Sam Shepard and is directed by Amherst College student Andrew Goodman as part of his senior thesis. Angel City has been described as an upbeat satire characterized with a jazzy and exciting style.

The plot revolves around the movies in which Shepard evokes many different images of films. The complicated plot is secondary to these images as the lights and music changes accordingly to the film style and moods. Each scene will represent a different type of movie and Goodman states that the play includes images that people will recognize from Hollywood.

Angel City is a complete student-run production with original music composed for the production by student Juan Estrada Cruz. The set was designed by Molly Hensley, costumes by Tina Bishko, and lighting by Scott Bolman.

Angel City will be performed at 8 p.m. March 6, 7, and 8 at Kirby Theater at Amherst College. There is no admission charge, but reservations are suggested. For more information call 542-2277.

Summer Session 1997

Session I: May 27-June 26 Session II: June 30 -July 31

- Hundreds of undergraduate and graduate courses in business, education, history, accelerated languages, science, women's studies, technology and more
- Weekend and certificate courses
- Travel and learn courses in the U.S. and abroad
- High school students and visiting students welcome
- Continuing Education courses available

SETON HALL UNIVERSITY

The Catholic University in New Jersey–Founded in 1856 • 400 South Orange Ave., South Orange, NJ 07079 • http://www.shu.edu

CALL (201) 761-9363 FOR A SUMMER CATALOG or e-mail summercat@lanmail.shu.edu

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS

UMass' Best! 1996

• All Sporting Events
• Every Thursday Night $10 Cash 8-Ball Tournament 7:30 pm

Thats Right!
Screen Printed T-Shirts On 100% Cotton!
Many Colors to Choose From!
PRINTSHACK & APPAREL UNLIMITED
322 Russell Street • Hadley, Mass.
Call Today 586-6933

IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
20 Center St. Northampton

ALL AGES ALL THE TIME

thursday, march 6 • 10 pm
SCUD mountain BOYS
last encore show before national tour • $6 adv.

friday, march 7 • 7 pm
CINDY BLACKMAN QUARTET
AND CLAIRE ARENIUS TRIO
lenny kravitz's percussionist does jazz. $10 adv.

friday, march 7, 10 pm
groovasaurus AND JIGGLE THE HANDLE
boston's funky best •$5 adv.

saturday, march 8 • 10 pm
BIG GERANIUMS
high energy Irish rock • $6 adv.

monday, march 10 • 7 pm
jonathan RICHMAN
extended to Jonathon • $15 adv.

wednesday, march 12 • 7&10 pm
GATO BARBIERI
JAZZ LEGEND FROM ARGENTINA • $20

thursday, march 13 • 10 pm
lettuce and BOOGIEMAN
funk/jam/groove tunes • $5 adv.

friday, march 14 • 10 pm
HUMBERT plus the figments athenaeum $5 adv.

saturday, march 15 • 10 pm
DUNCAN SHEIK & JILL SOBULE
spring break! • $15 adv.

MUSIC SEVEN NIGHTS A WEEK

Coming: Robyn Hitchcock Patti Rothberg Ashley MacIsaac Royal Crown Revue Dude of Life Ferron R.L. Burnside Nils Lofgren Honeyboy Edwards The Nields

TICKETS For the Record, Northampton Box Office or call 586-8686

24-hour Concert info: 413-584-0610

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
MONDAY- SATURDAY 9:00 - 11:00
Not responsible for typos
VISA DISCOVER MasterCard

DISCOUNT LIQUORS
BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE • CIGARS

SAM ADAMS 24-12 oz. bott. $18.99 +dep.	CATAMOUNT 24-12oz. bott. $17.99 +dep.	SARANAC 24-12 oz. bott. $17.99 +dep.	HEINEKEN 24-12 oz. bott. $18.99 +dep.	AMSTEL LIGHT 24-12 oz. bott. $18.99 +dep.	MICRO KEGS! SAM ADAMS OREGON SARANAC HARPOON J.W. DUNDEE Plus Lots More!	KEGS!!! BUD LT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT, MICHELOB DK, RED DOG, LITE, LOWENBRAU DK, M.G.D., ICE HOUSE $39.99 +dep.
BUSCH & LT "30 pks." $11.99 +dep.	BUD DRY 24-12oz. bott. $9.99 +dep.	M.G.D. & LT 24-12 oz. bott. $9.49 +dep.	MILWAUKEE'S BEST "30 pks." $10.49 +dep.	M.G.D. & LT "30 pks." $10.99 +dep.		BUD Keg of the Week! $38.99 +dep.
4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L	ABSOLUT VODKA $19.99 1.75L	JOSE CUERVO $9.99 750mL	BARCARDI LIMON $9.49 750mL	LET'S GO UMass SPORTS	ICE! 10 lbs.....$1.29 50 lbs.....$5.99 100 lbs.....$9.99	Natural Lt/Ice $34.99 +dep.
JOSEPH DROUHIN CHARD. $6.99 750mL	DRAGANI MONTEPULCIANO D'ABRUZZO $4.49 1.5L	ALMADEN 5.0L BAG IN BOX $7.99	KORBEL CHAMPAGNES $8.99 750mL	WE DELIVER 584.8174	Sale Thru 3-12-97

COURTESY JEFF HOLLEIN

Lenny White lays down some Babyface–inspired jazz grooves on his new album, Renderers Of Spirit.

Diversions within Jazz and blues

Jazz and blues can go many ways. It is well known that the many styles of jazz, such as dixie-land and jazz-rock fusion are often highly different. Similarly, blues encompasses early R&B and Rock and Roll as well as fiddle-tinged early delta acoustic blues. The artists we take a look at this week both have taken blues and jazz and changed them to accommodate themselves and the times they were/are surrounded by.

Jimmy McCracklin is a name that many people may sneer or smirk at for his odd ring, but most people won't know who he is. You can all now learn, with the help of a terrific compilation on the Razor & Tie label, The Walk: Jimmy McCracklin At His Best.

Funny, how at one moment in time a man can have three top 10 R&B charting songs (in the years of 1957, '61, and '65), but most people will not have the faintest idea of who he is, even when he is still alive and performing.

McCracklin, born probably in the early '20s (ah, once again, the "mystery birthdate" problem of bluesmen), grew up mostly in St. Louis, but made a teen-aged hop over to Los Angeles where he took up boxing. This sport stayed with him through a WWII stint in the Navy, until a car accident dislocated his shoulder and gouged his face, as well as killing his co-occupant. This threw him "out of shape," and so he went on to his next love, good-time blues music.

McCracklin's music career started with piano blues around 1945, but the new Razor & Tie collection doesn't take up his career until 1956, when he recorded the power-blues "Get Back" (no relation to the Beatles' song), and his first hit "The Walk," with its "Shake, Rattle and Roll"-style jump-blues which was the R&B of the day and the father of the newly-born rock and roll and soul music.

The compilation sweeps through the late '50s, when McCracklin took up Berry-style rock, like on "The Georgia Slop," "Susie & Pat," and "Looking For A Woman." He took on a slightly more straight R&B sound, with such ballads and mid–tempo pre–Stax/Volt workouts like "Just Got To Know," "(Take) Advice," and "Some–One." By the time this collection ends at 1969, McCracklin is getting a little bit funky with his soul music, far from his piano blues roots.

Jazz/Blues Weekly

BY JOSHUA BOYD

As for jazz, we find drummer Lenny White, who once hammered out off–kilter rhythms side by side with Jack DeJohnette on Miles Davis' epic 1969 jazz–rock fusion masterpiece, Bitches Brew, mixing jazz with a modern R&B (read, Babyface) sound on his new album, Renderers Of Spirit (Hip Bop/Silva Screen).

After Bitches Brew, White joined Chick Corea in the '70s as part of that keyboardist's Return To Forever project, after

Turn to JAZZ, page 9

New kind of stress relief: Climbing — Pioneer style

Alfresco News with Liz Anderson

If mid–term exams and papers have you climbing the walls of your dorm room/house with anxiety, then put that energy to a real test and climb the Pioneer Valley's climbing walls and rock faces. Now that the days are getting warmer and are beginning to energize your soul with a "little spring fever" give your body a jump start with rock climbing's intense challenges.

Rock climbing can be a wonderful resurrection for your winter bones or it can be a tragic out of body experience. Here are some facts about basic rock climbing techniques. If you are a new comer to this adventure sport, then I strongly advise you to go with an expert climbing partner or instructor.

Slab routes (which consist of beginner to intermediate terrain) are the most popular rock face of recreational climbers. Slab rock faces are the best medium on which to learn general techniques, especially in foot working and mental conditioning. Many modern steep routes have at least one short section of less than vertical face climbing, so it is very important that every seasoned climber is "slab fluent."

For rock climbing, good balance is primarily the result of assuming correct body position. On climbs less than 85 degrees or just under vertical, climbers generally want to keep their torso straight up and down.

A vertical torso forces your weight to remain at the end of your toes. It is very important to keep pressure on your toes throughout the climb and make your boots do the majority of the work.

A climbers' arms can quickly "fizzle out" or get tired so it is important for climbers to keep their torso upright and allow their legs to do the labor. It is necessary for beginner climbers to fight the initial urge to hug the rock.

Hugging the rock face will only direct your mass onto your boots at a queer angle. This will force you to "over cling" with your hands in an attempt compensate for unstable balance.

When climbing, it is vital that climbers maintain a relaxed state of mind, a steady rate of breathing, and an ample amount of time between each step. When a climber gets scared or tenses up, the abdominal muscles tighten depressing the diaphragm, and the rate of breathing turns into pants.

Never climb too fast regardless of your physical fitness. Climb using the least amount of strength, so that your body does not become over tired with unnecessary stress.

Foot placement is a rock climbing technique that can make or break a successful climb. Terrible form is to ignore this rule all together and to simply "tip toe" up the rock. Rock climbers should always think about precision and the economy of movement paying close attention to the placement of their feet.

For more information about rock climbing techniques and instructional clinics check out adventure sport stores such as Wild Water Outfitters and Eastern Mountain Sports. Both of these stores are located on route 9 and offer the public an array of rock climbing equipment as well as expert advice on rock climbing in New England.

The UMass Outing Club is also another terrific resource for rock climbing equipment and instruction. Offering a more economic alternative to commercial sports stores the Outing Club can be contacted at 545–3131.

Before it is too late jet on over to Hampshire College and release some tension on its indoor climbing wall. Open to the Five College community, from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Wednesday thru Friday, this local indoor climbing facility is closing for the season on March 14.

A day pass for Five College Students is only $5. To purchase a ticket or acquire more information call The Robert Crown Center at 582–5470.

Also now that spring's warm air is drying out the Pioneer Valley's woodlands and mountain ridges take advantage of natural outdoor climbing facilities.

Rose Ledges is 45 feet high and is a mixed to intermediate rock face

Turn to CLIMBING, page 10

Weekly Drink Specials

Amaretto Sour $2.00 16oz

Southern Comfort and Coke $2.00 16oz

Red Dog 16oz Drafts $1.50

Rolling Rock 12oz Bottles $1.50

1/2 Price appetizers and Nachos 3-5 and 7-11 Thurs - Fri - Sat

Dancing Thurs - Fri - Sat

No Cover Before 10pm

THE PUB
15 East Pleasant Street

UMass' Best!

WIN PRIZES!

The Collegian Poll Rules:

1. Ballots must be dropped of at The Collegian office in the basement of the Campus Center or mailed to 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003.
2. No Xeroxed ballots.
3. One ballot per person
4. Ballots must be filled out with reasonable completeness. Ballots less than half of the blanks will be disqualified.
5. Independent Ballot Referees are hired.
6. Decisions of Ballot Referees are final.
7. All Ballots due by Thursday, March 13, 1997.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian's UMass' Best is intended to be a good natured contest among the local community. It is a fun poll based solely on UMass student opinions. This is not a harsh competition with results that have deep and lasting significance. Please do not take it as such, but rather as a basic published poll.

Ballot

Name: _____
Address: _____
Phone #: _____
Student ID#: _____

I. UMass Grub
1. Best Pizza Place _____
2. Best Sub Shop _____
3. Best Place to Go on a Date _____
4. Best Place to Eat if Your Parents are Paying _____
5. Best Ice Cream Shop _____
6. Best Chinese Restaurant _____
7. Best Italian Food _____
8. Best Breakfast (Hangover Cure) _____
9. Best Bagel Shop _____
10. Best Vegetarian Place _____

II. UMass Weekend
1. Best Liquor Store _____
2. Best Coffee Shop _____
3. Best Place to Start the Night Out _____
4. Best Place to Finish the Night Out _____
5. Best Shot _____
6. Best Beer _____
7. Best Drinking Game _____
8. Best Bartender (What Bar?) _____

III. Shops & Services
1. Best Grocery Store _____
2. Best Florist _____
3. Best Clothing Store _____
4. Best Gas Station _____
5. Best Bike Shop _____
6. Best Bookstore _____
7. Best Hair Salon _____
8. Best Place to Work Out _____
9. Best Tan Salon _____
10. Best Place to Buy Condoms _____

IV. Arts & Entertainment
1. Best Place to Hear Live Music _____
2. Best Local Band _____
3. Best Radio Station _____
4. Best Music Store _____
5. Best Place to Play Pool _____
6. Best Cheap Date _____
7. Best Video Store _____
8. Best Movie _____
9. Best TV Show _____

V. Unique UMass' Best
1. Best Thing About UMass _____
2. Best Apartment Complex _____
3. Best Class _____
4. Best Reason to Miss Class _____
5. Best Reason to Hand in a Paper Late _____
6. Best Professor _____
7. Best Place to Read The Collegian _____
8. Best Excuse for Not Graduating in 4 Years _____
9. Best Place to Study _____

FILL OUT A BALLOT FOR A CHANCE TO WIN A PRIZE!

Everything you ever wanted to know about stout beers, but were afraid to ask...

JORMA KANSANSEN

Aaah... Black Gold... Irish Tea. To most people, stout beer is more like oil than the nectar of the Gods.

Black. Thick. Rich.

And at times, it looks like it should lube your car's chassis, instead of lubing your own personal chassis.

But, oh my goombas, it is top shelf, baby, and I highly suggest you buy as much stout as you can. It is "good for you" as a popular advertising slogan states, and I agree — of course, in moderation (once again, stung by the PC bug).

Me and some of my mates took a stroll out of The Finnish Kitchen last weekend, and celebrated the joy of National Guinness Night. Freshly tapped kegs, and the call of "Raise your pints in the air!" was what all Guinness appreciators last Friday night experienced at the Old Amherst Alehouse, and believe me, I raised a few.

This is not a column on my drunken travails around the Pioneer Valley, though. I am here to talk to you about the sweet sensation of stout.

It is a curious drink. At first, you never seem to order it, and it's always a friend that passes you the good word. And, then like magic, you see the beer settling slowly from bottom to the top after it is poured, and the slow, methodical explosion of white to black thrills the creative mind.

"Hey, how does it do that?" you inquire.

"Ay, doon't ask thair–r–r, mate...joost d–r–reenk it," the red–haired and green–eyed bartender quips, with a sly smile and a wink of the eye.

The highest of the high on the beer scale, and not just for its color, this style of brewing technique has easily been lost in the microbrew explosion of the past few years. From winter brews (e.g. Prelude) to single–double–triple bocks (e.g. Samuel Adams) to that fruity kind of stuff (e.g. Magic Hat), stout is probably the last beer a brewery will choose to brew and promote. Sure, they're still made, but when was the last time you saw a special on stout?

Exactly, so let's move on.

Yet, it is a special experience. Like an old man in his smoking jacket with a volume of The Riverside Shakespeare on his lap will enjoy a fine cognac; the local schmoe can have the same experience with his flannel shirt and cords, with a volume of Refuse To Lose... actually, cancel that.

Go with the Shakespeare, culture is "good for you," too.

And at this time, let's talk a little about the different brands of stout out there on the market. And of course, in my own inimitable fashion, I'll give you my opinions. As if you really need my opinions, so make up your own mind! Sorry, love sometimes brings bitterness... here we go:

• Samuel Adams Cream Stout — Ain't nuthin' bitter about this brand, and also there is nuthin' classic about it, too. If you are scared of stout, than this is the one to get started with. Training wheels for your future stout experience, so to say. When I first experimented with true Black Gold, this is the one I tried, and it got me hooked. As the name implies, creamy is the word for this brand. Truthfully, Samuel Adams doesn't do too much wrong (Lightship? Scotch Ale?), and there is not that much wrong with this one.

• Berkshire Stout — Oooohhhh, smmmoooootttthhhhh. I really don't know why, but everything that evolves from this local brewery is top quality. But, it's too smooth. True stout has a bite to it, along with the smoothness. Contrary to what a young man once said to me during a fall afternoon in the Finnish Kitchen, as he tugged on the string of my apron, "As long as it's darker than a Pepsi." It's got to be more than dark to be a true stout for me.

• Beamish — The times that I have had this beer I truly don't remember. I don't know if that is a good thing to admit that, but hey, you're my goombas. I wanted to visit the home of Beamish last spring, Cork in southern Ireland, but a little thing called fundage held me back. Another thing holding me back was that the Republic of Ireland does not accept British bank cards. If I had my Baybank card I could have felt a hell of a lot better, because they accept that card there. But I won't go there... that is, Anglo–Irish relations. Talk to me next week.

• Murphy's — If you don't like Guinness, than you like Murphy's. That's what I've seen in my stout experience so far in my life. Try each, and then make your decision. Both are top quality, but I'm Guinness man through and through. Speaking of

Turn to STOUT, page 10

Live's Secret Samadhi doesn't sell the drama

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Three years after Live released its second album, Throwing Copper, to critical acclaim and commercial success, the boys from York, Pa. followed it up with their recently released Secret Samadhi. They must have paid attention to the love the world showed their last album, because not much has changed this time around.

Secret Samdhi is an album that is full of great music. All of the songs are solid, well produced efforts that stand as markers for the rest of the rock world, because they combine to make a coherent album that runs smoothly.

It's just that they did this last time.

There are new wrinkles, no doubt. The first single, "Lakini's Juice," sees the band use a Tool–esque riff and a symphony in the background, showing that the band is exploring further into a harsher, more experimental guitar sound, and moving further away from the homey feel of their first

COURTESY JEFF BENDER

Live doesn't live up to their potential in latest release.

Turn to LIVE, page 9

MONTCLAIR STATE UNIVERSITY

1997 SUMMER SESSIONS

3-weeks May 27-June 12 & August 11-28
6-weeks June 30-August 7
8-weeks June 16-August 7
Saturdays June 14-August 16
Plus alternate scheduled courses throughout the summer.

More than 300 undergraduate and more than 60 graduate course sections.

Daytime and evening: business, communications, computer science, education, fine and performing arts, human services, humanities, languages, life sciences, mathematics, natural sciences, physical sciences, social sciences

Plus:
• undergraduate and graduate credit institutes, studios, workshops
• environmental education at the NJ School of Conservation, Stokes State Forest
• global education/study abroad in China; Ecuador, Peru, Galapegos Islands; Israel; Italy; Spain; and Turkey
• NJ Marine Sciences Consortium courses at Sandy Hook and the Nature Center of Cape May.

For complete schedule and details on how you may
REGISTER BY TELEPHONE APRIL 12-MAY 5
Call or e-mail, or U.S. mail coupon today for the '97 Summer Sessions catalog, which will be available late March. There will be additional opportunities to register by telephone MAY 19-AUGUST 10. Registration must be completed prior to the beginning date of the course.

Tuition and Fees*
1997 Summer Sessions tuition and fees will be established by the University Board of Trustees late in the spring semester. For your guidance, the following tuition and fees were applicable for the 1996 Summer Sessions: $101 per credit undergraduate for NJ resident; $146 per credit undergraduate for non-resident of NJ; $187.50 per credit graduate for NJ resident; $233.50 per credit graduate for non-resident of NJ.
*Tuition and fees are subject to change at any time by action of the MSU Board of Trustees.

Check us out: http://www.montclair.edu/Pages/SummerSessions/Summer.html
Phone: 201-655-4352 e-mail: summer@saturn.montclair.edu
Montclair State University, Summer Sessions, Upper Montclair, NJ 07043

Please forward the '97 Summer Sessions catalog (available late March):
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____ (UMA)
Montclair State University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action institution.

Come write for arts! Come on down to the collegian and talk to Jeremy Brothers.

Don't say it with flowers

Say it with Collegian classifieds

Place a Personal classified from March 10th - March 14th and receive half off. Students 10¢ a word

Call 545-3500 to place over the phone, visit us on the concourse or visit us at our basement office

UPC Presents ....

An Evening Of Reggae To Lively Up Yourself!!!

Featuring:

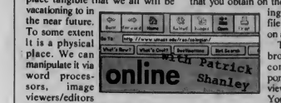
LOOSE CABOOSE

and

Tonight! Tonight!

BLACK REBELS

With a video tribute to BOB MARLEY!



THURSDAY, March 6
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM - UMASS, Amherst
Doors Open @ 8:00 pm

TIX: 5 beans UMASS students w/valid I.D.
General Public, 7 bones!
TICKETS available @ TIX UNLIMITED-UMASS, FOR THE RECORD-Amherst, NORTHAMPTON BOX OFFICE-Northampton, and all Strawberries outlets
Sponsored in part by the Umass Arts Council

For more info., call UPC @ (413) 545-2892

Cyberspace explained for you

What is this thing called cyberspace? I have spent countless hours thinking as well as participating in many class discussions about it and have come up with a bunch of answers. Many people I have encountered believe it to be some place tangible that we all will be vacationing to in the near future. To some extent it is a physical place. We can manipulate it via word processors, image viewers/editors etc. But where is all of this information stored?

Maybe it is in that invisible place that elves and fairies hide themselves and all the things that mystically disappear. Unfortunately I have met people who believe this to be true. The World Wide Web (Cyberspace) is quite the contrary.

From what I have learned, it is essentially hard drives from around the globe connected by phone lines. It is actually more than this.

When you turn on your computer and click on the "Short Cut to UMass Access" icon, you are telling your computer to dial the phone number for the UMass server and negotiate for a connection. Once you are connected to the server you are in essence standing at a three's old to the rest of the world. So let us say that you want to go to the Howard Stern page at K-Rock, you are not really going anywhere, you are making a phone call through the UMass server which then tells the Stern server to get the file that you want. (A homepage or anything else that you obtain on the web is nothing more than a file that is stored on a server.)

The file is then brought to your computer temporarily for your viewing pleasure. You may do this any number of times during one session. Did you ever notice that you could go back and forth through the pages? This is not your computer calling these machines every time. The pages you have already viewed are stored on your hard drive temporarily and they do not take any space up. Well, not really.

This brings me to my next point, when you finish your session on Netscape Navigator or whatever web browser you use, all of those places are wiped away and forgotten by your computer. If, however, there is a homepage that you really liked, you could do something that is called bookmarking. Usually most browsers have this option which, when selected, tells your computer to remember the location of the

Turn to CYBERSPACE, page 10

jazz

continued from page 7

which long stints in the more acoustic bands of Freddie Hubbard and Joe Henderson and others vaulted him through time to his current fascination with mixing jazz and Babyface–era R&B.

"Whew! What A Dream" opens up the album with the basic sound that will define this new disc. Over–produced horns (Danny Walsh, Bennie Maupin, recent Grammy– winner Michael Brecker, and Michael "Patches" Stewart take up reed and trumpet duties here and there throughout), thumb–slapped bass, sound programming, and even a couple of vocal tracks show up throughout the album.

There are some sincere spots, however much high production taints this album, such as some funky little Moog solos by George Duke on "Ho–Cake," and Bernard Wright on "Pick Pocket."

"Savant" almost maintains a phat groove if not for the synth pollution — Patrice Rushen puts in a good piano solo also.

Nevertheless, what is one to do with an album that has a modern R&B–meets–jazz version of the '80s elevator–cheese hit from Christopher Cross, "Sailing"? Easy, skip over the track to the semi–ambient (not the genre, just the mood) "Countdown 2000" with a rap appearance by Weldon Irvine. White seems to know what he's doing with this R&B–loves–jazz thing, which is good. In terms of production, though, he's got to remember there are bass frequencies and that reverb — or any audible studio effect — is something to use in moderation.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

Live

continued from page 8

album, Mental Jewelry. "Turn My Head" is the bands first sojourn into the realm of "pretty music," a beautiful tune complete with a Ed Kowalczyk falsetto.

But much of it, sadly, sounds too much like Throwing Copper. The first song, "Rattlesnake," sounds suspiciously like the first song on Throwing Copper, "The Dam at Otter Creek." Like their two previous releases, there is almost no sense of humor from the guys, who usually spend interviews making fun of each other. The album cover is almost all black, the actual CD is all black, leaving many of us to wonder, "When are these guys gonna lighten up?"

One thing is for sure. The lack of acoustic material signals a clear break from Mental Jewelry. Even twinges of acoustic feel, like on the undeniably sweet, and soon to be radio hit "Cemetary," are muddled with plugged in fury. Live pushed out much of the raw stuff in Throwing Copper, and they don't bring it back much on Secret Samadhi.

Live should remain one of the biggest bands in the world for years to come. They are genuine, sincere musicians who speak from the heart and deliver music that people can believe in, and sing along to. But to assume the mantle as "America's Best Band," they have to be more creative, play with their sound and develop along with their audience. They have the ability to play stadiums, win more Grammys and go down in history as one of the best rock acts of the so–called "post–modern era." They are that good. But if they do so, they'll sound different next album, and Secret Samadhi will be remembered as the decent disc in between Throwing Copper and the next one.

C+

AMHERST RESTAURANT PIZZERIA

Formerly Known As Daisy's

Pizza • Pasta • Calzones • Grinders

Buy Any Large 1 Topping or More $1 OFF dine in or take-out exp. 4/15/97

Buy a Large "Amherst Special" $2 OFF dine in or take-out exp. 4/15/97

$1 OFF Any Dinner Entree Dine In Only exp. 4/15/97

Open Daily at 7am • 1185 N Pleasant St. North Amherst 549 - 6643

FACULTY • ALUMNI • STUDENTS

ABSOLUTE AUCTION*

AT "AMHERST WOODS"

9 PRIME RESID. LOTS

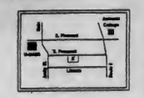
REF # 7-0675 SATURDAY, MARCH 15TH AT 11 AM
LOTS 15-19, 28-27, 31-32, 36-37, 40, 41, 42, 43 & 45
OFF WOODLOT RD & OLD FARM RD, AMHERST, MA

Jerome J. Manning & Co., Inc. is proud to offer 9 prime lots in one of Amherst's finest neighborhoods. Situated within Amherst Woods, the lots are some of the only remaining lots available and range in size from .68± acre to 3± acres. * 4 of the 9 lots are being offered ABSOLUTE–BUYER'S CHOICE.

TERMS: FIRST 4 LOTS TO BE SOLD ABSOLUTE– BUYER'S CHOICE, REGARDLESS OF PRICE. REMAINING 5 LOTS TO BE SOLD SUBJECT TO SELLER'S CONFIRMATION. $ 2,500.00 deposit PER LOT, in cash or certified check. Balance 45 days. 10% BUYERS PREMIUM. Other terms, if any, announced at the sale. Ma Lic 111.

BROKER TERMS: 2% BROKER INCENTIVE OFFERED. 48 hour broker pre registeration required. Call for form.

CALL FOR INFO & BROCHURE



JEROME J. MANNING & CO., INC.

800-521-0111

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY

53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385

• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities

Shop Registration # RS1212

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
(888) 211-OCMP
Present

Haigis ON Hoopla

Presented by the UMass Sport Management Program

VOLUNTEERS ARE NEEDED!!!!
COME JOIN THE HAIGIS HOOPLA TEAM.

WHAT: A non-profit, 3-on-3 basketball festival organized by the University of Massachusetts Sport Management Program
WHEN: April 25-27, 1997
WHERE: Haigis Mall on the University of Massachusetts Campus

All volunteers will receive a free staff uniform, meals while working at the event and be invited to a pizza party prior to the event where prizes will be awarded in an exclusive volunteer raffle.

Positions Available

• Campus Center Table
• Goodie Bag Stuffing
• Registration
• Site set-up
• Court Monitor
• Booth Monitor
• Take Down
• Hospitality

There will be three volunteer meetings prior to the event. The first one will be held during the FIRST WEEK IN APRIL. Confirmation cards will be sent with additional information
*Registration forms must be returned by MARCH 14, 1997

Please fill out the form below and return to:

Haigis Hoopla Office
Attn: Volunteer Management
16 Curry Hicks Building
University of Massachusetts
Box 31820
Amherst, MA 01003-1820

OR

Return to the Volunteer drop off box by the front door of the Curry Hicks Building

----------Haigis Hoopla VII Volunteer Registration Form----------

Name: _____
Address: _____
Phone Number: _____

Please check the area(s) which you are interested in working:

Pre-Event Positions:
Campus Center Table____
Goodie Bag Stuffing ____
Registration ____

Event Day Positions:
Site Set-Up ____
Court Monitor ____
Booth Monitor ____

Hospitality ____
Site Take-down____

Music makes strange bedfellows...

COURTESY CHRIS TOLIVER

The Scud Mountain Boys bring their unique sound to the Iron Horse tonight.

JOHN HENDRICKSON

Country-rock. Let's break that term down a little bit. "Rock." O.K. — everyone likes rock. After all, it's the "defining music of our generation," and all that crap. And it has been for the last 40 years. "Country," though — that's where things get a bit dodgy. Pictures of Billy Ray Cyrus and line-dancing and the Judds pop into my head, sending chills up my spine, turning my stomach...

That's all part of the glitzy Nashville pop-country scene of the '80s and '90s, though. You know, where all the guys still have that short-on-the-top, long-in-the-back hairdo. Except for the bald ones, like Garth Brooks and Dwight Yoakam — they wear Stetsons. But I digress. The bottom line is that country-rock is a genre which is greater than the sum of its parts.

Country and rock have been inseparable since Day One (that being July 2, 1954 — the day Elvis recorded his first record — the Big Bang, so to speak). Rockabilly was simply a jumped-up fusion of country and blues, with a little bit of bluegrass thrown in for kicks. By the end of the '50s, none other than Ricky Nelson was bringing standard Nashville twang to the top of the charts with "Hello, Mary Lou" and others.

The arrival of rock 'n' roll, though, blindsided the country industry, as much of its younger audience jumped ship. Early pioneers like Hank Williams, Hank Snow, and Eddy Arnold were either dead or old and irrelevant. However, new faces like George Jones, Waylon Jennings, and Willie Nelson, as well as former rock-ers who jumped ship (like Johnny Cash and Jerry Lee Lewis) and a whole influx of women (Tammy Wynette, Juce Carter, etc.) had revitalized the genre by the late '60s.

As the British Invasion took rock into a whole new direction, country's influence remained dormant for a good chunk of the decade. Although the Beatles had a bit of Carl Perkins-inspired twang and Mick Jagger tried to sound like he was from Alabama, it wasn't until the late '60s that true country influences began to emerge, often in the most unusual places.

The folky jangle-pop of the Byrds has provided some of the most cliched soundtrack music of the decade — it's hard to imagine the TV show "The Wonder Years" without songs like "Turn, Turn, Turn" to help illustrate young Kevin Arnold's adolescence. However, by about 1968, the Byrds had abandoned their pop roots and released Sweetheart Of The Rodeo. The title says it all — Country.

One of the reasons for the Byrds abrupt about-face was the addition of new member Gram Parsons. Parsons steered the band in the country direction, and then jumped ship, forming perhaps the first true country-rock band, The Flying Burrito Brothers. The Burritos didn't last long, either, and Parsons turned on good buddy Keith Richards to vintage country and bluegrass. His influence can be heard all over the Stones' albums Let It Bleed, Sticky Fingers, and Exile On Main St. Richards reciprocated by turning Gram onto heroin. Parsons overdosed in 1973, but his influence still resonates today.

Another, country-rock pioneer is Michael Nesmith. Yes, Michael Nesmith of the Monkees. Those Monkees. His later work with the group was a groundbreaking blend of

Turn to BEDFELLOWS, page 11

■ stout

continued from page 7

that brand...

• Guinness — Just let me tell you this little story. One of my pickhead friends has lately been interested in knowing the kwan of Guinness. A few weeks back, we had a couple of pints of the nectar of the gods, and he wasn't impressed. Needless to say, an old keg No other viable reason can be given. So, we gave it another go last Friday night, and just to see the look on his face when the hour and a half old nectar slid down his throat was enough to convert any Murphy-ian to the real stuff.

I was truly converted when I went to Fountain of Youth last spring (i.e. THE brewery in Dublin). Nothing else like it. Guinness possesses the same magic that the city of Dublin has; that is, it might not look pretty on the surface, but when you give it a taste, it will keep bringing you back for more. And just thing more, if I ever see any of you goombas out there drinking this brand of stout out of a bottle... I'm going to have to kill ya.

Oooooohhhhh, Francis!

(Psst! Try the pub draught out of the cans!)

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

■ climbing

continued from page 7

located in Miller Falls. Just take route 63 north to Northeast Utilities Northfield Mountain Recreation Area, follow a quick 20 minute hike and you will be able to experience the ledges.

Farley Ledge is the best climbing in Massachusetts, offering climbers parallel-sided cracks, large roofs, and steep slabs. Located in Farley on the west edge of the town. Climbers are advised to ask Amherst Climbing shops for more information.

Rattlesnake Gutter is located in Leverett, however, access to the face is tricky. It is generally advised to check locally for its conditions and exact where abouts. Chapel Ledges is a good introductory rock climb located in Northampton just off of Old Ashville Road.

This weekend, release your anxiety suspended in the air. Revive your senses and rock climb.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist.

■ cyberspace

continued from page 9

page so that you may go there at any time in the future.

So next time you are "surfing the web" think about what is actually going on and then think to yourself, "pretty cool eh?"

Killing Time on the Web

Do you find your life boring? Are you stuck waiting for your friends getting the beer and chips? Need to procrastinate before starting that 20 page paper due tomorrow? Do you need to go shopping and do not have a car? Or do you just hunger for knowledge, both useful and useless?

Boy do I have the thing for you. Each and every week, I will provide you with places on the World Wide Web to spend your time.

First, here are a few of the search engines which will help you find what you want.

• Yahoo! www. yahoo.com/

• Alta Vista www.altavista.digital.com/

• Lycos http://a2z.lycos.com/

• Webseer (Photos only) http://webseer.cs.uchicago.edu

• CNN Interactive: This is one of the best multimedia sites on the web. It is easily navigable and user friendly. Not only can you keep abreast of breaking news stories, you can also do key word searches for previous CNN stories. Great research tool!

www.cnn.com

• ESPNet SportsZone: For all you out there who are crazed hoop fans, arm chair quarterbacks, or you just wanna know if UMass kicked Temple's butt. ESPNet is the place for you. They even have fantasy sports leagues too.

http://espnet.sportszone.com

• National Geographic: This is one of my favorite print magazines. It's online version is superb. Not only is it put together as well as its print counterpart, the online version offers many more features, such as chat areas and RealAudio, which make it an enjoyable multimedia experience.

www.nationalgeographic.com

• FAO Schwartz: This is the ultimate toy store online. This is the store in which Tom Hanks, in the movie Big, plays a giant keyboard with his feet. Now you have the chance to look at all of the wonderful toys in this world famous store.

http://www.faoschwarz.com

Patrick Shanley is a Collegian correspondent.

an undergraduate study abroad program in Classical, Byzantine and Modern Greek studies

BEAVER COLLEGE
STUDY IN GREECE

The Beaver College Study in Greece program is designed to provide North American students with a comprehensive academic and cultural experience including opportunities to undertake accredited upper division college courses in Classical, Byzantine and Modern Greek studies. Our program features:

- leadership and teaching by recognized scholars
- intensive use of local resources for field study
- required study of modern Greek
- student apartments in a local neighborhood
- field-study trips
- program-arranged cultural and social activities

Our program emphasizes experiential learning and uses the country and its people as an extension of the classroom. Students enjoy individualized attention and can enroll in a semester or a full-year program with courses on offer in areas as various as Classical Languages and Literature, Modern Greek Politics, the Byzantine Tradition and Mediterranean Ecology.

Speak to your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs or call for a free catalog today.

1.888.BEAVER-9 (1.888.232.8379)
cea@ beaver.edu
http://www.beaver.edu/cea/

ARE YOU FAST ENOUGH?
UPGRADE YOUR COMPUTER NOW !!!

We are Spott Computers, a local computer company making and servicing computers for the greater Amherst community.

CUSTOM CONFIGURATIONS
BUILT TO ORDER
SYSTEM UPGRADE
HARDWARE~SOFTWARE
PARTS & ACCESSORIES REPAIR
TROUBLE SHOOTING FIX-IT

MULTIMEDIA SYSTEM
~586 133 MHz~
~256 PIPELINE BURST CACHE~
~16 MB EDO RAM~
~8x CD ROM~
~1.44 FLOPPY~
~1.6 GB HARD DRIVE~
~5 SLOTS-MID TOWER~
~16BIT SOUND CARD~
~28.8 FAX MODEM~
~104 KEYBOARD~
~14" SVGA MONITOR~
~60 WATT SPEAKERS~ ~MOUSE~
$ 1350.00

MEMORY - 8MB RAM -72PIN ~$50.00
586 - 133/256 CACHE ~$165.00
1.6/2.0 GB HARD DRIVE ~ $240.00/ $280.00
8X/10X CD ROM DRIVE ~$120.00/$150.00
USED 15" MONITORS (CALL FOR PRICE)
PRICE INCLUDES MATERIAL AND INSTALLATION

SPOTT COMPUTERS, INCORPORATED
19 PREY STREET ~AMHERST, MA 01002 PHONE:413-549-6780

"Ale, Ale, The Gang's All Here!"
It's New... Rafter's Own Golden Ale!
Made locally with extra hops for added flavor, and served at the height of freshness.
Treat yourself to some Rafter's Golden Ale. It's quality-brewed, the old-fashioned way!
Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
Come drink in some of our local flavor.
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

MARCH INTO THE MADNESS
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

GENUINE DRAFT & GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $10.49 + DEP
NEW HARP LAGER 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP
MARCH MICRO MADNESS
SAM ADAMS, PETE'S WICKED, CATAMOUNT, OREGON, RED HOOK ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP
MICHELOB, & MICHELOB Light CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $13.99 + DEP
BECKS & BECKS DARK 12 PK. BOTTLES $8.99 + DEP
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, UTE, MICH, MICH LT, MICH AMBER BOCK, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG $39.99 + DEP

WINE OF THE MONTH
DUNNEWOOD CHARDONNAY, ZINFANDEL, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $5.49
GALLO LIVINGSTON CELLARS ALL FLAVORS 3.0 LITER $6.99
CONCHA Y TORO ALL FLAVORS 1.5 LITER $5.99
GEORGES DUBOEUF MERLOT, CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5 LITER $8.99
3 BOTTLES FOR $9.99
VENDANGE WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML
WOODCHUCK CIDER REGULAR & DARK 6 PACK BOTTLES $4.99

GORDONS VODKA 1.75L SALE $11.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $9.49
Seagram's 7 WHISKEY 750L SALE $12.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $9.49
Captain Morgan SPICED RUM 750 ML $8.99
JAMESON PREMIUM IRISH WHISKEY 750 ML $13.99
BLACK VELVET WHISKEY 1.75L $12.49
T.G.I.F. AUTHENTIC FROZEN DRINKS 1.75L $11.49

We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 3/6/97 THRU WEDS. 3/12/97
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

R&P Liquors
•Weekly Specials on Regular Beers •Fine Wines
•Largest Selection of Micro Brews in S. Amherst •Fridge Rentals

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
4th week! Curtain Daily 7&9:15 (arrive early)
FINE FINE FEATHERS PRESENTS
7 ACADEMY AWARD NOMINATIONS INCLUDING BEST PICTURE
BEST ACTOR Geoffrey Rush BEST DIRECTOR Scott Hicks
Shine
PG-13
The TRUE STORY of DAVID HELFGOTT, pianist, whose mind snapped due to the pressure of his overbearing father. The film follows his come back to the concert halls. HELFGOTT plays the film score.
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treasures 584-8135

■ sleep out

continued from page 1

ticipate in the sleep out.

Bettencourt, who is a resident assistant on the multicultural floor in Gorman residence hall, organized food drives with Gorman residents to support the protesters.

"The fact that it is pouring out and we are still here should tell the administration something, that we are very serious in our demands. The weather is not going to drive us away," she said.

In addition, Bettencourt and other supporters got a list of the protesters' professors and began writing letters to them asking for their support and understanding in the situation.

At a press conference held by protesters earlier in the afternoon, Student Government Association President Maurice Caston-Powe said they would be seeking academic amnesty from the administration.

Karston Cash, a graduate student from the social education department who was accompanied by 14 other social education majors said, "I think it is fantastic that a very diverse population has come out to support a very diverse situation."

"The protest is going very well and the amount of people that are showing up shows a definite solidarity among the students," said Jeremy Cottrill, a junior comparative literature major.

"The tents show the students who are inside Goodell that they are fully supported on the outside," he said.

Tara Dixon agreed.

"The sleep out is most beneficial to the 200 people inside. We are showing them that they are not alone. They are going through a lot of hardships for our sakes. The least I can do is spend one night out in the rain," said the senior history and comparative literature major.

"This rally is not a racial issue. It's a lot more than that. If anything it's a class issue. If you are a poor student, black or white, you are going to have problems trying to attend this university," she added.

"By the administraiion allowing the protest to go this far, it shows their ignorance and lack of understanding with the student body," said freshman Vincent Flemming.

At 8 p.m. the negotiating committee received the administration's response to students' 16 demands. As of press time the committee had not issued a statement about he administration's response.

■ Goodell

continued from page 1

would sit in the negotiation sessions in Goodell at the request of the students, I agreed at once... Without knowing why I was originally asked to participate, but as a designated neutral, I have regarded myself as an observer, rather than as a participant in the process, at least until now," said Ackermann.

Professor of Afro-American Studies Michael Thelwell spoke to the negotiating team in the afternoon while his colleague, Professor and Faculty Senate Secretary John Bracey, met with the student negotiators that evening. Bracey also addressed the collective group of students inside the Controller's Office.

"If there had been one person in here, you can bet right now he'd be in Hampshire County Jail... so there is strength in numbers. Numbers can make the system slow down and pay attention to you... and don't worry about demands or concerns that people say you're selfish and that you want your concerns first. The institution says they're committed to your concerns, so why not do yours first, if they're going to do them anyway, why not do them first? And don't feel that you're being greedy by getting to the top of the list, or that you're being selfish by having your demands met. You're entitled to have your needs met," said Bracey.

Shortly after 9 p.m. yesterday evening, the student negotiators received documents from the Administration via Ackermann. These documents included a letter by Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs Tom Robinson to the students inside Goodell, which said that he was called upon to leave the campus to attend to the appointment of a new Assistant Vice Chancellor for Enrollment Services.

"I really do not wish to leave the campus while you are still occupying Goodell. However, because of the sense of urgency with the appointment of a new Assistant Vice Chancellor for Enrollment Services, I have been encouraged by the Deputy Chancellor, my Vice Chancellor colleagues, and members of the Search Committee to proceed with these plans," said Robinson.

The second document forwarded to the students was what they had been waiting for — a revision to the University's administrative response to the student's list of demands.

These responses did not differ significantly from the original administrative written response given to the students on Tuesday.

Deputy Chancellor Marcelleite Williams, the highest ranking administrator on campus, said in the document, "We ask that you designate a leadership team to meet with designated administrators early [today] to define the steps to resolution and establish the form and timetable by which we move ahead."

"They have essentially given us the same document," said student negotiator Resa Singleton.

Bracey agreed that little concessions were given to the students in this latest document. He attempted to relay the message that the document did not address the student's concerns to Williams but was only able to reach her voice mailbox.

The student negotiators agreed that it was necessary to meet with the Deputy Chancellor last night in order to clarify several points in the second administrative response to the student's demands. Ackermann contacted Williams and left for Whitmore Administration Building to discuss this possibility.

As of 10 p.m. last night, students were still waiting to see if Williams would join them in discussion.

■ bedfellows

continued from page 10

pop hooks, brassy arrangements, and pedal steel guitars. Such tracks as "Good Clean Fun," "Some Of Shelley's Blues," and "Listen To The Band," all from '68 and '69, serve as virtual blueprints for the country-rock. His post-Monkees outfit, the First National Band, released three albums in '70- '71 which laid out the parameters of the style; "Joanne," a straight country ballad, became a top-10 single. Nesmith's success galvanized the Los Angeles session musician scene; a bunch of studio hot-shots decided to form a band as a result. You may have heard of them. They're called the Eagles.

After its initial hey-day, the country-rock scene remained largely dormant for the remainder of the '70s and the '80s. However, Uncle Tupelo almost single-handedly revitalized the genre (albeit on an indie level), and their two off-shoots, Sun Volt and Wilco, are slowly bringing it back into the mainstream. Local bands from the Scud Mountain Boys through the Figments and Tree Fort are presenly putting fresh spins on country-rock, and the Pioneer Valley isn't exactly what you'd call Opryland. Country-rock has escaped the trappings of its origins and become one of the most promising and inspired of the new shifts in music today.

John Hendrickson is a Collegian columnist.

$ $ $
Come and write for the Collegian ... No, really, it's FUN
$ $ $

Lincoln Real Estate
25 N. Pleasant Street
253 - 7879

Classe Cafe
eat heavy, eat light, eat sweet, eat smart
eat natural, eat veggie, eat meat, eat soup
EAT GOOD IT'S HERE
morningOnoonOnight
M-Sat. 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3
wine & beer
welcome OCMP
188 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291

IS SEIZURE OF BUILDING LAUGHABLE?
It is in Prof. Silver's novel SHORTCHANGERS, a hilarious send-up of multiculturalism and other fads. Enjoy some comic relief with this ideal Easter present. Signed copies at The University Store.. Only $12.95.

A wise man once said: "Music is cool and so is the Collegian..." Why not write about music — then you'll be cool too

SATURDAY APRIL 26
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
TICKETS ON SALE THIS SAT. • 10AM AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE, ALL CHARGE OUTLETS; FILENE'S VIDEO HOME STUDIO • MAIN MUSIC SHOP • BLISS VIDEO VIDEO PARADISE. CALL FOR TIX. (413) 733 2500
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT GROUP

Pearl Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
INTERNATIONAL NIGHT
Saturday, March 15 @ 9:00 PM
EVERY TUESDAY
GAY NIGHT
18+
EVERY THURSDAY
THE AREA'S BIGGEST
HIGH ENERGY
Dance Party
A FULL HOUSE EVERY WEEK
EVERY FRIDAY 9-2am
FREE BEFORE 10:00PM
RETRO NIGHT
MUSIC FROM THE 70's, 80's & 90's
EVERY SATURDAY
TEEN NIGHT
AGES 15-19 • 7:30 - 10:30 PM
LIVE MUSIC
March 5-7 @ 7:00 pm
and Sat. March 8 @ 4:00 pm
ANNIE SPRINKLE
"HARDCORE FROM THE HEART"
Fri. Mar. 7 @ 8:00 pm
SLIPKNOT
Sat. Mar. 8 @ 9:00 pm
A benefit for The Northampton Community Music Center
PANGEA
JOHN SHELDON AND BLUES STREAK
Little Brother and the Love Handle
Sun. Mar. 9 @ 7:00 pm
AGNOSTIC FRONT
Hatebreed/25 to Life
Pushbutton Warfare/Eastbreak
Wed. Mar. 12 @ 8:00 pm
Pre St. Patty's Day Party
BLACK 47
Great Big Sea
Thurs. Mar. 13 @ 8:30 pm
SHAKEDOWN
a Grateful Dead Tribute Band
Fri. Mar. 14 @ 9:00 pm
AMY FAIRCHILD BAND
The Ware River Club
Paul Hansbury of Tree Fort
UPCOMING
Thur. Mar. 20 All Ages B-SIDE RECORDS BENEFIT WITH THE INVADERS
Fri. Mar. 21 21+ TEXAS FLOOD
Sat. Mar. 22 18+ BARRY KINGSTON & THE SCREAMING SOULS
Sun. Mar. 23 All Ages LORDZ OF BROOKLYN
Wed. Mar. 26 All Ages THE DESCENDENTS
Fri. Mar. 28 18+ THE BREEDERS (Unplugged)
Fri. Mar. 28 18+ STEVE WESTFIELD & THE SLOW BAND
Sat. Mar. 29 18+ STAIND
Sun. Mar. 30 All Ages SUFFOCATION
Tue. April 1 All Ages BLOODHOUND GANG
Advance tickets available at the Northampton Box office, 586-5686, 1-800 THE TICK, Strawberries, Record Stores. For The Record in Amherst, Flood Music in Greenfield, For Untold and All Music, Plantagenet Records in Westfield, Music Outlet in Enfield, & B-Sides Records in Northampton, 586-9536
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
www.pearlstreet.com
413-584-7771**

Manning still a Vol

By Tom Sharp
Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Peyton Manning said they showed him the money, but he couldn't ignore his heart.

The Tennessee quarterback announced yesterday he will postpone the riches of the NFL for one last season of college football. The decision elated Volunteer fans and coaches, and drew respect from the NFL, whose lure is often more than undergraduates can resist.

"It was what I wanted to do for a long time," Manning said. "I wanted to be 100 percent sure, and yesterday morning I woke up 100 percent sure."

Manning, who was a likely top pick in the April 19 draft, now becomes the front-runner for the Heisman Trophy next season. Archie Manning, a star quarterback for Mississippi and the New Orleans Saints, helped his son with information on agents and salary caps.

"Twenty-five, $30 million. I'm human. Believe me, I looked at the money," Manning said. "I'm hoping the money's there next year, too, the good Lord willing I stay healthy.

"But staying was strongest in my heart. I knew that's what I wanted to do."

Manning said he played most of last season as if it were his last in college, and "was pretty intent" on leaving until the Volunteers started practice for the Citrus Bowl.

"Being around the guys I started having second thoughts," he said. "I really went back and forth."

He said he wants "to have a better experience in pro football than I did in college football. I really do. I want pro football, believe me. But I want college football one more year also, and it kind of came down to that."

■ hoop

continued from page 16

Carmelo Traviseo was the main reason why Carr, the A-10's leading scorer, had such a sub-par evening.

"I said this before, and I'll say it again," Flint said "I have the best defensive player not only in the conference but in the county on my team."

Last night, the Minutemen showed how far they have come in the past month. The remaining weeks will be a trial by fire, as to just how far they have progressed this season. To get out of Philadelphia with the conference championship, they will have to win three more games in as many days. However, Flint and company are not worried about the rigorous schedule.

"You have to be ready to play," Flint said. "If you are worried about being tired, you're not going to be a championship team."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Let's get ready to rumble...

Senior Michelle Warrington and the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team start their season next Saturday at Harvard.

DOMINO'S PIZZA
AMHERST
256-8911
BUFFALO WINGS
20 BUFFALO WINGS $8.99
TIP TOP SAVINGS
1 LARGE 2-TOPPING PIZZA & 4 COKES $11.99
BONUS
$1.00 OFF ANY MEDIUM PIZZA OR $2.00 OFF ANY LARGE PIZZA
LARGE DOUBLE
2 LARGE 1-TOPPING PIZZAS $15.99
DOMINO'S IS BEST
1 MEDIUM 2-TOPPING PIZZA & 2 COKES $8.99
MEAL DEAL
MEDIUM 2-TOPPING PIZZA, TWISTY BREAD & 2 CANS OF COKE $9.99

Interested in Fishing?
Why not write for Sports...

FEEDING FRENZY!
1/2 PRICE APPETIZERS
Wed-Sat 3-5pm & 7-11pm
Sun-Tues 3-5pm & 7-9pm
Super Nachos & Guacamole (Reg. $6.75)
Homemade Onion Rings (Reg. $3.95)
Potato Skins (Reg. $5.75)
Buffalo Wings (Reg. $4.95)
Artichoke & Cheese Dip (Reg. $5.75)
and lots more!!!
THE PUB
15 East Pleasant Street

BARNSTABLE RECREATION
SEASONAL OPENINGS AVAILABLE AS FOLLOWS:

POSITIONS	RATE	MUST HAVE
SUPERINTENDENTS	9.50	SFA, CPR
GATE ATTENDANTS	6.00	SFA, CPR
BATH ATTENDANTS	5.00	NOT REQUIRED
LIFEGUARDS	7.50	SFA, BLS/CPR, LGT, WSI
SWIM INSTRUCTORS	8.00	SFA, BLS/CPR
SAILING INSTRUCTORS	8.00	LGT, BLS/CPR
SEASONAL RANGERS	6.50	SFA, CPR
CAMP COUNSELORS	6.50	SFA, CPR
CAMP DIRECTORS	8.00	SFA, CPR

CALL (508) 790 - 6345 M - F 8:30 FOR AN APPLICATION AND JOB DESCRIPTION.
OTHER POSITIONS AVAILABLE: GYMNASTIC INSTRUCTORS, TRACK COACHES, TENNIS INSTRUCTORS

SpRing WhiteWater!
Whitewater Rafting is one of the best ways to break out of the mid-semester blues! Our great Spring Rates make the most exciting season a real bargain.
From April 15-May 15 rafting for as little as $54 on the Zoar Gap section of the Deerfield River.
ZOAR OUTDOOR
Charlemont, Massachusetts
CALL NOW TO BOOK YOUR SPRING RAFTING ADVENTURE!
800 532-7483

DISCOVER STARS ON ICE
SMUCKER'S
Kristi YAMAGUCHI Scott HAMILTON
Jayne TORVILL & Christopher DEAN
Paul WYLIE Kurt BROWNING
Ekaterina GORDEEVA
BECHKE & PETROV • ROSALYNN SUMNERS
JILL TRENARY • KOVARIKOVA & NOVOTNY
Directed and Co-Produced By SANDRA BEZIC
FRIDAY, MARCH 21 • 7:30 P.M.
MULLINS CENTER
Tickets: $35.50 and $25.50 at the Mullins Center box office and all locations. Ticketmaster Charge-By-Phone: 413/733-2500
General information: 413/545-0505. Purchase tickets with your Discover Card and $2.00 per ticket will be donated to the Make A Wish Foundation of Western Massachusetts.

SPRING BREAK BLOW OUT AT —
THURSDAY • FRIDAY • SATURDAY
9:30-1:00 AM
Klub Kai
The Area's Newest Dance Club
$1 Tequila Shots
$2 Import Drinks Special
$2 Corona Bottles
99¢ Bud & Bud Light Draft
$2 Food Combo Platter
DRESS TO IMPRESS • PROPER ATTIRE & POSITIVE I.D. REQUIRED • 21+
FRIENDLY • CLEAN • PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
MT. PARAN MALL • HADLEY • 586-2776

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
TOKYO Roundtrip $799
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave NY NY 10173
212 986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Spring Breakin'

ZAMA
downtown Amherst

New at Alfredo's
Photographic Gallery
GO UMASS!
POSTERS - A variety of subjects ranging from your favorite professional athlete to exotic landscapes.
SPORTS PHOTOS - Up close shots that capture the heat of the moment
REASONABLY PRICED AND CONVENIENTLY LOCATED IN AMHERST CENTER
39 S. PLEASANT ST.
413 - 253 - 1707
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

Hockey East playoffs nearing

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

While the Maine Black Bears enjoy their probation this weekend somewhere on a beach in Florida, the rest of the Hockey East will be squaring off in a quarterfinal best-of- three series.

Massachusetts skates into No. 6 New Hampshire's palatial Whittemore Center tomorrow night at 7 p.m. to kick off a series with the Wildcats. This will be just one of four such series played this weekend, the victors to meet a week from tomorrow at the FleetCenter. The following is a look at each quarterfinal series, except for the UMass series, which will be covered in depth in tomorrow's Collegian.

Leigh Torbin
HOCKEY EAST

Northeastern at Boston University:

On paper, this dog fight between the Huskies and Terriers at Walter Brown Arena would more resemble a dog fight between a Pit Bull and a Shiitzu.

BU has won 25 of the last 28 meetings between the two schools, all three this year, and is 10-2 in the '90s in Hockey East playoff games at home, including a certain shellacking of UMass last year.

The Huskies have a lot of pride though and are hard to completely count out. Coach Bruce Crowder and his Huntington Hounds have a lot of pride, especially when it comes to battling the boys on Babcock Street, but don't expect much from this cross-town rivalry except for a two game BU sweep.

UMass-Lowell at Providence:

The upstart River Hawks travel to face the defending league champs this weekend and could make this series need a third game, but in the end the River Hawks won't be flying into the FleetCenter next weekend without buying tickets.

March is the time that Paul Pooley's Friars shine and his well-crafted system witnesses its maximum effect. UMass- Lowell has exceeded its expectations already this year, but will go no further. The Friars, behind Dan Dennis, sweep this one with some soccer-style scores.

Boston College at Merrimack:

The most istriguing matchup of the opening round actually kicks off tonight and not tomorrow when the not-so-mighty- Warriors host their first-ever home Hockey East playoff game after failing to qualify for last year's tourney. The Warriors have dropped eight of their nine all-time playoff games and have never advanced to the semifinals, but some wonder if that could change in the frozen confines of the Volpe Complex, the poor excuse for a high school arena that Merrimack calls home.

The slumping Eagles have the better club, but for what ever reason, just don't match up well with Merrimack, which took the season series in convincing fashion with a recent home-and-home sweep.

The glut of mediocrity after the top teams in the league enabled Merrimack to host these games, a move that has to vex the league officials, who receive 100 percent of the ticket revenue from the 748 who might attend each game as opposed to the 3,000-plus that BC averages for home games.

As for the games themselves, BC is just too talented up front not to take two out of three. Marty Reasoner, likely Rookie of the Year Blake Bellefeuille and others should do more damage to the overrated Martin Leagult than captain Rob Beck and his mates will do to the stone-wall known as Greg Taylor.

Expect the Terriers and Eagles to hop on the Green Line's B train to the North Station stop next weekend and meet up with Providence there.

JORMA KANGANEN / COLLEGIAN

BU's captain Bill Pierce will be leading the Terriers into first round action this weekend against Northeastern.

■ baseball

continued from page 16

accommodate the loss of jette and Murphy. Sophomore Doug Clark will play center in place of Murphy. Clark made second team All A-10 honors in 1996 as a DH, and could be the most athletic player on the team. Clark also plays football for the Minutemen and led Coach Hodges' squad in 1996 with 20 catches and three touchdowns. Pete Gautreau will play rightfield. The left-field position, however, is still up for grabs with freshman Shuan Skeffington and sophomore Aaron Braunstein battling for the position.

It is pretty much the same situation concerning the pitching staff. There were some key losses, including the graduation of David Dart (5-1, 3.77 ERA), and Chad Paronto, who signed with the Baltimore Orioles. But like the rest of the ballclub, there are more than enough bodies to fill out the staff.

According to Coach Stone, the top three spots in the rotation belong to Jason Bennett, Scott Barnsby and Bill Cooke. The trio combined for 16 wins and 140 2-3 innings last season.

Senior righthander Jason Bennett will provide leadership on the mound. Bennett went 6-3 last season, with six complete games and a 4.35 ERA. Overall, Bennett is 16-3 in his three years with the Minutemen, including an 8-0, 2.63 ERA performance in 1995.

Barnsby has quietly developed into one of the better pitchers in the A-10. The 6-foot-1 righthander went 4-0 last year, and ranked second on the team with a 3.80 ERA. Barnsby also brought the first Beanpot championship back to Amherst in 1996, pitching a four hit, 11 strikeout gem to beat Northeastern in the championship game at Fenway Park.

Cooke is only a sophomore, but the lefthander went 6-2 last season, with a 4.26 ERA. According to Stone, Cooke has excellent command of the strike zone and a good breaking ball.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Shortstop Brad Gorrie, a 1996 All A-10 first team selection, will help anchor the UMass baseball team this season.

Atticus Books is honored to host a reading and signing with Stephen B. Oates
who will read from his new book
The Approaching Fury
Voices of the storm, 1820-1861
March 8, 1997
2:00 PM
ATTICUS/ALBION BOOKSHOP
8 MAIN STREET, AMHERST, MA
(413) 256-1547
Seating is limited

Are you a person who has trouble staying with an exercise program? If you are looking for a way to effectively alter an already existing program, or begin a new program especially designed for your unique goals, then join the innovative resistance training programs developed by our unique
Personal Training Staff
Allow our fitness experts to design exercise programs that meet specific needs like:
• Traditional resistance training programs developed for novice or advanced individuals
• How to find a program designed for individuals with lower back pain
• Dance-exercise resistance training programs
• Incorporating meditation while training with weights
The Coordinator will select the most experienced trainer depending on your individual goals
Cost: $50 includes 5 visits with Personal Trainer
initial fitness assessment to determine which program suits your individuals needs, and an orientation session with trainer
Those interested in learning how to conduct a healthy lifestyle, contact Coordinator of Personal Trainers Tinaz Hakim at 259-2011.

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
NEW! "Genuine Draft & Light" 30-pk $10.49
Super Buy! Longshot "Pale Ale & Black Lager" $14.99/case
Vodka 80 $8.99 1.75 L
Captain Morgan Special Rum $16.99 1.75 L
"MICRO MADNESS" CONTINUES!
Sam Adams - all their flavors, including "Double Bock"!
Pete's - all 10 different flavors including "Strawberry Blond"!
Oregon - I.P.A., nut Brown Ale, Honey Red, Raspberry, & "Blackberry Porter"!
Middlesex - nut Brown, Raspberry Wheat & "Oatmeal Stout"!
Smuttynose - Pale Ale, Chuck Wheat, & infamous "Old Brown Dog Ale"!
Mix & Match "two" 6/PKS... $9.95
Wow!
Franzia Wines 5 liter boxes $6.99
Check out Russell's many Imbibers Specials
•All Beers Plus Deposit• OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

Positions Available
The Collegian is accepting applications for:
• Associate Finance Manager
• Associate Advertising Manager
• Associate Business Manager
Sophomore students encouraged to apply, all will be considered.
For more information call Alycia Hines at 545-3500, or come to the Collegian located at 113 Campus Center Basement

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

"Get-loyed" at Club Metro Saturday, March 8th. 9pm -2am 18 to party, 21 to drink. Win a free trip for 2 to the BAHAMAS!! and enjoy our tropical drink specials and free giveaways. So come and jam to NY House Beats and dance the night away! For more info call the PLAYA hotline..253-6623. Thanks again for all of your support.

Have you had a horror story/good experience at Health Services? We are doing a story- please tell us about it! Call Christina 8-6777 at night or leave a message

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Excellent 4 bedrooms/2 bath apt. on bus line. Beginning 6/1/97. Call 253-6301 4 info

AUTO FOR SALE

1977 Ford T-Bird good running condition, many extras $450 Call 538-7808

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

1986 Volkswagen GTI $400 or B/O call Kelly @ 253-7096

1967 Chevy S10 Pickup standard, 4-speed, 4 cyl.,126K, runs and drives. Part or restore $1500 or B/O. Call 548-8347

1993 Saturn 4-door, 5-speed, no A/C, airbag, CD, power roof, ABS, 115K, excellent condition; $5500 or B/O 545-1408 or 967-9738

1990 Honda CRX Si standard, new tires, red, moon roof, 83K miles, $5500 or B/O Call Derek at 548-9286

EMPLOYMENT

Loving, responsible, mature, non-smoker wanted to care for 2 year old and infant twins in our South Hadley home Mon.-Thurs 8:30am-4:30pm. References required. 536-1899

LEADERS NEEDED! Summer teenage bicycling trips. US, Canada and Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, Ashfield Rd Conway, MA 01341 (800)343-8132

COUNSELORS: Top Boys' Sports Camp in Maine Get in on an exciting fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist. Openings in Baseball, Basketball, Soccer, Tennis, Hockey, Lax, Swimming/WSI, Water-skiing, and all Water Sports. Plus Camping and Hiking, Ropes and Climbing Wall, Scuba, English Horseback Riding, Archery, Rifle ry, Arts and Crafts, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top salaries, awesome facilities, room/board/laundry, travel! Call 1(800) number now! (800)473-6104 for an appointment for an interview on March 11th in the Student Union Ballroom 10am-4pm or E-mail:cobbcamp@aol.com or write Steve Rubin, Camp Cobbossee (Kah'bah'see) 10 Silvermine Dr., South Salem, NY 10590

Counselors for coed Northeast Pennsylvania overnight Jewish Federation Camp3 hours from NYC3- general, sports, drama, H2O and arts, (800)973-3666

Drivers Wanted Apply at Pinnochio's between 2:00pm. and 5:00pm. No phone calls

EMPLOYMENT

Visit The Animal Friends Summer Camp booth on Camp Day, March 11th. Spend your summer on Cape Cod teaching children about proper pet care and the environment. Many counselor positions available. Also need a cook!! Room and Board provided. (617)426-9170

Silver Jewelry- Buy Wholesale Direct From Manufacturer. Sell To Students $99 Investment Brings You $400 Call 1-800-256-3491

Change A Life...it could be your own Summer adventure/challenge at coed resident Camp Hazen YMCA. Call Terri Mullis (800)448-8244 for application/information. Campus Interviews March 11

Student Employment Services 70% placement rate Retail to Biotech Nationwide International Full Time Internships. Enroll now. $19.95 registration fee We do the rest 1-800-256-3491

Camp Sloane YMCA, Lakeville, CT. In search of energetic counselors and supervisors for an unforgettable outdoor summer experience. To set up an interview On Campus March 11, call Sharon Brown @ (800)645-9367

Temporary Positions Available
During Spring Break
Hadley Office/ On bus line
Earn up to $250
Evening Shifts Available
Also hiring for summer
Call now 584-0215
Ask for Mr. Baird

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Work in America's National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3624 ext. N50018. (We are a research and publishing company)

EMPLOYMENT

Babchertown Recreation Dept. Seeking swim coaches (May-July) Experience preferred. M-F. EOE. ADA. Call Beth, Day (413)323-0419 Night: (413)967-4651

National Parks Hiring Plus Forest, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting Companies. Up to $12/hour. Nationwide Openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext. R180.

MAKE SUMMER MEMORIES JOBS AVAILABLE TOP NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS MARCH 11th

Positions Available: basketball, softball, roller hockey, tennis, lacrosse, swimming/WSI, sailing/WSI, water skiing, arts and crafts (ceramics, sewing, scenery, woodworking, photography, fine arts), science and nature, pioneering, ropes course and climbing wall, archery, gymnastics, drama, music, horseback riding, and general counselors.

MUST BE ENTHUSIASTIC AND LOVE WORKING WITH CHILDREN AND ADULTS!!!!

PLEASE CALL TO SET UP AN INTERVIEW...
TRAIL'S END CAMP (800)408-1404
(ASK FOR MARC)

Do You Love Kids? Top Northeast Residential Camps seek Activity and Cabin Specialists to live and work with kids ages 7-16. Great facilities, dynamic staff! Flexible, diverse programming in all Water/Land Sports, Creative and Performing Arts, plus full range of outdoors/experiential activities. Lots of positions available. Contact Andy at Staff Search, (800)544-5448 for more information/application. Interviewing in Amherst, March 10-11

Summer Camp Positions in upstate New York. Camp Hilltop is seeking caring counselors with skills in swimming, water and land sports, A&C, horses, dance, music, mountain biking, riflery, archery, computers, high/low ropes. Competitive salaries (800)762-5319

FUN! FRIENDLY! Co-ed Summer Camp in the Berkshires seeks new staff! Welcoming and supportive environment. Positions include: General, Bunk Counselors, Heads and Instructors for Swimming, Sailing, Water-skiing, Baseball/Softball, Golf, Gymnastics, Lacrosse, Hockey, Archery, Soccer, Music, Pottery, Tennis, Horseback and more. Day Off accessibility to Boston, New York, Montreal. Call Today! Camp Schodack (800)851-1164, E-Mail Schodack@aol.com (508)477-6000

Now Large Dorm Fridge Price negotiable. Also snowboard with bindings. Call 253-9965

FOUND

A Watch Friday night at 21 Hobart. Contact 253-6879 w/ a description

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 21st Birthday to KELLY & LAUREN Love the Sisters of Tri-Sigma!

To "Hack" Finn
Happy 21st!
Everyone else- drink now while there is still some left to drink!
We love you!

FOR RENT

West Yarmouth Cottage four rooms, two bedrooms, sleeps four. Call 253-7436

Six room, four bedroom, 1 1/2 baths, sleeps eight. In West Yarmouth. Call 253-7436

FOR RENT

College Kids Welcome to Cape Cod 1-5 bedroom homes for the season. Reasonable rates. Honey Spanos (508)398-8367, (508)994-2857

1 bedroom in a 3 bedroom apt. Fulton Village. On major bus route. 5 min. from campus/10 min. walking distance. Electric not included. $275/month. Lease ends 8/97. Starts ASAP. Please call Larry 546-0198

Pelham 2 bedroom Mobile Home Gas, heat. No pets. First, last and security $500/month. 253-5413

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

New Large Dorm Fridge Price negotiable. Also snowboard with bindings. Call 253-9965

MISCELLANEOUS

SEEKING FINANCIAL AID? Get the system to help find FREE MONEY FOR COLLEGE! Detailed profiles on 200,000+ individual rewards from private and public sectors. Call Student Financial Services (800)472-9575 ext. FS0017 (We are a research and publishing company)

Gorillagrams
Birthdays, Anniversaries, Roses, Balloons, etc. Send the Crazy Gorilla. We'll go anywhere, anytime. Student Rates. Call 256-0287

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours $395
American Academy
1-800-908-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

BARTEND with University Bartending 50% Student Discount. On Campus Classes Starting Soon! Call 1-800-U-Can-Mix for info

Boxing Three private 1/2 hour lessons, $89.95. Call (413)732-8817 In Amherst Tues. and Thurs. eve

LOST

Gold Bracelet Name and date engraved Sentimental value. 546-1699

TRAVEL

Spring Break '97- Don't be left out! Space limited! Cancun and Jamaica from $449. Florida from $139. Call STS @ 1-800-648-4849 for the best rates!

Caribbean/Mexico $199 R/T Europe $169 O/W. Fly the world dirt cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL 587-0001

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus: $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED TO RENT

Four bedroom house or apartment wanted for Fall '97. Will take over summer lease. Call 549-5062

WANTED

Tutor for Comp Sci 401 (501) Please call Greg 549-8569

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Lions needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming! Call Dave and Ryan 665-3112

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals or a vindictive or libelous nature are not accepable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors result ing from illegible handwriting or type

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, MARCH 6

Lecture — Barbara Rheinhold, director of the Career Development Office at Smith College presents "Out in the Workplace: To Be or Not to Be." The event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, wheelchair accessible. Sponsored by the UMass Stonewall Center.

Lecture — "Math and the Cold War — Russian Style" presented by General Alexei Farfel, Ret., will be held at 11:15 a.m. in Room 121, Lederle Graduate Research Tower.

Meeting — Kesher, Hillel's Reform group, is having its first meeting at 6:15 p.m. at the Hillel House. All are welcome. Help us plan upcoming events and brainstorm.

Workshop, discussion — Are you graduating and/or looking for a job or internship and have a disability? Are you worried about disclosing your disability? The Peer Mentor Network along with Disability Services and Learning Disabled Support Services are presenting a workshop on "Disclosure: What to do?" from 6–8 p.m. in the Campus Center. Please join the PMN, D.S., LDSS and the campus community for a roundtable discussion on disclosure. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

FRIDAY, MARCH 7

Conference — The University of Massachusetts Baha'i Club will sponsor a two-day conference on "Foundations of Racial Unity," starting today at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 1009, and continue tomorrow from 11 a.m.– 6:30 p.m. Keynote speakers will be Dr. Robert Henderson and Dr. Joy D. Leary. All are welcome. Free to Five College students, $10 all others.

Open house — Pride and Heritage of Color, an organization for GLBT people of color, would like to invite all gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender people of color to our Open House. This open house is for all GLBT people of color who may want to become affiliated with Pride and Heritage of Color. The event is free and will be held from 4–6 p.m. in the Stonewall Center. Soft drinks and snacks will be provided, so come out and support us. For more information please contact the UMass Stonewall Center at (413) 545–4824 or Sean at 546–5637.–

Religious — The UMass Hillel House will hold a Shabbat Service led by USY Reunion Group at 6 p.m. All welcome.

SATURDAY, MARCH 8

Comedy — The UMass Comedy troupe, Mission Improvable, will perform an improv comedy show in the Campus Center Basement at 8 p.m. Free.

Community service — The "Big Rally" Community Service Conference, sponsored by the UMass Community Service Program, will be held from 9:30 a.m.–3 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163. The conference begins with a debate on whether or not community service should be a mandatory part of the curriculum at UMass. Anyone involved or interested in community service and service learning is invited to attend. To register, simply call the Community Service Program office at 545–3327.

Conference — Day two of the UMass Baha'i Club's conference on "Foundations of Racial Unity" in the Campus Center, room 1009, from 11 a.m.–6:30 p.m. All are welcome. Free to Five College students, $10 all others.

NOTICES

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545–9484.

Elections — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the elections for the positions of President, Student Trustee and all local Area Government will be held on March 11 and 12 from 11 a.m.–2 p.m. and 4:30–7 p.m. Locations to be announced.

Writing submissions mOtherTongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one-acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at 413–323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Band wanted — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently seeking a four piece band for the spring production of Fame. The band must include: keyboard, guitar, bass, and drums. Great publicity possibilities. For more information call Heather @ 549–3681 or Justin @ 549–1480.

Coffee Shop — Student Valley Productions is holding a Coffee Shop in April. They are looking for any talent coming from the Five College area in music, songs, poetry, skits, comedy, etc. For more information, call Daisy @ 253–6514.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

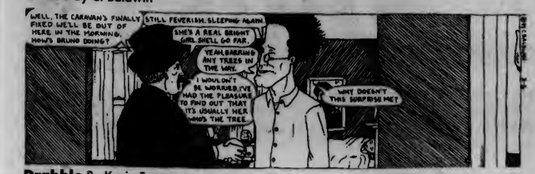
Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

PVTs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PVI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN — Housing Services Cable Network



2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23 CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24 CNN/Headline News
4	CBS/4	Boston	25 BET
5	ABC/5	Boston	26 BET on Jazz
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27 UCTV
7	HSCN	Movie Channel	28 The Learning Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29 TV Land
9	Weather Channel		30 Comedy Central
10	NBC/30	New Britain	32 Much Music
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

Bueno Y Sano
1 Boltwood Walk in Amherst
Pick-up 253-4000

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 6, 1997

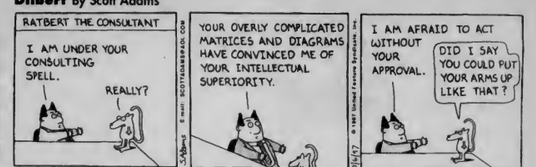
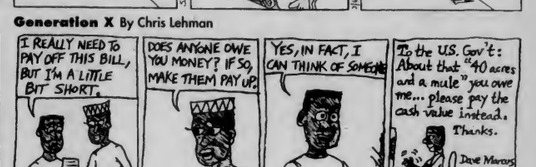
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	0	(12) Creatures	Business Rpt.	NewsHour With Jim Lehrer		Connection for AS	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)	Billy Graham (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WFSB	0	(3) News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Billy Graham (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WGGB	0	(4) News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Moloney (R) (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	0	(5) News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	High Incident (R) (In Stereo)		High Incident (R) (In Stereo)		Vital Signs (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	0	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		"The Pick-Up Artist" (1987, Comedy)		Molly Ringwald.		Nerds		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	0	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld (R)	3rd Rock-Sun	Prince Street "Prior"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	0	(6) Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV (R)	Cape "Family Values" (R)		Baywatch Nights (R)		LAPD		N. Patrol	Real TV (R)
WVIT	0	(8) News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld (R)	3rd Rock-Sun	Prince Street "Prior"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	0	(11) Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Martin	Living Single	New York Undercover (R)		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	0	(22) News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld (R)	3rd Rock-Sun	Prince Street "Prior"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	0	(6) Creatures	Business Rpt.	NewsHour With Jim Lehrer		Mystery! "Cadfael" "The Virgin in the Ice" (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 3)				Dangerfield (In Stereo)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	0	(22) News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	High Incident (R) (In Stereo)		Vital Signs (In Stereo)		Turning Point (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	0	Beverly Hills: 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld		NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at New York Islanders. (Live)					News	Med Abe. You	Real TV (R)
WTBS	0	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	"Road House" (1989, Drama) Patrick Swayze, Kelly Lynch.					Shirley Davidson and the Mayflower Men" (1993)
A&E	0	Quincy "Crib Job"		Equalizer "Ragers Only"		Biography: Andrew Carnegie	Ancient Mysteries			Unexplained (R)		Law & Order "White Rabbit"
CNN	0	(2) WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	0	(8) Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	"Mystery Date" (1991, Comedy) Ethan Hawke, Teri Polo.				Comic Relief	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	0	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings "King of Mercy" (R)		Wild Discovery: Lighting Bird		Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Time Traveler (R)		Wild Discovery: Lighting Bird
ESPN	0	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: ACC Tournament First Round — Teams TBA		College Basketball: Big East Quarterfinal — Teams TBA						Sportscenter
LIFE	0	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Something to Live For: The Alison Gertz Story" (1992, Drama)				Living	Mysteries
MTV	0	Ren & Stimpy	Sports (R)	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)		Yo! (In Stereo)				Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	0	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret-of Alex	Happy Days	Love Lucy	Monsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI	0	Twilight Zone	Darkside	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)		Tekwar (R) (In Stereo)		Forever Knight "Haunted"		Sci-Fi Buzz	Inside Space	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)
TLC	0	Furniture	Renovation	Homefirms (R)	Hometime (R)	Real America: 48 Hours		Hanging Coffins (R)		Futurs Fantastic "Immortals"		Real America: 48 Hours (R)
TNT	0	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		"Fairshance" (1983, Musical) Jennifer Beals, Michael Nouri.				ShoWest Awards
USA	0	Renegade "Repo Reno"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, Sha Wrote		"Mr. Baseball" (1992, Comedy) Tom Selleck. (In Stereo)				Wings	Wings
HBO	0	(430)		"Modern Problems" (1981) Chevy Chase.		"Strange Days" (1995, Science Fiction) Ralph Fiennes. (In Stereo)						Comedy Jam	Autopsy 2: Vickie-Dead
MAX	0	"Free Willy 2: The Adventure Home" (1995, Adventure) PG				"Mitchell Gun Blues" (1996, Drama)				"GoodFellas" (1990, Drama) Robert De Niro, Ray Liotta. (In Stereo)
SHOW	0	(330) "Patton"	"Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles II: Coza"			"Hook" (1991, Fantasy) Robin Williams, Dustin Hoffman. (In Stereo) PG

Bruno By C. Baldwin



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University² By Frank Cho

Christina By the Former Arts Girl

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.

	Franklin	Worcester	Hampshire	Berkshire
LUNCH	Cowburger Cheese Pizza Vegan Falafel Sandwich/ Falafel Sauce	Hot Turkey Sandwich Macaroni w/ Tom. Sauce Lentil Chili	Cowburger Grilled Chick. Sandwich BBQ Beef on a Bun	Hot Turkey Sandwich Pizza Macaroni & Tom. Sauce Lentil Chili
DINNER	Breaded Chicken Tenders Jamaican Beef Patty Bean/Corn/Tom. Casserole Grilled Cheeze	Breaded Chicken Tenders Mexican Vegie Stew Pastabilities	Savory Breaded Chicken — Cutlet Tender Fingers Jamaican Beef Patty	Breaded Chicken Tenders Jamaican Beef Patty Mexican Vegie Stew

Leodee By Mike Rybicki

Leold (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

I've had plenty of time to improve things for myself, but I haven't done much.

My favorite bonsai died.

I spent the heart of last Saturday night painting its dead leaves a different subtle shade of green.

I need someone who thinks putting makeup on a tiny dead tree is compassionate ... someone who would say, "How lovely, Leold. You've worked so hard this evening. Why don't we go out and have some tea?."

And when that someone special dies I'll paint makeup on their face or vice versa.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
Enjoy a week filled with holiday cheer and try to relax—stress will prevent you from making the most of a family gathering. Ignore a busybody's cruel remarks if you possibly can.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
Practice tact throughout this holiday week, in the interest of family harmony. Someone close to you is feeling the effects of a difficult season. Try to help, if you can.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Exciting holiday gatherings may take most of your time, but try to make contact with someone distant who may be in need of a little attention. You'll be glad you did.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
A bold move earns you respect from an unexpected quarter. Follow it up with some solid bu...ginessing, and you could really make a big impression on someone whose opinion really counts. Don't be afraid of a bachelor at work.

LEO
July 23–August 23
Someone who's bothering you may be doing so as a result of a deep insecurity. Try to defuse any impression of competition between you, and see if that doesn't alter the chemistry.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
It's possible this week to alter someone's opinion of you. It could go either way, so be sure to put on a happy face. Holiday gatherings are a source of pleasure and excitement for you and your family.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Someone who shares your interests in most areas could be the other half of a holiday romance for you. Don't be afraid to put out feelers to see where their interests lie.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
Changes at work could be causing you to worry. Get as much information as you can. It will ease your mind to know what's really happening. If your stress level continues to rise, confide in an intimate associate for some sound advice.

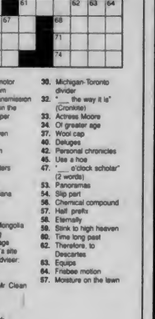
SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
Don't neglect last-minute chores in your holiday excitement. A list will help you organize your time. Institute a new family tradition, to make this holiday a memorable one.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
Fulfilling a promise, even if it's difficult, is a big part of making this holiday go smoothly for you. If you've forgotten something, or are feeling overwhelmed, ask for help.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
Professionalism is the key throughout a tense office situation. Spreading (or starting!) gossip could really hurt your reputation, reduce your effectiveness, and hurt someone's feelings, so don't indulge.

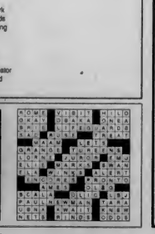
PISCES
February 19–March 20
Pay close attention to holiday finances. You may be tempted to spend more than you had planned, but you will regret it later if you do. Plan travel carefully, and allow for potential bad weather, if that's a factor.

Close to Home By John McPherson



"This is our new Romance Enhancer shower curtain. It makes everything look 25 percent slimmer."

Quota of the Day



"Concubinage too has been corrupted — by marriage"
–Nietzche

ACROSS
1. Earn
5. Pawns
9. Different
13. "You're Only Old ___" (Doctor Seuss)
14. Asunder
15. Mexican food
16. Belly of cartoons
17. Sissy Spacek film
18. Hal Holbrook on "Evening Shade"
19. Visceral
21. Kids with finger paints
23. Superman's mom, in the movies
25. Moran of "Happy Days"
26. Conductor ___ Queler
28. In the chips
31. Likewise
35. Power ratio
36. Clean hard
38. Lucy's landlady
39. Young spirit
41. Broadcasted
43. Football unit
44. Provide money for
46. "Andrea ___"
48. Three: Italian
49. Farm implement pioneer
50. Meticulous
51. Mideast land: abbr.
52. Guns the motor
55. Nursery item
57. Genetic transmission
61. Glossy ad in the Sunday paper
65. Tied up
66. Make uneven
68. Troika
69. Come upon
70. Goods
71. Prairie oysters
72. Verses
73. Cloth out
74. Betsy or Diana

DOWN
1. Desert in Mongolia
2. Before long
3. Graven image
4. Annapurna a site
5. Financial adviser: abbr.
6. Sculls
7. Target for Mr. Clean
8. Direct
9. Forever
10. Wash
11. Wound mark
12. Long periods
14. Patriotic song
20. Gobs
22. Deputy
24. Pungent
26. Receded
27. Nemo's creator
29. Omit a word
30. Michigan-Toronto divider
32. "___ the way it is" (Cronkite)
33. Actress Moore
34. Of greater age
37. Wool cap
40. Deluges
42. Personal chronicles
45. Use a hoe
47. "___-o'clock scholar" (2 words)
53. Panoramas
54. Slip part
56. Chemical compound
57. Half: prefix
58. Eternally
59. Stink to high heaven
60. Time long past
62. Therefore, to Descartes
63. Equips
64. Fiddler motion
67. Moisture on the lawn

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

SPORTS

Thursday, March 6, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

UM destroys Explorers, 64–49

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA— For the Massachusetts men's basketball team, things were much different this time around.

First off, the Minutemen have not played in an A-10 tournament first round game in quite some time. Additionally, the same Minutemen, who edged LaSalle 56- 50 in the teams earlier meeting in January, exploded to destroy the Explorers 64–49 last night to advance to the tourney's quarterfinals.

UMass	64
LaSalle	49

With the win, UMass brings its record to 19–12, while LaSalle ends its season at 10–17. The Minutemen, who are the East No. 3 seed, will face West No. 2 George Washington tonight at 9 p.m. (ESPN2\UVC).

UMass used its momentum out of the locker room to get an early edge on the Explorers, who just couldn't recover. Neither team was particularly exciting in the game's early going, but UMass used its inside muscle and forced LaSalle to foul in the paint.

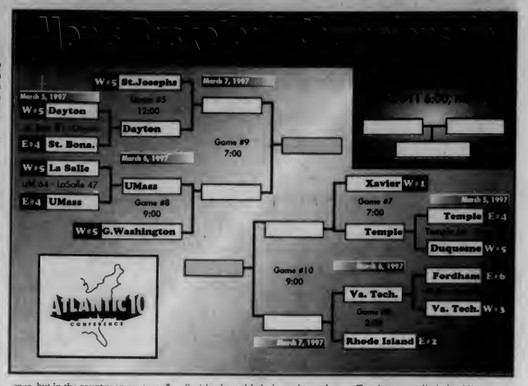
Lari Ketner got Massachusetts on the board first with a free throw just over 50 seconds into the game. He followed with a tip–in two minutes later to give UMass a 3–0 lead.

The Minutemen also benefited from strong play from their defensive core. In fact, they held the Explorers scoreless for the first five minutes of the half. LaSalle finally notched a score with 15:05 remaining when guard Mike Gizzi drained a jumper.

UMass led from wire to wire, but LaSalle made things interesting when the Explorers started to heat up on the perimeter. Shaun Smith nailed a three pointer to cut the UMass lead to one, with 8:34 left in the half. But Carmelo Travieso answered by dropping a bomb of his own. Twenty seconds later, Gizzi stepped up and fired a trey to make the margin one once again, and Smith did the same 30 seconds later.

"We felt we could put them away early, but then they started hitting uncontested three point shots," Charlton Clarke, who finished with 13 points, said. "But that's not what Coach Flint wanted. We tried to shut them down, and that opened up the game."

But the Minuteman would not let the Explorers get any closer. By going to its inside game, UMass was able to penetrate LaSalle's zone and score in the paint. Tyrone Weeks hit two from the line, and Winston Smith added a layup to give their team a 32–28 lead and the momentum going into the locker room.



What the Minutemen started at the end of the first half they continued in the second, by reeling off the first 15 points of the second frame. In almost identical fashion as the first half, the Explorers did not score until the final period was six minutes old.

With a 17 point cushion once LaSalle hit its first bucket of the half UMass cruised to a 15 point win.

One of the reasons the Minutemen were able to hold the Explorers to such a low shooting percentage (28 percent) was the defensive play of Travieso. The senior shooting guard had the unenviable task of guarding the league's rookie and defensive player of the year. But Travieso held the freshman star to only 10 points, an accomplishment well worth noting considering Donnie Carr broke his own rookie record single game scoring mark last week.

"I said it all before, and I'll say it again. I think I have the best defensive player not only in the conference, but in the country on my team," Flint said. "Today, he had to play against Donnie Carr, and he did an outstanding job."

Carr tied for the lead on the Explorers scoring sheet with Smith. Smith also added six assist and as many steals. Weeks was the high man for UMass, finishing the game with a game high 21 points. He also added 11 rebounds to earn his eleventh double double in 22 starts. Travieso supplied the Minutemen with 11 points and three assists, while Edgar Padilla helped out with five assists of his own. UMass shot a season high 56 percent from the floor.

Minutemen use 2nd half run to crush LU

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNIK - COLLEGIAN
Carmelo Travieso and the Massachusetts men's basketball team opened up A–10 tournament play by knocking off LaSalle last night.

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA— The last time the Massachusetts men's basketball team faced LaSalle, the Minutemen were a different squad. While they managed to squeak by the Explorers with a six point win, they were a far cry from the team which crushed LaSalle 64–49 in the first round of the A–10 tournament last night.

The last time the two schools met, UMass struggled in transition, and at times played very disjointed ball. Last night, the Minutemen's game was physical proof as to just how far this team has come.

"The first game we were just getting comfortable with ourselves, just getting adjusted," UMass guard Charlton Clarke said. "We weren't really the team we are now. In this game, we just wanted to go out for the kill, and go on to dominate the game and to move on to the next game."

Are the Minutemen adjusted now?

This time around, UMass opened the second half with a 17–2 run, a testament to its controlled and poised play. This contrasts starkly with their style of play earlier this season, when they tended to put up more outside shots than necessary, especially when they found themselves down. While the Minutemen led from wire to wire last night, their shot selection was a far cry from what it was the last time they faced LaSalle. In yesterday's game, the Minutemen shot only 10 three–pointers, connecting on four. Instead of relying on outside shooting (How many times did you hear the phrase, "Live by the three, die by the three" in the early going?), they penetrated inside with patience. This is nothing new, since UMass adopted the three guard offense late in the season.

"Last game, we weren't hitting from the middle as much," Senior forward Tyrone Weeks said. "But that's what videotape is for. We saw a lot of things we needed to do this game and we did them."

Weeks' line proves this testament true, adding to his growing number of double–doubles this season, scoring 21 points while pulling down 11 boards. Clarke, also finding his mark inside, who penetrated through the Explorers' zone with ease for 13 points.

With UMass' consistent shooting, it was only a matter of time before LaSalle's inconsistent shooting put them in a hole from which they could not emerge. Not known as a team with many go–to offensive players, the few scoring threats the team did have were shut down. In addition, the Minutemen tough defense caused the Explorers to shoot frequently and poorly.

Donnie Carr finished the night with 10 points on 5–18 shooting from the field, while Shaun Smith added 10 points of his own, on 2–10 shooting. While the duo led the team in scoring, they were not the picture of efficiency. With such sloppy shot selection, there was no way the Explorers could shut down the Minutemen, who shot a season high 56 percent from the floor.

UMass ran the table on the defensive ends of the court as well.

Turn to HOOP, page 12

All - Atlantic 10 Honors, 1996 -1997 Massachusetts

Carmelo Travieso, G
Second Team
15.1 ppg., 3.8 reb.

Edgar Padilla, G
Third Team
8.6 ppg., 5 assist

Tyrone Weeks, F
Third Team
12.3 ppg., 8.8 reb.

Lari Ketner, G
All-Rookie Team
10.7 ppg., 5.4 reb.

Baseball looking for another A–10 title

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

They lost their first baseman, two–thirds of their outfield, including an All–American centerfielder, their catcher, two of their front–line starters, and about five pounds of hair.

Five pounds of hair?

It started as the annual ritual of shaving the heads of the incoming freshmen on initiation night. But an exercise in amateur hair–cutting turned into a fury of buzzing clippers and flying follicles. When it was all said and done, the Massachusetts baseball team had both 36 newly cropped heads and a symbol of unity for the 1997 season, which kicks off this weekend at James Madison University.

"I think it's a good step," UMass coach Mike Stone said. "They've rallied around it. They're as ready [for the season] as they're going to be. Now we have to go out and establish our identity."

Establishing that identity is the first order of business for a UMass squad that graduated four position players and two starting pitchers from a 1996 squad that won a school record 40 games, took home their 2nd straight A–10 tournament title and 3rd straight A–10 regular season title, and made it to the NCAA East Regional Finals, two games away from the College World Series.

Gone is All–American centerfielder Nate Murphy, who hit .390 with 10 home runs and 66 RBIs last season, and is now moving quickly through the Anaheim Angels organization. First baseman Justin Kelly, left–fielder Ryan Jette and catcher Andy Kiah have also graduated, leaving holes to fill all over the field.

But there is an abundance of talent ready to fill those holes. The Minutemen return first–team All–Atlantic 10 and 1997 pre–season A–10 player of the year in second baseman Machie Dagliere. Dagliere hit .415 last year, good for second in the conference and 23rd in the nation. He anchors an infield that is the A–10's best up the middle.

"Muchie is a legitimate .400 hitter who is a competitor at the plate," Stone said. "He is a threat on the basepaths and is one of the nation's top–hitting second basemen."

BASEBALL
Season Prev.

Dagliere's double–play partner Brad Gorrie returns to shortstop, but has received stiff competition for the job from Rollins College transfer Adam Correa. Gorrie, a senior from Northboro, was also a first–team All A–10 selection last season, along with a conference leading 33 steals.

"Right now Brad [Gorrie] has the edge," Stone said. "He has good speed defensively, and hit well for us last year."

The corners of the infield will be a platoon situation, at least at the start of the year. First base will be held down by sophomore Ryan Hodgson and senior David Giglio, who has been converted from shortstop. Time at third base will be split between Bryan Mazzafero and Ryan Thittle, both of whom can play second or shortstop when needed.

"We have a lot of depth in the infield," Stone said.

Stone has juggled the outfield to

Turn to BASEBALL, page 13

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
UMass head coach Mike Stone is confident his Minutemen can win a fourth straight A–10 regular season title.

Travieso 2nd team A–10; Weeks, Padilla 3rd team

By Luke Meredith & Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The A–10 announced its awards on Monday night, highlighted by the naming of Temple center Marc Jackson as Player of the Year. For UMass, senior Carmelo Travieso made second team All A–10, seniors Edgar Padilla and Tyrone Weeks garnered third team All A–10 and Lari Ketner was named to the All–Rookie team. In addition, Travieso was named to the conference's All–Defensive team.

The All A–10 first team included Jackson, St. Joseph's guard Rashid Bey, Xavier guard Lenny Brown, Virginia Tech forward Ace Custis, Xavier guard Gary Lumpkin and Rhode Island guard Tyson Wheeler. LaSalle guard Donnie Carr grabbed Rookie of the Year honors, averaging 24.5 points a game for the Explorers, and St. Joe's head coach Phil Martelli took home Coach of the Year after leading the upstart Hawks to a 21–8 record, 13–3 in league play, and a No. 19 ranking at the end of the regular season.

A-10 NOTEBOOK

Earlier yesterday, Rhode Island and St. Joseph's found out which teams they'd be facing in today's contest.

The Hawks will square off against St. Bonaventure, while the Rams will face Virginia Tech. at 2 p.m.

The Bonnies advanced after their 85–71 win over Dayton; Virginia Tech. survived a scare and held off Fordham, 56– 53, to set up the showdown with URI.

In yesterday's second game, St. Bonaventure (14–13) jumped out to a 3–0 lead, courtesy a long distance shot from freshman Tim Winn.

Dayton tied the game and then took the lead with a pair of Josh Posteorin free throws with 15:09 remaining in the first half.

But the Bonnies would not relent, continuing to battle for the lead — a battle they eventually won. St. Bonaventure staked a lead as large as 12 in the first half to go to the locker room leading 45–33.

The Bonnies continued their domination of the Flyers in the second half, jumping out to an advantage that at one point reached 18 points. They cruised from there to win 81– 75.

In the day's first game, Fordham put up a fight against the Hokies, but the Rams fell and ended their season at 6–21.

Fordham got on the board first, and held the lead until just over 11 minutes remained in the first half. With 11:04 left, Virginia Tech.'s Ace Custis hit a pair of free throws to tie the game at 12 points a piece.

Fordham did not lead again until Ray Carroll slid in for a lay–up with 4:15 left in the half to put the Rams up 23–22.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 97 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, March 7, 1997

Ah, the symphony!

UMass' Orchestra will perform an symphony composed by Hector Berliaz Sunday. Check out our preview (see Arts & Living, page 5).

UMass loses tough one

The men's hoop team lost to GW last night in Philadelphia, and now await a possible NCAA berth (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

U.S. refuses to bargain with Columbian cartel

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The United States refused the Cali drug cartel's offer to provide evidence implicating Colombia's president in drug corruption in exchange for a promise not to pursue some cartel leaders, the U.S. ambassador said.

Ambassador Myles Frechette told OAP television that the offer to implicate President Ernesto Samper came from drug lords Miguel and Gilberto Rodriguez. The ambassador said Miguel's son, William, made a similar proposal to Tony Seninera, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration's chief in Colombia until last year.

Frechette did not elaborate on the circumstances or dates during the interview Wednesday.

Samper's attorney yesterday dismissed the suggestion there is such evidence against the president, saying Frechette's statement simply was another smear attack on the Colombian leader.

"It makes me laugh," Luis Guillermo Nieto said. Sen. Jaime Dussan Calderon told reporters Thursday, "Mr. Frechette should produce the proof. Otherwise, he's the son of a bitch and should leave the country."

NATION

Weld pushes Boston in Northern Ireland

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Massachusetts Gov. William F. Weld headed yesterday to Northern Ireland, continuing to cast his net around the world with an aggressive marketing campaign that he says is pursued by too few states.

Earlier in the day, he stood before more than 50 Irish business leaders and pitched Boston, with six million of the United States' most affluent people, as an attractive market for Europe's Atlantic nations.

While in Northern Ireland, planned to meet with economic officials in Belfast and Ardnavally before returning home Saturday. Since Weld became governor in 1991, he has led 22 international trade missions involving more than 300 Massachusetts companies. To critics who say he has strayed too far from home, Weld points to the $500 million in export sales he says were generated by the trips.

"Every $50,000 of exports supports a job," he said in an interview. "So $500 million in commerce supports 10,000 jobs." In the past week, Weld has been leading a trade mission to Israel and Ireland, looking for investments in both directions. He took a delegation of 15 Massachusetts businessmen with him into British-ruled Northern Ireland.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 30 LOW: 15	HIGH: 30 LOW: 15	HIGH: 30 LOW: 15

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 7
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

Day 4: adminstration wants students out

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

Discussion between student negotiators and the University of Massachusetts Administration lasted into the early hours this morning in what seems to be the final standoff of the student takeover of the Goodell Building.

Yesterday morning, after four days of occupying the building, student negotiators presented to Deputy Vice Chancellor Marcellette Williams and Vice Chancellor of University Advancement Royster Hedgepeth, a first round list of preliminary points for discussion.

The document said that the students wanted the administration to act in good faith to their commitment to multiculturalism by agreeing to nine basic points and subpoints of their original 40 point and subpoint list of demands "in order for the negotiations to even begin."

"We believe that once these nine points are met, we may proceed in a more efficient manner towards an acceptable resolution on our 'Living Document'," read the document.

The administration agreed to consider these points and report back to the student negotiators at 5 p.m. At approximately 11 p.m., six hours after the scheduled meeting time, the administration was prepared to discuss its response to the students (see page 5).

According to a majority of the student negotiators, these responses included clearly meeting three of the points, clearly not meeting four, leaving two with vague and unclear responses.

This administrative document ends by recommending that a subcommittee of the Faculty Senate be established to monitor the agreement and calls for Williams and Hedgepeth to meet regularly for the rest of the semester with the student group, "in order to discuss the remaining concerns."

According to Afro–American Studies Professor John Bracey, who has been conferring with both sides, the administration wants to vacate the building before the weekend.

As of 11:45 p.m. last night, students were still in discussion with administrators. Another development in these events includes the notification by Professor of Education Deirdre Almeida of the involvement by the United States Commission on Civil Rights. According to Almeida, Northeast Regional Director Ki–Teak Chun has contacted her and has expressed grave concern regarding the students' demands and the administrative responses. Chun is currently conducting an investigation of possible Civil Rights violations of the 1992 ALANA Agreements as well as the circumstances surrounding this current takeover.

According to Student Trustee Sean Carter, Chancellor David K. Scott has been notified of the situation inside Goodell, who will possibly return as early as today. President William Bulger has also expressed a willingness to look into the matter.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNIK - COLLEGIAN
Adam Feldman, a junior philosophy/economics major gives information to anyone who may inquire about the rally.

Protesters march through Whitmore

For ongoing coverage of the Goodell takeover: Visit http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian.

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

Yesterday, throughout the day, student protesters at the University of Massachusetts continued their rallying in front of Goodell Building and expanded their efforts to other sections of campus.

The rally, which began Monday, continued despite the frigid temperatures and temporarily snowy conditions.

At the beginning of the day, the protesters marched to Whitmore Administration Building, but couldn't get a reaction because all of the offices were closed down when they got there. An hour later, they marched through the Student Union and Campus Center, making noise along the way.

Later, at 1:45 p.m., approximately 150 students returned to Whitmore from Goodell, following a speech made by a rally organizer who said "We're going over to 'Whitemore,' we're not going inside, but we've got a surprise in store."

The students then proceeded to march past Herter and Whitmore chanting "What do we want? Justice! When do we want it? Now!"

Once students reached the corner of Massachusetts Avenue and Presidential Drive outside Whitmore, they began walking back and forth across the intersection, blocking traffic in both directions on Massachusetts Avenue and blocked the entrance to Hagis Mall.

The students blocked traffic for approximately 20 minutes, at which time it was backed up all the way to Southwest Residential Area. During the blockage, many cars either drove up on the sidewalk or the island in an attempt to avoid the student barrier.

At the rally, speaker Tara Dixon, a senior history and comparative literature double major who hails from Mississippi — which, she said, is regarded as one of the country's most racist states — commented on a study that, in 1974, named UMass one of the most racist schools in the country.

"If it's worse than Mississippi, then it's pretty bad," Dixon said.

Dixon continued in updating the protesters on the state of demands, saying that they were looking for a federally binding contract on which the administration would not be able to renege, adding that the administration has passed over the concerns of the students.

"It took them four days to negotiate. They thought it would blow over," Dixon said.

Dave Hammer, a sophomore history major pleaded the case for the academic lives of the students who are occupying Goodell.

"They're getting screwed academically," Hammer said.

To assist the students with the academic problems brought about by missing classes, rally organizers are setting up a network, which will help students get in touch with their teachers and obtain missed work.

The plan involves getting the names and classes of all of the students who are occupying Goodell and using volunteer students to act as intermediaries between teachers and those students.

David Nuñez, a senior history major, emphasized the main points of the protest, emphasizing how many of the older students aren't there for their own purposes, they're their for their friends and for their communities.

"This is about the students and the taxpayers of Massachusetts," Nuñez said. "It's for the common goal of making public school accessible to the public."

He also said that the harsh weather only increased their influence.

"The people are here when it's cold," Nuñez said. "I think that sends a stronger message."

Some of the students who braved the elements skipped classes while others attended between classes to show solidarity.

"I think it is a pretty noble cause," said Paul Hayes, a senior English and journalism double major.

Other students echoed similar feelings as Hayes.

"It should have happened a long time ago," said Erin Carrarini, a first year communications disorders major.

Some of the students in attendance like Robert Snow, a sophomore communications major described the demands as unclear.

"The issues they are lobbying for aren't

Turn to RALLY, page 2

SGA President's office supports student

At 11 p.m. last night, the office of the President of the Student Government Association (SGA) issued a statement in support of the student protest in Goodell Building.

The letter, written by Secretary of Public Polity and Relations Franki J. Mozell, stated that the SGA "commends and supports the efforts of UMass community concerning the takeover of Goodell."

See Letters Page 5

President Maurice Caston–Powe and Senate Speaker Brian Tirell have been inside Goodell since the start of the protest. Trustee Sean Carter, and various other senators have also occupied the building, and were thus unavailable for comment.

According to Mozell, the letter "is as close as it's gonna get" to an official SGA endorsement of the protest.

"Our President has been in the building from day one. Our Speaker is in there, as well as a good portion of our senators," Mozell said.

Mozell added that the SGA office has been providing students in Goodell with resources such as telephoning, faxing and copying for people inside.

"The SGA is definitely there," Mozell said of its support for student protesters.

— Laura Stock

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNIK - COLLEGIAN
"We're not gonna to take it"
Student rally outside of Goodell speaking what they believe.

Provost presents administration's response at Fac. Senate meeting

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The administration addressed questions regarding the student takeover of Goodell Building at yesterday's faculty senate meeting.

Provost Patricia H. Crosson gave an overview of the administration's response to the protestors at the meeting, which took place at 3:30 p.m.

"The administration was presented with a list of approximately 40 demands from students, both ALANA [Asian, Latin American, Native American and African] students and ALANA supporters," Crosson said.

"The original set of demands asked for more access for ALANA students, significantly more financial aid, that five study areas be upgraded to major status, that representation of faculty should be representative of the diversity of the student body and several other demands," Crosson said. "We determined the dollar values of these demands to be $13 million.

"We talked with the students on Monday and prepared a response to their original demands on Tuesday, which the students found to be vague and unsatisfactory," Crosson said. "We prepared a fuller response on Wednesday, and the students met this response with a new list of nine critical demands. The dollar value of these demands is between $700,000 to a million dollars. It is our understanding that we will be discussing these nine demands with them this afternoon [Thursday] and we asked the students to leave Goodell after this discussion," Crosson said.

Crosson said that the administration has told Goodell employees not to enter the building, but that no essential functions of the University have been shut down by the takeover.

"Basic campus operations are working. Payroll will be on time, and mail will be slowed down a day or two at most," Crosson said.

The faculty had various responses to the takeover of Goodell. John Bracey, president of the faculty senate, issued his support for the protestors.

"There is a list of ongoing concerns that the administration has failed to take up. I support [the students] response," Bracey said. "The national and international support for the protestors is impressive. I think a resolution should be coming soon."

Other faculty expressed concern about the length of the occupation. In response, Crosson urged that they be patient.

"We remain quite optimistic that in discussions with students we can work this out. We are moving to closure as quickly as possible. These activities do provide learning opportunities for our students," Crosson said. "We have tried and we will try as much as possible to avoid going in and arresting students. It is not, we believe, in the interest of the campus to do this."

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Laura Stock
Copy Editor: Seema Gangatirkar
Photo Technician: Chris Cesnek
Production Supervisor: Mark McGrath
Production Staff: Sandi Krauss
Elizabeth Brown

SUB hosts female jazz group

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

"Something Every Friday" presents Sister Song '97 in a special performance for International Women's Day tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom Cafe.

Jose Tolson, Director of Student Activities, organized this special event in conglomeration with the Everywoman's Center and the Women's Studies Department.

"The whole celebration of International Women's Day doesn't have the emphasis it should have, that was our reason to have this program," Tolson said.

Semenya McCord, a University of Massachusetts alumnus, is the featured vocalist of Sister Song '97 and has just received the prestigious 1997 Commonwealth Award as a performing artist. In 1988 she was awarded Outstanding Jazz Vocalist by the Boston Music Awards, and in 1990 she received a 1990 Martin Luther King Jr. Award for musical excellence.

Sister Song '97 is group of outstanding musicians and performers including: Claire Arenius/drums, Yasko Kubota/keyboards, Ellen Powell/bass, Lorena Marmaol/vocals, Abby Rabinovitz/flute and storyteller Onawumi Jean Moss. The performance will include a combination of 10 different programs.

"I think it is going to be a very moving performance. There aren't many opportunities to see women performing jazz," Tolson said, referring to the fact that jazz is a male dominated art.

This event is free and everyone is invited to celebrate International Women's Day. For additional information contact Everywoman's Center at 545-0883.

Amherst teenagers take part in rally

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

In a courageous show of support, approximately one dozen students from the Amherst regional high and junior high schools walked out of their classes to join the rally that reconvened in front of Goodell at 11 a.m. yesterday.

"We heard about it on the radio and decided to walk out," said Becky Gerstein, a 14-year-old from Amherst Junior High. "Some chickened out, but we're here to show support for our friends and relatives."

Christina Rubers, 15, felt the same.

"If we want to come to college we should show support for the rally too. We don't have much money either, so these are our issues too. It doesn't matter if you're black, white, Latino — we're fighting for our rights when we come here," she said.

Joining the rally wasn't the only endeavor that the youths took part in either. At the intersections of Presidents Drive and Massachusetts Avenue approximately 150 protestors walked in a circuitous line, putting traffic at a complete standstill for 20 minutes. Their intentions were not to invade Whitmore, but rather to make their presence known to the rest of the UMass population.

"I just missed getting hit by a car," said Wesly Mendes, 13. "We were in the crowd by Whitmore crossing the street with everyone else in the crosswalks and I was almost hit twice."

Leah Cannonier, 14, was also part of the junior high group that took the initiative to stage the walk out.

"I overheard information about the rally in homeroom and just felt that we should have a walkout to go and support them," Cannonier said. "They shouldn't have to stand here demanding financial aid. But, I know I would be facing it too — especially because I'm biracial. Just because my skin color is mixed, I'm considered black. We're here to support. To represent."

Ceasar Sevilla, 14, a son of a UMass worker, is faced with both sides of the issue.

"Someday I'll be coming to UMass and don't want to be facing the same problems. I'm here to support all of these students and their demands," Sevilla said.

Aisha Brandford, 14, felt just as strong about preparing for her future.

"These students are here for a reason. It's about us — we're the future. We must support everything that we'll one day be facing," Brandford said.

"Stuff like this happens all the time. Even though we're younger we still have to face it," said Chelsea Haney, 13.

Despite the blustery conditions and the bitter cold, Jonah, a student from Amherst High has returned every day since the take-over began.

"People have to address the issue, the fact, that UMass is a business. They're going to treat the students just like any other big business does, and there's always going to be problems."

Special weekend coverage on the Collegian web-site. Check us out! http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage

March 5
A two-vehicle accident occurred on Commonwealth Avenue. ,

Annoying Behavior

March 3
Staff at the Goodell Library complained of individuals occupying the 4th floor.
Sexual graffiti was written on a door on the 3rd floor of Patterson Residence Hall.

March 4
There was a report of an individual carrying a construction sign on Thatcher Way.
An individual reported racial graffiti written on poster affixed to room door.
There was a report of a male exposing himself on the 5th floor of the W.E.B. Dubois Library.

Assault & Battery

March 4
There was a report of a fight between individuals on the 17th floor.

Health/Safety Hazard

March 4
An odor of gas was reported in Goessmann laboratory.

Larceny

March 3
An individual from Lewis Residence Hall reported his pants containing his wallet and car keys were stolen from the bathroom.
A telephone was reported stolen from Van Meter Residence Hall.
An individual reported his passport stolen.
A wallet was reported stolen from Kennedy Residence Hall.
A laptop computer was stolen from an office in Boyden Gym.
A telephone was reported stolen from Field Residence Hall.
An individual reported a jewelry box containing jewelry was stolen.
Two individuals from Lewis Residence Hall reported their wallets stolen.
An individual reported a textbook and CDs stolen from Thoreau Residence Hall.

March 4
A large number of CDs and a walkman were stolen on Van Meter Residence Hall.

March 5
A telephone was stolen from the Campus Center.
A micro-fridge was stolen from a room in Brown Residence Hall.
A wallet was stolen from Boyden Gym.
An individual from John Quincy Adams Residence Hall reported unauthorized purchases on her credit card.

Suspicious Person/Activity

March 5
Afranio Torres Neto, 22, of 990 North Pleasant St., Amherst was arrested for disorderly conduct and assault and battery.

Vandalism

March 3
The smoking room in Hamlin Residence Hall was damaged.
Ten windows in the Hatch were reported broken.
Writings were burned into carpet on the 3rd floor lounge in Webster Residence Hall.
A vehicle in parking lot 33 on University Drive was damaged.
A vehicle in parking lot 49 on Van Meter Road was damaged.
A vehicle in parking lot 22 on University Drive was damaged.

March 4
Derogatory graffiti was written on a resident's door in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.
A vehicle was "keyed" in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.

■ rally

continued from page 1

clear, some seem weak, but I support the strong ones," Snow said.

Dan Mitchell, who works at the University's Physical Plant department, made an appearance and issued his vote of support.

"Don't let anyone tell you people that you're doing the wrong thing," Mitchell said. "I've been here for 10 years. [The administrators] know in their hearts that you're right and that the people inside are right. This is a struggle of the people on the outside trying to get their piece of the pie. This is part of a larger struggle. Don't give up."

The protesters have now been holed up in Goodell for four full days, and protest leaders insist that they will not leave until there is real change made.Collegian staff members Bryan Schwartzman and Matthew Wurtzel contributed to this report.

Attention RSOs:

Student Government Association (SGA) Ways & Means Committee Chair Jen Corbett has extended the deadline for budget contracts until one week after the Goodell Building takeover ends. Any RSO who has already submitted their budget can revise it if so desired. Any questions, call the SGA office.

SGA elections postponed until after break

Student Government Association (SGA) elections previously scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday, March 11 and 12 have been rescheduled for Wednesday and Thursday, March 26 and 27 due to the Goodell Building takeover.

"We feel that the focus is on the protest. Adequate attention hasn't been given to the election," said Jodi Bailey, SGA election commissioner.

Debates set for tonight and Monday, March 10 will occur at 7 p.m. in the UVC-TV 19 studio.
The debates are open to the public

- Victoria Groves

In a Celebration of International Women's Day
- Everywoman's Center -
- Women's Studies -
&
FREE FREE FREE
"Something Every Friday"
presents
Sister Song '97
featuring vocalist
Semenya McCord
with
Onawumi Jean Moss/Storyteller
Ellen Powell/bass
Abby Rabinovitz/flute
Lorena Marmer/vocals
Claire Arenius/drums
Yasko Kubota/piano
Also featuring The UMass Female acapella group "Meanwhile"
Friday, March 7, 1997
Student Union Ballroom
University of Massachusetts
FREE 8:00pm FREE
FREE
"the Preacher's Wife" to follow performance
The Preacher's Wife

TOC
Bar & Grill
11th Floor Campus Center
Mon.-Fri. 4pm - 12:30am
Sat. 5pm - 12:30am
A-10 SEMI-FINALS
TOURNAMENT GAMES ARE A MUST!!
UMass basketball
Atlantic 10 FINALS!

PAD hosts heritage celebration

Event to feature African, Irish, Israeli and Asian cultures

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

This Sunday, the Performing Arts Division at the University of Massachusetts is sponsoring an event called Heritage Sunday, which will be celebrating the diversity of the UMass community through authentic songs, stories and dance from around the world.

The event this year will be split into four sections, which represent the British Isles, Israel, African roots and South Asia and tap on the expertise of various members of the University community to bring aspects of their culture to the Fine Arts Center.

"This event has come about because we've been having workshops for many years using the resources of students and professors," said Susan Huetteman, the director of Heritage Sunday.

Huetteman said that the University has a number of talented students from around the world who have much to offer an interested audience. Without events like Heritage Sunday, she fears those students will know everything about Americans and Americans will never get to know anything about them.

The first part of the event features the heritage of Scotland, England and Ireland. This section represents a rather new way of approaching the event, for in the past, the arts of the British Isles weren't featured.

One day, Huettemen was thinking about her own heritage and decided that Heritage Sunday ought to open to anyone who is interested is displaying their heritage.

As a result attendees will witness stories and songs from western Europe. The highlight of this section will be an Irish step dancing workshop with Jenn Morgan, who leads a step dancing group on campus.

Secondly, Dan Ben Dror Marshall will be leading a demonstration and workshop on Israeli dance. According to Huetteman, Marshall is a phenomenal dancer who diversifies his dance with European, Arabic and Yemenite influences, and has led workshops like this in the past.

Next, there will be a presentation on African Roots in American Music, presented by Abdul Baki and the New Roots Reggae Ensemble, in which audiences will have the opportunity to trace contemporary American musical forms back to their origins in Africa.

The final heritage explored will be that of southern Asia. Nataraj, an Indian dance group, will perform two pieces in the Temple form of dancing, a sacred form practiced on the east coast of India.

Ranjanaa Devi, who will be leading the group explained that the style of dance is meant to "arouse spiritual energy, placing the dancer within a spiritual environment." The dancers will be wearing traditional ankle bells, which are meant to resound through the universe, awakening spiritual energy and pleasing divine beings.

Devi will follow with a lesson in the basic elements of footwork and hand gestures.

"Everything we do like this, we do hands on," Huetteman said. "In one hour, people can step into a whole different feeling or emotion."

Huetteman says that the day will open with a group performance of "Amazing Grace," for which all audience members are encouraged to bring guitars and join in singing. In addition, audience members will have the opportunity to participate in some aspect of each of the cultures.

"We are really lucky to have these opportunities to step into another way of thinking" Huetteman said. "We live in a wonderful, wonderful world. You cannot step out of an event like this without having it affect you.

"We're hoping people will come in and participate in whatever they're interested in."

Heritage Sunday will be held on Sunday, March 9, in the Bezanson Recital Hall at the Fine Arts Center from 2-6 p.m.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK / COLLEGIAN

Pipe Dreams...
The metal pipes to folded tables may serve as intense visuals to many UMass students.

HSO hosts festival on Sunday

Every spring, Hindus around the world celebrate Holi, a festival that represents the triumph of good over evil. In the festival, revellers spray colored water, throw colored talcum powder at each other and light candles to symbolize the "burning away of material desires," according to the press release.

Continuing with the annual festival, the Hindu Students Organization (HSO) will be holding a celebration of the Holi festival, this Sunday in the Student Union Ballroom.

The program will include traditional folk dances and music performed by students from Smith College and others by the UMass Asian Music and Dance program.

"When students come to UMass, they are expecting to experience a multicultural college life. It's events like these that compliment the education that they are paying for," said Anant Ahuja, president of the HSO.

Sunday afternoon's event will be catered by India House of Northampton. Admission is free, but the catered food is $3 per plate.

Ahuja said that the event has been planned since last semester when the HSO reserved the ballroom. In addition to the HSO, several other student groups are participating by giving money.

According to Ahuja, groups supporting the HSO with monetary contributions include the graduate Indian Student Association, the Undergraduate Pakistani Student Association and informal help from members of the South Asian Club.

The event will be held this Sunday in the Student Union Ballroom at 2 p.m. Organizers suggest that attendees wear clothes that they do not mind getting stained by the colors used in the festival.

— Raghuram Vadarevu

Baha'i conference to discuss racism

The Five College Baha'i Club will be holding a conference entitled the "Foundation of Racial Unity" this weekend, to discuss and come up with solutions to the problems with racism.

The two-day conference, which will be held today and tomorrow in room 1009 of the University of Massachusetts Campus Center, will feature guest lecturers and performances designed to create discussions about the "ubiquitous dilemma" of racism.

The speakers at the conference include Dr. Robert Henderson, a UMass alumnus who is active in the civil rights and will be speaking on student activism on university campuses.

In addition, Dr. Joy Degruy-Leary will speak about the history of racism in the United States; and Idelia Smith, the associate to the vice-president for academic affairs at Holyoke Community College, a nationally recognized speaker, will be speaking.

The time period between the speakers will filled with workshops and panel discussions designed to motivate and inform students in the role they can play in healing racism.

The goal of the Baha'i Conference "is to bring the diverse members of our campus together; to share our visions of race unity, to discuss our common anxieties, and most importantly to focus attention on how to best eliminate racism," according to the press release.

Baha'i is an independent world religion and comprises more than 2,100 ethnicities, races and tribal groups. The conference starts today. For more information please call, Nadia Schmeil at 256-0227.

— Raghuram Vadarevu

Albania moves to prevent all-out civil war

By Judith Ingram
Associated Press

TIRANA, Albania — Seeking to stop Albania's armed revolt from sliding into full-fledged civil war, the president and opposition leaders agreed yesterday that the military would not launch any attacks for 48 hours.

But in southern Albania, the heartland of the Insurrection, where insurgents have seized control of a number of towns, protesters refused to put down their guns.

"We won't turn over our weapons until our demands are met," said a civilian leader in the town of Saranda, identified as Captain Tato.

Dozens of men around him fired automatic weapons in the air as he chanted about the president: "He wants our guns, we want his head!"

Insurrection leaders in Saranda said before the announcement that they were demanding the resignation of President Sali Berisha, the formation of a coalition government until new elections, and compensation for those who lost money in the collapse of shady investment funds, which led to the violence.

Sharp north-south divisions have emerged in the last two months in this impoverished Balkan nation, where most Albanians lost money in the schemes. Southerners, who were generally wealthier, lost more than northerners and support the opposition. Berisha, whose base of support is in the north, imposed a state of emergency Sunday after weeks of protests erupted into violence.

A statement signed by the president and opposition yesterday in Tirana calls for the formation of a commission, which will include members of all parties, to investigate the pyramid schemes.

Thursday's show of unity did little to appease some opposition leaders, who offered only luke warm support for the agreement they had signed.

"The only success of this meeting was the suspension of the military operations," said Paskal Milo, head of the Social Democratic Party. "All the other points were a political maneuver to gain time."

Neritan Ceka, the head of the Democratic Alliance, said the agreement was a "first step" toward political compromise, and that talks on naming a new premier would continue Saturday. Berisha announced last week that the government of Premier Aleksander Meksi would step down.

The statement agreed to by both sides calls on Albanians to hand over weapons beginning at 6 a.m. today — when the suspension of military action would begin. The statement also offered amnesty to all who complied and "had not commited crimes" during the unrest. Berisha formally issued the blanket amnesty late Thursday.

Ceka said the entire country — not just the towns protesters now control in the south — faces "the risk of civil war."

Berisha has been under intense political pressure from abroad to resolve the crisis, which has ignited fears among Albania's neighbors of a new flood of refugees and raised the prospects of a new Balkan war little more than a year after the end of the Bosnian conflict.

Chaos reigned in the south on Thursday. Militants blew up bridges on both sides of Saranda to prevent government tanks from reaching the city. Outside Tepelena, hundreds of people — ranging from young boys to old men — streamed into an armory, emptying it of machine guns and grenades.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
(888) 211-OCMP
Present
Dining Out
COMING MARCH 26
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates call 545-3500

DO YOU ASPIRE TO BE A BIG-$HOT BUSINESS PERSON SOMEDAY?
The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
POSITIONS AVAILABLE
WE ARE ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR:
★ Associate FINANCE Manager
★ Associate ADVERTISING Manager
★ Associate BUSINESS Manager
★ Assistant MARKETING Manager
SOPHMORE STUDENTS ENCOURAGED TO APPLY
ALL WILL BE CONSIDERED
FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL ALYCIA HINES AT 545-3500, OR COME TO THE COLLEGIAN LOCATED AT 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.
Learn from THE BEST and gain VALUABLE EXPERIENCE.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey Inwum III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Janie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadareyu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Patty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

SGA, we can't hear you

Eighty-five hours. That's how long it took for any response from the Student Government Association on the student-led occupation of Goodell Building. Eight-five hours.

From the onset of the takeover several other schools have been expressing support, including the University of Massachusetts at Boston, Amherst College and Smith College, as well as campus organizations such as the Everywoman's Center, Women's Studies Department and the UMass Amherst chapter of the Service Employees International Union.

But not a word from the SGA until the Collegian received a letter of support from President Maurice Caston-Powe's office late last night.

Early this morning the Collegian also received a support letter signed by SGA Speaker, Brian Tirrell, and 18 SGA Senators.

SGA has never been known to be the most efficient governing body, but ignoring a pressing issue such as the Goodell takeover is simply unacceptable and irresponsible.

A few key members of SGA including Caston-Powe, Speaker Brian Tirrell and Student Trustee Sean Carter have expressed support for the takeover but the SGA, as a whole, has been silent.

This is just another example of the long history of SGA gridlock and division that has, in the end, hindered the drive for the betterment of the student situation at UMass.

If we expect the SGA to represent the student body we need a governmental body that can actually get along and stop the silly partisan bickering typical of national politics, not campus politics. You are supposed to be there for the students — not your ego.

We commend the SGA for postponing next week's elections for President and Trustee until March 26 and 27. The student occupation has greatly overshadowed the elections campaign leading to a lack of adequate coverage. The next two weeks will allow for the necessary discussion and debate in the campus community to ensure that voters are informed.

But there is no justified reason to continue tonight's previously scheduled debates between the candidates.

SGA, this is your chance to regain your dignity and stand up for the students you are supposed to be representing.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

Aim high

The unity and strength students have shown on this campus in the past four days has importance that goes far beyond the specific demands in the Living Document. These demands are important because they raise broader issues that are important not only for students, but for people in general. Through unity and demonstration, we as students have the ability to put these ideas into the public arena and push our reactionary society toward change.

This protest makes it clear that change comes from direct action and not by representative government. Notice, for instance, that the Student Government Association as a whole has issued no official statement yet on this situation (the Office of the SGA President has issued a statement of support). Although the SGA allegedly provides us with the ability to govern ourselves, they've made it abundantly obvious that working through the system is not effective.

In many ways this situation is a microcosm of our nation as a whole. Our supposed representatives are so busy with their ambitions and political squabbles that they can't function for anyone's interests but their own. During the most important event of the school year, our SGA has been divided and unable to issue a statement taking either side.

> "It's wrong to think that abolishing racism has already been done, and it's also wrong to think that it won't require extraordinary measures."
>
> Daniel Bodah

But this protest and takeover are more than a model for us to look to in bringing about change. We need to show our support now so that we will have the unity later to keep pressing for the issues that have all but fallen from the public mind in the last ten years.

By showing up at Goodell, by boycotting classes and contacting our teachers so they know exactly why we're not there, by talking to others around us and informing them, we have the chance to build a movement for change not only on this campus, but on other campuses and ultimately outside of the academic world.

This movement can build bridges between people of all races — in fact, this is probably the most important thing for our generation to do. The Civil Rights Movement had immense success in forcing blatant racism off its roost in the public sphere. But racism is still alive today — it's just hiding out, lying just below the level of conscious thought and in the social structure and patterns that remain the same today, 30 years after the Civil Rights Movement.

It's wrong to think that abolishing racism has already been done, and it's also wrong to think that it won't require extraordinary measures. After so many generations of racism and oppression, we need to get out of our way to break these old habits.

These are not necessarily habits that we notice as individuals: they are mostly unconscious, and we learn them from our parents, our language, and all the myriad automatic behaviors and norms our culture hands down to us.

Making such things conscious takes a great effort of will, but it is an effort that must be made. In the same way, making social changes to bring about true and substantial racial equality will take a great effort.

This is what makes the demands for diversity on this campus so important. This is why it is necessary to spend time, effort, and money on ALANA students and faculty. And this is the leadership role we have in showing the nation at large how it's done.

There are a lot of other important issues at work here as well. Education is the most substantial underpinning of a democracy. Without education, we the people are succeptible to the constant barrage of attempts by despots to turn us into their servants. But here in the heart of the world's most famous supposed democracy, education is less and less of a priority. Cuts to educational funding, a lack of educational opportunities for traditionally underrepresented groups — these are the realities we face. Free education is what we need to aim for.

How about health care, child care, respect for our laborers at the contract negotiating table? These are all issues that are important worldwide, not just here at UMass.

Go to the rallies at Goodell, show solidarity, and work together to make this your world. We have the opportunity now, and it is our duty to take it. Direct action now for the world we want tomorrow!

Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

Keep it going and going...

As I approached the Goodell building on Wednesday night, I was delighted by the number of students standing outside in the pouring rain. Amidst the inclement weather, spirits were high and things seemed to be running smoothly. It was a delightful feeling to watch over one hundred wet and tired people dancing in the rain.

The night proceeded on and a friend and I set up our tents in anticipation of spending a frigid night outside. Why? may you ask. The answer is simple: because I believe in my rights and I support other people's as well. As a homosexual student on this campus, a lot of people are under the assumption that this doesn't affect me. Well, they are completely wrong.

This movement, this takeover, this affects all of us. Faculty, students, parents, workers, lovers, whoever. This is not a black, white, red, yellow, green, brown or pink issue. This is a student movement and we are fighting for our rights as humans beings.

Within the movement exists many different types of people, but that should not matter. I think our differences only help to make us stronger and break down cultural barriers and stereotypes. It goes to show what a whole group of homosexuals and heterosexuals and men and women can do when they are all evenly distraught by an issue.

Many members of the older generations think that we are just a bunch of dumb kids who are too lazy to do their work and are more focused on causing trouble. This trouble they say comes in the form of "attention" and they claim that the only way we can get this attention is by taking over buildings and rioting.

Okay, so here is my message for them and anyone else who agrees with this theory: GET REAL! Don't you think we have other things to do aside from sleep out in the rain, get hypothermia, scream and yell, and miss out on our daily activities? My idea of fun is most certainly not sleeping in a tent, freezing my butt off, and waking up (from about an hour's sleep) to a dull grey morning.

I have heard numerous people (students mainly) talk about how pointless this takeover is. This only makes me wonder what kind of beliefs these people have. I strongly believe in collective action and I do believe that as a whole we can all make a difference. No matter how long it takes, I know that I will be standing outside of Goodell everyday until our demands are met.

Jamie Sinsheimer

So where is the Chancellor? You know I thought about not bringing this up, but I would really like to know why he is not out sleeping in the rain?

Maybe it is his fear of melting like the wicked witch of the West, or maybe he just got swept up in a wave in the Mexico Ocean. Oh what joy that would bring to the "wizards" territory.

This issue is bigger than I ever thought it could be and it is spreading wider and faster everyday. Everyone involved is becoming more and more exhausted with each coming moment, but morals are still up and we are not going away, not in a long shot.

Despite being absolutely exhausted while writing this, since the majority of my time in the past 48 hours has been spent standing in the crowds, marching to Whitmore and the Student Union, and walking out of classes; I have done my best to do my part to show support of this continuing issue.

All the students currently making their homes within the office cubicles of Goodell — keep it up, I support you fully and if I had my way I would be right in there with all of you. I commend you and admire your courage. You are all doing a great thing. Thank you.

Jamie Sinsheimer is a Collegian staff member.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

La barca de Chancellor Scott

On a lonely stretch of beach in Acapulco, under the shade of a large umbrella, a strange figure lies on a beach chair as the warm ocean waters lazily lap the sun-drenched sands. Resplendent in sombrero, sunglasses, kilt and blue rubber flippers, Chancellor Scott slowly lifts a limp arm to indulge in yet another dainty sip of frozen margarita. The mariachis serenade in the background,

"Dicen que la distancia es el olvid..." ("They say that distance means forgetting...").

Meanwhile, back in Amherst, U.S.A., his underlings suddenly find themselves in the midst of a hurricane. A large group of brave students have decided to stand up for moral principles by taking over Goodell. Panic and hysteria seize the University administration, leaving it floundering like a rudderless boat adrift on the high seas.

> "The Administration's reaction has only served to confirm the worst suspicions of well-meaning people on campus — that most of the administrators are not prepared to embrace a truly multicultural campus."
>
> Shyamala Ivatury & Hussien Ibish

With the captain missing, the clueless crew has sunk into confusion, depression and vicious in-fighting. Needless to say, they have been totally unable to come up with any serious response to the students' just demands. Instead, they have been reduced to spreading threatening rumors such as imminent police action or cutting off food.

To make matters worse, the administration's response to the student action has been emotional, defensive, hostile and wholly-counter productive. This reaction has only served to confirm the worst suspicions of well-meaning people on campus — that most of the administrators are not prepared to embrace a truly multicultural campus.

Self-appointed first mate, ACTING-Provost Pat Crosson, has emerged as the hysteric-in-chief. Indeed, Pat's lust for self-aggrandizement has been a crucial factor in creating the hostile atmosphere that led to the student action.

Almost a year ago, she formulated a surreptitious plan to create for herself a "super-provost" position. In an effort to appeal to conservative forces and appear "tough," Crosson's plan specifically targeted programs that benefitted students of color including academic advising programs like CEEBMS and the BMCP. She planned to replace them with a single, unified advising center under her control, in the process wiping out programs specifically designed to increase the enrollment and retention of ALANA students.

This surreptitious plan was leaked by rival administrators and the subsequent outcry forced Crosson and her allies to pursue their goals by other means. While Chancellor Scott pretends to be charting a multicultural course, some of his most senior officers, like the ACTING–Provost, systematically undermining moves towards multiculturalism. This kind of blatant resistance to diversifying the campus is exactly what has led to this week's student action.

One of the main reasons for the current administrative hysteria is that Chancellor Scott's claim to authority at UMass rests on an implicit deal with the state power structure. The idea is that Scott's "liberal" and "pro-multicultural" approach will mollify the student population, thereby ensuring that protests remain a thing of the past. In the eyes of Scott and his allies, this take-over was supposed to be something that "couldn't happen" these days.

The problem with the Scott approach is twofold. First, Scott has not truly embraced the principles of diversity, rather he cynically uses them as a means of legitimizing his authority. Judging from the scale of the protest and its support, most people have seen through his hypocrisy. Second, Scott has been too willing to mollycoddle a menagerie of unsavory anti-multiculturalists. The protesters are well aware of this reactionary coterie, as evinced by their signs denouncing figures such as Grant Ingle, Tom Robinson, and, you guessed it, the ACTING–Provost.

As a result of these failings, and as the student action clearly demonstrates, Chancellor Scott will never be able to deliver his promise of a protest-free campus without genuine multiculturalism. If they are smarter than they seem, the Administration might just take this opportunity to correct their past mistakes, honor existing obligations, such as the 1992 ALANA Agreement, and present the protesters with an offer of serious progressive reforms. A failure to do so can only result in our hapless administration continuing to resemble downtown Arcadelphia after the recent tornados.

Meanwhile, back on the Acapulco beach, Chancellor Scott puts down the cell–phone and resumes rubbing coconut oil into his burned, but still knobbly, knees.

"This is the life," he chuckles to himself, "apart from that unpleasantness about the bagpipes, this is the best vacation a man could ask for."

In the background the mariachis continue to serenade, "Hasta que tu decidas regresar..."

Shyamala Ivatury and Hussein Ibish are Collegian columnists.

A new movement is born

Martin F. Jones

The date was April 19, 1775. The place was Lexington, Mass. On the town green an historic battle took place, one which would set into motion a series of events which would dramatically change the world in which we live. It was the beginning of what had become inevitable: a revolution in the colonies of British North America.

The principle protagonists: A band of local farmers and merchants, calling themselves the Minutemen. Armed with rifles, and driven by unbending will and determination, they stood their ground and initiated what would be forever remembered as the American Revolution. And so on that hallowed morning 220 years ago, a shot was heard 'round the world, as a new nation and a new world would be born.

Dec. 1, 1955, Montgomery Ala. Rosa Parks, a middle–aged African–American woman traveling on a public bus is arrested for refusing to give her seat to a white passenger. The result: a city–wide boycott of the offending bus company which lasted for over a year and ended with the full desegregation of public transportation in Montgomery. Later, most racial segregation across the country would be abolished within seven years and a comprehensive civil rights act would follow. This historic moment in time would be immortalized as the birth of the most important social movement in U.S. history, the Civil Rights Movement, a movement which has fundamentally changed the social dynamics of American society, and set a permanent precedent for future non–violent struggles for peace and justice.

And now, over 30 years later, we may be bearing witness to yet another historic epic in the makings.

On Monday, March 3, 1997, over 150 students occupied the Goodell Building at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. With a list of demands compiled as "The Living Document" the students remained overnight for three days, vowing not to leave the building until all of the demands were met in full. As of midnight Thursday, March 6, the students had sacrificed classes, personal time and work in order to make their position clear: UMass would live up to its mission as an affordable public university with full accessibility to students of all backgrounds, and would undergo a reversal of the increasing privatization of the university by outside corporate entities.

Across the campus and the Five College area, students not initially involved heard the call to action and pitched in. Rallies continued to be held around–the–clock, and tents were set up outside in the rain. Food was gathered and donated by local and student business. A Wednesday morning walk–out of classes drew over a thousand participants to a spirited rally in front of Goodell. The speed and scope at which the support would grow and expand was truly remarkable.

This is how history has been made throughout time. The right combination of people and principled resolve come together at a critical juncture and take a great leap of faith, signing onto a pact with each other to stand firm, stand fast and stand triumphant to the very end. There would be no surrender, for indeed there is great power in the will of a single determined soul. For those souls who stand united in great numbers, such power is both unlimited and invincible.

When the American Revolution began, it was initially viewed by the British as a small uprising which would be easily quelled within a few days. They were wrong.

When Rosa Parks was arrested in Montgomery, there was no expectation of a boycott. After all, many other blacks had been arrested before and nothing came of it. Surely, nothing would come out of it this time either.

Boy, were they wrong.

And now at Goodell there is taking place what is in my opinion, potentially the most powerful student protest ever to take place in the history of America. Yes, the history of America! So far the protest, within a mere three days has already generated international coverage on CNN and the New York Times. Harvard professor Cornell West has voiced his support for the student activists inside Goodell. With four consecutive overnight stays having taken place, there remains the possibility that the protest could continue for weeks, with the students prepared to stay however long it takes to force the system to surrender its ongoing agenda to undermine equal opportunity and justice for the people.

I've participated in a number of protests at UMass since the spring of 1992, when the Whitmore administration building was occupied in the wake of the Rodney King verdict. Then, the issue of increasing minority faculty was raised. A single, modest demand of 10 new faculty of color, half of them women, was made. The demand was ignored as the University apparently was already in the process of implementing such a move. The occupation ended late in the evening the same day it began.

In the fall of 1992, the beating of a black resident assistant sparked protests which lead to the creation of the original ALANA agreements. Over the past five years, I've left the University and returned, only to see them still unfulfilled and ignored — until this week. Now the administration is acting and actually devoting some real time and energy to these important issues. That in of itself is an enormous victory, one that demonstrates the power and capacity for change that has now been realized by the courageous group of student protesters and their brilliant negotiating team.

What must be acknowledged here is that there was no trigger or catalyst which caused the protest to take place. For a long time, nearly every protest on campus was sparked in reaction to some racial incident involving violence. In almost every case, the protest was commenced spontaneously with almost no preparation, or prior agreements on the issues, demands or leadership structure. They were emotionally charged and in reaction to an independent chance occurrence. Each time the University was confidently assured that as soon as tempers subsided, things would get back to normal. But not this time. This protest, a proactive demonstration which was months in the making, promises a return of real student activism not only on UMass' campus, but at other schools across the nation.

All across America, there is a growing anxiety about racial conflict, as highlighted by the black church burnings, the O.J. Simpson case and the Oklahoma City Bombing. The right wing in America is on the march again. The bankers and the corporations all have their financial hooks deep in the White House Administration, from the Oval Office to the Lincoln Bedroom. President Clinton has repeatedly called on us all to "cross that bridge into the 21st Century." Well, with the way things are going now, what kind of world can we expect to see on the other side? It all depends on what we do over the next four years.

As with the American Revolution and the Civil Rights Movement, the world we live in today was created as a result of the actions taken and battles fought by the heroic revolutionaries of the past. To the same degree, the actions of young revolutionaries like ourselves will forever shape the world of the future. What is taking place in Goodell is only just the beginning. This occupation began six years to the day since the beating of Rodney King and is now in its gestation stage. The Goodell building, serving as the womb, is now a sacred temple where the demonstrators inside are passing through their most important stage of development. They are learning, gathering invaluable experiences and building lifelong ties that will form the foundation for future social struggle. Soon they will complete that development and approach a brand new stage of this never–ending crusade for truth and justice.

When the day arrives for the occupation to end, the student activists will emerge from Goodell triumphant, no matter what final agreements are made with the UMass administration. Then, the tide of history will turned forever as these courageous, visionary, revolutionaries usher forward a bold new era of dedicated and principled community activism which will continue long after the occupation has ended. On that day, history will be made, and the whole world will pause to witness the birth of a new movement.

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

SGA President's office commends protesters

To the Editor:

We commend and support the efforts of the UMass community concerning the takeover at Goodell. The SGA has been actively involved with the students in Goodell since day [one]. President Maurice Caston–Powe has been in the building from the very beginning giving his support and resources to anyone in need. The Student Senate Speaker Brian Tirrell has been in Goodell ever since leaving the Senate in good hands with Assoc. Speaker Peter Kilbourne. The President, along with Trustee Sean Carter has had the SGA on a "revolving" door policy, with admittance to everyone. The office has been the copy/faxing/telephoning/sleeping/eating/meeting place for anyone involved inside or outside of Goodell. The SGA is working around the clock to keep the loose ends tied. Whether it be by supplying students with media sheets or phone numbers to legislative offices across the state and nation.

The UMass community has stepped up to bat and is making a bigger swing than anyone had expected. People are organizing, working together hand and hand without conflict that jeopardizes the "original" mission, and that's to see the "ALANA Agreements" be fulfilled entirely. There are of course some members of this very same SGA who don't support the efforts of any of these students who have "stepped up to the plate," but it should not be a surprise since some of these very same people have kept the "ALANA Agreements" in committee since President Caston first implemented the effort to get motions passed.

The SGA is also thankful to the other Five College student government associations for coming out and supporting these brave student leaders. They have extended a bridge that we believe many have felt never existed, we will keep it going. Your elected president, student trustee and speaker has had your back from the start, before and during the Goodell occupation! Remember that, UMass. I personally hope to see that we continue to have student leaders daily affecting the lives here at this campus and world wide.

This is one of the few times that someone from the SGA admits that he/she is wrong. I thought there was nobody out there who cared about anything but "themselves!" I will gladly swallow that "sweet" pill. I can truly say, "To all my peoples out there, ONE LOVE!"

Frankie J. Mozell
Secretary of Public Policy and Relations

Speaker adds his support

To the Editor:

I am sitting in the Procurement Office in the Goodell Building, a place I have resided for the past three days. I am not here because I believe in every demand on our list because I don't. We are here as reasonable people demanding that previous agreements be upheld and negotiating for further progress. We are negotiating and this means that if a significant amount of our demands are met and an agreement is made for future progress, we will stop our occupation of the Goodell Building. We are not just putting the issues on the table and walking away.

I must also respond to the comments of the Sen. Philip Milson (Sylvan) quoted in the [Thursday's] Collegian:

"I feel shameful that leaders of the Student Government Association feel it is necessary to sacrifice their duties in support of a cause that supports a small percentage of the student body. I feel that these senators have the ability to do so much more at a Senate meeting than at some takeover of a building. That is not how things get done."

It is truly unfortunate that he feel this peaceful protest is not how to get things done. Perhaps, he would like us to pass motions so they can be formally be presented to the Chancellor or the Vice Chancellor so that they can affect the changes that we have proposed. Oh, wait a minute, we have already done that. In 1992, the Chancellor, vice–Chancellors, the Department of Labor and Justice and most importantly, students made an agreement on many of these issues. In the meantime, (1992 to the present) the student government has had countless meetings and Senate motions on Financial Aid, problems with being dropped entirely from all your classes for being late with payments, child care, allowances for a block of time with no classes so that students can participate in committees which make decisions about the future of this institution (can anybody say "parking fees?"), the establishment of an Asian–American Studies program, the retention and recruitment of students of color and the support groups and offices which attain these goals. Those offices which help with retention of students of color are also there to help all students and anyone who can utilize the services they provide. The student government has dealt with many of these issues for years. This is by no means the start of talks on these issues. This is a last ditch effort, because these issues have been ignored for so long. It is therefore necessary for us to sacrifice. Our sacrifice is not done to support a small number of students. Please ask your constituents if financial aid, parking fees, the affordability of UMass, child care, study programs or any other issue I have mentioned affect them directly or feel they are issues we should address. I am certain you will find these issues affect almost everyone here.

Finally, I must say that I know people here locked in Goodell who, if these issues are not resolved cannot come back to this University next semester. Our resolve is great and I pray that these issues can be resolved soon. Send us letters of support. We love them.

Brian Tirrell
SGA Speaker

SGA officers show their support

To the Editor:

Turn to LETTERS, page 6

The Nine Demands

Editor's note: Yesterday morning the student protesters issued nine demands as well as the following statement.

The introduction to the demands read: "In order for both parties to settle the basic concerns and needs of UMass students, we require that the Administration demonstrate their commitment to resolving the inequities which led to the occupation of Goodell. Toward this end, we ask the Administration to agree to implement each of the following nine points listed below. We believe these to be minimal requirements acceptable for negotiations to even begin. The student occupation of the Goodell Building has lasted four days and the Administration has not offered any significant remedies. We believe that once these nine points are met, we may proceed in a more efficient manner towards an acceptable resolution on our Living Document. Once this is demonstrated we can proceed with the remainder of the negotiations."

Below is each of the student protesters' nine demands followed by the Administration's response. Bold font signifies protesters' demands. Regular font signifies administration's response.

1. The Administration will strongly recommend to the Faculty Senate that all candidates should be available to answer student questions in the evenings, when there are no classes so that students may fully participate.

The Administration will strongly recommend to Department that all candidates should be available to answer student questions in the evenings.

2. The Administration will strongly recommend that a block of time will be set aside when no classes are held. All meetings, search committees, etc., requiring student participation may be held during this time.

The Administration will strongly recommend to the Space and Calendar Committee of the Faculty Senate that a block of time will be set aside when no classes are held.

3. The Administration will assure that the UALRC, BCP, CCEBMS liaisons within the admissions office (Assistant Director positions) be filled and report to the Associate Director of ALANA Recruitment as stated.

The Administration reaffirms that we are currently searching for candidates for these positions within the Admissions Office, the positions are Assistant Director positions, and they report to the Associate Director of ALANA Recruitment. The job descriptions for these positions are attached.

4. The Administration will assure that a position of the level of Assistant Director for ALANA Transfer students will be hired by June 1997.

ALANA transfer applicants will not be denied admission without a final review of their applications by an ALANA admissions staff professional. There are not enough transfer applications to justify hiring an additional staff person for this.

5. The Administration will increase the funding for the CCEMBS, UALRC and BCP to fulfill the existing needs of these programs. The above mentioned support programs demand a $50,000 increase in base budget.

In its FY 98 budget, Student Affairs has already requested a total $48,000 for tutoring and operating funds. Based upon additional documented needs of the programs, we will support requests for increased allocations in the FY 99 budget.

6. Within Enrollment Services the Administration will fund full–time counselors for these support programs and pay them the same salaries as other advisors on campus.

Salaries for full–time counselors/advisors in the support programs within Enrollment Services are covered by a collective bargaining agreement.

7. The Administration will establish a Native support program on campus comparable to BCP, CCEBMS and UALRC. This program shall be staffed with at least one full–time advisor and two graduate student TA positions and work–study positions. This program should be fully functional by Spring '98.

Consistent with the goals of the Strategic Action Plan and recent discussions with Native leaders, the University recognizes the need for additional support services for Native students. By Spring '98 the campus will fund a position for three years to develop a support program and seek additional funding from outside sources.

8. The Student Office of ALANA Affairs will remain an independent body to answer to the Governing Board of the Student Office of ALANA Affairs. A full time Office Manager and an Assistant Director will be funded through non–student activity trust funds.

This is a request that has significant organizational implications for both the administration and the SGA and must be addressed in future discussions.

9. The Administration will create sufficient and affordable child care for graduate and undergraduate students of the University. In addition the University will implement a sick–care drop off center and a children's library in the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

The Chancellor has appointed a Task Force with representatives from all segments of the campus community. The matter of a sick child center will be taken up by the Task force. The SGA and GSS have been asked to recommend members. The new Director of Libraries will be asked to consider the possibility of establishing a children's library.

It is our recommendation that a subcommittee of the Faculty Senate Council on the Status of Minorities be established and asked to monitor implementation of the agreement. This subcommittee will include but not be limited to student and administrators and will report regularly to Faculty Senate.

Deputy Chancellor Williams and Vice Chancellor Hedgepeth will meet regularly for the rest of the semester with the student negotiating group in order to discuss the remaining concerns.

Financial Aid/Bursar

1. Eliminating the hold on students during pre-registration due to outstanding bursar's bills.

   1. The University believes that a student's financial obligations for one semester must be resolved before that student enrolls for the next semester. Without affecting their current semester status, holds give students to opportunity to develop satisfactory, achievable plans to pay current semester bills before and during the weeks of pre-registration. We do not believe it would be more advantageous to students to permit their pre-registration for then stop the enrollments if the bill remains undcleared. We have already been paying particular attention to this area and will be monitoring the effectiveness and exact improvements implemented in the Fall of 1996.

2. Allocate funds targeted for ALANA students and low income students. $2M annually. These funds are not contingent on G.P.A.

   2. We agree additional funds are needed. We have and will continue to consider financial aid a priority item in budget planning and allocations. There are additional funds in the current budget request. Over the past five years, the University has increased the amount of institutional funds available for financial aid by 700% from &1,500,000 to $10,500,000, an outstanding commitment for a state institution, the bulk of which is not contingent on GPA. We know there are still insufficient funds available for financial aid and are committed to continuing to increase the total. The five–year Capital Campaign includes a goal of $10,000,000 for financial aid and other student programs.

4. Eliminate all late fees, starting Fall '97

   4. The University is committed to assisting students avoid the circumstances that result in late fees. For example, the Dean of Students Office has recently established a triage system specifically designed to help students resolve the difficulties in meeting their financial obligations. Nonetheless, maintaining late fees is fiscally necessary.

Faculty and Staff

a. Search committees for faculty and staff hiring should be required to have equal representation of students, including a substantial ALANA student representation.

   a. We agree to work with student governance bodies to increase student presence on search committees. While the faculty and administration have primary responsibility for faculty hiring, students are encouraged to participate on search committees and their contributions are valued.

2. Each department be required to submit a plan to the chancellor and the negotiating team outlining their plans for ethnically diversifying the faculty in the departments. The ALANA faculty on tenure track should match in proportion to the impending increase of ALANA students, starting September '97. Departments should be informed in Spring '97 so that the plan is implemented by September '97.

   2. A more diverse faculty benefits all students. The Office of Equal Opportunity and Diversity monitors search processes form initial advertising through completion to ensure attention to issues of diversity. When conducting searches, departments are provided with availability data and encouraged to take all measures possible to increase departmental diversity, particularly where underrepresentation exists. Since 1992, the ALANA representation among newly hired tenure track faculty has averaged 25%. We will continue to use special programs to sustain or increase this rate, with particular emphasis on those areas which are underrepresented compared with national availability data.

4. Complete review of all hiring procedures meeting with a report due by May 15, 1997. This committee will consist of 50% ALANA students and 5 ALANA faculty members (i.e. at least, one Native American, one African American, one Asian American, one Latin American).

   4. The Office of Equal Opportunity and Diversity will meet with students to review hiring procedures and discuss their concerns. Your student representatives should contact the Office to set this review in motion.

Active Outreach for ALANA and First Generation Low–Income Students:

1. Create a program comparable to the Upward Bound Program with a base budget of $500,000 starting September 1997. This money should not be a result of higher fees.

   1. The University will seek funding from both governmental and private sources for an institutional program designed to increase the readiness of high school students of color, attract those students to UMass Amherst, and thereby create an expanded ALANA applicant pool.

2. In addition, $250,000 should be given to the program annually. This program will serve the same population and areas as the Upward Bound Program.

a. This program will be a separate entity from the SUMMA and Talent Search programs (the Assistant Director of Recruitment will run this.)

   2. We will continue to support the SUMMA Program that has broad participation In the Springfield school system, we will continue to seek private funds to secure SUMMA's long term future. We will also seek renewed funding for the Tolent Search Program in the next funding cycle. In combination with summer programs sponsored by academic departments, these institutional programs have proved effective in recruiting ALANA students to this campus.

5. There be more publications, pamphlets, brochures and videos for ALANA recruitment exclusively.

   5. A new ALANA student recruitment publication, written collaboratively by ALANA staff and faculty, has been developed for the entering class of 2000 and 2001. Presently, Enrollment Services is initiating a search to refill the vacated Admissions publications position. Updated brochures for CCEBMS, BCP, UALRC, and Native student recruitment will be among the first projects for this individual. Continuous examination of all recruitment publications, brochures, and videos for ALANA representation and information is an ongoing priority for Enrollment Services and the University Publications Office.

Recognition of Ethnicity:

1. The creation or upgrading of the following to Major Department status: Irish Studies; Native American Studies; Latin American Studies; Asian American Studies.

a. If there is no program in place presently in any of the above, begin the process to establish one.

b. We also demand that the curriculum of each afore–mentioned department reflect its respective ethnic population on be UMass Amherst campus.

c. In addition, the University should remain aware of a changing ALANA communities' academic needs and be prepared to adjust and accommodate to serve them.

d. Instructors of said classes should hold tenure track positions.

   The administration supports opportunities for students to study the culture and heritage of the Irish, Native Americans, Latin Americans and Latinos and Asian Americans. Where interest and demand are sufficient, certificate programs (such as that already in place for Latin American Studies and that under faculty governance for Native American Studies) will be supported by the administration. Creation of major programs is the purview of the faculty, but often follows form popular certificate programs. Faculty with expertise in these subject areas are members of several academic departments, and College plans from Social and Behavioral Sciences and Humanities and Fine Arts call for additional faculty in these areas. The Provost agrees to meet with students to describe the process for initiating proposals for certificates and majors. These requests are part of the planning and budget discussions.

Graduate Students:

2. At least five more employees involved in rigorous recruitment of ALANA students, including in economically disadvantaged areas and Native Americans.

   2. We have a multi-port approach to recruitment and retention.

   Recruitment: 1) continue with widespread effort via Internet, attendance at GRE forums, and recruitment fairs at other campuses; 2) establish partnerships with colleges and universities with large ALANA undergraduate enrollments, e.g. Haward, Spelman, Jackson State, Arizona State, and invite administrative representatives to our campus to facilitate recruitment efforts, 3) select representatives from targeted UMass graduate programs to visit campuses such as those listed above to recruit students. We will provide these individuals with release time to make these visits and participate in summer recruitment training programs.

   Retention: 5 Graduate Assistantships will be funded to further develop and sustain the new ALANA graduate student network initiated this year. These graduate students will advise the Graduate Dean on matters affecting ALANA graduate students; make recommendations for support services; implement ALANA graduate student focus groups; facilitate ALANA graduate/undergraduate mentoring; and conceptualize a leadership forum in the spring.

3. OMGSR funds be increased to at least $2 million to meet our goals, which include 20 percent minority graduate student body and funds for retention.

   3. The Graduate Dean has requested additional funds to supplement the current level of funding for graduate assistantships from underrepresented groups. This year, funds available for University fellowships for graduate students were increased by $50,000 and it is expected that another $50,000 will be added to that base in the upcoming fiscal year.

   We will work with the Center for teaching to develop a TA orientation program for ALANA graduate students to be held for two weeks in the summer. This will prepare ALANA graduate students for the responsibilities of being teaching assistants and will increase their ability to compete for these positions.

Support Programs

1. An increase in full time counselors to aid ALANA students with advising services:

a. CCEBMS needs two more full time counselors
b. UALRC needs two more full time counselors
c. BCP need two more full time counselors

   1. We understand the need for additional staffing for these important programs. Currently, the counselor/advisor to student ratios are 1 to 189 in UALRC, 1 to 147 in CCEBMS, and 1 to fewer than 100 in BCP. Although Federal guidelines suggest a ratio of 1 to 150, we realize this is far from optimal. Given the current imbalances, UALRC is the first priority for an additional counseling position. In the interim, UALRC has received additional funding for graduate Assistants to help lessen the impact of the high student to advisor ratio. Advising remains an important function of the University.

4. In addition, a Native Support Program should be established on campus, comparable to BCP, CCEBMS and UALRC. This program should be staffed with at least one full time advisor and two graduate student T.A. positions and work–study positions. This program should be fully functional by Spring '98.

   4. The University will review services currently available to Native students with comparable services provided to other ALANA and non-ALANA students. This review will provide the ground work for future consideration of a support program similar to that of BCP, CCEBMS, and UALRC.

The Administrative Offices of ALANA Affairs

1. The creation of an administrative office at ALANA Affairs comparable to that of Greek Affairs, the Women's Center and the Office of Jewish Affairs.

a. This office will serve as watchdog over University policies including all those issues that affect ALANA programs on a graduate or undergraduate level.

b. This administration will meet with the ALANA Affairs office and with its Office Advisory Board on a regular basis to ensure that ALANA concerns are addressed.

2. The ALANA Office Advisory Board will be composed of ALANA students (graduate and undergraduate) faculty and staff.

a. This Board will provide oversight and approval for the activities of the Administrative Office of ALANA Affairs, including all appointments to this office.

b. This Board will include two representatives of the ALANA Caucus, one each of the following programs: BMCP, BCP, CCEBMS and UALRC. One representative from the Office of the Student Office of ALANA Affairs Governing Board and one ALANA representative from each union representing the faculty and staff of the respective campus in the Native American community.

c. The Director of the Administrative Office of the ALANA Affairs will serve as an ex–officio member of this board.

d. This office should be functional by spring '98.

   The administration's desire to discuss this issue is a matter of record. If students are prepared to discuss this time to consider the issue the administration will be happy to work with the students to set up a mechanism to address it.

The Student Office of ALANA Affairs

1. This existing office will remain an independent body answerable to the Governing Board of the Office of ALANA Affairs.

a. A full–time office manager and an assistant director will be funded through University administrative funds.

b. All other funding for this office will be maintained through its existing funding mechanisms.

   Any discussion of additional staffing for this office funded by the administration will have to be part of discussions about the establishment of an Administrative Office of ALANA Affairs.

Child Care

1. The creation of child care sufficient to and affordable enough for the graduate and undergraduate students of this university.

a. Implementation of a subsidized flexible child care center centrally located space with 60 seats, open for 80 hours a week (serving a minimum 240 children at 20 hours a week). This center will serve graduate and undergraduate students and all seats will be dedicated for them, excepting vacancies remaining 30 days after the start of the semester. This center will be implemented no later than Jan. 30, 1998. All fees for this center will be set using the existing state child care sliding fee scales. Oversight for this center will be done in full cooperation with the director of child care and family issues committee.

b. To answer the needs of the more than 2000 student parents of this campus, University will provide $500,000 in child care vouchers for both graduate and undergraduate students administ

There are other ways

Okay! I guess anyone with a positive IQ around this area has heard about the ALANA rally and protests. Everyone seems to be so involved. It is nice to see students from so many different backgrounds unite like this and get along so well. We really are setting an example of what a 21st century society should be like. Right? Wrong.

Before I continue, I find it important to mention that I do belong to the ALANA community. It just so happens that I don't really agree with all their demands and that makes me wonder if I'm alone in my little world. I can imagine why the administration is taking so long to come up with a solution if I myself have problems agreeing with them.

"We might get the administration to give in to all the demands, but are we going to get the respect that we really want?"

Anant Ahuja

Throughout the whole week so far, no one has really raised the most important issue. It is so easy to find a problem and make a big deal out of it, but does anyone who is out there fighting for this cause have a solution? It is so easy to say that the costs are too high, but does anyone understand that no one really had a meeting with Chancellor Scott one fine day and suddenly decided that it would be so cool to raise the price of "everything" at UMass? When students apply to UMass, they do get informed about the possibility of a hike in costs. I think to keep up with the services that are promised in that Admissions Catalogue, that could be a just solution. How can the University keep charging the same price when prices outside the University keep increasing?

Another demand that keeps bothering me is to have a set percentage of colored students that should be admitted each year. That is the most outrageous demand I have ever heard. According to me, that right there is discrimination. Imagine telling an academically poor student with high self-esteem that he was accepted to the University only because he was a minority and that without his colored skin, he did not have a chance. I agree, this is a state school but state schools are allowed to have standards. That's why we have many state schools. They have different locations and different standards. Do these protestors realize what kinds of problems could arise if just about everybody was accepted at UMass?

I could go on and on about the many demands that I think are crazy, but I don't have that kind of time. The bottom line is that we are trying to change something that cannot be changed by these protests. We might get the administration to give in to all the demands, but are we going to get the respect that we really want? I suggest working on the prejudice that still exists in their minds. This disruptive behavior is only making things worse. The saddest part is that we might go home one day, thinking how awesome we were and how the University finally agreed to the demands, but who is to say that their attitude towards us will change. Maybe that's what we missed five years ago!

I do agree with the fact that we need more diversity here at UMass, but is that something that can be changed overnight? We must understand that discrimination is a major problem and that like any major problem, the solution takes time to work. Respect is not something that one can demand. We have to earn it. As a community, what are we doing about it?

Anant Ahuja is a UMass student.

Just the beginning

Much has been said about the demands of the student protesters in Goodell, but little or nothing has been mentioned about the movement they have sparked.

On the evening of March 2, when the organizers of the student protest were making the final decisions, they never thought that they were actually putting together a tremendous movement. Irrespective of all the optimism, hope and determination, their best estimate was that only 60 people would participate directly in the sit-in protest and a few dozens would be protesting outside.

Mahmood Ketabchi

However, in the last four days, hundreds of students have taken part in the protest inside Goodell. In each of the four night, over 150 students have slept over in the building. The pressure and the willingness to get inside the build was so high that the administration ordered its cops to shut down the whole building not allowing entrance into the building.

Throughout these four days there have been continuous protests outside of Goodell. The students from the other four local colleges have not only joined the protesters inside the building, but also organized marches and rallies in support of the UMass students. Many students are walking out from their classes and bringing friends and family members to express their solidarity with the protesters. People are coming from all over the Valley to show their support and concern.

A great supply of food, drink, fruit, hygienic materials, clothes, pillows and blankets are incessantly flowing into the building. There is so much of everything that the protesters in the building are sending the excess out to charities. Many TA's attempted to tutor the students, but cops turned them away. Many faculty members and TAs have declared their support and have assured their students that they should not worry about their exams and assignments. On Wednesday night over 100 protesters slept by Goodell Building in more than 20 tents. On Thursday morning approximately 300 protesters marched through Whitmore to warn the UMass Administration that we have the power to take this whole University. Moreover, the news of this protest is all over the country.

And this is just the beginning.

The momentum is building up as the days pass by.

Every protester who was involved in any sit-in protest has admitted that this current protest is by far the greatest one they have ever seen at UMass. This is indeed a great moment for the UMass students, their supporters, and whole community. This protest has already turned into a movement. It is becoming its light of hope for a better future everywhere. It seems as if everyone in this area has been waiting for something to happen. This sit-in protest has become a spark that is about to start a fire. This movement is no longer just about the students inside of Goodell, it is about everyone who is involved in it one way or another.

This is no revolution, but this movement has every humane qualities of an egalitarian revolution; it has the decency and integrity of a social revolution for equality and freedom, Spontaneity, self-consciousness, self-activity, initative and discipline are the characteristics of this movement. Sense of commitment, determination, courage and morale is incredibly high. Hope and optimism are everywhere. Self-sacrifice, selflessness, sharing, caring and loving have become a way of life for everyone inside the building and their supporters outside.

This movement is the epitome of a truly inclusive and free movement. Black, white, Latino, Native American, Asian... low income men, women, gays and lesbians are all fighting together, sleep side by side and dance with each other. This is a movement with a true diversity, a diversity with a sense of commonness and oneness. It is not a zoo-type, pretentious, individualized, and narrow ethnic and interest group diversity.

The current protest is a movement with unconditional freedom. Everyone freely expresses his/her idea and feeling. No one is forced to shut up and pressured into conformity. There are no showy speakers, no dealing and wheeling as to who can speak and who can't. This movement is a truly bottom-up, mass, direct movement. Everyone is a leader and a participant. This is a movement that challenges the suffocating capitalist democracy and its shameful inequality.

This is a genuine, an honest, self-motivated common action. This movement is freedom itself. It is a way of life, it is the future and it is what tomorrow should look like. It gives everyone a sense of pride, wholeness, and Integrity. It feels good to live like a human being and fight for the rights that are truly ours. This movement is the epitome of humanity at its best. This movement has already succeeded.

Mahmood Ketabchi is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor (continued from page 5)

We the undersigned Student Government officers at University of Massachusetts, Amherst, elected to serve you, do hereby applaud the efforts of the truly diverse coalition of students now occupying the Goodell Building. Your efforts of personal sacrifice on behalf of students at this University is nobel and we join with you in calling for the administration to live up to its promises. Unfortunately, we cannot, as a whole endorse you, in part because many of our ranks are among you. The SGA President, Speaker, the entire of the ALANA Caucus Senators and a number of their senators are here in Goodell or are camping out outside. Thank you for your efforts so far, we are with you, one, united.

Brian Tirrell
SGA Speaker
19 SGA Senators signed this letter

Union supports students' protest

To the Editor:

On Thursday, March 6, 1997, the Executive Board of the UMass Amherst Chapter of Local 509, Service Employees International Union, AFL–CIO/CLC, which represents about 900 professional staff on the Amherst campus, met and discussed the issues raised by those currently occupying the Goodell Building and currently being negotiated by them and the campus administration. The Board then drafted and adopted the following resolution:

"The UMass Amherst Chapter Executive Board of Local 509, SEIU, supports the goals of the students currently negotiating with the administration to ensure quality education and to increase access to the University for all people In the commonwealth regardless of their economic means and/or racial/ethnic backgrounds. We endorse their objective of achieving greater University efforts towards the goals of diversity, multiculturalism and educational opportunity for all. We urge the administration to negotiate in good faith towards these ends."

Our union is very familiar with the difficulties of bargaining with the administration. Our last contract took over 1 1/2 years to negotiate, and final settlement was only achieved on the eve of a major demonstration with other unions at a Board of Trustees meeting. Even then, we were unable to obtain stronger protections for our members who might be illegally discriminated against. We consider this an example of a lack of commitment to put rhetoric concerning fairness and equal opportunity into practice.

We look forward to working cooperatively with students and the administration on these fundamental issues of economic and social justice at the University.

Simon Keochakian
President of UMass Amherst Chapter of Local 509

Everywoman's Center adds support

To the Editor:

We, the staff of Everywoman's Center, wish to register our support for the students involved in the occupation of Goodell and their list of demands. The mission of the University, as stated in Trustee Document T92–117B, includes the following: "Access: Providing undergraduate education for all qualified students, regardless of their financial circumstances... Paying special attention to meeting the needs of students from varied social, cultural and ethnic backgrounds," and "Quality of life:... promoting the multicultural awareness and support and appreciation of, and respect for diversity essential to a pluralistic, transnational society."

All of the student demands support this mission. Most of these demands are not new, and some are long overdue. Mission statements set the context. The student demands translate the mission into the action steps that will enable this university to realize its stated goals. We urge the administration to take these action steps, and fulfill its stated mission as a public land–grant state university.

Carol S. Wallace, Director
The staff of the Everywoman's Center

New World Theater backs takeover

To the Editor:

The student staff of New World Theater fully supports the student takeover of the Goodell Building. NWT's commitment to the ALANA community began with its inception almost two decades ago in response to student demands, much like the ones being made today. We recognize and laud the strength and determination of the comforts and needs, their lives on hold for the ultimate benefit of this University. We understand how vital it is that students challenge this University. We understand how vital it is that students challenge the quiet and insidious ways in which students of color are oppressed on this campus. It is important to question the system that deems that there not be more than a handful of students of color in our largest classrooms and it is important to take a stand against the system that just looks on, uncaring, when not all of them make it to graduation day. The fight is against the rhetoric and complacency of this administration and against the apathy that has been in place so far. The fight is for a stronger voice for students of color on this campus.

Meeting the demands of the protesting students will ensure a stronger voice for students of color on this campus. Over the past 18 years NWT has acted as a first voice theater for artists of color as they represent and express issues important in our communities. We persist in our efforts to present artistic work that has traditionally remained in the periphery. Now, we urge students and faculty from all Five Colleges to support these students as they fight for a voice at the margins of this place of higher learning.

Sangeeta Rao
Lucy Burns
and the entire student staff at NWT

Commitment to education and diversity a must

To the Editor:

One of the first things that happened, when one of us arrived at UMass to teach in 1989, was that the "catch-up" math programs for students entering with inadequate math preparation, were cut. As far as the accessibility of public education is concerned, It has seemed largely downhill from there — a long change of budget cuts and tuition hikes. As UMass faculty, we are writing in support of the ALANA–led demonstrators and their demands.

In spite of the hype that affirmative action has equalized everything, numbers haven't really changed very much. Moreover, though there have been various (often half– hearted) attempts at recruiting minority and "nontraditional" (e.g. women in science) students, relatively little effort is put into retaining them. A support network, including tutors, advisors and a peer group, is critical for all students. The need is potentially much bigger, if you are a student operating as a nontraditional element in the University environment. Support services are often dismissed as coddling, or special treatment, for minorities. This reaction is understandable, if you are part of the group which largely holds power in our society (i.e., whites and white males, in particular); if you have never been in a situation in which you "stuck out" because you are a woman or a minority, if you have never needed to make up for weaknesses in you are a woman or a minority, if you have never experienced not automatically being treated as an intelligent, legitimate equal by teachers and other students, then it may take some hard thinking to realize how difficult it can be to succeed on this campus.

Another aspect of retention is financial policies. Currently the University bureaucracy uses a draconian approach when students fail to meet payments — they are simply terminated as students. This obviously discriminates against poorer students, and parodies the purpose of public education. Further, the less affluent students are frequently minority students — not surprising when one looks at the demographics of the [United States]. This policy should be replaced by a more civilized procedure of working out a payment scheme while the student remains in classes.

There are a number of plans — having UMass become an AAU member, creating an "Honors College" on campus (not to mention Division I football) — which aim at turning UMass into a more elite institution. There is an idea that the quality of the University depends primarily on the SAT scores of its incoming students, or on flashy new initiatives. While we generally support all efforts to improve the quality of teaching and research on campus, we think that the University priorities should focus on serving the needs of all students, not just the elite, and this is where we should be putting our resources.

Finally, we should all be addressing the broader causes of the pinch on education and barriers to minority education. To implement serious change we need money, and that has to come from somewhere. To make progress Massachusetts needs to reorient itself towards serving the needs of people. One telling comparison, which highlights current misplaced priorities, is between trends in state spending on prisons and spending on higher education. In 1988, state spending on "criminal justice" — prisons, courts, etc. — stood at $750 million, slightly below the budget for higher education. By 1996, while spending on higher ed. was slightly lower, criminal justice spending had increased to $1.2 billion. In a time when more African–American men are behind bars, than in college, we are closely following the path of California and Florida, which are spend more on prisons than on colleges and universities. We strongly believe that what our society needs are more and better schools, not more prisons and jails.

Prof. Jennie Traschen
Prof. David Kaiser
Department of Physics

Responding to the burden of white privilege

To the Editor:

[In response to Jesse Pompei's letter] to the editor [in Wednesday's] Collegian angered me more than anything else in this paper has in four years. How could you be so blind, self–centered and offensive such as you were, and at the same time, comfortable enough with what you were saying to print it?

Nothing could be more ignorant than to say that "being white is a burden, not a privilege." White privilege is a privilege. I know this. I'm white. And no, don't you dare suggest that I am saying these things in order to sound like Kory on the "Real World" who wants to be "more cultured." I'm saying these things because I'm aware enough to realize that being white means being privileged. What you seem not to realized is that, while you may feel laden with burdens beyond your wildest imaginations, you are privileged for a very simple reason: in this country, it is simply easier to be white. It doesn't mean your life is easy, good or simple. But many would be very offended by suggesting that they don't receive the wrath of being on the other side of the privileged.

Do you realize what you said? To suggest that the ALANA students who are leading themselves up in Goodell (preventing you from working your job) are doing so in order to make you ashamed of your being white is ridiculous. Do yourself a favor, do them a favor — go listen to what they are asking for. Go listen to what they are demanding. Try to understand and appreciate the fact that you don't have to hole yourself up in a building to get yourself heard (talk about burden).

And, if you really need it, I'll lend you the gas money you so desperately need.

Will Nathanson
Amherst

UMass Alum offers support

To the Editor:

I'm writing to support what ALANA is doing to help UMass in preserving a more diverse environment. I have mixed feelings about affirmative action but I do believe UMass can do a better job in hiring more minority professors. During my stay at the [University], I can only recall two professors that are of ethnic descent. Of which, these two professors have best Teaching Awards. I feel the financial aid is the sufficient for all students who really needs it. Most students at the [University] while they go to school. Some may have two or three part–time jobs. I was one of these people. I went to UMass because of its diversity in people, value of the education, distinguished faculty, and an experience of a lifetime that I will never regret.

I'm hoping ALANA and the administration will come to terms because too many lives are at stake here.

Amy Cheng, SOM '93
amyc@fig.com

Having his say

To the Editor:

Four years I've been here, and for four years I've kept my opinions to myself and behind closed doors. Why do you ask? Because I'm white and come from a financially comfortable family, therefore, any and all opinions I have regarding issues concerning people of color is classified as racist. I am not racist, so let's get the out of the picture. However, I've had it with being afraid to speak my mind. Every time you turn around, someone on this campus stands up on their soap box and cries racism. We are all taking steps in the wrong direction, people.

Over the course of my college career, I have yet to see one person or group bring us all together as student body. Instead I've seen multiple efforts to do nothing but segregate us. Student groups band together not to unite black and white but instead segregate themselves from others. Now of course I am completely wrong on this issue because I'm white, but for argument's sake, let's take a moment here to give examples of some things, that had they been done by white students, would have been seen directly as RACIST. ALANA, for those of you who don't know what this stands for, means the [everyone] but white group. Black Entertainment Television, Russels Simmon's Def comedy jam (for the young black comedians today), and the infamous movie White Men Can't Jump are just scratching the surface of what's wrong with today's society. What would happen if I tried to state the CCU — The Caucasion Coalition of UMass. How about WET (White Entertainment Television) or what about my own comedy club for the young, white comedians of today. But my favorite would [have] to come out with the movie Black Men Can't Skate. Someone get a dictionary and look up the word "diversify" — it's a far cry from segregate.

I've probably pissed off the campus, but I don't care. I've only got one semester left, and have had it with people complaining. My father came from a very poor family — they had nothing. However, he was determined to make a better life for his family. He worked 70 hours a week, getting stepped on and backstabbed, all the while going to school. At 52, he received his Ph.D. and is finally happy with his job. So you go ahead and call me privileged all you want. Being white doesn't make me privileged, being my father's son just makes me determined.

Jeffrey Ambrose
Amherst

An ode to the protest

To the Editor:

Students united never divided!
Students united never defeated!
Is what the chant appears to be as another 300 diverse students converge into the Congregation already a thousand strong students and faculty inside doing their best supporters of ALANA a minority support group or they are GEO or graduate students/teachers seeking equal rights and they stand by the windows soaking up support for the sit–in peaceful but loud.

Well, demands have been posted to the powers and the powers emphasize inability, on their part to conduct action, as a reaction to chaotic confusion, by separate groups and then enters the news, swaying public opinion this time to believe the students' right, right in the idea they have rights to be honored and respected and not denied.

Within the current state, the holed–up ones grow in number and tension, but mean noting until all of UMass– Amherst is effectively shut down.

Only then may the slithering Chancellor feel the urge to pick up a government phone, write off the long–distance call, and be forced to deal with exorcising his mind.

Christopher D. Martin
Greenfield

Not responsible for sins of our ancestors

To the Editor:

This is a response [to] the letter from Tina Cincotti and Katie M. Thoennes. To claim that because one's skin is white his or her ancestors created racism in America is ludicrous. One could make a better case for the placing the crimes of the Crusades on the head of Mother Theresa. Most of us are the sons and daughters of immigrants who met hostility when they hit these shores. Each of us at UMass bears the weight of only our own sins. We are not to blame for the slave holder any more than we are for the man who hung out the sign that read "Irish need not apply."

Paul Doheny
PDOHENY@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

A protest for racial double standards

To the Editor:

When I left my 11:15 class Wednesday [morning], I found myself walking in the opposite direction of my dorm, drawn by the cheers of protesters at Goodell. As I passed the chapel and looked towards Goodell I found an enthusiastic crowd of my fellow students cheering a group of protesters huddled around a microphone. To see so many students fighting for what they believe to be right was an inspiring sight. I stood there for half and hour as words such as "oppression" and "institutional racism" were spoken. That's when I realized that the reason for not coming sooner wasn't due to my apathy as a white person, but the fact that I disagree with a lot of what the protesters had to say. I'm white, middle class freshman, conservative in my views and firm in my beliefs. I believe strongly in what Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. fought and died for: racial equality and a society where the color of your skin doesn't matter. For this reason I do not support either affirmative action or quotas. I do not support groups such as the NAACP or ALANA for that matter. Although these once noble groups were instrumental in a proud struggle for civil rights, they have now squandered their moral authority. To quote the brilliant conservative economist and nationally syndicated black columnist Walter Williams, "[These groups] are little more than race hustlers championing a racial spoils system. They no longer seek fair play and a color blind society; their agenda is one of group rights where quota is king and color blindness in viewed with contempt." I think it's time those students who are protesting at Goodell take a hard look at what it was Dr. King was fighting for. What you are fighting for is not racial equality but a system of racial double standards.

Mark Boniface Dickinson

Arts & Living

Friday, March 7, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Berlioz epic to open at the Fine Ars Center

By Julia Casson
Collegian Staff

An enriching evening of music entitled "Fantastic Music" is being presented by the University Orchestra and will be performed on Sunday, March 9 in the Fine Arts Center Hall.

The night of music, under the direction of Mark Russell Smith, includes Symphonie Fantastique by Hector Berlioz, which is often thought of as one of the great program symphonies. Symphonie Fantastique is based on Berlioz' real–life obsession with actress Harriet Smithson which ties into the main theme of the movement. The presentation is intended to be accompanied by an explanation of the intricate story behind the music.

The story tells the tale of a young, love–sick musician who attempts to poison himself with opium. Being sensitive and possessing an overactive imagination, he doesn't die — instead, escapes into a drug–induced sleep where he experiences amazing illusions.

The five movements of the symphony depict this dream– like state of bizarre hallucinations. Clear images of this voyage will be conjured up in the minds of the audience simply by changes in the music. These visions include a ball, a storm, an eerie witches' Sabbath and a march to the scaffold complete with a gulllotine drop.

The next symphony to be performed is in deep contrast to Berlioz's work. It is entitled Symphony No. 30, "Alleluja," written by Franz Josef Haydn. In 1975, Hayden was working for the Hungarian Esterhazy princes and was gaining recognition as being a gifted composer. "Alleluja," which was written during his employment with the princes, represents a combining of concerto and symphony forms. The first movement is based on the Gregorian "Alleluja" that was written and intended to be chanted on Easter morning mass.

The concert will take place in the Fine Arts center on Sunday, March 9 at 7 p.m. Tickets are free for UMass students, $4 for seniors and students, and $8 for public. For more information call 545–2511.

COURTESY DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC & DANCE

The UMass Orchestra, featuring Christine Lee (violin) and Heather Ashbridge (viola) will perform Berlioz' Symphonie Fantastique on Sunday at 7 p.m. at the FAC.

COURTESY SIRE RECORDS

The Smiths in their heyday. Has Morrisey's hair ever been so big?

How the Smiths made music

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

In light of the brand spankin' new Smiths tribute album, The World Still Won't Listen (Chord/Too Damn Hype), I think it's time to take a closer look at the band's history, output and legacy.

It's hard to believe the Smiths have been gone for 10 years. Love 'em or hate 'em, you can't deny them their rightful place high in the pantheon of modern rock. Along with R.E.M., they were arguably the college band of the '80s. Their unique coupling of jangling guitar–pop with overwrought, melodramatic vocals made for a truly distinct sound in the synth–happy post–new wave era.

Part of a long–standing tradition of excellent Manchester bands (from the Buzzcocks right up through Oasis), the Smiths formed in 1982. Focusing around the tension–filled creative axis/songwriting partnership of vocalist Morrissey and guitarist Johnny Marr, the band straddled the fine line between brilliance and melancholic pretension throughout their five–year career.

Turn to SMITHS, page 8

Agnostic Front back

Legendary band reunites original lineup

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

In the early '80s on the lower eastside of New York city, an institution began called Agnostic Front. With one foot firmly planted in street politics and the other in punk rock, Agnostic Front changed the face of hardcore forever.

Agnostic Front's first album Victim In Pain instantly pushed them to the forefront of the punk hardcore scene. Despite criticism by Maximum Rock and Roll referring to them as fascists, Agnostic Front pushed on.

Agnostic Front continued with the releases of Cause For Alarm and Liberty and Justice For... Liberty and Justice For... featured the classic song "Crucified" which was originally done by an old Washington D.C. band Iron Cross. They also released two live albums Final Warning and Live At CBGB's which effectively showcased the tremendous live show that Agnostic Front became famous for.

What separates Agnostic Front from other bands was the fact that they were so dedicated to uniting the scene at any cost. While the scene was splitting and punk and hardcore were getting farther and farther away from each other Agnostic Front was the one band that everyone went to see. Straight Edge, skinhead, crusty punk and every other category could be found at Agnostic Front singing along to the chorus "Skins and Punks united as one."

Which is perhaps why the Agnostic Front re–union was so necessary. Although Agnostic Front was continued in a sense through Madball which featured Agnostic Front guitarist and scene godfather Vinny Stigma and Roger's younger brother Freddy on vocals it wasn't the same. In fact no band has even come close, except maybe Sick Of It All, to the impact Agnostic Front has had on the scene.

The initial Agnostic Front reunion show at Wetlands in New York City was a beautiful display of unity as old school kids, new school kids and skinheads all danced and sang–a–long in unity without one fight. Despite the accusations that Agnostic Front is a fascist or tough guy band anyone who really listens to them knows that those are two things they stand against.

So, Sunday night offers an opportunity to witness one of hardcore's all time greatest band in full effect with the original line up. Come watch Roger Miret prowl the stage and cues the guitars with his yell of "Stigma," come down and see the band who started it all.

Agnostic Front is playing at Pearl Street on Sunday night with 25 Ta'Life, Fastbreak, Pushbutton Warfare and Hatebreed. Doors open at 7 p.m. tickets are $12.50 in advance and $14 at the door.

Ex–porn star at Pearl St.

Sprinkle shows "Hardcore from the heart"

By Daniel Bodah
Collegian Staff

Annie Sprinkle has moved in the right circles to gain firsthand experience with women's issues and pornography. She began her career in the sex industry as a model (she has appeared in Hustler, Penthouse and Playboy) and actress (she has been in over 40 pornographic movies). In recent years, however, Sprinkle has spent a great deal of her time on performance art, writing essays and articles about sexual issues, and leading workshops on sexual themes and experiences.

Tonight and Saturday in a matinee showing, Pioneer Valley residents have the chance to attend the U.S. premier run of her new show, Hardcore from the Heart. Already the show has stirred a dose of controversy in Northampton: originally slated to run at the Northampton Center for the Arts, Hardcore from the Heart moved to Pearl Street Nightclub after the Center balked at hosting it.

The controversy that surrounds Sprinkle's work is no big surprise. Sprinkle has made a point of taking on our society's many sexual taboos and restrictions as the core concern of her work. She makes no bones about glorifying sexual pleasure and presents a worldview in which pornography is a tool of sexual liberation and economic freedom for women.

Among Sprinkle's attacks on sexual repression was her infamous Public Cervix Announcement (http://www.infi.net/~heck), in which she used a speculum to let the audience view her cervix.

The lighthearted, fun attitude that Sprinkle brings to her discussions of sexual issues can be tasted in some of her statements about the PCA: "A cervix is such a beautiful creation, yet most people go through life having missed the chance to see one. Over the years, I've given thousands of people that rare opportunity, by showing my cervix... to members of theatre audiences who stood in line by the hundreds in over a dozen countries."

Although word has it Sprinkle's new show involves no on– stage nudity, she is sure to bring her upbeat sexual empowerment rap and knowledgeable perspective to this subject so much at the heart of us all.

Arts! Entertain your self and write a review. It's easy.

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 4 RT. 116 SOUTH HADLEY 584-9153
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Jungle 2 Jungle *
Fools Rush In
Donnie Brasco
Rose wood
HAMPSHIRE 6 NORTHAMPTON 584-7550
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Dante's Peak
That Darn Cat
The Empire Strikes Back
Vegas Vacation
Star Wars
Absolute Power
Booty Call *
Private Parts *

Spring Breakin'.
ZANNA downtown Amherst

THE MOST SHOCKING THING ABOUT THIS MOVIE IS HOW MUCH PEOPLE LOVE IT!
"'Private Parts' is A COMIC FIRECRACKER with a surprising human touch." – Peter Travers, ROLLING STONE
"FUNNY! 'Private Parts' is a public pleasure." – David Hiltbrand, PEOPLE
"You'll be surprisingly charmed by 'Private Parts'. It's VERY FUNNY!" – Charles Ferruzza, KANSAS CITY SUN
"You'll love Howard Stern. A RUDDY SEE. ...it's mischief. This movie is." – Steve Oldfield, FOX-TV
HOWARD STERN
PRIVATE PARTS
PARAMOUNT PICS. PRESENTS AND RYCHER ENTERTAINMENT PRODUCTION OF A BETTY THOMAS FILM HOWARD STERN "PRIVATE PARTS" ROBIN QUIVERS MARY MCCORMACK CELIA CRUZ AND DANIEL SCHORR JIM BULLOCK KEITH SALMONS MUSIC BY HOWARD SHORE EDITED BY PAUL HIRSCH PRODUCED BY IVAN REITMAN AND MICHAEL RAUCHWERK DIRECTED BY BETTY THOMAS R
www.private-parts.com
STARTS TODAY AT THESE SELECTED THEATRES!

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
4th week! Curtain Daily 7&9:15 (arrive early)
FINE LINE FEATURES PRESENTS
7 ACADEMY AWARD® NOMINATIONS
INCLUDING BEST PICTURE
BEST ACTOR G. Geoffrey Rush
BEST DIRECTOR Scott Hicks
Shine
PG-13
The TRUE STORY of DAVID HELFGOTT, pianist, whose mind snapped due to the pressure of his overbearing father. The film follows his come back to the concert halls. HELFGOTT plays the film score
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treasures 584-8135

FEEDING FRENZY!
1/2 PRICE APPETIZERS
Wed-Sat 3-5pm & 7-11pm
Sun-Tues 3-5pm & 7-9pm
Super Nachos & Guacamole (Reg. $6.75)
Homemade Onion Rings (Reg. $3.95)
Potato Skins (Reg. $5.75)
Buffalo Wings (Reg. $4.95)
Artichoke & Cheese Dip (Reg. $5.75)
and lots more!!!
THE PUB
15 East Pleasant Street

DOMINO'S PIZZA
AMHERST 256-8911
BUFFALO WINGS
20 BUFFALO WINGS $8.99
TIP TOP SAVINGS
LARGE 2-TOPPING PIZZA & 4 COKES $11.99
BONUS
$1.00 OFF ANY MEDIUM PIZZA OR $2.00 OFF ANY LARGE PIZZA
LARGE DOUBLE
2 LARGE 1-TOPPING PIZZAS $15.99
DOMINO'S IS BEST
1 MEDIUM 2-TOPPING PIZZA & 2 COKES $8.99
MEAL DEAL
MEDIUM 2-TOPPING PIZZA, TWISTY BREAD & 2 CANS OF COKE $9.99

COURTESY PAUL COX/POLYDOR RECORDS

Van Morrison's new album The Healing Game is a lazy effort from a man with so many classics.

Morrison no longer delivers

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

VAN MORRISON
The Healing Game
Polydor Records

On Van Morrison's new album, there is one song in which he sings "In the very first, it was rock and roll / Set me free in body and soul / But this weight is just bringing me down."

From listening to The Healing Game, one could easily surmise that this weight is the guilt of having gone from putting gallons and gallons of sweat worth of effort into classic albums like Tupelo Honey, Common One and Astral Weeks to putting out a new album that rides on not much else than the name of Van Morrison.

The Healing Game is chock full of mid–tempo songs that all ride along on the same lazy, unimaginative rhythms, with the Belfast–born singer singing some of his least romantic and least imaginative lyrics in years. In "Sometimes We Cry," the man staggers on soul–lessly singing "Sometimes we know, sometimes we don't / Sometimes we give, sometimes we won't / Sometimes we're wrong, sometimes we're strong / Sometimes we cry." The man tries to cast life in so many ways and so many songs on this album, but if The Healing Game is about the times in life when we're most desperate, as most songs Van Morrison sings are, then life must be truly empty.

This album isn't a total failure, however. There's some thick but funky guitar bits by Ronnie Jordan on "Fire In The Belly," one of Morrison's style of song in which he lets the song flow, repeating a phrase in different ways to stress as many syllables of it as possible, such as on "Spirit" from 1980's Common One. "It Once Was My Life" is a good casting of a man who is tired of other people messing up his life, which is easily seen in the lyric "Some people try to use me, just 'cause they don't have their own." He even takes a shot at '50s rock'n'roll balladry in "If You Love Me" which is actually quite nice.

However, despite fine performances on this album from Morrison's frequent collaborator, Georgie Fame, on Hammond organ, and former James Brown saxophonist Pee Wee Ellis, the abilities are lost in the flatness of Morrison probably just trying to satisfy a record contract and put out an album of average or below–average songs that just roll along effortlessly. Not one for the books. C

Some wild ideas for new shows

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — How would you like to be watching these shows next fall:

•"Gross National Product:" A sitcom about a wildly successful radio shock–jock with a conventional family life in the suburbs.

•"Rap Squad:" An action drama about undercover cops who pose as rap artists.

•"Hotdog Man:" A sitcom about a man who eats hotdogs.

Or maybe you'd rather not face the future just yet.

After all, you're probably reeling from a week when no fewer than eight new series upped the ante on your viewing demands. Each wants you to watch it. Each wants your support to bring it back next season. Oh, the pressure!

So the last thing you need is the chore of assessing scads of series that don't even exist yet, and most likely never will.

Networks and producers, however, are currently consumed with that task. After all, television is war. This week's premieres could be next week's body count. New troops must be recruited and trained. And never more so than for the fall campaign.

Which means lots and lots of fall pilots. That's "pilot," from the Latin for "if this went to series, you think anyone would watch?"

In the next few hectic weeks, each network's crop of pilots (some not even cast yet, much less filmed) will be poked and prodded and tweaked by programming bosses, in an unpitying process grandly termed "development."

Then, not long after May Day, each network will announce its fall schedule, containing, at most, only a handful of the series those pilots sought to be. The rest are toast.

This week, a couple of TV trade magazines published a list of those pilots. What's up — at least, up for consideration — next fall?

For starters, of the nearly 100 series concepts listed, the three I mentioned above weren't among them. I made those up.

■ Smiths

continued from page 7

This is primarily due, of course, to the enigma that is Steve Morrissey. Celibate, vegetarian, neurotic and emotionally tortured, The Mozaer made contemporaries Michael Stipe seem like the boy next door and the Cure's Robert Smith look like the poster child for "Up With People." Yet this pompadoured, androgynous nerd with the monotonous croon had charisma in spades, a trait which can make a rock star (or an icon) out of even the most unassuming candidate.

After a wildly successful appearance on DJ John Peel's BBC radio showcase in 1983, the Smiths released their eponymous debut the following year. Spawning the singles "This Charming Man" and "Hand In Glove" (which featured the timeless line "Hand in glove/the sun shines out of our behinds"), this strong album consisted of 11 infectious songs. Both The Smiths and the singles/rarities compilation Hat Full Of Hollow set high expectations for what was to follow.

The often maligned Meat Is Murder, released in 1985, featured what has become their signature song, "How Soon Is Now." All tremeloed guitars and booming drums, "Now" states Morrissey's manifesto in one succinct line: "I am the son/and the heir/of a shyness that is criminally vulgar." Other highlights include "The Headmaster Ritual," the groove–laden "Barbarism Begins At Home" and the single "That Joke Isn't Funny Anymore." Although Morrissey delivers another paean to loneliness and sexual uncertainty with "I Want The One I Can't Have," the heavy–handed veggie politics of the title track and an abundance of filler (kind of like a hot dog, eh Moz?) keep Meat from ranking with their best work.

However, the Smiths rebounded in '86 with the stellar The Queen Is Dead. Lyrically their most focused and musically their most textured record, Queen is consistent from the rollicking title track to the absurd "Some Girls Are Bigger Than Others." Sandwiched in–between are the gems "The Boy With The Thorn In His Side," "Vicar In A Tutu" and "Big Mouth Strikes Again," where Morrissey outdoes himself with the claim that "...Now I know how Joan Of Arc felt."

The Smiths were remarkably prolific during their last year as a band. Louder Than Bombs, the States–side counterpart to the U.K. — only The World Won't Listen, was another compilation of singles and other obscurities, features the classic tracks "Panic," "Is It Really So Strange," "Shoplifters Of The World Unite" and a host of others. Bombs has stood the test of time and proved to be their most consistent and satisfying release; an excellent career overview and the perfect album for the Smiths novice.

Unfortunately, their last studio effort, the prophetically titled Strangeways Here We Come, was a step down from the heights of Queen. Although it features the excellent "Stop Me If You Think You've Heard This One Before" and the underrated rhythm section of bassist Andy Rourke and drummer Mike Joyce finally get their due from the album's punchy production, Strangeways is a dud. Morrissey's trademark snideness and sarcasm all too often disintegrates into plain anger and spite, thus turning what had become almost an art form into run–of–the–mill ranting.

Rank, the first of many posthumous releases, is far more interesting. The Smiths' only live album, it presents the band at their most energetic and Morrissey at his most playful. Recorded in '86, most of the album's tracks are form The Queen Is Dead and the later singles. Highlights include the medley of "Rusholme Ruffians" with Elvis Presley's "His Latest Flame" as well as an utterly explosive "Bigmouth." The last few years have seen the releases of The Singles and Best Of The Smiths, Vols. One and Two. All three compilations serve as good overviews of the band's career and any of them are good touchstones for the casual listener.

After their dissolution, the Smiths each found success in varying degrees. Joyce and Rourke went on to back up, among others, Sinead O'Connor and Marr has played with the Pretenders, The The, and Electronic. Morrissey released an excellent solo album, Viva Hate, and a string of fine singles before descending into total mediocrity. However, the creative differences which initially split Morrissey and Marr have supposedly been patched up; both are willing to work together again, so it is entirely feasible that the Smiths could reform. Given the high artistic standards and integrity which were their trademarks, a Smiths reunion would most likely be a fitting and welcome addition to a remarkable musical resume.

Weekly Drink Specials

Amaretto Sour $2.00 16oz

Southern Comfort and Coke $2.00 16oz

Red Dog 16oz Drafts $1.50

Rolling Rock 12oz Bottles $1.50

1/2 Price appetizers and Nachos 3-5 and 7-11 Thurs - Fri - Sat

Dancing Thurs - Fri - Sat

No Cover Before 10pm

THE PUB
15 East Pleasant Street

UMass' Best!

WIN PRIZES!

The Collegian Poll Rules:

1. Ballots must be dropped of at The Collegian office in the basement of the Campus Center or mailed to 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003.
2. No Xeroxed ballots.
3. One ballot per person
4. Ballots must be filled out with reasonable completeness. Ballots less than half of the blanks will be disqualified.
5. Independent Ballot Referees are hired.
6. Decisions of Ballot Referees are final.
7. All Ballots due by Thursday, March 13, 1997.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian's UMass' Best is intended to be a good natured contest among the local community. It is a fun poll based solely on UMass student opinions. This is not a harsh competition with results that have deep and lasting significance. Please do not take it as such, but rather as a basic published poll.

Ballot

Name: _____
Address: _____
Phone #: _____
Student ID#: _____

I. UMass Grub
1. Best Pizza Place _____
2. Best Sub Shop _____
3. Best Place to Go on a Date _____
4. Best Place to Eat if Your Parents are Paying _____
5. Best Ice Cream Shop _____
6. Best Chinese Restaurant _____
7. Best Italian Food _____
8. Best Breakfast (Hangover Cure) _____
9. Best Bagel Shop _____
10. Best Vegetarian Place _____

II. UMass Weekend
1. Best Liquor Store _____
2. Best Coffee Shop _____
3. Best Place to Start the Night Out _____
4. Best Place to Finish the Night Out _____
5. Best Shot _____
6. Best Beer _____
7. Best Drinking Game _____
8. Best Bartender (What Bar?) _____

III. Shops & Services
1. Best Grocery Store _____
2. Best Florist _____
3. Best Clothing Store _____
4. Best Gas Station _____
5. Best Bike Shop _____
6. Best Bookstore _____
7. Best Hair Salon _____
8. Best Place to Work Out _____
9. Best Tan Salon _____
10. Best Place to Buy Condoms _____

IV. Arts & Entertainment
1. Best Place to Hear Live Music _____
2. Best Local Band _____
3. Best Radio Station _____
4. Best Music Store _____
5. Best Place to Play Pool _____
6. Best Cheap Date _____
7. Best Video Store _____
8. Best Movie _____
9. Best TV Show _____

V. Unique UMass' Best
1. Best Thing About UMass _____
2. Best Apartment Complex _____
3. Best Class _____
4. Best Reason to Miss Class _____
5. Best Reason to Hand in a Paper Late _____
6. Best Professor _____
7. Best Place to Read The Collegian _____
8. Best Excuse for Not Graduating in 4 Years _____
9. Best Place to Study _____

FILL OUT A BALLOT FOR A CHANCE TO WIN A PRIZE!

■ baseball

continued from page 12

left–handed pitcher, and he can hit the ball. Also, Shaun Skeffington (Fall River, MA) will bring us some spark," Stone said.

Apart from being drafted by the Cleveland Indians last year, Veracka pitched a perfect 5–0 with a 0.44 ERA for his Chieftans of Nashoba Regional H.S. As far as Skeffington's defense is concerned, he never made an error during his entire high school career.

"They can play," Stone said. "They understand the team concept. Chemistry is a key in order for them to play as a team."

After the JMU series, UMass extends its trip to Fort Meyers, Fla., where they will swing against Pace College on Mar. 15, Rider University from Mar. 16–20, Canisius on Mar. 21, and Bucknell on Mar. 22 before returning to Amherst to host Holy Cross in the home opener on Mar. 26.

Despite the extended season–opening road trip, Stone offers no predictions.

"I never expect to come back with a certain record. You can't do that. I used to, and that was the wrong thing to do," Stone said. "All I expect is for the team to play hard, fundamentally sound baseball, and come back here in good shape."

Providence, UNC–Charlotte win;

Conference USA shocker, 49ers made bid for NCAA

NEW YORK (AP) — Austin Croshere's consecutive free throw streak ended, but he and the Providence Friars advanced in the Big East tournament.

Croshere scored 21 points Thursday to lead Providence to a 76–69 victory over West Virginia in the quarterfinals of the conference tournament, although his league–record free throw streak ended at 57, seven short of the NCAA Division I record.

"I'm glad it happened in a situation without pressure where I was just shooting for some more points rather than helping my team win a game," he said. "I'm proud of the streak and that I got the school and Big East record and I really wasn't thinking of the national record."

Croshere can start a new streak Friday night in the semifinals against top–seeded and 21st–ranked Villanova (22–8), which beat Syracuse 80–70 in the quarterfinals.

"That's a big challenge," Providence coach Pete Gillen said. "But we do have a chance to win."

West Virginia (19–9), despite some poor shooting, was within 62–60 with 3:08 left. But the Friars (21–10) were able to take control behind a 3–pointer by Croshere with 2:52 left for their last field goal of the game, and by making 11 of 14 free throws over the final two minutes, one of the misses being Croshere's first in nine games with 13 seconds to play.

Croshere fell to the Madison Square Garden floor when he missed the free throw with 13 seconds left, but he was soon smiling when the buzzer sounded.

"Austin really stepped up with that big basket and then we made free throws," Gillen said. "Our kids really defended well. We didn't give up any easy baskets. We made them earn everything." The Mountaineers, the league's leading scoring team (77.7) and best shooting team (46 percent), finished 28–for–72 from the field (38.9 percent), including 4–for–16 from 3–point range.

"You can't beat anybody shooting 32 percent in the second half," West Virginia coach Gale Catlett said. "We didn't play that good a game. We couldn't get going up and down. We played kind of tight I thought."

Catlett held firm on his opinion that West Virginia will be included in the NCAA's 64–team field.

"I feel the same today as I did yesterday and last week," he said. "I feel this league deserves to get five teams in the field and we have the second–best computer rating (38th) by far after Villanova (8th). We won games at places where other people couldn't win. The numbers are on our side."

The Division I record for consecutive free throws is 64 set by Joe Dykstra of Western Illinois over eight games in the 1981–82 season

* * * *

ST. LOUIS (AP) - North Carolina–Charlotte got perhaps its biggest victory of the season, although it came against one of the fastest–fading powers.

DeMarco Johnson and Sean Colson hit two free throws apiece in the final 16 seconds as the 49ers rallied from a 14–point deficit early in the second half to beat Louisville Thursday in the quarterfinals of the Conference USA tournament.

Coach Melvin Watkins didn't know how reaching 20 victories and beating the 20th–ranked team would affect his team's NCAA tournament chances, and he said he didn't care. Entering the conference tournament, North Carolina–Charlotte was considered a bubble team.

"There's no bubble," Watkins said. "The bubble is in the bathtub."

Watkins said he doesn't want to think about the postseason until after this tournament. North Carolina–Charlotte (20–7) will face either Tulane or Alabama–Birmingham in the semifinals on Friday. "We've got a T–shirt: 'In it to win it,'" Watkins said. "That's our focus and we won't deviate from it at all."

Louisville (23–8) began the season 15–1 but was the No. 6 seed in the conference tournament and has lost six of its last 11 games. Coach Denny Crum didn't know how the latest loss would affect NCAA seeding.

"I'm not a mind–reader, I have no idea," Crum said.

"Obviously it won't help. We'll have to take what we can get." Johnson had 22 points and Colson 20 for North Carolina–Charlotte, the No. 3 seed, which trailed 47–33 with 18:43 to go. The 49ers, who face the winner of Tulane–Alabama–Birmingham game in the semifinals, held Louisville to 13 points the rest of the way and only five in the last 4:11.

■ lacrosse

continued from page 12

and Syracuse at home late in the season.

"Whether you play Fairfield or Virginia you've got to come out ready to play," Cannella said. "Fairfield coach Ted Spencer is a UMass alumnus. After graduation he became a Navy Seal, so we recognize that they're going to be ready this weekend for us."

The Minutemen will be led into battle this weekend, and expectantly throughout the season, by the offensive punch of two–time All–American Brendan Glass.

"They'll have their best defenders on Brendon," Cannella said. "He'll probably have to deal with double and sometimes triple teams, but we'll still expect a lot from him."

Glass' size and strength at 6–feet, 205 lbs. helped him deal with the shadow treatment last season. He netted 33 goals, and took advantage of the double–ups for a career–best 15 assists. He is just one member of the class that is most key to success this season.

"We have seven seniors that are starters. They've been here for four years and a lot of them have started for four years as well," Cannella said. "As they go we will go, it's really an experienced group."

At the other end of the stick is junior netminder John Kasselakis. In his first year as a starter he made 150 saves en route to the eighth best goals against average in the country at 9.52. this year with a strengthened line of long sticks in front of him there are few worries of any sort of defensive breakdown.

"John brings a consistency in the cage that will dictate how well our defensive line plays," Cannella said. "We hope that he has a great year, a breakout year."

One of the defensemen helping Kasselakis will be fellow junior Harold Drumm, who is touted as an All–America caliber back–liner. Cannella has called him the best conditioned and one of the most focused athletes on the team.

As a team, the Minutemen have been building up their focus through a pre–season of scrimmages and joint practices with other local teams, including a few of their upcoming opponents. Cannella wants his team to be ready to defend their No. 11 ranking.

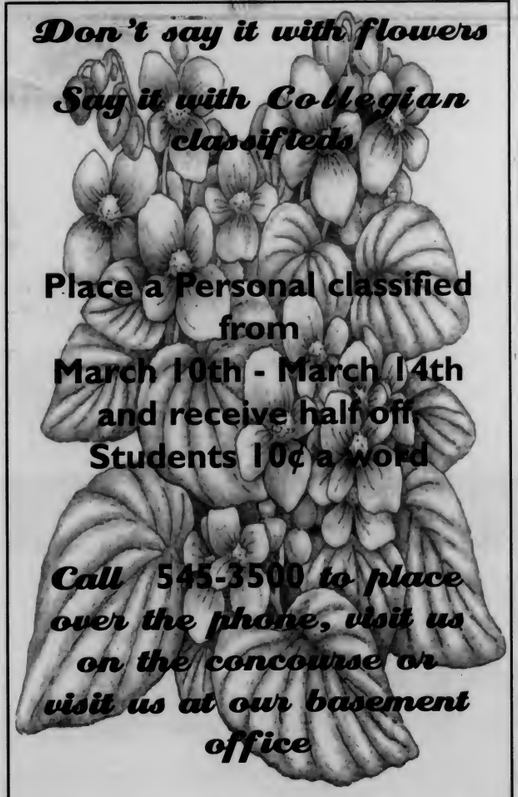
"I've structured our preseason and our early season games to prepare not only for (No. 2) Virginia but for the other games as well," Cannella said. "We play one of the best schedules in the country."

for Collegian Sports!

Summer Employment Opportunities

UMass Camp Day '97

Student Union Ballroom
Tuesday March 11th
10:00am - 4:00 pm
For more information contact:
Student Employment Office
243 Whitmore Bldg. 545-1530



WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

You love our Restaurant, now try Late Nite
Start March Madness Early with our Mad Specials

$1.00 Gin &Tonic
$1.00 Vodka & Cranberry
$1.00 Bud Lite Drafts
$1.00 Nacho's After 10 pm

Everyday from Thursday Feb 27 to Sunday March 9
41 Boltwood Walk Amherst, Behind Antonios
253 - 4040

Don't say it with flowers
Say it with Collegian classifieds

Place a Personal classified from March 10th - March 14th and receive half off.
Students 10¢ a word

Call 545-3500 to place over the phone, visit us on the concourse or visit us at our basement office

NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY

COLLEGE FINANCING 101

Each year thousands of college students are forced to drop out. The problem is not with their academic standing, it is their financial status. They can't pass or CLEP out of "College Financing 101". The Massachusetts Army National Guard has over $21,000 available to each student who qualifies. Through programs such as the Montgomery G.I. Bill and 100% Tuition Waiver, students can concentrate on grades, not bills. The Tuition Waiver is good at 28 participating state colleges, community colleges and universities.

All it takes is about two days a month and two weeks a year. Serving your country and community today can help build a better tomorrow.

For more information about the Massachusetts Army National Guard call today:

1-888-NGPRIDE
(1-888-647-7433)

MASSACHUSETTS
YOU CAN

EXELIXIS pharmaceuticals, inc.

Research Positions Available

EXELIXIS Pharmaceuticals, Inc. is a rapidly growing, well-funded private genomics company focused on defining biochemical pathways involved in chronic human diseases. EXELIXIS uses model organisms to bridge the gap between gene sequence and drug screening targets in multiple disease areas.

Research Associates (BA, BS and/or MS) to join an ongoing research program using Drosophila and C. elegans aimed at understanding the genetic basis of human disease. The ideal candidate would have laboratory experience and a fundamental understanding of genetic principles. Familiarity with basic molecular biology techniques, microinjection or immunohistochemistry is a plus. We welcome applications from candidates graduating Spring 1997. (Please refer to opening: Genetics RA.)

Sequencing Associate (BA, BS and/or MS) Responsibilities include performing DNA sequencing reactions, preparing DNA sequencing gels, and interpreting results. Experience with ABI 377 or other automated sequencers preferred. (Please refer to opening: Sequencing RA.)

EXELIXIS seeks talented individuals who are attracted to a dynamic, entrepreneurial setting. Good communication skills and the ability to participate in a team-oriented environment are essential. We are an equal opportunity employer.

To apply, send your resume with the names and addresses of three references to:

Human Resources
EXELIXIS Pharmaceuticals, Inc.
2220 Livingston Avenue, #201
Oakland, CA 94606
Fax: 510-534-9534

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

"Get-layed" at Club Metro Saturday, March 8th, 9pm-2am. 18 to party, 21 to drink. Win a free trip for 2 to the BAHAMAS!! and enjoy our tropical drink specials and free giveaways. So come and jam to NY House Beats and dance the night away! For more info call the FLAVA hotline 253-6623. Thanks again for all of your support.

Have you had a horror story/good experience at Health Services? We are doing a story- please tell us about it!! Call Christina B-6777 at night or leave a message.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Excellent 4 bedroom/2 bath apt. on bus line. Beginning 6/1/97. Call 253-6301 4 info.

AUTO FOR SALE

1977 Ford T-Bird good running condition, many extras. $450 Call 538-7608.

1986 Volkswagen GTI $400 or B/O. Call Kelly @ 253-7086.

1987 Chevy S10 Pickup standard, 4-speed, 4 cyl., 129K, runs and drives. Part or restore $1500 or B/O. Call 549-8347.

1993 Saturn 4-door, 5-speed, no A/C, airbag, CD, power roof, ABS, 115K, excellent condition, $5500 or B/O 545-1408 or 967-9738.

EMPLOYMENT

High Volume Seasonal Restaurant seeks line cooks, hosts, cashiers, bus staff, wait staff. Interviews in person March 18, 21 and April 4. Noon till 2:00pm. Navigator Restaurant, Edgartown.

Camp Casadoosis, Pocono Mts. Pennsylvania. Excellent residential coed summer camp. Caring counselors to teach Video, Photography, Yearbook, Drama, Music and more! Great salaries. 6/21/97-8/18/97. Call (800)572-8228 for an application.

Summer on Cape Cod: The Wychmere Harbor Beach Club and Thompson's Clam Bar is hosting a job fair for all our summer employment opportunities. March 13, 14, 15, 20, 21, 22. Call Amy at (508)432-1000 for details.

Loving, responsible, mature, non-smoker wanted to care for 2 year old and infant sons in our South Hadley home. Mon.-Thurs. 8:30am.-4:30pm. References required. 538-1899

Drivers Wanted Apply at Pinnochio's between 2:00pm. and 5:00pm. No phone calls.

Visit The Animal Friends Summer Camp booth on Camp Day, March 11th. Spend your summer on Cape Cod teaching children about proper pet care and the environment. Many counselor positions available. Also need a cook!! Room and Board provided. (617)426-8170

Change A Life...it could be your own Summer adventure/challenge at coed resident Camp Hazen YMCA. Call Terri Mullis (800)248-8244 for application/information. Campus Interviews March 11.

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Sloane YMCA, Lakeville, CT. In search of energetic counselors and supervisors for an unforgettable outdoor summer experience. To set up an interview On Campus March 11, call Sharon Brown @ (800)545-9367.

TEMPORARY POSITIONS AVAILABLE
During Spring Break
Hadley Office/On bus line
Earn up to $350
Evening Shifts Available
Also hiring for summer
Call now 584-0215
Ask for Mr. Bart

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Work in America's National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3624 ext. N5001B (We are a research and publishing company)

Belchertown Recreation Dept. Seeking swim coaches (May-July) Experience preferred M-F, EOE, ADA. Call Beth, Day (413)323-0419 Night (413)967-4651

National Parks Hiring Plus Forest, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting Companies. Up to $12/hour Nationwide Openings. Call (819)918-7767 ext. R180

MAKE SUMMER MEMORIES
JOBS AVAILABLE
TOP NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP
INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS
MARCH 11th
(continued above right)

EMPLOYMENT

Positions Available: basketball, softball, roller hockey, tennis, lacrosse, swimming(WSI), sailing(WSI), water skiing, arts and crafts (ceramics, sawing, scenery, woodworking, photography, fine arts), science and nature, pioneering, ropes course and climbing wall, archery, gymnastics, drama, music, horseback riding, and general counselors.

MUST BE ENTHUSIASTIC AND LOVE WORKING WITH CHILDREN AND ADULTS!!!!
PLEASE CALL TO SET UP AN INTERVIEW.
TRAIL'S END CAMP (800)408-1404
(ASK FOR MARC)

Do You Love Kids? Top Northeast Residential Camps seek Activity and Cabin Specialists to live and work with kids ages 7-15. Great facilities, dynamic staff! Flexible, diverse programming in all Water/Land Sports, Creative and Performing Arts, plus full range of outdoors/experiential activities. Lots of positions available. Contact Andy at Staff Search, (800)544-5448 for more information/application. Interviewing in Amherst, March 10-11

FUN! FRIENDLY! Co-ed Summer Camp in the Berkshires seeks new staff. Welcoming and supportive environment. Positions include- General Bunk Counselors, Heads and Instructors for Swimming, Sailing, Water-skiing, Baseball/Softball, Golf, Gymnastics, Lacrosse, Hockey, Archery, Soccer, Music, Pottery, Tennis, Horseback and more. Day Off accessibility to Boston, New York, Montreal. Call Today! Camp Schodack (800)851-1164, E-Mail Schodack@aol.com

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014.

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. CS0017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

West Yarmouth Cottage four rooms, two bedrooms, sleeps four. Call 253-7436

Six room, four bedroom, 1 1/2 baths, sleeps eight. In West Yarmouth. Call 253-7436.

College Kids Welcome to Cape Cod 1-5 bedroom homes for the season. Reasonable rates. Honey Spence (508)398-9367, (508)394-2857

1 bedroom in a 3 bedroom apt. Putton Village. On major bus route 5 min. from campus/10 min. walking distance. Electric not included. $275/month. Lease ends 8/97. Starts ASAP. Please call Larry 545-0198

Pelham 2 bedroom Mobile Home Gas. heat. No pets. First, last and security. $500/month. 253-5413

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-6000

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014.

Now Large Dorm Fridge Price negotiable. Also snowboard with bindings. Call 253-9965

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Meaghan!! It's all down hill from here! you California Girl!! With Best Wishes and Love, Leah

To Melissa,
Happy 21st Birthday. Enjoy and have fun.
Love, Your Roomie

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours, $395
American Academy
1-800-808 Prep
(please leave your name and number)

BARTEND with University Bartending 50% Student Discount. On-Campus Classes Starting Soon! Call 1-800-U-Can-Mix for info.

Purple/Black EMS Jacket Left in Rm 203 Holdsworth 2/27. Will pay reward. Sentimental Value! Call Bridgett @ 256-5478

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Liars needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming! Call Dave and Ryan 665-9112

FOR SALE

Light Speed Natchez titanium 50cm roadbike. Almost-new. Ridden outdoors once. Paid $1700. Asking $1350 or B/O. Call 253-6452

MISCELLANEOUS

GORILLAGRAMS
Birthdays, Anniversaries, Roses, Balloons, etc. Send the Crazy Gorilla. We'll go anywhere, anytime. Student Rates. Call 256-0297

Nykole, I love you forever and always. Happy First Anniversary- Love, Dustin

SERVICES

Resumes: Written, Proofed, Printed. Polished, Affordable Packages. 548-9632

Legal Questions? Tha Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Spring Break! Still not too late. Lowest prices Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Panama City. Contact Matt 253-6473

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

INSTRUCTION

SEEKING FINANCIAL AID? Get the system to help find FREE MONEY FOR COLLEGE! Detailed profiles on 200,000+ individual/ rewards from private and public sectors. Call Student Financial Services: (800)472-9575 ext. FS0017 (We are a research and publishing company)

TRAVEL

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $850/week. (413)786-7133 Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED TO RENT

Four bedroom house or apartment wanted for Fall '97. Will take over summer lease. Call 549-5363.

WANTED

Dorm Size Refrigerator Call 546-4538

Tutor for CmpSci 401 (501) Please call Greg 549-8969.

Your Underlin Collegia AD Here!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must be in the name, signature, and telephone number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, MARCH 7

Conference — The University of Massachusetts Baha'i Club will sponsor a two-day conference on "Foundations of Racial Unity," starting today at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 1009, and continued tomorrow from 11 a.m.–6:30 p.m. Keynote speakers will be Dr. Robert Henderson and Dr. Joy D. Leary. All are welcome. Free to Five College students, $10 all others.

Open house — Pride and Heritage of Color, an organization for GLBT people of color, would like to invite all gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender people of color to our Open House. This open house is for all GLBT people of color who may want to become affiliated with Pride and Heritage of Color. The event is free and will be held from 4–6 p.m. in the Stonewall Center. Soft drinks and snacks will be provided, so come out and support us. For more information please contact the UMass Stonewall Center at (413) 545–4824 or Sean at 546–3637.–

Religious — The UMass Hillel House will hold a Shabbat Service

SATURDAY, MARCH 8

led by USY Reunion Group at 6 p.m. All are welcome.

Bottle, can drive– — The UMass Dance Team will be conducting a bottle and can drive from 1–6 p.m. Team members will be travelling to Puffton, Brandywine, Boulders, Townhouses, Hobart and Southwest Residential Area to collect bottles and cans. All proceeds help benefit the UMass Dance Team trip to the NCA National Competition.

Comedy — The UMass Comedy troupe, Mission Improvable, will perform an improv comedy show in the Campus Center Basement at 8 p.m. Free.

Community service — The "Big Rally" Community Service Conference, sponsored by the UMass Community Service Program, will be held from 9:30 a.m.–3 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163. The conference begins with a debate on whether or not community service should be a mandatory part of the curriculum at UMass. Anyone involved or interested in community service and service learning is invited to attend. To register, simply call the Community Service Program office at 545–3327.

Conference — Day two of the UMass Baha'i Club's conference on "Foundations of Racial Unity" in the Campus Center, room 1009.

SUNDAY, MARCH 9

from 11 a.m.–6:30 p.m. All are welcome. Free to Five College students, however there will be a $3 per plate charge for those who want to eat. Everyone is welcome. For more information, call Anant at 548–9097.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545–9484.

Elections — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the elections for the positions of President, Student Trustee and all local Area Government will be held on March 11 and 12 from 11 a.m.–2 p.m. and 4:30–7 p.m. Locations to be announced.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at 413–323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Band wanted — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently seeking a four piece band for the spring production of Fame. The band must include; keyboard, guitar, bass and drums. Great publicity possibilities. For more information call Heather at 549–3681 or Justin at 546–0460.

Coffee Shop — Student Valley Productions is holding a Coffee Shop in April. They are looking for any talent coming from the Five College area in music, songs, poetry, skits, comedy, etc. For more information, call Daisy at 253–6514.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

FYI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

FYI: ALL OF YOUR INFORMATION HERE!

NOTICES

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

led by:
2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
19 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

Bueno Y Sano
Pick–up
253–4000

Bueno Y Sano
1 Boltwood Walk in Amherst

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 7, 1997

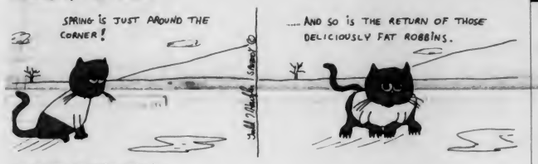
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Eight Weeks to Optimum Health (In Stereo)				Spontaneous Healing (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News (R)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Billy Graham (In Stereo) (R)		JAG "Force Recon" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Zodiac" (R) (R)		News (R)	Late Show (R)
WBZ	4	News (R)		Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	Dave's World		JAG "Force Recon" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Zodiac" (R) (R)		News	Late Show (R)
WCVB	5	News (R)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	Family Matters	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Step by Step	20/20 (R)		News (R)	Nightline (R)
WLVI	6	Full House (R)	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Soul Train Music Awards (In Stereo Live)				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo) (R)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Crisis Center (In Stereo) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Real TV (R) (R)	Soul Train Music Awards (In Stereo Live)				News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV (R) (R)
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy (R)	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Crisis Center (In Stereo) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons (R)	Roseanne (R)	Home Imp.	Seinfeld (R)	Sliders "Sole Survivors" (R)		Millennium "Wide Open" (R) (R)		News		Sci. Sch. (R)	Deep Space N
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Crisis Center (In Stereo) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're in	Frug. Gourmet	First Person Singular: I.M. Pei (In Stereo) (R)			Charlie Rose
WGGB	22	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Ent. Tonight	Family Matters	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Step by Step	20/20 (R)		News (R)	Nightline (R)
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld (R)	Mad Abo. You	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	News	Martin (R)	Mad Abo. You	Real TV (R) (R)
WTBS	22	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★★★ "Diamonds Are Forever" (1971, Adventure) Sean Connery, Jill St. John.							★★½ "Moonraker" (1979)
A&E	33	Quincy		Equalizer "Target of Choice"		Biography: Samuel Bronfman		★★★ "Stand by Me" (1986, Comedy-Drama) Wil Wheaton,				Law & Order "Trust" (R)
CNN	29	World View (R)		Moneyline (R)	Crossfire (R)	Prime News (R)	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live (R)		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline (R)
COM	30	★★★ "Dirty Rotten Scoundrels" (1988, Comedy) Steve Martin,				★★ "Airheads" (1994, Comedy) Brendan Fraser, Steve Buscemi,				Movie
DISC	40	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings "Supersonic Transport"		Wild Discovery: Predators		Invention (R)		Beyond 2000	Wings "Fly Navy" (R)		Wild Discovery: Predators
ESPN	15	Basketball	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Big East Semifinal – Teams TBA			College Basketball: Big East Semifinal – Teams TBA					Sportscenter
LIFE	42	Supermarket	Debt	Dish	3 Blind Dates	Wire	Pandora	"Tonya and Nancy: The Inside Story" (1994) Alexandra Powers.		Dish (R)		3 Blind Dates
MTV	31	Howard Stern	Week in Rock	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Tickets First: U2		Music Videos (In Stereo)		Bass-n-Butt.	Sports	Singled Out	Lovaline
NICK	35	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug (R)	Rugrats (R)	Kablam!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy (R)	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Tain (R)	Odd Couple (R)
SCIFI	43	Star Wars Trl.	Darkside	She-Wolf of London		★★ "Doppelganger" (1993, Horror) Drew Barrymore, (In Stereo) (R)				Friday the 13th: The Series		She-Wolf of London
TLC	44	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Quest (R)	What a World	Mysteries of Peru "Canals"		Future Fantastic "Alien"		Quest (R)	What a World
TNT	45	In the Heat of the Night (R)		In the Heat of the Night (R)		★★★½ "Back to the Future" (1985, Fantasy) Michael J. Fox, Christopher Lloyd.				★★ "Teen Wolf" (1985, Comedy) Michael J. Fox
USA	47	Renegade "Blood Hunt" (R)		Highlander: The Series (R)		★★★ "The Terminator" (1984, Action) Arnold Schwarzenegger, (R)				La Femme Nikita (In Stereo) (R)		"Obsession" (1992) (In Stereo)
HBO	48	★★½ "Tremors II: Aftershocks" (1996) Fred Ward. PG-13 (R)				★★ "Eye for an Eye" (1996) Sally Field. R (R)				"DMA" (1997, Science Fiction) Mark Lacasocos. "NR"			Dennis Miller
MAX	49	(4:45)	★½ "Armed and Dangerous" (1986) John Candy.			"Sometimes They Come Back...Again" (1991) Alexis Arquette. R (R)				★★ "Desperado" (1995, Drama) Antonio Banderas. R (R)
SHOW	50	★★ "Roommates" (1995, Comedy-Drama) Peter Falk. PG (R)				★★★★ "Dead Man Walking" (1995, Drama) Susan Sarandon. R				Outer Limits	Outer Limits	"Second Sins" (R)	"Cyber Tracker"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Seedy By Todd Hartzler

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
A changing domestic scene may throw you for a loop this week, but try to enjoy the holiday anyway. Get a head start on some paperwork that you've been avoiding.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
Although you may feel as though you're overworked and underappreciated, better things are ahead. Don't be afraid to take chances. Work as a team with someone to strengthen your approach.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
A difficult situation angers and frustrates you. Stepping back from the situation may cool your initial fury, but if something is rotten, don't waste your time trying to fix it—it may be time to start over.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
Call upon all your resources to make this one of the happiest new years ever. A party with friends could renew an old acquaintance. There may be more there than meets the eye.

LEO
July 23–August 23
Exerting news signals the start of a new phase in your life. Be ready to meet happiness as it comes your way. Someone argumentative may just be testing you to see how you'll react.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
A higher–up's mistake at work comes down to affect you personally. It's important to keep the lines of communication open, especially if you're not too secure financially.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Making a commitment seems appropriate this week, but don't hesitate. It's vital to throw yourself wholeheartedly into life's more important things, so make sure you have no hidden doubts before the question is asked.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
Something you've been avoiding pops up at an inopportune time. You could learn something valuable. Confide in an old friend if something's bothering you—it's good to start the new year with a clean slate.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
An aura of power surrounds you this week, and as the new year begins, you may be able to accomplish great things. Make extra time for a sweetheart to tell you the secrets of their heart.

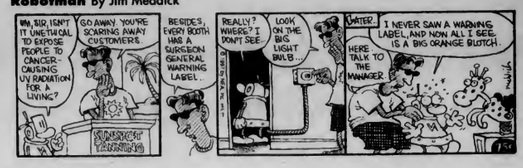
CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
If an argument threatens, try to avoid expressions of outright anger. Make your point quietly then let it go. Expending extra effort will get you nowhere. A holiday celebration brings goodwill and cheer.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
Staying home this week will make you productive in ways you had not thought of. A clean home renews your spirit and makes you feel ready to tackle anything.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
Schedule a group activity to take your mind off something worrisome. A new development means added excitement at work. A family member makes an important announcement. Avoid showing your feelings immediately.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson



Just three days after Burt bought his snowblower, the Wagners perfected their act.

Quote of the Day

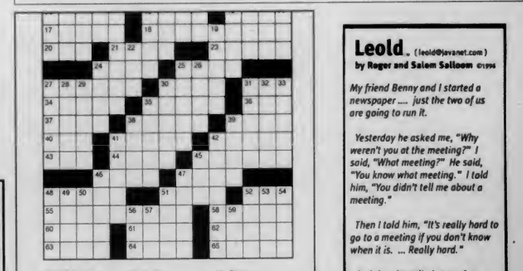
"EAT MY JUSTICE!"

– The TICK!

Robotman By Jim Meddick

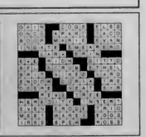
Dilbert By Scott Adams

Social Norm By Mr. K



University² By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.



Franklin		Worcester
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Mesquite Chicken Hot Beef Sandwich Captain's CATCH! Sesame Roll	Rotisserie Chicken Stuffed Shells in Sauce Quarter lb. Burger Quarter lb. Cheddar Burger	Hamburger on a Roll Raditore Harvest Burger Vegan Falafel	Rostisserie Chicken Vegetable Gumbo Casserole Stuffed Shells in Sauce
Hampshire		Berkshire
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll Grilled Cheese Sandwich Captain's CATCH!	Rotisserie Glazed Chicken Stuffed Shells in Sause YUMMY!	Hamburger on a Roll Kabbycake Sandwich Raditore Harvest Burger	Rotisserie Chicken Pineapple Ham Steak Vegatable Gumbo Pastabilities

ACROSS
1. Bloodhound action
6. Charge on property
10. Locale for Colonel Mustard
14. Therefore
15. Unsorted meal
16. Clarinet's orchestral neighbor
17. Savaged at sl
18. Afternoon serial (2 words)
20. Staccato indicator, in music
21. Govt. agents
23. Kind of maid
24. TV Guide putdown
25. Delighted
27. ___ dance
30. Persian ruler
31. "Bye Bye Birdie" girl
34. Leaves
35. First name in hotel-owning tax evaders
36. "What's ___" (Berlin) (2 words)
37. Conway et al
38. One alternative in marriage vows
39. Type of collar
40. Lemon or lime drink
41. Illegal enrichment
42. Actress Jergens
43. Start of many French titles
44. Frees
45. Shylah
46. Queens team
47. Hurt
48. Fabulous
51. Marceau, e.g.
52. Young fox
55. Bird movement
58. Come up
60. Tropical plant
61. Horseradish, e.g.
62. Chopped finely
63. The Untouchables role
64. Picnic joiners
65. Harnesses

DOWN
1. After water or tool
2. Claudius successor
3. Monogram pt.
4. Govt. agcy.
5. Rankles
6. Intense light beam
7. Blame ___ Rio (2 words)
8. Schedule abbr
9. Short sleep
10. Anticipated
11. Ad's mate
12. Learning
13. Shakespearean monarch
19. Midwest tribe
22. Stag attendees
24. West Side Story gang
25. Eddolon
26. Lots of the comics
27. Mineral
28. Chemical compound
29. Ten-year prison sentences, slangily
30. Medieval workers
31. Floats bad checks
32. False gods
33. The Color of ___
35. Packs
36. Legal document
39. Imported cheese
41. First name in "Khrushchev"
42. So soon?
45. Engine part
48. Stable matriarchs
47. Pointers
48. FBI agent
49. Anger
50. Analysts' loci
51. Doubtful
52. "I Get a ___ Out of You"
53. Crystal gazer's phrase (2 words)
54. Williams and Knight
56. Melodic syllable
57. Electrified particle
59. "Road to ___"

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Leold (leold@savanet.com) by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

My friend Benny and I started a newspaper ..... just the two of us are going to run it.

Yesterday he asked me, "Why weren't you at the meeting?" I said, "What meeting?" He said, "You know what meeting." I told him, "You didn't tell me about a meeting."

Then I told him, "It's really hard to go to a meeting if you don't know when it is. ... Really hard."

And then he yelled at me for starting, "corporate intrigue."

I told him we should have a meeting to discuss the matter. Benny said, "O.K. when?" I said, "I'm not going to tell you." He said, "Fine."

Personally, I think we're going to have a hard time with this newspaper.

Wow, my life is rotten.

Colonials shock UMass 58–49

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — There will be a new Atlantic 10 men's basketball tournament champion this year.

George Washington ensured that last night by beating five- time defending champ Massachusetts 58–49 in the evening's last quarter final at the CoreStates Spectrum.

MASSACHUSETTS 49
G. WASHINGTON 58

With the win, the West number 2 Colonials run their record to 15– 12, and advance to a semi-final match-up with East number 1 St. Joseph's today at 7 p.m.

The Minutemen fall to 19– 13 and will now play the waiting game until the NCAA tournament bids are announced Sunday evening.

"It's going to be a long couple of days," UMass coach, James "Bruiser" Flint said. "I hope it's good on Sunday."

Flint is not the only A–10 coach who feels that way.

"I said last week that the conference should have at least four teams in [the tournament]," GW coach Mike Jarvis said. "I think the conference should have right now five teams in it. The five teams being Xavier, Rhode Island, Temple, UMass and St. Joe's."

However, the Colonials, long UMass' nemesis during the regular season, made it tough for the selection committee by ousting the Minutemen.

UMass started the game strong, but a seven–minute dry spell in the second half eventually did the team in.

UMass staked itself to an early lead when Lari Ketner banked in a lay up and followed a minute later with a roaring dunk to give the Minutemen a 4–0 lead two minutes into the game.

GW fought back, capitalizing on turnovers to take a 6–4 lead at :5:34. The advantage would be the Colonials' largest of the half.

The Minutemen attacked and claimed an edge as large as six points, but GW would not rest.

While Alexander Koul was being guarded by Ketner and Shawnta Rogers faced Carmelo Travieso's defense, the Colonials found Yegor Mescheriakov.

The sophomore forward from Belarus, with the hard–to–say and harder–to–spell last name, was deadly for GW, hitting for a game high 25 points on 10 of 15 shooting. To make matters worse, for the Minutemen, Mescheriakov also grabbed 11 rebounds.

"He was a one–man gang out there tonight," Flint said. "Not only did he make big drives but he got big rebounds. They didn't have to have Koul out there, he did it by himself."

It was in the second half that George Washington started to pull away. Andrei Krivonos hit a jump shot with 13:46 remaining in the game to give the Colonials the lead for good.

From there it was just a matter of how far GW would pull away. Mescheriakov pocketed a shot with just over eight minutes left to put Colonials up by seven.

Rogers hit a pair of free throws to give GW a nine point lead, their largest of the night with 5:07 remaining.

The Minutemen tried to close the deficit, by taking shots from the perimeter but the shots were either off–balance or off–line.

"I thought that most of the shots that we took were good shots, but we just couldn't get them to fall," Edgar Padilla said. "I think that after a while we started to think about our shots a little bit."

Men's Basketball Championship

UM sees first A–10 title in 6 years slip away

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — A lot of things contributed to Massachusetts 58–49 loss to George Washington last night. The biggest factor, however was the 6–foot–7 forward from Minsk, Belarus.

In a game riddled with frustrating fouls, and a first half with multiple lead changes, Yegor Mescheriakov was the centerpiece of the Colonials game–plan. With GW's big man Alexander Koul embroiled in a battle with UMass's Lari Ketner, and forced onto the bench with foul trouble, Mescheriakov picked up the Colonials and carried them onto the A–10 tournament semi–finals. When the dust settled, Mescheriakov rang up 25 points, twice that of the Minutemen's leading scorer Ketner, who scored 12 points in the losing effort.

With the score knotted at 30 at halftime, Mescheriakov had scored only eight points.

To try to find a single instance where his play was instrumental would be tough. With 10:42 remaining in the game, Mescheriakov took it inside for two, giving GW a 45– 43 lead. That was the closest the Minutemen would come the rest of the way.

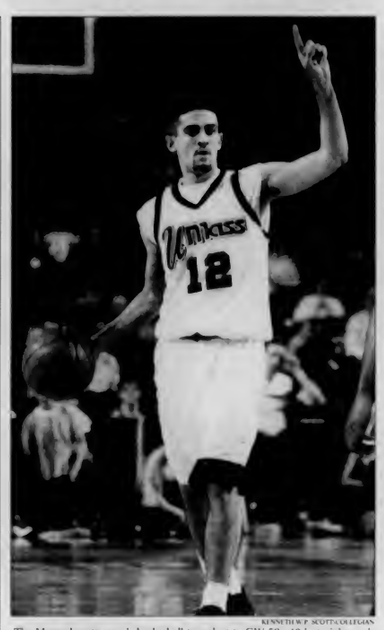
According to GW coach Mike Jarvis, their game plan was to find Mescheriakov since UMass did not match up well with him.

"I know they had no one who could matchup with him," Jarvis said. "The players, started with Shawnta (Rogers) were smart enough to realize that and took advantage of that. Nobody could cover him. Their big guys weren't quick enough."

Mescheriakov got the job done on the boards as well, pulling down 11 rebounds on the night. With 1:35 left to go in the game, Rogers put up a shot, missing, the score 53–46. With hustle and determination, Mescheriakov grabbed the rebound and worked it back out, taking precious seconds off the clock and wind from UMass's sails.

"He was a one man gang out there tonight," UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "Not only did he make big drives, but he got big rebounds. They didn't have to have Koul out there. He did it by himself."

Consistency was another big factor in his success. The GW forward shot an impressive 10 for 15 from the floor and two for four from three point range. Yet even with such a complete game, he givers credit to his team.



"I don't think I took the game by myself," Mesacheriakov said. "I was a pierce to the puzzle, and I give my teammates a lot of credit for their support."

For GW, the win means it will look to advance to the A– 10 tourney finals.

For UMass?

The Minutemen are now forced to play the waiting game. How many teams will the wizards from Overland Park take from the A–10? Speculation flounder between four and five. Yet depending on who wins the conference tournament, that could have a major impact on UMass's NCAA hopes.

"I know we are one of the best 64 teams in the country," Flint said. "But I said for awhile that I think that this league's deserves five teams in the tournament, and I still feel that way."

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT/COLLEGIAN
The Massachusetts men's basketball team lost to GW 58– 49 last night, ending their A–10 tournament run.

UMass to face UNH in H.E. first round game

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts hockey team, you can compare this weekend's first round Hockey East playoff series to a chorus of a Letters To Cleo song: the whole 33–game season is just a bunch of unintelligible gobbily–gook, and has now evolved from nowhere into the "Here And Now."

Forget about their No. 7 seed out of eight teams in the playoffs; forget about the 1–9 record in the last 10 games; and forget about the fact that No. 6 New Hampshire (25–8, 18–5 in Hockey East) is an overwhelming favorite over the Minutemen (12–21, 7–17 HE).

It's March, it's the postseason, and believe it or not, anything can happen. Without referring to a certain Bible story, you can bring examples of underdogs just in HE to justify this stance.

Last year, the Providence College Friars made an amazing run through the playoffs to take the HF title away from favorites Boston University and Maine.

Merrimack College actually getting home advantage in the first round of the playoffs this year; especially over their opponents, Boston College, who boast U.S. Junior National team members in Marty Reasoner, Jeff Farkas and Blake Bellefuille on their squad.

So, with that said, coach Joe Mallen knows as well that he faces a daunting task, but he also knows that this is a brand new season. Like New Year's Eve, resolutions can be made, and if you really want them to come true, it's all up to you to make them that way.

"You can get the same old stuff from everybody at this time of year, but everybody's record is 0–0," Mallen said. "It's the time of year where you really want to be playing good team defense. It's also the time of the year that John Calipari used to call 'electric chair' time.

"Your back's to the wall, you're in the chair and someone's ready to throw the switch. We have to play like that, and seniors, juniors and sophomores got to go out and play like it's their last game, and give it your all."

The Wildcats have not been playing their best hockey of late, either, and have gone 3–3 since their last meeting with UMass on Feb. 1. On that day, UNH skated away with a 10– 0 blowout, helped by the losses of two Minutemen starters to injury, co–captain Rob Bonneau and Tom O'Connor.

Both are fully back in the lineup, and UMass will need all the help they can get to contain the five–headed beast of the Wildcats: Jason Krog, Mark Mowers, Eric Boguniecki, Eric Nickulas and Tom Nolan. All but two of them have cracked the 50–point barrier (Nickulas and Nolan), and the other three are at the top of the list of Hobey Baker Award candidates coming from the Hockey East conference.

Sophomore goalie Sean Matile (12–5, 3.52 GAA with a .897 save percentage) will most likely get the start over Brian Larochelle, being the first UNH goalie to record back– to–back shutouts since the 1970–71 season. After his shutout of UMass on Feb. 1, he went on to shut out the other state school, Lowell, six days later by a score of 4–0.

UMASS vs. UNH
H.E. First Rnd.

Earlier in the season, the two teams played to two tight 1– 0 and 5–4 contests at the Mullins Center, with the Minutemen unfortunately coming out on the losing end. Mallen would like to forget that last game, and go back to the success of their first two games against the Wildcats.

"The third time we played them, we were coming off of a disappointing loss to Merrimack and we got caught in kind of a tornado, which is a good word for such a windy day," Mallen said. "We've had a very, very tough schedule in the last 10 games, and those games either good, bad or indifferent have prepared us for these games."

Their schedule in February was indeed a tough one, facing three teams in the top ten of the country in No. 6 UNH, No. 7 Boston University and No. 9 Maine. After holding close to BU and UNH earlier in the season, the last month held different fortune with three of the nation's best, combining to outscore UMass by a 40–8 margin.

But, anything can happen. Junior goalie Brian Regan is one of the most underrated goalies in the region, and the senior class has what no team can take away — pride. Bonneau (45 pts) and fellow senior Warren Norris (43 pts) are in the top 10 in the conference in scoring, elbow to elbow with the stars of UNH. So, who knows?

Hockey East First Round

UM to kick off season; battle Dukes on road

By Jonathan Place
Collegian Staff

It's that time again, baby — time to step on deck, oil up the glove, run on to the field and play some college baseball.

The UMass baseball team is revved up and ready to start its 1997 season. Alongside head coach Mike Stone, the Minutemen look to become Atlantic 10 Tournament champs for the third summer in a row.

With their recently shaved heads, the squad makes their first appearance against James Madison University (6–3–0) in Harrisonburg, VA on the Long Field–Mauck Stadium diamond.

UM Baseball
v.s. JMU

The Minutemen face the Dukes tomorrow and Sunday, both games at noon. JMU has already seen plenty of action. The Dukes most recently dropped two to Drexel in a three–game series.

"James Madison is a good ballclub," Stone said. "They're playing Clemson [Mar. 4, 5] and Winthrop [Mar. 6] before us. That will be good for them. And it may be good for us, depending on who they pitch."

The trip to Virginia will allow Stone to make some early position changes.

"I have eight different scenarios [line–ups], which is good," Stone said. "We have some depth, but remember, we only get to play 10 guys at a time."

This series with JMU will enable Stone to finalize positions, rotations and line–ups for when he returns home on March 26.

Against the Dukes, Stone will monitor the pitchers closely. "They each have a pitch count. They need to throw strikes, pitch tough, and keep us close," Stone said.

As with any team, Stone must have leaders, men who not only will guide the team on the field, but will help motivate the team during practice and on the road.

"I've got some great leaders in my captains, Jason Bennet, Ryan Thistle and Doug Clark," Stone said. "They bring a lot of different things to the table."

Junior Muchie Dagliere (North Haven, CT) will also be looking to repeat his All–America caliber sophomore year as one of the nation's top–hitting second basemen. Last year he hit a team–leading .415, ranking him 23rd in the nation.

Along with the experienced seniors, freshmen are an intrigal part of winning ballgames, and the first game of the season is a great time to show off their skills.

"I think our strongest freshman will be Travis Veracka (Stow, MA), he's a

Turn to BASEBALL, page 9

Men's Lacrosse to face Fairfield to start season

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

Saturday afternoon, green grass, sunshine and one minor scuffle between two lacrosse teams.

The above are the perfect ingredients for one Massachusetts men's lacrosse season opener. This season, frought with encounters with top–quality opponents from across the land, is bound to be one of the No. 11 Minutemen's most competitive campaign yet.

Men's LAX
v.s. Fairfield

It all starts tomorrow at 1 p.m. against Fairfield at Sacred Heart in Connecticut. Through strength of schedule, strong recruits and one of the best groups of experienced upperclassmen in school history, coach Greg Cannella looks to start the Gorillas on a climb to the NCAA tournament.

The Minutemen last made the big dance in 1995, UMass' 12th appearance, having gone 7–5 in the regular season. The same record, including four one–goal losses to tournament teams, was not enough to earn the Gorillas a dance card in 1996. This season is a quest to return to the tournament.

UMass has to take it one game at a time, says Cannella. Its schedule is packed with tough match–ups, from Virginia, Hofstra, Army, Duke and Brown on the road, to Notre Dame

Turn to LACROSSE, page 9

[SPECIAL EDITION]

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Special Edition · New England's Largest College Daily · Founded in 1890 · Daily Since 1967 · Saturday, March 8, 1997

Students to end occupation today

After six days, Administration agrees to 21 commitments

By Liso Chiu
Collegian Staff

Students embraced out of joy and relief early this morning after a six hour general meeting of the 150 students who have been occupying the Goodell Building since Monday morning. They agreed, by consensus, to accept a final set of 21 commitments from the University. [see sidebar]

The meeting was heated and emotional, but overall, most students believed that an incredible amount of progress had been made in these negotiations. The protesters' original demands included 16 sections with 40 sub–sections.

Following the meeting, the students agreed to spend their fifth and final "night" bedded down in the Controller's Office of Goodell before a scheduled exit of the building today, during a rally at 11:00 a.m. For the student negotiation team, this morning's events culminates their efforts throughout the six–day negotiation process with the Administration.

Portions of the 21 commitments guaranteed from the University include: hiring a staff member to institute a Native support program with an estimate of $70,000 annually for three years; institute a process which would reduce the number of holds due to outstanding bills by May 1; increase need–based financial aid through allocations and fund raising through the FY '98 budget request; and establish a five–year private support goal of $5 million.

Yesterday's events began when the student negotiators left a meeting with Deputy Chancellor Marcellete Williams, Vice Chancellor for University Advancement Royster Hedgepeth and Associate Chancellor for Affirmative Action Fred Tillis at approximately 2:30 a.m.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN
Students refuse to budge while occupying the Controller's Office.

According to several of the student negotiators, emotions rang high for both sides when the students expressed struggles since the beginning of the takeover as well as their experiences of discrimination at the University.

"There wasn't a dry eye in the house," said President of the Student Government Association and student negotiator Maurice Caston–Powe.

Thursday morning, the student negotiators presented to Williams, Hedgepeth and Tillis a nine–point document which the students believed focused on the minimal requirements acceptable in order for negotiations between both sides to even begin.

At the meeting Thursday night, the Administration responded to the nine points by agreeing to clearly commit to three points, not clearly committing to four and left two vague and unclear. The student negotiation team felt that by clearly accepting only three of these points, the Administration did not adequately understand the importance of their nine point preliminary document.

Afterwards the student negotiators continued to confer with the 150 students occupying the Goodell Building about what was believed to be the final stand–off with the Administration. Several students inside the building were prepared to accept the commitments made by the University in the nine–point document, while others expressed anger and a willingness to look into other options towards achieving their goal.

Yesterday afternoon, Williams, Hedgepeth and Tillis met again with the student negotiators and presented a new 21– point list of commitments from the University. This document differed from their response to the nine point document.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN
One of the many speakers addresses the crowd outside Goodell.

In the latter half of this meeting, which lasted late into the night, Williams was forced to leave, due to exhaustion and illness. Hedgepeth continued to discuss the document with students.

After hashing out the final details of this 21 point list of commitments, both sides agreed that a final copy of the list of commitments would be presented to and ratified by the 150 students occupying Goodell, of whom the negotiators were representing.

Hedgepeth told Caston–Powe that the Administration wanted the students to vacate the building by 3 a.m. this morning or else there would be definite police intervention and removal of students by force. According to student negotiators, Chief John Luippold of Public Safety corroborated Hedgepeth's statement.

After further discussion the pullout time was delayed until noon today. According to the Administration, protesters who do not vacate the premises at the agreed upon time will be arrested; if arrests are made, the University will not be bound to fulfill their latest commitments to the students.

The 150 students discussed and debated their options well into this morning. Bill Newman, director of the Western Massachusetts Office of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) addressed the students, as well as Prasad Venugopal, a graduate student and organizer of the outside support for the takeover.

Several hours of the discussion was devoted to debate over whether the students wanted to accept the commitments from the University or stay and hope to get more concessions.

"You all have won, no matter what they tell you, you now have 21 commitments from the University that were not there before," Newman said.

As long as today's scheduled pull out of Goodell goes as planned.

A letter from inside

Editor's note: the following is a letter issued yesterday by the Student Negotiating Committee at the Goodell Building to the rest of their supporters inside Goodell.

After five days occupying Goodell and over 15 hours in negotiations with members of the University administration, we have reached consensus toward a preliminary agreement that we believe is acceptable to present to the student occupiers for ratification.

We believe that the draft agreement can begin a process to resolve some of the inequities which led to this historical occupation at Goodell. The attached draft document presents a unique opportunity for members of our community to achieve greater diversity in faculty, staff, administration and student body; more scholarship and financial aid for ALANA and low income students; and additional support services for all students.

The last five days were a necessary precondition for the second phase of our work. Over the next several months we will be able to gauge the sincerity of the administrators' commitments to meeting all of our demands and can plan further appropriate actions if satisfactory progress is not made. It is within this context that we ask you to carefully review the draft agreement.

Through our actions, we have accomplished much. Our collective voice has been heard not only by the campus administration, but by the entire Five College community and others engaged in similar struggles throughout the world. It is important that we join together to end this occupation in unity. Our victory provides the momentum to carry us forward in advancing the rights of students.

Summary of protest results

Editor's Note: The following 21 commitments were issued by the University last night at 10 p.m. to the student Negotiating Committee.

1. Achieve and maintain an overall goal of 20 percent ALANA undergraduate students through recruitment and retention.

2. A process to dramatically reduce the number of holds due to outstanding bills: an immediate and continuous process; briefing statement due May 1, 1997.

3. Increasing need–based financial aid through allocations and fund raising; through FY '98 budget requested five–year support goal of $5 million.

4. Greater attention to helping students resolve financial problems; immediate and continuing process; briefing statement due May 1, 1997.

5. Diversifying the staff of the Bursar's office as positions become available.

6. Diversifying senior administration positions as positions become available.

7. Strongly supporting evening hours for students to meet candidates; request to Departments by May 1, 1997.

8. Strong support for a time without classes for student participation in searches; request to Calendar and Scheduling Committee by May 1, 1997.

9. Hiring a UALRC (United Asian Learning Research Center) counselor with the next new counseling position; est. $40,000 base budget addition.

10. Filling the four ALANA admissions positions; one filled, remaining three by August 1997; full and continuous staffing.

11. Seeking funding for an institutional program to complement SUMMA and Talent Search; multi–$100,000 proposal submitted by November 1, 1997.

12. UALRC, BCP (Bilingual Collegiate Program), CCEBMS (Collegiate Committee for Education of Black and Other Minority Students) Assistant Directors report to Associate Director for ALANA recruitment; immediately.

13. Increased publications etc., for ALANA recruitment. New publications have just been done to carry through 2000; review at that time; est. $5000.

14. Sufficient budget for ALANA needs; continuous review.

15. Encouraging opportunities for students to study Irish, Native American, Latin American, and Asian American cultures; immediate and continuous.

16. Reaching 15 percent ALANA students in the graduate school.

17. Tutoring and operating money for ALANA support programs; '98 budget request $48,000.

18. Hiring a staff member to institute a Native support; est. $70,000 annually for three years to cover full time staff and program start up cost and operating expenses Spring '98.

19. Convening a Task Force on Child Care in March 1997.

20. Dedication of Executive–level administrative time for the remainder of the semester to fully discuss all unresolved issues.

21. Forming a subcommittee of the Faculty Committee on the Status of Minorities to monitor progress of these agreements.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 98 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Monday, March 10, 1997

Pop Rocks

U2 is back with a new album, POP. Check out what we have to say about it (see Arts/Living, page 6).

The big dance awaits...

The Massachusetts men's basketball team earned a No. 11 seed in the East Division of the NCAA Tournament, where they will face Louisville (see Sports Weekend, page 12).

WORLD

Women excluded as Kabul Univ. reopens

KABUL, Afghanistan (A.P) — Lacking desks, books and female teachers or students, Kabul University reopened its doors yesterday for the first time since the Taliban religious army took control of the Afghan capital in September.

The university, once known among islamic countries for its high educational standards, showed the scars of 18 years of war and the restrictions of the Taliban's strict brand of Islam.

Many of the university buildings have been reduced to rubbie by bomb and rocket attacks and much of the campus, littered with land mines, is off-limits. Marked pathways lead the way through the mined areas.

Because the Taliban bans women from going to school or work, there were no female teachers or students. This was expected to significantly limit the school's standards, since 60 percent of the teachers had been women. Women also made up about half the student body before the Taliban took control.

The Taliban closed the university last year, saying it was against Islam to house female students in dormitories.

NATION

Catholic leaders push Clinton on abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roman Catholic church leaders renewed their call Saturday for President Clinton to sign legislation banning what critics call partial-birth abortions.

"Mr. President, you are in a unique position to ensure respect for all human rights, including the right to life which is denied to infants who are brutally killed in partial-birth abortion," the National Conference of Catholic Bishops said a letter signed by all seven of the church's U.S.-based cardinals.

A spokeswoman for the conference, Michelle Powers, said the letter was to be read in all Catholic churches in the United States on Sunday, as well as at the Vatican where several of the U.S. cardinals will be celebrating Mass.

Although not identifying him by name, the letter referred to a recent public confession by Ron Fitzsimmons, executive director of the National Coalition of Abortion Providers, that he began 1995 when he said only a few hundred of the late-term abortions were performed annually — and then only to save the mother's life or abort deformed fetuses.

Fitzsimmons now says several thousand of the controversial procedures are performed yearly and many are not medically necessary.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tue	Wed
HIGH: 30 LOW: 20	HIGH: 35 LOW: 20	HIGH: 35 LOW: 25

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 12

Takeover ends after 6-day occupation

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

Over 150 students who have been occupying the Controller's Office of the Goodell Building packed their bags and lined up to exit the front doors of the building Saturday afternoon. They left singing a Native American stomp dance, and were greeted by a sea of friends, family and supporters.

For the students inside of Goodell, Saturday began with a feeling of closure and finality. It was approximately 6 a.m. when the entire group reached a consensus decision to accept the administration's 21 commitments in response to their demands. A consensus decision reached through hours of emotional debate and discussion.

For the student negotiating team, it was just a matter of formality. That morning, shortly before noon, the administration entered the building and were led up two sets of stairs to the negotiation room. Students stood along both sides of the stairwell, silently holding pink signs which read "Child Care Now." According to the students, it was the only way they could get a chance to see the administration's faces and show their dissatisfaction at their failure to clearly commit to the demand concerning child care.

The student negotiators met for their last time inside of Goodell with the administration. The entire administrative negotiating team was present, except for Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, Tom Robinson who left the state on Tuesday, and Chancellor Scott who was in Mexico during the duration of the takeover. The students had not seen the whole administrative team together since the first day of the takeover last Monday. Deputy Chancellor Marcellette Williams headed the group along with Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance Paul Page; Vice Chancellor for University Advancement Royster Hedgepeth; Acting Provost Patricia Crosson; Ombudsperson Robert Ackermann; and Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Office representative Fred Tillis.

Both groups examined the final copy of the administration's 21 commitments and signed off on a document which explained the final status of the results of the takeover. [see Ed/Op, page 4]

After the administrators left the building, the student negotiation team reflected their work which began four months ago. As they walked down the stairs to meet with the 150 students, they were met with cheers and shouts of "The students united will never be divided!"

A general feeling of excitement and relief was felt throughout the large group. Students signed a banner to be presented to their many supporters outside the building, hugged and laughed over their six days of communal living.

Earlier that morning, after an emotional and heated six hour general meeting of the all the students, they agreed to accept a final set of commitments from the University.

Most students believed that an incredible amount of progress had been made in these negotiations. The protesters' original demands included 16 sections with 40 sub-sections.

Following the meeting, the students agreed to spend their fifth and final "night" bedded down in the Controller's Office of Goodell before a scheduled exit of the building Saturday, during a rally at 11:00 a.m.

Portions of the 21 commitments guaranteed from the University include: hiring a staff member to institute a Native support program with an estimate of $70,000 annually for three years; instituting a process which would reduce the number of holds due to outstanding bills by May 1; increasing need-based financial aid through allocations and fund raising through the FY '98 budget request; and establishing a five-year private support goal of $5 million.

ANNA HELVEI/ COLLEGIAN

Students left Goodell Building in victory at 2 p.m. Saturday after occupying the building for six days.

On the previous day the student negotiators presented to Williams, Hedgepeth and Tillis a nine-point document which the students believed focused on the minimal requirements acceptable in order for negotiations between both sides to even begin.

At a meeting which began on Thursday night, the administration responded to the nine points by agreeing to clearly commit to three points, not clearly committing to four and leaving two vague and unclear. The student negotiation team felt that by clearly accepting only three of these points, the administration did not adequately understand the importance of their nine point preliminary document.

The events leading up to the final 21 commitments began on Friday morning at 2:30 a.m. during a meeting with Williams, Hedgepeth and Tillis.

According to several of the student negotiators, emotions ran high for both sides when the students expressed struggles since the beginning of the takeover as well as their experiences of discrimination at the University.

"There wasn't a dry eye in the house," said Student Government Association President and student negotiator Maurice Caston-Powe.

Afterwards the student negotiators continued to confer with the 150 students occupying the Goodell Building about what was believed to be the final stand-off with the administration. Several students inside the building were prepared to accept the commitments made by the University in the nine-point document, while others expressed anger and a willingness to look into other options towards achieving their goal.

Friday afternoon, Williams,

Turn to PROTEST, page 2

KENNETH WF SCOTT/ COLLEGIAN

A student leaving Goodell raises his hands in the air in celebration of the satisfaction of the ALANA demands.

Rally greets protesters as takeover comes to an end

By Tamar Carroll,
Leigh Faulkner & Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

Cheers from about 400 supporters of the student takeover of Goodell Building greeted the ALANA and white students as they exited their temporary home for the past six days, their protest coming to a close on Saturday.

Supporters began to gather outside of Goodell at 11 a.m., and the crowd continued to grow in size for the next three hours. As the supporters waited anxiously for the students to exit the building they had occupied for six days, the ralliers spoke, danced and sang inspirational songs.

Several people addressed the crowd, including Peter Ives, minister of the First Church of Northampton.

"I followed your progress and I came here to offer you my support and my congratulations for all you have done," Ives said.

"What you have done is like throwing a stone in a pond and spreading ripples of hope to the farthest corners of the world. I am here to say that we need people to do what you have done," Ives said. "Unless people like you work for social justice, we will never change the status quo."

Francis Martin, the vice president of ACME 1776, also voiced his support.

"I am very happy that you got what you wanted. You need to continue by asking for permanent boards, where you have permanent votes," Martin said.

Martin also told the crowd that if the students and the administration had not reached an agreement by Monday, all the unions on campus were planning to start a petition in support of the student takeover.

Paul Rieckhoff, president of the student government organization of Amherst College, told the crowd that all the Five Colleges were in support of the takeover.

"You are not alone. We are in this together. A violation of any student is a violation of all students. We have to continue this, it can not stop now," Rieckhoff said.

Braving the cold and stinging snow, the people continued to gather outside of the front doors while eagerly awaiting com-

Turn to RALLY, page 2

Senate panel wants to question CIA nominee's NSC staffers

By Alice Ann Love
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The panel reviewing Anthony Lake's nomination to head the CIA wants to interrogate his former staff at the National Security Council and might subpoena them if necessary to get their testimony, the committee's chairman says.

Sen. Richard Shelby, appearing yesterday on ABC's "Face the Nation," said Senate Intelligence Committee staff will talk with NSC employees today.

Staffers will ask them to voluntarily answer the committee's questions about any council contact with Democratic fund raisers being investigated by the Justice Department, Shelby said.

"We're willing to go as far as we need to get the information we think is pertinent to Mr. Lake's ability to serve as the director of central intelligence," he said.

If they refuse, Shelby said, nobody will be subpoenaed until after he consults the full committee.

Justice investigators are trying to determine whether fund raisers passed illegal foreign money to President Clinton's re-election campaign in last year, when Lake was Clinton's national security adviser.

Shelby, R-Ala., said he decided to seek interviews with Lake's former staff after seeing news reports this weekend that the FBI warned members of Congress last year — but apparently not the White House — of intelligence reports that China planned to pass laundered money into U.S. political campaigns.

The chairman said a private hearing may be scheduled to determine what Lake and other Security Council officials might, or at least should, have known and shared with the White House about the FBI warnings.

"If they did know about it, what broke down?" Shelby asked. "Something's broken."

The twice-postponed Intelligence Committee hearings on Lake's nomination are to begin Tuesday. In addition to possible problems with fund-

Turn to LAKE, page 2

Dr. Ruth to speak sexually at FAC

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

Dr. Ruth Westheimer, the world renowned psychosexual therapist popularly known as "Dr. Ruth," will present her lecture "Sexually Speaking" tonight at 8 p.m. in the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Center.

Born in Germany in 1928, Westheimer left the country to escaped the onset of Hitler's Third Reich. She proceeded to study in Switzerland until the age of 16, when she traveled to Israel and became a member of the Haganah to join the fight for the country's independence. She then moved to Paris, where she majored in psychology at the Sorbonne and worked as a kindergarten teacher.

COURTESY HILLEL HOUSE

Dr. Ruth Westheimer

In 1956, Westheimer immigrated to the United States and earned her master's degree in sociology from the Graduate Faculty of the New School of Social Research, and her Doctorate of Education in the Interdisciplinary Study of the Family from Columbia University.

After working for Planned Parenthood for a period, Westheimer proceeded to increase her knowledge about human sexuality by studying the work of Dr. Helen Dinger Kaplan at the New York Hospital-Cornell Univeralty Medical Center. For five years, Westheimer worked as an Adjunct Associate Professor and taught at such institutions as Brooklyn College, Columbia University and West Point.

Besides making appearances on "The Tonight Show" and "Late Night with David Letterman," Westheimer has also authored a multitude of books.

Considered the pioneer of Media Psychology, Westheimer will speak tomorrow night on what she refers to as "sexual literacy," a educational lecture she has perfected over the course of 16 years.

For any students interested in submitting questions, cards will be provided at the door. Westheimer will answer questions during the second half of her lecture.

This discussion is sponsored by the UMass Hillel and UMass Distinguished Visitors Program. Tickets will be available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office and at the door prior to the show. Seating is general admission.

Admission for undergraduate students with a valid UMass ID is free, $10 for the general public, and $5 for Five College students not from UMass.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Chris Conner
Copy Editor: Laura Stock
Photo Technician: Anna Feder
Production Supervisor: Lorraine Urbanski
Production Staff: Chris Lavin, Lauren Goldfarb

protest

continued from page 1

Hedgepeth and Tillis met again with the student negotiators and presented a new 21– point list of commitments from the University. This document differed from their response to the nine point document.

In the latter half of this meeting, which lasted late into the night, Williams was forced to leave due to exhaustion and illness. Hedgepeth continued to discuss the document with students.

After hashing out the final details of this 21 point list of commitments, both sides agreed that a final copy of the list of commitments would be presented to and ratified by the 150 students occupying Goodell, whom the negotiators were representing.

Hedgepeth told Caston–Powe that the administration wanted the students to vacate the building by 3 a.m. Saturday morning or else there would be definite police intervention and removal of students by force. According to student negotiators, UMass Chief of Police John Luippold corroborated Hedgepeths's statement.

After further discussion the pullout time was delayed until noon Saturday. According to the administration, protesters who did not vacate the premises at the agreed upon time would have been arrested; if arrests had been made, the University would not have been bound to fulfill their latest commitments to the students.

The 150 students discussed and debated their options well into Saturday morning. Bill Newman, director of the Western Massachusetts Office of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), addressed the students, as did Prasad Venugopal, a graduate student and organizer of the outside support for the takeover.

Several hours of the discussion were devoted to debate over whether the students wanted to accept the commitments from the University or stay and hope to get more concessions.

"You all have won, no matter what they tell you, you now have 21 commitments from the University that were not there before," Newman said.

lake

continued from page 1

raising irregularities, the former Security Council chief faces scrutiny over his failure to divest energy stocks for two years after the Justice Department had instructed him to do so. Questions also have been asked about his role in the tacit U.S. approval in 1994 of Iranian arms shipments to Bosnia.

Shelby said he will also continue to insist on seeing Lake's FBI files and will not accept an offer by the White House to have FBI director Louis Freeh review the raw data and brief Shelby. "Nobody trusts anybody totally like that," said Shelby. Defense Secretary William Cohen said on NBC's "Meet the Press" that the committee has no right to full FBI files. Raw files have been surrendered in only one previous confirmation hearing, for the late Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, to be President Bush's defense secretary.

"It was very ugly," said see how people can be destroyed because raw FBI files, contrary to public assumptions, or congressional assumptions, they are not reports. Many times it's just raw sewage that comes in."

Appearing on ABC with Shelby, Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey, the Intelligence Committee's ranking Democrat, said he has not decided whether to support Lake. But he said: "The focus here needs to be on, 'Do you have the capacity to manage this agency'."

ANNA FEDER/ COLLEGIAN

The Life of the party

This New Life display an extensive light show to compliment their performance at Butterfield residence hall Friday night.

rally

continued from page 1

ment on the status of the negotiations.

The tension continued to build as University of Massachusetts student Pascale Martineau sang "Lift Every Voice and Sing," the Black National Anthem. In unison with Martineau, the crowd then sang "Amazing Grace."

At 2 p.m., the student occupants began to exit Goodell in a single file line, their right hands raised in a sign of victory. Justin Beatty, a Native American student, led them in the stomp dance.

For approximately 15 minutes, the crowd chanted along while the student occupants slowly filed outside. Many were greeted with smiles of admiration, hugs, and tears.

The student occupiers grouped in front of the steps of Goodell and were addressed by Student Government Association President Maurice Caston–Powe.

"It has been a long, hard fight and without everyone out here, it would not have happened. What we put together was a living document, which means it will never die," Caston– Powe said. "It is time for us to start this up. Today it was born. It is up to us to make sure it grows. We cannot drop this ball."

The supporters and occupiers continued to celebrate for another hour. Several of the student occupiers addressed the crowd, and one student praised the public safety officers treatment of the occupiers.

"The police inside have been our allies. We have gone through this together with dignity and respect," Caston– Powe said.

A victory march was announced for 11 a.m. today.

Once upon a pond...
The rope pull

At first, the annual rope pull was held in the fall, functioning as an initiation for freshmen. In later years, the even took place in late spring, often in conjunction with other Spring Weekend activities.

The earliest mention of an annual freshman–sophomore tug–of–war at the Campus Pond appears in the October, 1893 edition of Aggie Life, the precursor of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

The size of each team varied widely over the years (there were as many as 60 men per team and as little as six), but the outcome didn't — one team always ended up dragged into the muck and mire of the Campus Pond.

The rules changed often with new "official" rules published nearly every year. An unusual result took place in 1907, when after 12 minutes of "heaving and resting," the contest was declared a draw. Because of this outcome, the rules were changed for the next year forbidding the use of the "drop and heave" and disqualifying any man who leans on the rope. The next year, 1908, the freshman team was victorious, which reportedly won them "the privilege to smoke on campus."

The annual rope pull ceased some time in the 1960s, for unclear reasons. One possible explanation appears in the 1968 Student Senate minutes: in answer to a question concerning the absence of the event, a Senator explained that the tradition dictated that the event must begin with the sophomore class president swimming in the pond with the rope, and that in this particular year, the president did not know how to swim.

In the spring of 1982, Tau Beta Pi, the engineering honor society, resurrected the rope pull by sponsoring a "tournament of pulls," which included eight different teams. The event made the front page of the Collegian, where it was reported that the first place winner was Eta Kappa Nu.

"Once upon a pond" is a bi–weekly series by Gail Giroux from the Special Collections and Archives Department at the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

COURTESY UMASS ARCHIVES

The freshman–sophomore rope pull across the Campus Pond, Oct. 13, 1917.

Got a tip?

If you know of a news story happening on or off campus, call the Collegian News Desk at 545–1762.

EXCLUSIVELY for FACULTY and STAFF

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can avoid with SRAs—tax-deferred annuities from TIAA-CREF. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer an easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less in taxes now. And since earnings on your SRAs are tax deferred, your money works even harder for you.

What else do SRAs offer? The investment choice, flexibility, and expertise of TIAA-CREF—America's foremost retirement organization.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Stop by your benefits office or call us at 1 800 842-2888 and find out how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Visit us on the Internet at www.tiaa-cref.org

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it."

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733, extension 5509, for a current CREF prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money. Date of first use: 3/97

© 1997 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association/College Retirement Equities Fund, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY

COMPLIMENTARY PASSES
EXCLUSIVELY FOR AMERICAN EXPRESS® CARDMEMBERS.

WHEN & WHERE.
March 12, 7:30 pm
AMC Hampshire 6
Theatre

WHAT.
Cardmembers get two complimentary passes to a prerelease screening of Universal's blockbuster Liar, Liar.

HOW.
Just bring the American Express® Card or Optima® Card and your student ID to the location listed below to pick up your passes.

NOW.
If you're not yet a Cardmember and would like to take part in our exclusive previews, it's easy to apply for the Card. Just call 1-800-942-AMEX, ext. 4114.

MORE TO COME.
Liar, Liar is one in a series of five major motion pictures to be previewed on your campus this year, compliments of American Express.

PICK UP YOUR TICKETS HERE.
Outside The University Store
March 11 - March 12

AFI American Film Institute Entertainment

Cards

©1997 American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc.

"Diversity and Campus Media"

A panel forum designed to inform a diverse campus about opportunities and the inner workings at three University resources at work for the entire UMass community.

Panel members

Massachusetts Daily Collegian Managing Editor
Chris Conner

Union Video Center Station Manager
William Sanchez

WMUA ALANA Affairs Director
David Ducille

A Q&A session will follow the panel presentations.

Herter Auditorium
Wednesday, March 12
7–9 p.m.

Order Daffodils
Spring Days—May
To Order by
I would like to order ___ bouquet(s) of daffodils
I would like to order ___ bouquet(s) in a vase
Name: Daytime Phone:
Please make your check payable to the American Cancer Society, 53 Capital Drive, West Springfield, MA 01089 or phone 413-
Thank You!!

Summer Financial Aid Application Information

Applications are now available at Financial Aid Services.

You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass Amherst:

Taking summer classes through Continuing Education.
Going on an approved summer international exchange program through IPO.
Working on a graduate dissertation.

Deadline: April 18, 1997. Late applications will not be accepted.

Please come to Financial Aid Services for an application and more specific eligibility requirements.

Financial Aid Services, 243/255 Whitmore Administration Building, Amherst MA 01003, (413) 545-0801.

JUST IN TIME FOR SPRING BREAK
TRADE IN SALE

Bring in any UMass hat in any condition and receive a 20% discount on any new UMass hat in stock.

Bring in any UConn hat in any condition and receive a 50% discount on any UMass hat in stock.

UNIVERSITY STORE CAMPUS CENTER 545-2619 M - F 9 AM - 5 PM SAT 10 AM - 5 PM

UMass helps cancer campaign

CHRIS CESMAT/ COLLEGIAN

Senior psychology majors Sara Grossman and Zoe Rudner collect signatures in the Campus Center Friday afternoon to send to President Clinton.

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

The Women's Health Project of University Health Services (UHS) solicited support from the University of Massachusetts community for the National Breast Cancer Coalition's (NBCC) signature campaign last Friday.

The NBCC campaign is working to collect 2.6 million signatures in support of breast cancer research funding to present to President Clinton and Congress in October.

The 2.6 million signatures, which are representative of the number of women living with breast cancer in the U.S. today, ask that $2.6 billion be used for breast cancer research between now and the year 2000. In addition, the campaign asks that breast cancer activists have a voice as to how the money is used.

Peer health mentors work on alleviating common student ignorance about health issues by educating and reminding them about statistics through workshops, information tables and movies.

Zoe Rudener, a senior psychology and women's studies major, and Sara Grossman, a senior psychology major, are two educators who specialize in health issues pertaining to women. Both undergraduates worked at the table collecting signatures and talking to students on Friday.

In commenting on the role of breast cancer among college students, Rudener said, "Most college women don't realize the importance of practicing self–breast exams. Many don't know how to do them, do not feel they are at risk, or they just forget to."

Both women worked to recruit a variety of people to educate and sign the petition, yet said they found men to be more intimidated and hesitant to come forward to their table.

However, Grossman explained that after the men thought about how breast cancer can affect those women close to them and the fact that men are able to have breast cancer as well, they became more interested in helping out.

Gloria DiFulvio, the coordinator of the Women's Health Project, emphasized her belief in support from both sexes.

"Ultimately our message is that we are all linked together in the fight to eradicate this disease — that no one is exempt from the toll of breast cancer," DiFulvio said.

According to the American Cancer Society, the best way to protect against breast cancer is to try to detect it as early as possible so as to treat it immediately. Recommendations for early detection include seeing your doctor for regular breast exams, practicing monthly breast self–exams and having regular mammograms for women aged 50 and older.

Those with a family history are at highest risk of developing breast cancer, but 80 percent of those who develop the cancer have no history.

The NBCC is a grassroots advocacy group which is already responsible for increasing awareness of breast cancer and the amount of funding used to research it.

Those still interested in signing the petition can call 1–800–NBCC–838 or access the NBCC's world wide web site at http://www.natlbcc.org.

Check out the Collegian online!
Visit our Web Site at :
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

DAILY COLLEGIAN & 5 UMass Five College Federal Credit Union
present
NCAA Tournament Preview
SPORTS extra
8 pages filled with In-Depth Previews, Reviews & Tournament Action
Full Color Poster of Tourney Brackets
sponsored by: CAMPUS GEAR

DO YOU HAVE A FRIEND OR COLLEAGUE HAVE A PROBLEM WITH ALCOHOL OR OTHER DRUGS?
THERE ARE RESOURCES AVAILABLE TO HELP:

Advice Triage Nurse & Urgent Care Clinic, University Health Services 577-5229
For medical situations and questions requiring same-day attention. 24-Hours

Employee Assistance Program (EAP), 35 University Health Services 545-0355
Assessment, referrals for treatment, self-help groups and follow-up for employees concerned by their own or a family member's or colleague's substance abuse problem. Weekdays 8:30-12:00 1:00-5:00

Medical Clinic Appointments, University Health Services 577-5101
For students and UHS Kaiser Permanente members concerning medical situations and substance abuse questions. Weekdays 8:00-5:00

Mental Health Services, 127 Hills North 545-2337
Counseling, groups, 24-hour emergency coverage for students and UHS Kaiser Permanente members. Appointments strongly encouraged. Weekdays 8:00-5:00

Urgent Care Clinic at Hills North, Weekdays (545-2337):
1:00-2:30 when semester classes are in session,
1:00-2:00 during Winter Session and Summer.
24-Hour Emergency services through the UHS Urgent Care clinic (577-5000).

In a life threatening situation, call 911 or your local emergency number for the police or an ambulance to transport you directly to the nearest hospital. (Cooley-Dickinson Hospital is closest to Amherst.)

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majercwski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The vacation's over

One question that has been asked numerous times during the past week is, "Where is Chancellor Scott?"

Although the occupation of the Goodell Building is now over, the question remains as relevant as it was last week. It has been a full week since the takeover began, and yet our Chancellor has still issued no public statement on the matter. If Chancellor Scott holds the chief leadership position at this University, why has he remained silent on an event of such importance?

Chancellor Scott has been derelict in his duties. It is pressing that he immediately makes a prominent and public statement on the takeover and the demands contained in the Living Document.

The Chancellor also needs to explain his decision to remain silent on this matter so that the students and faculty of the University can be assured that he takes the importance of his position seriously. With access to the telephone, fax machines and the Internet, such a statement need not have waited until Scott decides to once again grace this campus with his presence.

We also emphasize that it is important for the University to keep the campus community updated about its progress in fulfilling both the ALANA Agreements of 1992 and the current list of 21 agreements. This should be an ongoing process, so that students can be assured that the University is continually attentive to implementing the changes it has agreed to.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

Amnesty for activists

With midterms in some cases already over and in other cases quickly approaching, many students who took part in the occupation of the Controller's Office in Goodell, as well as those who worked outside the building around the clock organizing support, could face serious academic problems as a result of their activism.

We urge professors to grant academic amnesty to these students. Professors should keep in mind that many TAs and other students made attempts at entering Goodell in order to keep the students inside up-to-date with their classes. Unfortunately, access to Goodell was completely restricted to all but a small handful of people. Although many attempted, none were able to enter and provide the students inside with academic support.

In addition, a list of classes that the 175–200 occupying students are enrolled in was gathered. Volunteers were asked to donate class notes to help the protesters keep up with their academic commitments. However, in most cases, the students who participated in the takeover of the Controller's Office have no assurance of access to notes for classes they missed.

Professors must keep in mind that students who were involved in the protest, both inside and outside of the Goodell Building, have not only worked very hard for something they believe in very much; they have also been participants in a very direct form of education.

The social and political issues underlying the takeover are of pressing relevance to all people. Students who participated in this protest learned in a way that the classroom and books are unable to provide. The awareness that these students will take away from the last week's events could be one of the most important achievements of their University careers. It would not only be unjustified to punish these students for missed tests and classes, it would run counter to the goals of education.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

Friends and foes

Now that the occupation of the Goodell Building has ended, a lot of work is still left to be done. The spirit of unity and action that came alive in those active in the protests must be sustained. And the administration must be held to its commitments.

As it turns out, the ALANA Agreements of 1992 were legally binding on the University of Massachusetts Administration. However, the agreement signed on Saturday between the student negotiating team and the administration is not yet a legal document. Negotiations, of course, are ongoing, and it is important that they result in a document that has power legally.

"Understanding the dynamics between various offices and persons in the administration will be helpful to the ongoing process of fighting structural racism at UMass and creating non–classist access to the University."

Daniel Bodah

After all, if the University reneged on promises mediated by the U.S. Department of Justice, it would be unwise to trust it to adhere to the present agreement.

However, it's also important to understand that "the administration" and "the University" are not just single entities; they are groups made up of a number of individuals. Perhaps one of the important results of the occupation of Goodell is that the positions of some of UMass's key administrators were called out into the open.

By several reports, the occupation had been planned for several months, and members of the administration were aware enough that it was coming that they locked Whitmore down on Monday.

A few of the student organizers reported that in the weeks preceding the takeover they received what have been called "intimidating" phone calls from one key administrator asking them what they were planning and trying to dissuade them from doing it. Some have even indicated that they had no trouble inferring hints of possible academic reprisal from the calls.

On the other hand, there were administrators involved in the negotiations who showed a more sympathetic view of the student positions, and struggled to reconcile the pressures of their administrative duties with their desire to meet the student demands.

Let's keep in mind that administrative responses almost without exception assigned monetary values to the demands in the Living Document. To understand what offices within the administration these financial matters most directly affect, it is good to know that the Office of the Provost oversees a full 70 percent of the UMass budget. The entire rest of the administration only has control of the remaining 30 percent.

The University currently has no permanent Provost. At the present time, as throughout the negotiations with the students occupying Goodell, Vice Chancellor Patricia Crosson occupies the position of Interim Provost while a permanent Provost is sought.

When he returns from Mexico, we should also examine carefully any explanations Chancellor Scott offers for his lack of response to the takeover. It should be safe to assume that Scott knows about the events of the past week, if that is so, any decision about remaining on vacation or returning to campus must be indicative of Scott's attitude toward both the takeover and the student demands. Now that the occupation of Goodell has ended, it will be possible for Scott to address the issue in the past tense, and in this way to avoid most negative reflections of the situation on his role as Chancellor. We need to try to discern whether Scott chose to remain in Mexico in order to protect himself from negative publicity.

Remember that Scott's Deputy Chancellor, Marcellette Williams, is African–American and comes from a low- income background. With Scott remaining absent, Williams was the one visibly in charge of all administrative responses to the student negotiators.

Understanding the dynamics between various offices and persons in the administration will be helpful to the ongoing process of fighting structural racism at UMass and creating non–classist access to the University. Student reformers must keep in mind that it may be easy to refer to the administration as a united whole, but it is more true that the administration has elements of support and resistance to the changes we seek.

Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Generation X

Editors note: The following piece was originally presented as a speech on the steps of the Goodell Building on Saturday.

There are those out there who would call us Generation X. To the people who coined the phrase, the X is supposed to denote a sense of being lost, lost in space, lost in time, lost in the sea of morality, lost without guidance, without direction, without purpose in our lives. Those who call us Generation X see in us despair, hopelessness, selfishness and apathy.

We have been called lazy, as we fill our lives with the electronic gadgetry which has been given us as copiously as earlier generations have been given wisdom. We have been called apathetic in the face on monumentous challenges looming before us in the form of widespread pollution, racial division, wars, before us. And we have been criticized for not valuing our increasingly expensive education with its decreasing guarantee of employment after graduation.

"We have made a symbolic gesture, taking a first step toward creating the world WE want to live in."

Timothy Boilard

The people who have gathered in support of this rally, sacrificing the safety of a cozy dorm room, not knowing whether food would come to them, not knowing whether enough support would turn from academic, and therefore economic, ruin; these people have made a demonstration of a deeply powerful and deeply moving event which has occurred among those of us referred to as Generation X.

With no one left to defend the value of the character which each of us possesses, when many were content to call us unmotivated, uncaring, undisciplined, we, for the last six days, have found each other amid a chaotic world which at times seems bent on preventing us from ever living lives that have any meaning, any significance at all. We have turned to each other offering everything that we have for the well being of those who stand with us, sharing our food, clothing, warmth, medical supplies, encouragement, support and most importantly our hope that we would overcome the challenged arrayed before us.

Generation X has stood in the unwavering unity before this building and the challenges it represented, threatening to steal away from the life–changing significance of an effort we have thrown out entire hearts into as we defend any hope of ever living a life with any meaning. We have made a symbolic gesture, taking a first step toward creating the world WE want to live in.

For six days, we have camped in tents outside Goodell awaiting the return of our brave warriors who have taken the battle to what we see as an expression of inequality and injustice among us. For six days, we have shared everything we have with each other, our money, our food, our clothes, our stories, our encouragement. People from all over the world have contributed stories, songs, chants and words of wisdom from the corner of the world that they call home, and all have accepted these as the gesture of goodwill and encouragement as which they were intended.

The experience we have shared here has been so powerful to us personally that many of us, myself included, have been moved to tears by the support we have received from each other and from those around us who share our burning passion for reaching out to those who wait on the other side of barriers that others have told us exist between us; barriers of racism, sexism, classism, homophobia and religious misunderstanding.

Most, if not all, of us feel that by taking part in this demonstration inside and outside of Goodell, we have truly taken our education into our own hands and have learned much about the power which resides in the human spirit which can, will and must make changes for the better in the world around us. For this reason, we believe it is imperative that what we have done here reach the ears of everyone who would live, that they too know that they can live in justice and peace with their fellow human beings.

We realize that this is only a first step in conducting lives to be truly constructive, and that the meaning may be lost on those who have not been here with us, but none of us will ever see this campus, or each other, the same way again. We wish each other, all of you, and the world that we will be entering as professional human beings all of our faith, hope and love.

Timothy Boilard is a UMass student

21 Commitments

Editor's Note: The following 21 commitments were issued Saturday morning at 11 a.m. included and slightly rewritten from the original document, as a preface to the 21 commitments the administration issued.

"We have concluded discussion and concur with the points in the attached documents. Those many discussions we have reaffirmed what we call human priority. It is within this spirit we continue the process to resolve the issues addressed in 'The Living Document.' Through the ongoing budget and planning process of Strategic Action, the Administration expects as faculty and staff to ensure the appropriate financial support of campus priorities. We have students' attitude of respect for property.

The student negotiators also signed this preface.

The 21 Commitments:

1. Achieve and maintain an overall goal of 20 percent ALANA undergraduate students through recruitment and retention.
2. Propose to dramatically reduce the number of holds placed on outstanding bills, as immediate and continuous process; briefing statement due May 1, 1997.
3. Increasing need–based financial aid through alumni/private fund raising; through FY 98 budget request and five– year support goal of $5 million.
4. Greater attention to helping individual students resolve financial problems; immediate and continuing attention; briefing statement due May 1, 1997.
5. Diversifying the staff of the Bursar's office as positions become available.
6. Diversifying senior administration positions as positions become available.
7. Strongly supporting evening hours for students to meet candidates; request to Departments by May 1, 1997.
8. Strongly recommend a date without classes for student participation in commencement to Chancellor and Commonwealth; briefing by May 1, 1997.
9. Hiring a UAIRC counselor with the next new counseling position; set, $40,000 base budget addition.
10. Filling the first ALANA [illegible] position; also filling the next [illegible] 1997; full and permanent status.
11. Seeking funding for an ongoing program to compensate [illegible] set: $500,000.
12. UAIRC, SGC, [illegible] and Native American [illegible] Director for [illegible] recruitment [illegible] done to [illegible] set: $500,000.
13. [illegible] set: $500,000.
14. Seek [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Arts & Living

Monday, March 10, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

U2's POP revolution

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

A quick survey of the questions concerning the new U2 album, POP.

Has U2 gone techno?

Does POP sound more like Prodigy and the Chemical Brothers than War?

Is U2 just trying to follow the latest techno trend so they can sell records?

Will they ever put out anything as good as The Joshua Tree?

The answers?

No, no, not really and maybe.

It's been five years since U2 kicked off the Zoo TV tour, a massive effort that consisted of 18 months of playing massive football stadiums with possibly the biggest rock extravaganza yet — 50-foot-high television screens, Bono dressing up as the Devil, and cheap Russian cars and handicams as set decoration. They even put out an album in the middle of it all, the fluffy techno throwaway, Zooropa. Needless to say, U2 needed a break.

The band officially ended its break Tuesday, with the release of POP, a brash, techno-influenced effort that will coincide with this summer's PopMart tour, undoubtedly the biggest tour of 1997. U2 has taken its fans on quite a ride through every genre of music since they released the hopelessly idealistic Boy on an independent label in Ireland in 1979. They're now huge rock stars who can do anything they want musically, and have made a point to use their position in the rock and roll hierarchy to shake things up.

The '90s have seen a U2 a lot of people have dubbed "New U2," a sound American audiences haven't exactly warmed to. With the release of "Discotheque", POP's first single, there has been concern that U2 has gone off the deep end.

Well, they haven't. POP should re-establish U2 as a viable radio-friendly commercial success. The album has the added benefit of being a dead-on commentary on the shallow, transient nature of the modern "electronic age".

It's ironic that the band released "Discotheque" as their first single, because it really has nothing to do with the rest of POP. "Discotheque" is a very well produced, pulsing dance number, but it's the only dance song on the album.

POP is in many ways a classic U2 rock album, underneath the layers of samples and drum loops. The album really begins to flow with the second track, "Do You Feel Loved." A strong bass line drives the song, a yearning number that ranks as a standout. The flow is interrupted again with "MoFo," the only real "techno" song on the album, a fast-paced electronic roller coaster ride that is really nothing more than a second-rate raver. If they play it live this summer, you'll have plenty of time to get another beer.

"The emptiness of modern pop culture has clearly affected the band, who have been trying to make fun of it for a decade."

But the bulk of the album is old-school U2. The middle of POP is outstanding, and most resembles the U2 we grew up with. "Staring at the Sun" is a sincere tune that has an instantly catchy chorus you can hum in the shower; "Last Night on Earth" is classic rock with a new twist; and "Gone" sounds like very, very early U2 ("I Will Follow" era), but stands on its own because of an undeniable pop hook.

The only place where the album succeeds with experimentation is on track

Turn to POP, page 7

POP music

U2's Bono and The Edge have created POP, a worthwhile follow-up to 1991's Achtung Baby and 1993's Zooropa.

10 really dumb Bono quotes

compiled by John Hendrickson

"We've been telling him to shut up for ages, but he finally needed to pay someone to tell him." — U2's Adam Clayton on sending singer Bono to a shrink, 1983

10. "The lyrics are like a puzzle to me, because on October, I didn't know what I was saying a lot of the time."

9. "I never considered myself a pop star."

8. "People are interested in bridges. I guess I've always been interested in what goes on beneath bridges."

7. "Hey! Let's party. Remember, we're a real serious political group."

6. "You know, not everyone can go off and be Batman and Robin, and right the wrongs."

5. "Let us turn to the sixties and let the music lead the way to justice."

4. "I could go on stage, unzip my pants, and hang my d— out and people would think it was some statement or something."

3. "I feel we must bite the hand that feeds us, even if it's making us fat."

2. "People think I've got all the answers when in fact I've just got a whole list of questions."

1. "If you want to be on this stage, then you must do what I'm doing!"

Courtesy of The New Book of Rock Lists by Dave Marsh and James Bernard.

Achtung, Bono

From Boy to POP, U2's past is explored

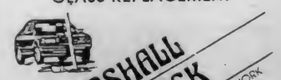
By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

It's hard to discuss popular music of the '80s and '90s without talking about U2. For the last 17 years, they've basically dominated the rock world. Constantly pushing the parameters of the genre and reinventing themselves on an album to album basis, U2's disregard for rock tradition has made for a consistently entertaining and surprising career. 1997 seems like it will be their year, too. Their new album, POP, has just hit the shelves and another precedent-setting and record-smashing mega-tour is ready to roll. But before you get swept up by POP's hype and Bono's ridiculous pontifications, let's step back and take a look at their career so far.

As evidenced by the pomposity of Rattle And Hum's readings of "Pride" and "Desire," Bono was starting to believe his own press.

U2 blew out of Dublin, Ireland in 1980 with their first LP, Boy, on Island Records, their home ever since. Featuring "I Will Follow," the album was a promising debut, introducing elements of U2 which still prevail today. Singer Bono's variety of vocal styles, guitarist The Edge's echo-drenched staccato attack, and the watertight rhythm section of bassist Adam Clayton and drummer Larry Mullen were already firmly entrenched in the band's sound.

October, their 1981 follow-up, was less consistent. Although "Gloria" got the band more airplay, the record as a whole can be dismissed as their "sophomore slump." 1983, however, featured two excellent releases which solidified U2's rapidly growing fan base. War, with the personal and political manifestos of "New Year's Day," "Two Hearts Beat As One" and "Sunday Bloody Sunday," was successful from start to finish; Under A Blood Red Sky, a live EP culled from the War tour, features tracks from their first three albums and is a bristling mix of the band's focus and Bono's operatic grandstanding.



Producers Brian Eno and Daniel Lanios took over the production duties for 1984's The Unforgettable Fire. The first album to fully utilize the band's potential, Fire touched upon the legends and legacies of Americana with a successful tribute to Martin Luther King Jr., "Pride (In The Name Of Love)" and the preposterous "Elvis Presley And America." Their live shows from this era, as seen at Live Aid and the 1985 live EP Wide Awake In America, were a mix of melodramatic rockers and mesmerizing, epic ballads such as "Bad."

It was the release of The Joshua Tree in 1987, though, which catapulted U2 to international superstardom. The gorgeously bitter "With Or Without You," the pulsing "Where The Streets Have No Name" and the celestial "I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For" propelled the album to the top of both the charts and the critics' picks for that year.

However, Rattle And Hum whipped up the inevitable backlash. The bloated soundtrack/documentary of the Joshua Tree tour effort contained blues (a la "B.B. King Blues") and gospel ("Angel Of Harlem") and atrocious cover versions ("Helter Skelter," "All Around The Watchtower"). As evi-

Turn to U2 HISTORY, page 7

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS,
AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT

MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK

• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING

256-8157 256-1385

53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

University of Massachusetts
Health Services and Department of Athletics
will host
a Cocktail Reception
in honor of
James Ralph, MD
retiring after 34 years of service
Saturday, April 5, 1997
6:00 - 8:30pm
Mullins Center, VIP Room
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
RSVP by March 21, 1997
$15.00 per person
For information call 577-5213

DOES MULTICULTURISM HAVE A LAUGHABLE SIDE?
It does in Prof. Silver's novel
SHORTCHANGERS,
a hilarious send up of current campus fads.
Enjoy some comic relief with this ideal Easter gift.
Signed copies at The University Store only $12.95.

Knowledge Grows Here!
Summer Session at Stony Brook
Terms start June 2 and July 14
260 courses in 40 subjects
Day and evening classes
Low NYS tuition
Live on campus or commute

A germinating seed. Cotyledons from the cavity of the seed or fruit husk

Please send me the 1997 Summer Session information or check out our web page at Http://www.sunysb.edu/summer/

Name
Street/Box No.
City State Zip
Telephone Area of interest
School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation

STONY BROOK
STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK

Mail coupon or call 24 hours 1-800-559-7213
E-mail: summerschool@ccmail.sunysb.edu
Or write: Summer Session Office, Dept. CN, University at Stony Brook, Stony Brook, NY 11794-3370

Freeing the World to Do More in 1997

So You Can Do More With Your Future.

Information is the intellectual stock of today's business world. A business can either build strategies and technology around the power of information, or lose ground to the competition. EMC was front and center in proposing that information storage technology do more. In just five years, we've elevated storage from a commodity to a strategic technology pillar. This major technological achievement has elevated EMC to a position of strength as the world's leading provider of independent storage solutions. Our intelligent disk arrays, software products, and services are the leading information access and enterprise storage solutions for every major computing platform in today's business environment.

So while you're turning your attention to career opportunities, focus in on EMC's fast-paced, team-oriented, dynamic environment:

• Software Engineering
• Information Systems
• Human Resources
• Hardware Engineering
• Manufacturing/Operations
• Marketing
• Customer Service
• Finance
• Sales

Please visit us on-campus on Tuesday, 3/11 in Rooms 905-909 from 5:00pm to 8:00pm.

To apply, forward your resume to: Human Resources, University Recruitment, Code CXR, EMC Corporation, Hopkinton, MA 01748-9103; Fax: (508) 435-8884; E-mail: university_emc@isus.emc.com (ASCII format only). Web: http://www.emc.com. EMC is an equal opportunity employer that values the strength diversity brings to the workplace.

EMC²
THE STORAGE ARCHITECTS

Ex-porn star delights Pearl Street

By Daniel Bodah
Collegian Staff

ANNIE SPRINKLE: HARDCORE FROM THE HEART
Pearl Street Nightclub
March 8

NORTHAMPTON — Annie Sprinkle, who has starred in hundreds of pornographic films and videos, brought her new performance to the Pearl Street Nightclub last week for its U.S. premiere.

The show, called Hardcore from the Heart, is a sort of performance diary of the various stages through which Sprinkle has come in her life and career. An audience of perhaps 200 people filled the folding chairs in the upstairs section of the club for Saturday's matinee show. This was the final performance in Hardcore's Northampton run.

According to Sprinkle, Hardcore is still "very much a work-in-progress." The show is a little bit disjointed, and Sprinkle occasionally shows signs that she is still getting her lines down. However, her abundant personality and winning combination of innocence and passion for sex makes her work both important and interesting.

Hardcore is divided into six main sections, from Sprinkle's entry into acting in pornographic films at age 18, to her present performance art work. Each of the phases of her life was represented by a trunk on the stage. At the back of the stage, a screen showed clips of films Sprinkle has starred in. Meanwhile, Sprinkle sat in an armchair in the middle of the stage and talked about how she felt about the films now, and how she had felt then.

Hardcore had its finest moments when Sprinkle addressed the controversial and supposedly sinful nature of the sex industry. In perhaps the most chilling segment of the show, Sprinkle replayed a radio broadcast from an Australian radio personality. The broadcaster applied numerous epithets, including "Jewish," to Sprinkle, before playing sections from a speech by Hitler. The broadcaster then concluded with "Adolf, where are you now that we need you?"

Sprinkle has a disarming style in dealing with such criticisms of her work. Without ignoring the possibilities of exploitation that the sex industry contains, she never presents or expresses any sense that sex, or pornography, is wrong.

Sprinkle is now a happily married woman, and has been monogamous, she says, for the last two years. She has gradually moved away from the graphic sex of her earlier films and says she now finds intimacy and relationships much more arousing.

Playing on this, the show ended with a song by Sprinkle's wife, Kim Silver, who walked onto the stage strumming her acoustic guitar and singing. She and Sprinkle proceeded to whisper sweet nothings and smooch while a video camera duplicated the scene on the screen in the background.

While this newest show still suffers from some rough edges, Hardcore form the Heart turns out to be an important new work from this controversial and brave artist.

■ pop

continued from page 6

eight, "Miami." The band's take on the excess of South Florida is interesting, and it works because the electronic music is just backdrop, while the song is allowed to breathe.

The biggest revelation on this album may be that U2 is feeling the effects of an "ironic hangover" concerning the last seven years of the band's life. Their are hints, especially in Bono's lyrics, that the irony of parodying rock stars (when they are, in fact, the biggest rock stars in the world), has finally caught up to them. There's an undercurrent of guilt throughout POP. U2 has never been happy being rock stars. They tried to deny it early in their career, and then tried to embrace and re-invent with the Zoo TV tour with mixed results. Don't let the playfulness of "Discotheque" fool you — it still bothers them.

The personal and religious soul-searching not seen since The Joshua Tree is back in full force on POP. But POP's soul-searching is of a very different vein, far removed from the political feel of The Joshua Tree.

"You get to feel so guilty/got so much for so little/then you find that feeling just won't go away," Bono sings in "Gone." The emptiness of modern pop culture has clearly affected the band, who have been trying to make fun of it for a decade. Perhaps the best example of this is the last track, "Wake Up Dead Man," an impassioned plea to Jesus about the modern world.

"Jesus, Jesus help me/I'm alone in this world/And a f—ed up world it is too," Bono sings in a distorted vocal that becomes so warbled and troubled in the chorus that you can feel his most private worries ripped open and thrown to the world. "Wake Up Dead Man" is far and away the best song on the album, and their most beautiful song since "With Or Without You."

POP is a very good album, but the real irony is that it's not "pop." U2 still has a lot to say, and any comparison to the transient nature of "pop" and this album is dangerous. The use of wacky, throwaway sounds in contrast with some very deep themes is brilliant. POP is one of the first attempts to examine the shallowness of modern pop-culture in rock and roll, and it's a touching and sincere attempt. The aggressive, "save the world" sincerity of the old days has been replaced by a quieter, sneakier sincerity that is actually both scarier and more poignant. So while POP may sound nothing like The Joshua Tree, it's actually more similar to the band's 1987 masterpiece than either Achtung Baby or Zooropa.

Overall, POP is a fantastic album, and an album in the classic sense of the word — it is a great 60 minutes of music. The album sounds amazing and can be much better appreciated on a quality stereo system that will pick up all of the crazy noises this album throws at you. Like many U2 albums before it, POP is not only great in the present, but a sneak peek at the future. A—

Hollywood Babylon

By Julia Casson
Collegian Staff

ANGEL CITY
Kirby Theater
March 6

AMHERST — The City of Angels, a land of smog and stars, was depicted in Angel City, an offbeat satire about Los Angeles life presented last weekend by the Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance.

The play, written by Sam Shepard and directed by Andrew Goodman, possessed a love of movies that is shared by so many. An inside view of the world of movies and film was shown but did not create an altogether warm feeling about the workings of the Hollywood business.

The play featured Michael G. Arauz as Rabbit, a newcomer into the screenwriting business who is hungry for power. He is forced to create the ultimate horror movie by his cigar-smoking, fast-talking boss, Lanx, played by Brian Quinn. Having little or no idea what he is doing, Rabbit is trapped in the studio attempting to produce this perfect disaster movie.

Wheeler, the money-driven studio producer who is looking for the big hit, was played brilliantly by Bryn Manion. Stating that "this city is eating me alive," she entrusts the fate of the studio to Rabbit. As the play progresses, Wheeler finds herself trapped in the actual world of film.

The two other members of the cast were Dorien Davies as Miss Scoones, the secretary, and Justin Tomsovic as Tympani, the drum player. Both were characters who felt trapped in their world and wanted desperately to escape into the world of fame. Miss Scoones yearned to be an actress and was living her life in a state of constant acting. Tympani was waiting for his rhythm to happen and had dreams of owning his own diner.

As the first scene came to a close and the second scene began, the atmosphere was somewhat reminiscent of an insane asylum. Miss Scoones was on her way to completely losing her mind and the studio was in a state of mayhem. The second scene took a turn as the ultimate disaster movie was performed with Wheeler trapped inside.

Both the lights and the music changed accordingly with the atmosphere of the performance to create an appropriate feeling. The mood of the play was set immediately as the lights faded on the stage. This setting was completed by the music performed and composed especially for the performance by student Juan Estrada Cruz.

A vast array of talent was showcased this weekend as both the cast and crew molded together to create a thoroughly enjoyable evening of theater.

■ U2 history

continued from page 6

denced by the pomposity of the album's readings of "Pride" and "Desire," Bono was starting to believe his own press. He and the band were now playing the roles of American roots-rock revivalists/missionaries. The critical backlash of Hum played a large role in determining the direction of U2's next project.

Recorded in the carnival-like atmosphere of newly reunified Berlin, with 1991's Achtung Baby, the band reinvented itself yet again. The album reflects the chaos of its setting, manifested in the Euro-grunge of "Zoo Station" and "The Fly" and the hip-hop undertones of "Mysterious Ways", "One," though, captured

No. 6 Kentucky mauls No. 24 Georgia

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Kentucky is back on a roll.

The sixth-ranked Wildcats routed No. 24 Georgia 95-68 yesterday for their fifth Southeastern Conference tournament championship in six years and 20th overall.

Anthony Epps scored a career-high 22 points and Ron Mercer had 20 as the Wildcats (30-4) won their third game in three days by wearing out Georgia (24-8), which was playing its fourth game in 62 1/2 hours.

The Bulldogs, who upset fourth-ranked South Carolina to get into their first tournament title game since 1988, stayed close with the Wildcats for only two minutes.

With the Wildcats pressing every chance they got, Georgia turned the ball over nine times in the first 11 minutes, and Kentucky converted those into 17 points. Georgia finished with 24 turnovers. The Wildcats led by 44-29 at intermission and never by less than 20 in the final 15 minutes. Every Wildcat scored including Allen Edwards, who sat out the last two games with a strained back, with 12 points.

Kentucky, which lost to South Carolina last week, has not lost two straight this season. Each loss has started a winning streak with runs of 14, six, seven and now three in a row heading into the NCAA tournament with the league's automatic bid.

G.G. Smith's driving layup with 18:35 left gave Georgia a 4-4 tie, the last time the Bulldogs were that close.

Jared Prickett grabbed the first of his three steals in the first half and dunked to start a 7-0 spurt that Mercer capped with a jumper for an 11-4 edge with 16:04 left.

Kentucky pressed Georgia continuously. Even when the Bulldogs worked the ball down the court, they either missed or failed to get the shot off before the clock ticked down. Smith, who had a career-high 22 against South Carolina, couldn't get anything to work as he was called for traveling with eight seconds left on the shot clock.

Jamaal Magloire hit an easy layup on the next possession that started a 15-8 Kentucky run highlighted by two Mercer dunks after quick turnovers, and the Wildcats led 44-24 on a Nazr Mohammed free throw with 2:05 left.

It only got worse in the second half as Epps keyed a 15-1 run with seven straight points that left the Wildcats up 67-35 with 12:46 left. Kentucky led by as much 72-38 on a jumper by Wayne Turner at the 11:09 mark.

By Craig Horst
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Top-ranked Kansas completed the regular season with a 32-1 record and got the Big 12's automatic bid to the NCAA tournament by crushing Missouri 87-60 yesterday.

Paul Pierce tied his career highs with 30 points and 11 rebounds, and Jacque Vaughn had a season-high 12 assists for the Jayhawks, who routed Iowa State 72-48 in the semifinals.

Missouri (16-17) is the only team to beat Kansas this season, winning 96-94 in double overtime at home on Feb. 4.

Raef LaFrentz scored 16 points for the Jayhawks, Vaughn finished with 13 and Scot Pollard had 10.

Derek Grimm and Jason Sutherland each scored 10 for Missouri. Pierce and LaFrentz benefited from Vaughn's passing as the Tigers could not keep up with Kansas' fast break. Vaughn had a scoring surge late in the first half as the Jayhawks surged ahead. Kansas made 20 of 30 shots in the first half and had an 18-3 run during a five-minute stretch near. Two free throws by Vaughn made it 45-22 with 2:27 left in the half.

Missouri had no answer for the Kansas inside game of Pierce, LaFrentz and Pollard, and seemed confounded on offense when the Jayhawks went to a matchup zone late in the first half. The Tigers, who beat Oklahoma 89-80 in the semifinals, shot 9-for-28 in the first half.

Kansas led 51-26 at the half and 72-41 following Ryan

Robertson's 3-pointer midway through the second half.

By David Droschak
Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Talent and height won out over desire in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament yesterday — but barely. As an upset-filled ACC regular season spilled over into its postseason, No. 5 North Carolina ended the madness in the tournament final by beating N.C. State 64-54, the first eighth-seeded team to play for the title in the event's 44-year history.

It was the Tar Heels' 14th ACC crown — 13 of them under legendary coach Dean Smith, who moved within two of breaking Adolph Rupp's all-time victory mark.

Smith has now won at last three ACC titles in four different decades.

Shammond Williams sank three 3-pointers in a span of two minutes during a second-half surge and Antawn Jamison added two key layups six minutes later as the Tar Heels (24-6) won their 12th straight to lock up a No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament.

Williams led with 23 points and was named tournament MVP, while Jamison added 17 points and 11 rebounds. C.C. Harrison led the Wolfpack (16-14) with 13 points.

The two teams, who hadn't met in the tournament since N.C. State's one-point upset of the No. 1 Tar Heels in 1987, staged one of the classic tourney chess matches as the 66-year-old Smith matched wits with first-year Wolfpack coach Herb Sendek, who is half his age and had half Smith's flour talent.

After trailing by as many as 10 in the first half, the Wolfpack closed to 36-34 with 15:24 left and had a chance to tie or take the lead, but Jeremy Hyatt was called for a charging foul and Williams then nailed three straight 3-pointers to give North Carolina an 11-point lead.

North Carolina State, who had defeated No. 7 Duke and No. 22 Maryland, had one last gasp, even with all five starters playing in all but one minute of the second half.

A Justin Gainey 3-pointer got the Wolfpack to 47-45 with 6:29 left, but Jamison converted a three-point play off a pass from Williams and then added a layup less than a minute later to give the Tar Heels a 52-45 lead.

N.C. State could pull no closer than four the rest of the way as North Carolina sank eight straight free throws in the final 1:03 to seal its seventh ACC title in the Greensboro Coliseum.

The Wolfpack was 1-10 this regular season when trailing at halftime, but 3-0 in the ACC tournament. However, N.C. State couldn't pull out one last miracle, getting outrebounded 41-21 as the Tar Heels shot 59 percent.

N.C. State missed 14 of its first 18 shots to fall behind by 10 midway through the first half as North Carolina worked the ball inside at will and controlled the boards.

The Tar Heels made seven straight shots to go up 20-10 before the Wolfpack closed within four points on three occasions. A Jamison layup gave North Carolina a 30-24 halftime advantage as all but two of North Carolina's first-half points came in the paint or from the foul line.

■ hockey

continued from page 12

point, scoring five unanswered goals in the final period for the 8-2 win. At game time, Umile was pronounced in fair condition at Portsmouth Regional Hospital.

It was the second night in a row that UMass were close to the Wildcats. But the offensive strength and manpower of UNH was too strong for Regan (35 saves), and he could not hold them back.

"They just had too much firepower, and I think after the second period I just started to run out of gas, while they just kept coming and coming," Regan said. "I did all I could, it's playoff time and a goaltender has got to keep a team in it. Our team left everything they had on the ice, and the senior class played their hearts out."

For Mallen, it is the end of the season, and the end of the line for his first recruiting class. A group of players left out of every other Division One program's plans held back one of the nation's best for as long as possible, but the wm was not to be.

"Well, we had a good start again today," Mallen said. "Obviously, after two periods we had a brave effort, but it was an uphill climb at this stage of the season. We got a great performance by Brian Regan, and a lot of our seniors tonight, especially Rob Bonneau and Warren Norris.

"That senior class came here on a dream, and they came a long way... a long, long way. They have a great four year career to look at, and we're going to go out fighting, and that's what they did."

The Minutemen came out of the first period with a 0-0 tie, but in a span of :13 in the second, UNH put two goals on the board. But a little over a minute after John Sadowsky's goal, Bonneau beat Matile on a centering pass from Norris at the 10:34 mark. Then, after Jayme Filipowicz' goal to put the Wildcats up 3-1, junior Mike Gaffney blasted a score past Matile, tickling the net of the top shelf for the 3-2 game after two periods.

But Jason Krog scored two goals in the first five minutes of the third to put UMass away, with Boguniecki going out in his last game at the Whittemore Center with two goals himself. UNH now goes on to the Hockey East semifinals at the FleetCenter this weekend, and will face Boston College, who beat Merrimack College in their quarterfinal series.

■ NCAA

continued from page 12

Teams advancing from this bracket will meet for the East Regional in Syracuse, N.Y.

While the pre-selection show debate continued, another frequently asked question arose — will the A-10 get five bids?

Again, the answer turned out to be yes.

While UMass was the first of the conference members to be announced, Temple's John Chaney literally had to wait until the last half of the last bracket was announced to find out if his team was going — but the Owls' patience was rewarded with a No. 9 seed and a first-round game against No. 8 Mississippi.

Temple is joined in the Midwest Region by A-10 West regular season champ Xavier, which grabbed the No. 7 seed. The Musketeers, who bowed out of the conference tourney at the hands of Temple, will face No. 10 Vanderbilt.

St. Joseph's won the right to the conference's automatic berth by capturing the Atlantic 10 Tournament crown. With that honor, the Hawks also nabbed the No. 4 seed in the West and will face No. 13 Pacific.

Rhode Island also garnered a tourney bid, giving the conference five bids overall. The No. 9 Rams will meet up with No. 8 Purdue in a Southeast Region first-round game.

Kansas, the preseason favorite to win the national championship, received the No. 1 seed in the Southeast, while Minnesota grabbed the top seed in the Midwest. Despite winning the SEC championship, Kentucky was shipped out west as the No. 1 seed in the West.

Louisville is a familiar foe for the Minutemen, as UMass faced the Cardinals last year.

"It's going to be a great game," Clarke said. "They're going to come out and fight, we're going to come out and fight. We're just happy we're in the tournament."

■ hoop

continued from page 12

The Minutemen's outspoken sophomore guard Charlton Clarke agreed with his teammate.

"We didn't know for sure if we were in or not, just the anticipation was the hard part. But when it finally came up, what a rush," Clarke explained with a sigh of relief.

Now that the speculation is over, it's time for UMass to look ahead to the contest against Louisville.

"We played them last year, they are very athletic," Flint said. "Defuan Wheat is one of the best guards in the country, Alvin Sims is as good as you get and they have some really athletic freshman. They are not really big, but they're real good athletes and it's going to be a tough game."

For an in-depth look at the Big Dance, check out the Collegian's NCAA Tournament Preview this Thursday.

75¢ COLOR COPIES

CAMPUS CENTER PRINT SHOP
Xerox Copying • Offset Printing
Desktop Publishing • Design
Vinyl Signs and Banners
545-0371
Second Floor Campus Center

This Week in the Campus Center
INFORMATION, NEW PRODUCTS & SERVICES, AND SPECIALS FROM THE CAMPUS CENTER/STUDENT UNION COMPLEX

COLOR IS BACK!
The Campus Center Print Shop will be testing a Savin Color Copier starting March 11.

Use Your Bean! The Hatch is proud to present some tasty vegetarian options, such as our Three Bean Veggie Chili and our made to order tacos and burritos, All fresh as fresh gets.... the hatch

University Store
Stop by for weekly specials!
ALL PICTORIAL CALENDARS ◀ Save 75%
Save 20%
• WOMEN'S STUDIES BOOKS
• ALL TRAVEL BOOKS (Spring break is coming!!)
• ALL MARKERS and HIGHLIGHTERS
• ALL UMASS DECALS
• ALL New York Times BESTSELLERS all the time!
"Champion" Replica Basketball Jerseys and Shorts Regular $39.99 NOW ONLY $29.99 available with numbers or plain $19.99 UMASS Beachtowels Just in time for Spring Break!
Gear for Sports Sideline Jackets NOW ONLY $34.99 reg. $49.99 While supplies last
Campus Center/Student Union
WEEKLY SPECIALS

Invent Your Future!
SRI International is recruiting at UMass/Amherst
B.S., M.S. in Electrical Engineering or Computer Science
Communications, Signal Processing, Hardware, Software
Summer student/Co-op interest is also welcome.
Wednesday, March 12
Time: 6:00 - 8:00 p.m.
811-815
Refreshments. Bring resumes!
SRI International
Inventing the Future for 50 years
SRI International (formerly the Stanford Research Institute) is an independent, not-for-profit research and consulting organization in Menlo Park, CA, performing a broad spectrum of problem-solving research and development under contract to government and industry. SRI offers a competitive salary and benefits package, including tuition reimbursement. Menlo Park is located in the heart of California's Silicon Valley. For more information find us at www.sri.com, sytech.sri.com, and on JobTrak.

Men's lax dominates in season opener

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

FAIRFIELD, Conn. — The Massachusetts men's lacrosse season opener was a chance for the Minutemen to get out onto the field and see how they measure up against a smaller Div. I opponent. The results are in, and the Minutemen hope that the 22-3 margin over Fairfield is an indication of what's to come.

On an overcast day in early March, the earliest ever UMass men's lacrosse season opener, the Stags trailed by just one goal. They kept up with the No. 11 Minutemen, scoring on their first two

Massachusetts	22
Fairfield	3

man-up situations, and keeping close tabs on UMass' stellar group of attackmen.

That was the first quarter.

When the horn blew to start the second frame, the Minutemen came out onto the field just as the sun emerged from its hiding to shed a little light on the situation. The Stags' chances of pulling out a dream upset were soon replaced by the memories of a close first quarter and the nightmares that would be the remaining three periods.

The Minutemen went on a scoring streak, notching 18 straight goals before Fairfield could finally get another tally on the board. The run included eight goals in each of the second and third periods.

Goaltender Jon Kasselakis had to make just seven saves in his three quarters of play, as UMass limited the Fairfield attack to four shots in each of the first and second quarters — and just five total in the entire second half.

"We didn't necessarily come out of the gates the way we wanted to," UMass coach Greg Cannella said. "We started out a little bit sluggish, but the bunch of goals we scored in the second quarter kind of put the game out of reach.

"We just moved the ball well and finished off most of our chances in the second quarter [and on.]"

The Minutemen opened the scoring at 13:12 when Casey Costello sent a pass from the point to Jim Kennedy down low. Kennedy quickly shot over the Fairfield keeper's left shoulder for the first of his two goals on the day.

Jay Robbins won the ensuing face off and broke through the Fairfield defense, streaking up the middle and shooting low while being checked on three sides by Fairfield defenders. The unassisted goal came just six seconds after the first UMass tally.

Fairfield got on the board soon after. The Stags' Mike Keegan cut around

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Brendan Glass rang up a hat trick in UMass season opening blowout the crease to the right side of the UMass goal and fired a shot to the lower left which Kasselakis saved. The rebound came back out to Keegan, who scored short side off of a diving Kasselakis' stick.

The Stags struck again in the first quarter, ending the actual competitive portion of the game at 3-2. The second quarter marked the opening of the floodgates.

"[After the first quarter] we just talked about being unselfish, being mentally ready, we had a bunch of mental mistakes there in the first quarter," Cannella said. "They knew where I was coming from and fortunately they turned it around."

Chris Grande struck early in the second frame to start the scoring blitz. Just :39 seconds into the period he launched a missile from about 20 yards out which dented twine in the upper right.

By the end of the barrage, 12 Minutemen had scored their first goals of the season and six of them had supplied multiple tallies. Sophomore transfer John O'Connor led the attack with four goals, followed by a hat tricks from senior Brendan Glass and sophomore Owen Poland. Grande, Costello and Kennedy each scored two goals apiece.

The constant call of "double him" from the Fairfield sideline when Glass got the ball freed up the other Minutemen for scoring chances. O'Connor's production shows the prominence of the underclass, despite the strength of the seniors.

"We expect a lot from John, we expect a lot of goals," Cannella said. "He's the guy in front of the cage who is going to get the ball and hopefully finish it.

"This was a great opportunity to get out and play and see what we could do. We played a lot of people, a lot of young guys in the second half, which is always fantastic if we can get them some game experience."

The Minutemen return to action on Tuesday at Springfield College when they host Hartford on the turf. Gametime is at 2 p.m., and will be broadcast live on WMUA 91.1 FM.

Baseball takes one, falls twice to JMU

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

Nothing could be finer than starting your baseball season off in Harrisonburg, Va. Unfortunately for the Massachusetts baseball team (1-2), after splitting the double-header on Saturday, James Madison University (9-6) won the rubber match on Sunday.

Massachusetts	8
James Madison	5

In game one, senior tri-captain Jason Bennett earned his first win of the year and eighth career, while striking out three Dukes to bring UMass it's first win of the season, 8-5.

James Madison	16
Massachusetts	16

James Madison jumped ahead early, leading 3-2 after four innings, until UMass went on a 6-2 run in the final three.

Leading that charge was senior shortstop Brad Gorrie, who went 2-for-3 with a home run and three runs scored, while sophomore third baseman Bryan Mazzaferro had two hits and scored two runs. JMU catcher Corey Hoch allowed a pass ball to allow Mazzaferro, who singled in Gorrie, to score the gamewinner.

James Madison	6
Massachusetts	5

In the later part of the double-header, UMass was not as lucky. With big-league rallies late in the game, the Dukes were able to pull out a victory over the Minutemen 16-14, even after making five errors in the game.

Just as JMU jumped out on UMass in the first game, the Minutemen led 4-1 after three innings until the Dukes drove in seven runs in the bottom of the fourth. While JMU led 8- 4, twelve runs were exchanged in the fifth to put UMass back on top 13-11. But in the sixth, the Dukes tallied five runs and never looked back. Massachusetts squeezed out one more run in the seventh, but it was not enough as JMU earned it's eighth victory. Steve Levy was credited with his first loss of the season.

Junior second baseman Muchie Dagliere kept up his All- American Candidate status on Saturday by recording four hits in the double-header. He hit one home run, three RBI and five runs during the two game split. Sunday he wasn't as successful, going 0-for-3 with two strikeouts. Through three games, Dagliere has gone 4-for-11, batting .364.

UMass looked to have game three well under control until the eighth inning when JMU tallied four runs and snubbed the Minutemen 6-5. UMass got on the board early when Dagliere, after being hit by a pitch, made it home on two singles into the outfield. Sophomore tri-captain Doug Clark was credited with the RBI. Clark is batting .308 after this weekend.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

All-America candidate Muchie Dagliere earned four hits in Saturday's double-dip with JMU in Virginia.

Both teams exchanged runs until UMass got a rally going in the top of the sixth, scoring three runs. Once again, Clark was the key to the offensive strike by getting the first hit of the inning and eventually making for home on one of JMU's numerous errors.

But it was all for naught when the Dukes pounded the Maroon and White late in the game on a home run by Marasco. In total, the Dukes scored four runs on four hits and put the Minutemen away. Cooke (0-1) was credited with the loss.

With three games under their belt, the Minutemen look to improve on their 1-2 record down in Fort Meyers, Fla., where Pace College awaits UMass' wrath.

■ UNH

continued from page 12

Tim Murray, UNH banded together to pull off a decisive win for its fallen coach.

The games this weekend became somewhat irrelevant in the big picture, although it was curious to see how UMass would battle UNH, how long the team would hang in the game, and whether it could take one of the three games before the ferocious fans at the Whittemore Center.

Still, the UNH victory was almost inevitable. After all, in 999 out of every 1,000 instances Goliath annihilates David. With the exception of Brain Regan's awe-inspiring 90-save weekend, and UMass twice hanging tough with the Wildcats after two periods of play, the main focus of Saturday evening, and its post-game interviews, fell on the lack of Umile's presence.

"He means a lot to all of us and we missed him, but we knew he wouldn't want us to sit down and not play hard — so we went out and played hard," forward Tom Nolan said.

Yet, while Umile was missed in body, his boisterous spirit remained present.

"He called at about 6:30 and gave Brian and myself 25 to 30 Instructions," Serino said. "He was excited. He was Dick. He's an insense guy and he was wishing he was here. Here's a guy sick in bed from a heart attack telling us he's worried that he's letting the team down by not being here. We're real happy that we could get a win for him tonight."

The UNH win of course meant that UMass lost, but that was far less meaningful than it would be on a usual night.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Classes Start Wed, March 12th 7:00pm Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!!

HEY ... DO YOU CARE ABOUT UMASS?
Just 2 minutes can help all of us to meet any or all of the current demands you believe in!
Please call email the following (make messages clear and brief):

Chancellor Scott dkscott@chancellor.umass.edu 545-2211	Governor's Office (617) 727-9173
Pat Crosson, Provost provphc@provost.umass.edu 545-2464	Education Executive Office (617) 727-7785
Paul Page, Vice-Chancellor, Admin. & Finance ppage@admin.umass.edu 545-1581	State House of Representatives (617) 722-2000
	State Senate Clerk (617)722-1276

EDUCATION MAJORS!!
DON'T JUST WORK THIS SUMMER, COME GROW PROFESSIONALLY AT AMERICA'S PREMIER BROTHER/SISTER CAMPS
WINADU FOR BOYS
DANBEE FOR GIRLS
IN WESTERN MASS
SALARY/ROOM/BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!
COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE
THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD
802 CAMPUS CENTER
10 AM - 4 PM
(WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL 800-494-0238

LOWFAT DAILY SPECIALS
From Our Lowfat Cookbook of the Month
MARCH Lean & Lovin' It
Judie's
http://virtuel-valley.com/judies
51 N. PLEASANT STREET DOWNTOWN AMHERST 253-3491

STUDY THIS AD
This is not a test...It's an opportunity. An opportunity to manage a fun, productive team while establishing relationships and gaining experience for the future. Examine these benefits:
•Hours designed around your class schedule
•Full time hours available during semester break
•$500 Hiring Bonus
•Learning management skills you can use for a life time
•Advancement opportunities after graduation
•Positions available in Easthampton, Northampton, Hadley
The prerequisites? Ambition, effective people skills, proven leadership ability, and good academic credentials. If you think you can make the grade, send/fax your resume or apply in person at: Burger King: attn: Bob Turner, 353 Russell St., Hadley, MA. 01035 Fax: 413-527-7654
"Working Together...To Be The Best"
F.P.S. Inc is an independent Franchisee of Burger King Corporation.
BURGER KING

Summer Employment Opportunities
UMass Career Day '97
Student Union Ballroom
Tuesday March 11th
10:00am - 4:00 pm
For more information contact:
Student Employment Office
243 Whitmore Bldg. 545-1530

R.A.D.
A Self Defense Course for Women
The RAD instructors wish to extend to you an invitation in joining us for this intensive 12 hour program. The class focuses on options, awareness, prevention, risk reduction, and physical defense moves.
If you would like to join us remember the following:
• 12 hour commitment (must attend full course)
• NO fee
• 16 students per class maximum (first come, first serve basis)
• class dates: 3/24, 3/26, 3/31, 4/2 from 6:30 - 9:30 p.m.
If you would like to join us, there will be an open registration at Dickinson Hall Lobby on 3/12 & 3/13, from 11:00 - 1:00 each day. For registration you will need your current UMass student and/or staff I.D.
Sorry, no phone-ins and no waiting list.
HOPE TO SEE YOU THERE!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Trying to quit smoking or chewing tobacco? Need help? Support Group meets every Wednesday from 7-8pm in Campus Center Room 801. Free. Call 577-5181 for more info or just drop by.

Concerned about Sex, STD's, Alcohol, Drugs, Eating Disorders, Stress, HIV/AIDS or Smoking? Call Peer Health Connections at 577-5168 for answers to your questions. Completely Confidential.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Excellent 4 bedroom/2 bath apt. on bus line- Beginning 6/1/97 Call 253-6301 4 info.

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 318i BMW 100K miles, perfect exterior and interior. $2000 or B/O 546-3830

1988 Ford Escort 5-speed, A/C, 118K, runs well. $1900 or B/O. 533-8413

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

1977 Ford T-Bird good running condition, many extras. $450 Call 538-7808

EMPLOYMENT

Legal Assistants Wanted Fall 1997 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office, get hands-on experience in the Legal Field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the Legal Profession necessary— training provided. Stop by the office today and pick up an application. 922 Campus Center

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise Lines Hiring Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel (Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary (919)918-7787 ext. C180 (Member, Better Business Bureau) CARE Program).

Alaska Employment Earn up to $3,000-$6,000+/month in fisheries, parks, resorts, airfare, food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7787 ext. A180

Guys- Be a counselor at our Cape Cod Summer Camp. We especially need 1-2 guys to teach tennis. No need to be a pro, just basic skills. We also need drama, nature, and all sports. Camp Wicosuta Kirkland is a coed overnight in Yarmouth. Be supported in our creative and fun community. Call Jim (508)358-5816 to set up an interview or see us at Camp Day, Tues March 11 in the Student Union.

Counselors for coed Northeast Pennsylvania overnight Jewish Federation Camp (3 hours from NYC)- general, sports, drama, H2O and arts (800)973-3886

Silver Jewelry- Buy Wholesale Direct From Manufacturer- Sell To Students. $$$ Investment Brings You $400. Call (800)256-3401

Counselors: Top Boys' Camp in Maine! Get in on an exciting, fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist Openings in Baseball, Basketball, Soccer, Tennis, Hockey, Lax, Swimming(WSI), Water skiing and all Water Sports Plus Camping and Hiking, Ropes and Climbing Wall, Scuba, English Horseback Riding, Archery, Rifle'ry, Arts and Crafts, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretarial Top salaries, awesome facilities, room/board/laundry, travel Call the (800) number now! (800)472-9104 for an appointment for an interview on March 11 in the Student Union Ballroom, 10am-4pm. Or e-mail cobbacamp@aol.com or write Steve Rubin, Camp Cobbossee (kah'buh-see) 10 Silvermine Dr., South Salem, NY 10590

Premiere Brother-Sister Camps in Massachusetts On Campus Interviews Counselor positions for talented and energetic students in all Team Sports, especially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball! 30 Tennis Openings. Also Golf, Archery, Riflery, Ropes and Rock Climbing, Weights/Fitness and Cycling; other openings include Performing Arts, Fine Arts, Figure Skating, Newspaper, Photography, Yearbook, Radio Station, Rocketry, Swimming, Skiing, Sailing, Wind surfing, and Canoeing/Kayaking. Top salaries, room, board, and travel- June 22nd-August 20th. Call for information. MAH-KEE-NAC(Boys) 1-800-753-9118 OANGEE(Girls) 1-800-392-3752 Recruiters will be On Campus Tuesday, March 11th, 10am to 4pm at UMass Camp Day

High Volume Seasonal Restaurant seeks fine cooks, hosts, cashiers, bus staff, wait staff. Interviews in person March 18, 21 and April 4 Noon till 2:00pm. Navigator Restaurant, Edgartown

Drivers Wanted Apply at Pinnochio's between 2:00pm and 5:00pm. No phone calls.

Visit The Animal Friends Summer Camp booth on Camp Day, March 11th. Spend your summer on Cape Cod teaching children about proper pet care and the environment. Many counselor positions available. Also need a cook!! Room and Board provided. (617)426-8170

Change A Life...it could be your own Summer adventure/challenge at coed resident Camp Hazan YMCA. Call Terri Mohn (800)248-8244 for application/information Campus Interviews March 11

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Sloane YMCA, Lakeville, CT in search of energetic counselors and supervisors for an unforgettable outdoor summer experience. To set up an interview On Campus March 11, call Sharon Brown @ (800)645-9367

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Work in America's National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3624 ext. N5018 (We are a research and publishing company)

Belchertown Recreation Dept. Seeking swim coaches (May-July) Experience preferred. M-F, EOE, ADA. Call Beth, Day (413)323-0419 Night (413)967-4651

National Parks Hiring Plus Forest, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting Companies. Up to $12/hour. Nationwide Openings. Call (919)918-7787 ext. R180

MAKE SUMMER MEMORIES JOBS AVAILABLE TOP NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS MARCH 11th

Positions Available: basketball, softball, roller hockey, tennis, lacrosse, swimming(WSI), sailing(WSI), water skiing, arts and crafts (ceramics, sewing, scenery, woodworking, photography, fine arts), science and nature, pioneering, ropes course and climbing wall, archery, gymnastics, drama, music, horseback riding, and general counselors.

MUST BE ENTHUSIASTIC AND LOVE WORKING WITH CHILDREN AND ADULTS!!!!

PLEASE CALL TO SET UP AN INTERVIEW...

TRAILS END CAMP (800)408-1404 (ASK FOR MARC)

EMPLOYMENT

On You Love Kids? Top Northeast Residential Camps seek Activity and Cabin Specialists to live and work with kids ages 7-16. Great facilities, dynamic staff! Flexible, diverse programming in all Water/Land Sports, Creative and Performing Arts, plus full range of outdoors/experiential activities. Lots of positions available. Contact Andy at Staff Search, (800)344-5448 for more information/application Interviewing in Amherst, March 10-11!

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 232 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C5017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Take over lease NOW in Brandywine Call Liz 548-8850

College Kids Welcome to Cape Cod 1-5 bedroom homes for the season Reasonable rates Honey Spence (508)398-9387, (508)994-2857

1 bedroom in a 3 bedroom apt. Putton Village. On major bus route. 5 min. from campus/10 min. walking distance. Electric not included. $275/month Lease ends 8/97 Starts ASAP Please call Larry 545-0199

Cape Cod group & summer renters Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-6000

FOR RENT

Leather Jacket Black Classic Biker Style Jacket. Mens Size XL "Wilson's" Leather Thinsulate Call 546-8733

FOR SALE

Light Speed Ratchez titanium 50cm. roadbike. Almost new. Ridden outdoors once. Paid $1700. Asking $1350 or B/O. Call 253-6452

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Belated Birthday Harry! We love you! -Love Jax, Cookie and Lainey

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours, $395
American Academy
1-800-808-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

LOST

REWARD
Lost Gold Rings
Call Lisa 546-2077

Black Bubble Jacket at Prudy's Saturday 3/1. Please return. No questions asked. Keys and ID in pocket. Reward. 549-0909

Purple/Black EMS Jacket Left in Rm. 203 Holdsworth 2/27. Will pay reward Sentimental Value! Call Bridgett @ 256-5470

MUSICIANS

Bass Player Wanted for Rock Band- Potential to play out soon Call Jason for details 549-8743

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Liars needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming! Call Dave and Ryan 665-9112

MISCELLANEOUS

Pledged and didn't like it? Start your own Fraternity! Vete Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, e-mail: ZB1GH81Nationet.org Or call Brett Hrbeck at (317)334-1898

SEEKING FINANCIAL AID? Get the system to help find FREE MONEY FOR COLLEGE! Detailed profiles on 200,000+ individual rewards from private and public sectors. Call Student Financial Services (800)472-9575 ext. FS0017 (We are a research and publishing company)

Gorillagrams
Birthdays, Anniversaries, Roses, Balloons, etc. Send the Crazy Gorilla We'll go anywhere, anytime. Student Rates. Call 256-0287

PERSONALS

DEBORAH,
I am an older sister with brown hair and eyes. Some of this is true, but some might be a lie
Pls LOVE,
Your Big Sis
L.M.L.

Happy Anniversary Douglas!
I can't wait to move in with you! I love You
Love,
Burpee

ROOMMATE WANTED

Two 21 year old males looking for 2 females to live off-campus with for the upcoming school year. Call Josh or Scott F. at 548-7128

SERVICES

Resumes: Written, Proofed, Printed Polished, Affordable Packages 548-9832

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

5 min. walk from campus Fall Option $280/month Chris @ 546-8881

TRAVEL

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 549-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $850/week (413)788-7133 (Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $238 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED TO RENT

Four bedroom house or apartment wanted for Fall '97 Will take over summer lease. Call 549-5362

WANTED

Dorm Size Refrigerator Call 546-4538

Tutor for CmpSci 401 (501) Please call Greg 549-8869

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exception to this rule is for promotional personals. In which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and phone # of the person placing the personal. This must be filled in on the insertion order. Students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, MARCH 10

Lecture — Rhonda L. Singer, lecturer from the Smith College sociology department, will speak about "Gender on the Court: An Analysis of Gender Talk and the Construction of Identities in Youth Basketball," at 4:15 p.m. in Seelye Hall, room 207 at Smith College.

TUESDAY, MARCH 11

Employment — The Student Employment Office is sponsoring its Annual Camp Day from 10 a.m.– 4 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Approximately 60 camps from the New England Area as well as the Mid Eastern states will be recruiting students for summer employment. Camps will be offering positions in all areas such as: counselors, lifeguards, arts & crafts, dance, theater, land and water sports, health and many others.

Film/discussion — Voices Heard; Sisters Unseen: a video presentation and discussion about domestic violence, including violence and silencing of lesbians, immigrant women, HIV+ women and prostitutes. The event will take place from 5:30–7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room TBA. The event is free and sponsored by the Stonewall Center.

Lecture — "Sometimes Truth is Stranger than Fiction: The Missing Yemenite Babies Affair" lecture/discussion, led by Shoshana Madmoni, will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Hillel House Recreation Room.

Meeting — The Distinguished Visitor's Program will be having a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 178. All are welcome and encouraged to attend. Call 545-0046 for more information.

Workshop — A meditation session will be held by the Ananda Marga Club at the Main Lounge of Butterfield Residence Hall at 8 p.m. This session will introduce attendees to basic meditation and Yoga techniques. There is no fee or registration. All are welcome. Please contact 253–9553 for further information.

Workshop — The Women's Institute for African Rural Development presents a seminar workshop on "Eritrean Women and Development" at 7 p.m. in the 6th floor lounge of Thompson Tower.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12

Dance — An Israeli dance teaching session will be held from 8:30–9:15 p.m., and a review and request from 9:15–10 p.m. in the Chadbourne Residence Hall basement. No experience required. Free. Sponsored by UMass Hillel.

Film — The Fourth Annual Multicultural Film Festival will screen I Can't Sleep, directed by Claire Denis, France 1195, at 7:30 p.m. in Gamble Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold their weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. All are welcome. A woman from the MSPCA will be speaking about shelter volunteering and how to get involved at this meeting.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will have a meeting in the Campus Center, room 802. All new members are welcomed. For more information, and the meeting time, call Tim at 546-0562 or Kay at 546-1459.

NOTICES

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545-9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one-acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at 413–323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Band wanted — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently seeking a four piece band for the spring production of Fame. The band must include: keyboard, guitar, bass, and drums. General publicity possibilities. For more information call Heather @ 549–3681 or Justin @ 546–0460.

Coffee Shop — Student Valley Productions is holding a Coffee Shop in April. They are looking for any talent coming from the Five College area in music, songs, poetry, skits, comedy, etc. For more information, call Daisy at 253–6514.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 5 at http://www-ureg-admin.umass.edu.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577–5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Attention Five College Students:
Your FYI could be here!
To place an announcement, contact the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Member O.C.M.P.
"we accept all major credit cards"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather	Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN/Headline	News
28	BET
28	BET on Jazz
27	UCTV
28	The Learning	Channel
28	TV Land
30	Comedy Central
32	Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

$1 drinks Vodka Tonic & always $1 Bud "light draft"

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 10, 1997

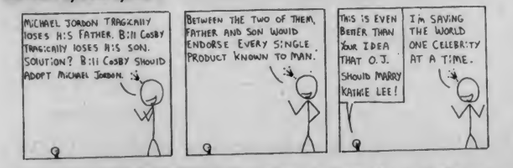
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(12) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⧖		Lawns and Gardens (In Stereo)		Jerry Baker Gardening: Magic		Jerry Baker	Jerry Baker Gardening: "Flower Power" ⧖
WFSB	3	(3) News ⧖	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Cosby ⧖	Raymond	Cybill ⧖	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope "Growing Pains"	News ⧖	Late Show ⧖
WBZ	4	(4) News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Cosby ⧖	Raymond	Cybill ⧖	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope "Growing Pains"	News	Late Show ⧖
WCVB	5	(5) News ⧖	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ⧖	Spy Game (In Stereo) ⧖		★★½ "Intersection" (1994, Drama)		Richard Gere, Sharon Stone	News	Nightline ⧖
WLVI	6		Full House ⧖	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Buffy the Vampire Slayer "Pilot" (Series Premiere) (In Stereo) ⧖		News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo) ⧖
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⧖	Foxworthy	Mr. Rhodes ⧖	Frasier (R) ⧖	Men-Badly	Dateline (In Stereo) ⧖	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	(4)	Fresh Prince	Martin ⧖	Judge Judy ⧖	Real TV (R) ⧖	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Moesha (R) ⧖	Goode Beh.	News	NJPW	Real TV (R) ⧖
WVIT	9	(10)	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy ⧖	Foxworthy	Mr. Rhodes ⧖	Frasier (R) ⧖	Men-Badly	Dateline (In Stereo) ⧖	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	(11)	Simpsons ⧖	Roseanne ⧖	Home Imp.	Seinfeld ⧖	Melrose Place (In Stereo) ⧖		Married... With Pauly ⧖		News	Coach ⧖	Babylon 5 ⧖
WWLP	40	(22)	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⧖	Foxworthy	Mr. Rhodes ⧖	Frasier (R) ⧖	Men-Badly	Dateline (In Stereo) ⧖	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	(57)	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⧖		John Tesh: The Avalon Concert (In Stereo)				Wood Wood! Uncle Matty's Day	Training	Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	(22)	News ⧖	ABC News	Seinfeld ⧖	Ent. Tonight	Spy Game (In Stereo) ⧖		★½ "Intersection" (1994, Drama)		Richard Gere, Sharon Stone	News ⧖	Nightline ⧖
WSBK	38		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld ⧖	Mad Abo. You	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Moesha (R) ⧖	Goode Beh.	News	Martin ⧖	Mad Abo. You	Real TV (R) ⧖
WTBS	49		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★½ "Silkwood" (1983) Sir Donald Wolfit (Comedy) Rodney Dangerfield...				★★★ "Desperate Hours" (1990, Drama) Mickey Rourke
A&E	23		Quincy "Passing"		Equalizer "Always a Lady"		Biography: Rasputin. Mork		Poirot "The Plymouth Express"		Miss Marple (Part 2 of 2)		Law & Order "Sanctuary" ⧖
CNN	29	(22)	World View ⧖		Moneyline ⧖	Crossfire ⧖	Prime News ⧖	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ⧖		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline ⧖
CNN	29	(28)	Tick ⧖	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	★½ "Stars in School" (1968, Comedy) Rodney Dangerfield, ...			On Delivery	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	26		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings "The Hunter" (R)		Wild Discovery: Crocodile		Lightning: Weapn of Gods		Chopper Power: Tech	Wild Discovery	Crocodile
ESPN	31		Up Close	Sportscenter		NCAA Preve.	Billiards (R)		Auto Racing: NASCAR Grand National			Baseball	Sportscenter ⧖
LIFE	45		Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Between Love and Hate" (1993, Drama) Robin Lloyd, ...				Intimate Portrait
MTV	30		Ren & Stimpy	12 Raw (R)	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)				Road Rules	Daria	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	42		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug ⧖	Rugrats ⧖	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy ⧖	Monsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi ⧖	Odd Couple ⧖
SCIFI	46		Odyssey ⧖	Sci-Fi Trader	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)		Tekwar (In Stereo) ⧖		Forever Knight (In Stereo) ⧖		V (R) (In Stereo) ⧖		Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)
TLC	44	24	Furniture	Renovation	Homelens (R)	Homelens (R)	Extreme Machines		Rogues Gallery "Al Capone"		War on Cancer-Killer		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	48		In the Heat of the Night ⧖		In the Heat of the Night ⧖		WCW Nitro (Live) ⧖				Adventures of Robin Hood		WCW Nitro (R) ⧖
USA	47		Renegade "Living Legend" ⧖		Highlander: The Series ⧖		World Wrestling Federation Monday Night Raw				La Femme Nikita "Grey" ⧖		Wings ⧖	Wings ⧖
HBO	50		★★ "Jay Mottla's Secret Life" (1994, Drama) Lori Anderson.				★★★ "Red Boys" (1995, Drama) Martin Lawrence, R. ⧖				Real Sports		IONA (1997) NR
MAX	51		★★½ "Days of Thunder" (1990, Drama) Tom Cruise, PG-13 ⧖				★★½ "Grumpier Old Men" (1995, Comedy) Jack Lemmon, PG-13 ⧖				"Pure Danger" (1996) C. Thomas Howell, R ⧖			"Death Match"
SHOW	53		(6:45) ★★★½ "A River Runs Through It" (1992) Craig Sheffer, PG ⧖				★★★★ "Dead Man Walking" (1995, Drama) Susan Sarandon, R ⧖				★½ "The Dark Dancer" (1995) Shannon Tweed.			"Street Law"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick



Non Sequitor By Wiley

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Leodee By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
A great time to plan entertainment or a dinner—your energies will find focus as a host or hostess. Cultivate goodwill at work—turbulent times may be afoot.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
If you're feeling bored, check out a new opportunity where your experience may be valued more highly. Deepening a personal commitment may also renew your affection for another person.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Planning an excursion provides a welcome respite from a frantic week at work. The pressure will ease when you learn to better delegate authority. Take the first step to bridge a gap between yourself and an estranged friend.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
The covert approach to office politics may disturb you a lot, but this week it's imperative to remain on the sidelines, at least until you're sure which way the wind is blowing. A weekend adventure provides fodder for contemplation.

LEO
July 23–August 23
A romantic attachment flourishes when you make an effort to appreciate your partner's mind as well as other things. A special treat you plan for your sweetie is much appreciated.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
A new venture you begin is productive from the start, as long as you permit it to develop according to its particular bent. Don't be upset if the reality differs from the theory, as long as it still works.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Any extra time you can spend planning pays off handsomely. Not only could you make a new friend, but the information and experience you gather could be invaluable as you head into a new and different situation.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
What seems like a boring week presents some unique opportunities for growth. Give aid to someone in need who doesn't expect it—no act of kindness is ever wasted.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
As a business deal develops, it may seem as if one of the parties involved is being deliberately obtuse. Take the extra time to explain the goodwill you cultivate will pay off one way or another.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
A journey you've begun enters a new phase as you pass a landmark along the way. Celebrate with a trusted friend. Keep your eyes on a central objective in order to avoid being distracted as the week progresses.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
If there's something you want more than anything, this is a good week to sit down and formulate a plan for getting it. Trust a friend to advise you, then stick to your plan—your goal could be closer than you think it is!

PISCES
February 19–March 20
It may be time to sever a relationship that isn't working. While distance can be painful at first, it may be the best path toward a new freedom and happiness. Trust your inner voice

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Mr. Stetson, we are very busy people. Do you want the finest hair-replacement procedure available or not?"

Quote of the Day

"Friends are people who know you really well, but still like you."

–Dennis the Menace

Robotman By Jim Meddick

ROBOTMAN ® by Jim Meddick

E-Mail: JimMeddick@aol.com

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Social Norm By Mr. K

University² By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Pucks	Roast Turkey
Turkey Chili	Tilapia Santa Fe
Scalloped Spaghetti	Broccoli Casserole
	Quarter Pound Burger

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
3 Cheese & Macaroni	Roast Turkey
Spaghetti/Meat Sauce	Cauliflower Casserole
Spaghetti/Lentil Sauce	Pastabilities
	Chicken Parmesan

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Roast Turkey
Chicken Pucks	Fried Shrimp Dinner
American Chop Suey

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, March 10, 1997

▼ SPORTS THIS WEEK

MEN'S LACROSSE	MEN'S HOOP	WOMEN'S SOFTBALL	WOMEN'S LACROSSE	MEN'S BASEBALL	WOMEN'S WATER POLO
MARCH 15th 2:00 P.M vs. HARTFORD MARCH 17th @ VIRGINIA 3:30 P.M.	MARCH 14th @ Pittsburgh, PA NCAA TOURNAMENT vs. #20 LOUISVILLE	MARCH 14th - 17th LADY SEMINOLE INVITATIONAL @Tallahassee, FL	MARCH 15th @ HARVARD 1:00 P.M. MARCH 15th @ HOLY CROSS 3:00 P.M.	MARCH 15th vs. PACE 5:00 P.M. MARCH 16th vs. RIDER 10:00 A.M. MARCH 17th vs. RIDER 2:30 P.M.	MARCH 14th CWPA LEAGUE TOURN. @ Hanover, NH MARCH 16th @ GOLDEN COAST COMMUNITY 7:00 P.M.

Questions answered, UMass earns NCAA bid

Minutemen face Cardinals in first round

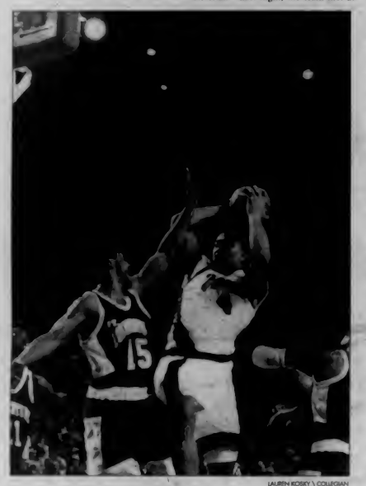
By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Rearrange your spring break plans, wipe those three dirty letters (N.I.T.) out of your mind, and pack your bags for Pittsburgh.

Last night, the Massachusetts men's basketball team and its fans breathed a collective sigh of relief when the pairings for the NCAA Tournament were announced, and UMass recieved a No. 11 seed in the tourney's East Region. The squad will face East No. 6 Louisville in Friday's first round in Pittsburgh.

After an early exit in last week's Atlantic 10 Tournament when UMass fell in the second round to George Washington, the Minutemen enterred the ranks of NCAA purgatory as a "bubble team." Last night, the team met at Pinoccio's in downtown Amherst to watch the selection show, hoping their bubble would not burst.

According to the powers that be in Overland Park, Kans., there are four criteria which are considered in distributing the tournament's at large bids — record vs. Div. I opponents, record vs. top 100 teams, RPI index, and record in the last 10 games. For Massachusetts coach James "Brusier" Flint, he feels it was his squad's strong schedule that earned an NCAA berth.



"Our schedule got us in, without a doubt, our schedule got us in the tournament," Flint said. "Although we took our lumps, without that schedule, we wouldn't be considered. If you know who we're playing next year, we're going to be playing the same teams again, so the toughness of the schedule is not going to stop."

However, Flint felt that it was not just his team's traditionally tough non-conference schedule that propelled his season into the post-season but also the strength of this year's A-10. Joining UMass in the NCAA's will are four other A-10 teams: Xavier, St. Joseph's, Temple and Rhode Island, none of whom are in the tournament's East Region.

"I thought our conference was very very strong this yeal," Flint said. "I've said that from day one that the Atlantic 10 was the best it has ever been and that we were rewarded for that this year. We got five teams in the tournament and we proved that we deserved to have five teams out there."

The past few days were anxiety ridden for UMass. While everyone filling out their brackets for the office pool had their own formula for who was in and who was not, there is no way to guarantee an at large bid. This year, top schools like Michigan and Syracuse fell by the wayside, and UMass was aware that the same fate could have befallen its team.

"I was hoping it would come out early, it was great," UMass big man Tyrone Weeks said of the team's tournament bid. "Now we can relax and get ready for Louisville. The last five years have been great with automatic bids. This year it was a nail biter, but we knew it was after we lost to GW. I'm happy the tournament committee gave us another chance."

LAUREN KOSBY \ COLLEGIAN

Lari Kehner and the Minutemen face Louisville in the first round of the NCAA Tournament on Friday.

Turn to hoop, page 8

CHRIS CESNER \ COLLEGIAN

UMass fans will have a lot to cheer about as the Minutemen's postseason was extended with an NCAA Tournament bid last night.

UMass hockey falls in HE quarterfinals

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.H. — For four out of the six periods this weekend against No. 6 New Hampshire, the Massachusetts hockey team (12-23) went toe-to-toe with the Wildcats (27- 9). Combined on both nights, the Minutemen were only behind by a 6-5 score going into the final periods, but it was that final period which told the tale.

New Hampshire	5
Massachusetts	1

After valiant efforts by both junior goalie Brian Regan (90 saves on the weekend) and UMass' graduating class, the upset bid against UNH was not to be. Consecutive 5–1 and 8–2 losses at the Whittemore Center ended this quarterfinal series of the Hockey East playoffs for the Minutemen.

Regan did his best to hold back the Wildcats on Friday night, compiling a new Hockey East and personal record for saves made (55 saves). Early period penalties and an inconsistent offense hindered any momentum the Minutemen had established in the first two periods. A superb game plan by coach Joe Mallen, consisting of relentless trapping through center ice, eventually digressed into chippy play, and UNH skated away with the win.

Mallen saw the talent level of the Wildcats as just too much as the game wore on.

"[UNH] has a pretty good club here, and I'm proud of the effort our team came out with in the first period," Mallen said. "But, their talent level picked up in the second and third periods, and the Mark Mowers', Eric Boguniecki's and Eric Nickulas' of this team began to out-man us.

New Hampshire	8
Massachusetts	2

"Once we get those kinds of skilled players on our team through recruiting, it will make the difference in these kinds of games."

Yet, the first period did not start out the way the Minutemen wanted it to, and junior Brad Nortqn was assessed an early penalty. But Regan came up with some big saves, and the power play ended on a call on UNH's Nickulas. UMass took advantage, shocking the Whittemore Center faithful with a power play goal at the 3:27 mark.

Junior Tom O'Connor fed the puck down low from the right point, and seniors Rob Bonneau and Warren Norris played give and go in front of sprawled Wildcat goalie Sean Matile, with Norris picking up his 20th goal of the season.

The start of the second period turned out worse, and a 1–1 tie was changed quickly. Senior Tiger Holland and Bonneau collided on a UNH offensive ruth, letting Tom Nolan walk into the zone to feed an open Boguniecki in the slot at the :34 mark for the 2–1 score.

UMass solidified their team defense, and didn't allow any quality opportunities for the rest of the period, until a late penalty. Boguniecki scored his second goal of the game on that power play, and even worse, with :44 left on the clock. UNH clamped down on UMass in the third, scoring two goals for the final of 5–1.

In Saturday night's game, the Minutemen once again hung tough with the Wildcats in the first two periods, going into the final period down by only a 3–2 score.

Whether the Wildcats were psychologically affected by the news of coach Dick Umile's heart attack earlier that morning turned out to be a moot

JORMA KANSANEN \ COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts hockey team dropped a pair of games to UNH in the Hockey East quarter finals this weekend.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 8

Coach's heart attack casts shadow over weekend HE action

DURHAM, N.H. — Sportswriters lie.

We would have you believe that there is nothing in the world greater than Brian Regan's sparkling, record–shattering 55–save performance Friday night in the Hockey East playoffs at No. 6 New Hampshire.

We would have you believe that a triple overtime NCAA women's soccer game is the greatest moment we will ever see in our lifetimes, or that a no–hitter by Danielle Henderson in an NCAA play–in game was truly her greatest accomplishment of all of last year.

We would have you believe that on any given day the fate of the home team is the single most important thing anywhere.

LIBEL TORBIN

Saturday afternoon the New Hampshire hockey community came to grips with the fact that there is a far more important thing in this world than whether the team in blue beats the seventh–seeded Minutemen — its well–being.

Word worked its way through the UNH hockey camp and the Durham area Saturday afternoon that head coach Dick Umile had suffered a heart attack at his home and had been rushed to Portsmouth Regional Hospital.

The 1972 UNH grad has long been known as a fiery leader from behind his alma mater's bench, spurring his team on to three NCAA appearances in the last five years, and an almost certain fourth in 1997.

For those of us who look to sport for relief from the real world's headaches, which include crime, homelessness, and political strife in Washington, Umile's early–morning heart– attack stopped the presses to offer sobering reality. Sympathy immediately began pouring out.

"He's a good gentlemen and I'm proud to be associated with a guy like him in the league," UMass coach Joe Mallen said after the game. "All of the coaches in Hockey East have an intense rivalry because we're all competitors, but there's still a friendship. I've known him for a long time and I wish him a speedy recovery. I hope all the best for him and for his family.

"I can feel for him. The stresses of coaching can do a number on people. I told our guys today it's a tough job and they know it. They see the look on my face night in and night out."

Brian McCloskey and Chris Serino minded the Wildcat bench in Umile's absence, but it was a bittersweet position for Serino to find himself in with his team a win away from advancing to the league semifinals at the FleetCenter.

"We just tried to keep it as normal as possible," said Serino, who has also served as the school's head baseball coach since 1994. "There's enough going on today without us making a circus in the locker room."

The news concerning its respected mentor reached the UNH team after its morning breakfast and hit deep.

"To kids, a head coach is invincible," Serino said. "Then all of a sudden that invincible object wasn't invincible anymore. It had a major effect on our kids. I saw it in their eyes when I told them this morning.

"[Umile's wife] Judy talked to us before the game about a family and that's what it's like — a head of the family going down."

Behind senior leadership from co–captains Eric Boguniecki and

Turn to UNH, page 9

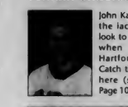
The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 99 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, March 11, 1997

Shock jock reigns as king of entertainment

Controversial D.J. Howard Stern's film, Private Parts opened this weekend. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Lacrosse looks to remain undefeated

John Kasselakis and the lacrosse team look to make it 2-0 when they face Hartford today. Catch the lowdown here (see Sports, Page 10).

NATION

Tribes lose money in effort to regain land

CONCHO, Okla. — Two impoverished Indian tribes drained their emergency fund to donate $107,000 to the Democratic National Committee, hoping to regain tribal land taken by the federal government more than a century ago.

Since the donation last year, tribal leaders have been wined and dined in Washington. But the land hasn't been returned, and now tribal leaders say the DNC and Democratic lobbyists are back asking for more money.

"Of course we've been taken advantage of," Archie Hoffman, secretary of the Cheyenne-Arapaho tribes' business committee, said Monday. He conceded no promises about the land were made.

"We weren't hoping for any short-term results," said Tyler Todd, the tribe's senior adviser on governmental affairs. "We were hoping to make things a little more easy on that long-term goal." White House spokesman Mike McCurry said yesterday he didn't know President Clinton's reaction to news reports of the tribes' donation.

STATE

Boston genetics firms against cloning humans

BOSTON (AP) — One company alters the genes of goats so that they produce exotic medicines in their milk. Other researchers are growing hearts in pigs that are meant to be transplanted into humans.

The state's cutting-edge biotechnology researchers and companies are working modern-day marvels.

But they're not in a rush to clone human beings, an industry spokesman said yesterday.

Mark Skaletsky, president of the Massachusetts Biotech Council, told the Legislature's Committee on Science and Technology that his group agrees with President Clinton's ban last week on federal funds for human cloning experiments.

"Any type of research directed at human cloning should not be allowed at this time," he said, adding that he believed it was time for a dialogue to take place on the ethics of the issue. Clinton barred federal spending on human cloning research, while acknowledging that there currently is no funding for such research. He also urged a halt in private research — and biological and medical researchers immediately agreed.

Massachusetts is one of the leading centers for biotech research and industry in the United States, with more than 150 companies in the state employing more than 15,000 people.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thurs.
HIGH: 40 LOW: 25	HIGH: 40 LOW: 30	HIGH: 35 LOW: 15

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Doctor Ruth brings 'Sexually Speaking' to UMass

DVP, Hillel draw expert's lecture to Fine Arts Center

By Tamar Carroll
& Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

Last night, Dr. Ruth Westheimer addressed a packed house at the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Center, where she was greeted by a standing ovation and spoke for over an hour to an enthusiastic crowd.

Westheimer's lecture, entitled "Sexually Speaking," consisted of two components. For the first half of the talk, Westheimer discussed common myths and misconceptions of human sexuality.

"In order for us to have a common knowledge and be sexually literate, especially before your spring break, let me put a few issues on the table," Westheimer said.

Westheimer then proceeded to talk about sexual education, abortion, homosexuality, sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) including AIDS, masturbation and the importance of relationships to sexual activities.

"Masturbation is the most difficult topic to talk about," Westheimer said. "There are so many American myths about it — that your hair will fall out or that you'll have to wear glasses."

Westheimer said that in order to dispel these myths, we must continually educate our population.

"Today there are approximately 1 million unwanted pregnancies each year. The reduction [from 1.5 million in 1989] is from talking about this myth and taking contraception seriously," Westheimer said.

Although she rarely debates the concept, Westheimer is in favor of keeping abortion legal.

"From where I stand, abortion must remain legal," Westheimer said. "Before July 1, 1970, only women with money could afford an abortion in Mexico or Europe. Other women were relegated to abortionists or coat hangers."

Westheimer refused to directly address issues of homosexuality, citing lack of scientific data on the subject on which to base her advice.

"All I can say is that I treat them with the same level of respect as I would treat anybody else," Westheimer said to audience applause.

Westheimer spoke about the seriousness of AIDS and urged partners to be honest with each other in regard to STDs.

"There is no question in my mind that anyone who is sexually literate, anyone in a new relationship — they have to be concerned with the dreadful disease of AIDS," Westhiemer said.

"It is a moral issue to say to a partner, 'Look, I do have herpes. I have to say that before a sexual encounter.' The question of communication is not debatable," Westheimer said.

She frequently cited data from the Masters and Johnson studies, which Westheimer said consisted of data compiled from over 140,000 sexual episodes in a laboratory setting.

"Everything that could be measured was measured. Who was willing?" she asked. "Fortunately for all of us, there were medical students and prostitutes that needed money. And then there were those who volunteered for the sake of scientific investigation."

The audience responded with bouts of laughter to Westheimer's frequent humorous inserts.

She went on to say that almost all women can be taught to reach orgasm and that most men can learn to prolong their erections with practice.

Before beginning the question and answer period of the lecture, Westheimer concluded, "Sex is not what's between the waist and the knees, it is up here [in your head]."

Although the audience gave her a standing ovation, students offered mixed responses to the lecture.

"She was interesting, but she tried to play it safe on the questions," said sophomore biology and theater major Elly Court.

Jack Brady, a junior theater major, was less enthusiastic.

"I was not impressed," Brady said. "She did not say anything new. She gave a general safe sex speech, with some funny stories thrown in."

The Distinguished Visitor's Program and UMass Hillel were responsible for bringing Westheimer to campus.

JONATHAN \ COLLEGIAN

Dr. Ruth Westheimer addresses students questions on sex and relationships at the Fine Arts Center last night.

AIDS sufferer to talk on experiences, faith

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

The Campus Crusade for Christ will be hosting a presentation tonight entitled, "Too Young To Die," by 21– year–old Steve Sawyer — a hemophiliac who is HIV– positive and has only a month to live.

Sawyer's presentation will share his experience in coping with the difficulties he is facing and the faith that is guiding him.

In addition to being HIV positive, Sawyer also has hepatitis B and C, which are primarily responsible for most of the physical damage done to him.

Sawyer, afflicted with hemophilia, a disease which inhibits blood clotting, contracted the HIV virus through a transfusion two years ago.

Sawyer was previously a student at Curry College in Milton until doctors informed him of his illness. He now lives in New Hampshire.

When Sawyer realized how limited his time was, he turned to the Campus Crusade despite his previous reluctance toward spiritual faith. Sawyer then decided to speak to students about his experience in order to help others cope with pain in their lives as he is doing.

Sawyer has experienced many difficulties besides his deteriorating physical health, including a divorce and broken relationships. In his presentation, he will share how he deals with suffering and pain and how spiritual faith has brought him hope. In addition, he will discuss three unsuccessful ways to cope with suffering.

Those in attendance will also have the opportunity to ask Sawyer questions when he is finished with his presentation.

Pete Baglow, coordinator of the presentation, said that the reason Sawyer is so inspirational is because he has such a "vibrant faith" and an optimistic perspective on his life, despite all of the difficulties he is facing.

Two hundred fifty people are expected to attend the presentation, which will take place in the Campus Center Auditorium at 7 p.m. Admission is free and all are welcome.

Consumer racism addressed in N.Y.

By Joel Stashenko
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. — Avis Rent-A-Car and other companies are refusing to rent automobiles to blacks, young drivers and Hasidic Jews, the speaker of the state Assembly charged yesterday.

Sheldon Silver, himself an Orthodox Jew from Manhattan, said his chamber's consumer protection committee will hold a hearing on March 31 in New York City to investigate alleged discrimination by Avis and other rental companies operating in New York.

"Discrimination is insulting and unconscionable under any circumstance," Silver said. "These allegations may very well be the tip of a very large iceberg."

Silver said he has also written to U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno calling on her office to investigate the business practices of car rental agencies.

Assembly Democrats unveiled two bills yesterday they said they would pass if they found the allegations of bias against the car rental companies are founded.

The bills would require:

•Vehicle rental companies to register with the state and prohibit companies from refusing to rent on the basis of where a driver is from.

U.S. Rep. Charles Schumer of New York City and the New York Public Interest Research Group have long complained that New York City residents, especially those in Brooklyn and Queens, are being discriminated against through higher rental rates because of where they live.

•Prohibit companies from refusing to rent on the basis of the creed, religion, marital status, gender or physical disability of a qualified driver.

•Double from $500 to $1,000 the fine for violations of discrimination statutes.

•Limit cash deposits companies can require of drivers who do not have credit cards.

•Allow drivers who have been discriminated against to sue companies directly instead of only referring the cases to the state attorney general's office for redress.

The chairwoman of the Assembly's consumer protection committee, Audrey Pheffer, (D-Queens), said her panel will issue a report exonerating the car rental companies, if that is what it finds. "This investigation is not a witch hunt," Pheffer said. "What we seek is the truth, plain and simple."

Silver said he assumed the rental companies would want to appear at the Assembly hearing and give their side of the story. But he also hinted that the Assembly could use its subpoena powers to compel people to appear.

State Attorney General Dennis Vacco's office said 23 discrimination claims have been filed with the state Division of Human Rights against Avis. Vacco's office is seeking a meeting with Avis executives to discuss the situation.

Avis said it does not display bias against its customers. "Avis has an unequivocal policy against discrimination of any kind and doe snot deny or limit car rentals based on race, religion, national origin or other group affiliation," it said in a statement.

Avis is being sued in federal court by black customers who claim the company denies access to rental cars to African-Americans. Last week, a former employee filed a sworn statement saying Avis urged telephone sales agents in Tulsa, Okla., to refuse corporate accounts to businesses owned by Hasidic Jews. Agents were told to determine if customers speak with an accent and whether they come from a geographic area where Hasidic Jews predominate.

Avis is also involved in a discrimination case before the state's highest court, the Court of Appeals. Vacco is challenging the way major leasing companies refuse to rent to drivers under age 21 or 25, despite a 1977 state law that prohibits any qualified driver age 18 or older from being discriminated against.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Master Mechanic

Bill Vandervalk, a senior engineering major, has worked at the Bike Co-op for two years and is the head mechanic.

Chief of LAPD denied 2nd tour by commission

By Daru Akiko Tom
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Police Chief Willie Williams, who was brought in to restore confidence in the force after the Rodney King riots, should not be given a second term because he has not been an effective leader, the police commission said yesterday.

The city needs a chief who can gain the respect of the public as well as the department's 12,000 officers, said Ray Fisher, president of the civilian oversight panel of mayoral appointees. Williams, 53, "did not take steps to become a respected leader in the department," Fisher told a news conference, even though his approval rating has risen and crime and police complaints have dropped since his arrival.

Williams held his own brief news conference.

"I'm deeply disappointed," he said, and vowed to remain focused on leading the department. He did not say what he might do to fight the decision.

The city's first black police chief "does not have the confidence of this

Turn to CHIEF, page 2

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Mark McGrath
Copy Editor: Suzanne Barber
Photo Technician: Kenneth W.P. Scott
Production Supervisor: Matt McCarthy
Production Staff: Joylyn Lombard, Kelvin Torres

chief

continued from page 1

board to serve for the next five years," said Fisher, who didn't name any candidates to replace Williams. Mayor Richard Riordan backed the commission and suggested Deputy Chief Bernard Parks, a black 32-year veteran of the LAPD, be appointed interim chief when Williams' contract ends July 6. The commission's unanimous decision was the first exercise of a voter-approved change in the tenure of police chiefs. Williams was not fired; the commission voted against giving him a second five-year contract.

The 15-member City Council can override the decision but needs 10 votes.

Councilman Richard Alatorre said he didn't know if the issue would be reviewed, but he did not believe Williams had the necessary votes.

Williams said that he didn't think anyone else coming into the department in 1992 could have done the job he has done.

"I've had 34 years of policing and I've ended at the top," he said.

The chief was brought from Philadelphia in 1992 after the LAPD was criticized for the King beating and failure to control riots after the initial acquittals of officers who beat King.

Williams' predecessor, Daryl Gates, had long been accused by minorities of ignoring police brutality. Williams, who gained recognition for his emphasis on community policing, seemed ideal to do the same for Los Angeles.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Stone cold chillin'

Brenda Miniscl sculpeted the Fiore Verdi in 1971. The sculpture was a gift from the class of 1970.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
March 8
A two vehicle accident occurred on Fearing Street. No injuries were reported.

Assault & Battery
March 8
An individual from Prince Residence Hall was assaulted off campus by another individual with a dangerous weapon. The investigation was turned over to Amherst Police.

Police responded to a assault in progress outside of Mahar Auditorium. One individual, 19, was placed in protective custody and Jonathan W. O'Neil, 18, of 3 Bruce Rd., Plymouth was arrested for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (a bottle) and for possession and transport of alcohol.

An individual from John Adams Residence Hall reported being assaulted and kicked in the head.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
March 7
A window was smashed on a vehicle in parking lot 22 on University Drive and speakers were stolen.
A vehicle was broken into in the Campus Center Garage.

Disorderly Conduct
March 8
Individuals in Leach Residence Hall were causing disturbance and ripping down bulletin boards in hallways.

Disturbance
March 8
Police responded to a report of a fight outside Coolidge Residence Hall. One individual was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Hazardous Materials/ Spills
March 8
Police responded to an explosion noise in the vicinity of Haigis Mall. Investigation revealed only smoke in the area.

Larceny
March 7
A jacket was reported stolen from Totman Building.
A radio and CD were stolen from a room in Brown Residence Hall.
March 8
There was a report of a stolen sign in Cashin Residence Hall. The sign was returned.

Liquor Law Violations
March 7
Sreang V. Hol, 19, of 7 Garfield Ave., Northampton, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue, was for possession and transporting alcohol.
Jefferey A. Ucran, 18, of 100 Elena St., Cranston, R.I. was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for transporting and possession of alcohol.
Christoph B Delacruz, 18, of 39 Martinsville Road, Basking Ridge NJ, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for possession and transporting alcohol.
March 8
Christopher Charles Morton, 19, of 10 Bay Hill Rd., Leonardo NJ, was arrested in Brooks Residence Hall for possession and transporting alcohol.
Donnette D. Viscay, 18, of 87 Harris St., Revere was arrested in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall for disorderly conduct.

Suspicious Person/Activity
March 7
Jesus Ventura, 26, of 18 Wrentham Rd., Worcester, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for failing to stop for a police officer, speeding and reckless and endangering operation of a motor vehicle.
Reginald A. Remy, 19, of 22 High St., Brookline, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for trespassing and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.
David A. Jerry, 18, of 8718 Park Ave., Worcester, was arrested on Massachusetts Ave. for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and malicious destruction of property of more than $250.

Traffic Stop
March 9
Stephen M. Wilson, 30, of 463 Washington St., Norwell was arrested on McClure St., for failing to stop at a stop sign and operating a vehicle under the influence.

Vandalism
March 7
A window was smashed on a vehicle in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
A window was smashed on a vehicle in parking lot 33 on University Drive.
A window in Machmer Hall was smashed by a rock.
March 8
A moon roof was smashed on a vehicle in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
March 9
Homophobic graffiti was written on a residents door in Brown Residence Hall.

GOT A TIP?
IF YOU KNOW OF A NEWS STORY HAPPENING ON OR OFF CAMPUS, CALL THE COLLEGIAN NEWS DESK AT 545-1762.

DO YOU ASPIRE TO BE A BIG-$HOT BUSINESS PERSON SOMEDAY?
The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
POSITIONS AVAILABLE
WE ARE ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR:
★ Associate FINANCE Manager
★ Associate ADVERTISING Manager
★ Associate BUSINESS Manager
★ Assistant MARKETING Manager
SOPHOMORE STUDENTS ENCOURAGED TO APPLY
ALL WILL BE CONSIDERED
FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL ALYCIA HINES AT 545-3500, OR COME TO THE COLLEGIAN LOCATED AT 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.
Learn from THE BEST and gain VALUABLE EXPERIENCE.

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
TO ONE-WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

WEEKLY UPDATE
University Career Center
Mather Building 545-2224

All Majors:
It's not too late!
Want some valuable work-related experience, but feel that all the really good positions have been filled?
WRONG!!!
It's not too late to look for a fall, even summer internship!
For more information stop by the Field Experience Office or call 545-6265

Wednesday!!!!
Quick Information
The Career Center is coming to you!
Come visit our table on the Campus Center Concourse from 9am to 2pm

Disk Registration Workshops
Learn how to use the jobline.
Access employers participating in campus recruiting and resume referral programs.
TODAY: Tuesday, March 11, 1:00pm
Wednesday, March 12, 10:15am
both workshops are held in the Mather building

National/International

FTC to block Staples merger

By Alice Ann Love
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government moved to block a merger between office-supply giants Staples Inc. and Office Depot, arguing yesterday that the $4 billion deal could make people pay more for paper, pens and other office and school supplies throughout the country. The two companies — between them they operate 1,124 stores — contended the chain they envisioned would be a pencil-pusher's dream of efficiency and low prices.

In full-page newspaper ads they had promised shoppers: "When we join forces, our greater efficiency means even lower prices for you."

But the Federal Trade Commission said the merged companies could control prices throughout the country. On a 4-1 vote, the commission decided to seek a court order before Thursday that would put the deal on hold while it is investigated.

"The fact is that in those communities where Staples faces competition from Office Depot, prices are significantly lower than where it does not," said William J. Baer, director of the FTC's bureau of competition.

Todd Krasnow, Staples executive vice president of marketing, said Staples will vigorously contest the FTC's request for a temporary injunction. The two companies said they account for only 5 percent to 6 percent of the $185 billion office-products market. "We've made a promise to consumers that prices will go down, which is why we're disappointed in the ruling by the FTC," Krasnow said.

Staples, based in Framingham, announced last September it would acquire Delray Beach, Fla.-based Office Depot for about $3.5 billion in stock. The value of the deal has increased to about $4 billion since then as Staples stock has risen.

Trading in the stock of both companies was suspended briefly after the FTC announcement yesterday. When trading resumed, the value of both companies' stocks fell — Office Depot by 24 percent, Staples by 5 percent.

Shoppers interviewed outside a downtown Washington Staples store yesterday disagreed about whether they would benefit from the deal. "They're going to force the prices (up) because I don't have any other option. They carry things that most other little stores don't carry. It's not good," said Azadeh Sefidroo, 43, who works as a consumer banker for NationsBank.

Wayne Donkerbrook, 40, a self-employed accountant from Arlington, Va., said he sees the merger as an advantage because he doesn't like to go from store to store comparing prices.

"Typically what happens is some things I need are only available at Office Depot, and other things are only available at Staples. Actually, it would be kind of convenient if they did merge, for me anyway," he said.

Staples and Office Depot have already agreed to two week-long extensions of the government-required waiting period for mergers, but have not been able to come to agreement with the FTC. If federal officials win a stay in court, they will have another 20 days to decide whether to pursue a full-fledged antitrust trial. On the 4-1 FTC vote to seek the injunction, commissioner Mary L. Azcuenaga dissented.

There is speculation that as a condition for approving the merger, FTC officials want Staples and Office Depot, who have so far refused, to sell some stores to competitors such as third-ranked Office Max.

The FTC said that as the deal is structured, competition would be substantially reduced in markets in 18 states and the District of Columbia where Staples and Office Depot are the only office-supply superstores.

In a similar case last year, FTC threats to sue the Rite Aid Corp. drugstore chain over its proposed $1.8 billion purchase of Revco D.S. Inc. ultimately scuttled that deal, even after Rite Aid agreed to close more than 300 stores to ease FTC fears of higher prescription prices.

Ken Barnard, president of Barnard's Retail Marketing Report, criticized the FTC action. "This merger, in my opinion, would have benefited the consumer... its failure protects, if anything, less-efficient producers," he said.

Jamie Love, who watches consumer interests for Ralph Nader's Center for Responsive Law in Washington, said his organization informally checked Office Depot and Staples prices for fax paper in 32 stores scattered across the country.

"We found significantly lower prices for fax paper in markets where Staples and Office Depot were head to head," said Love.

U.N. court tries rape as war crime

By Misha Savic
Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — In the first trial to consider rape as a war crime, prosecutors told a U.N. court yesterday how three Muslims and a Croat raped, tortured and murdered inmates at a prison camp.

The second trial before the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal is also the first time suspects have been tried as a group since Nuremberg and Tokyo courts examined World War II wrongdoing.

The suspects — Zejnil Delalic, 48; Esad Landzo, 24; Hazim Delic, 32; and Zdravko Mucic, 41 — rolled their eyes, fiddled with pencils and sighed as if bored while prosecutor Eric Ostberg opened their trial.

Serbs held for months at the Celebici camp in Muslim-controlled central Bosnia were "murdered, tortured, raped and beaten by guards at the prison and by outside persons who were permitted to come into the camp," Ostberg said.

A spokesman for the U.N. court said it was the first trial where rape was considered a war crime. The first suspect tried by the court — Bosnian Serb prison guard Dusan Tadic — had faced a rape charge, but the charge was dropped before the trial because the alleged victim was afraid to testify.

Bosnian Serbs see the current trial as a chance to prove to the world they were not the only ones responsible for atrocities during the Croatian and Bosnian wars.

About 500 Serbs, most of them civilians, were kept in the camp. Prosecutors chose 76 survivors to testify, but a legal squabble over procedures cut short the opening day.

A defense attorney demanded that his side be given the addresses of witnesses. Prosecutors protested, citing the need to protect the witnesses. Presiding Judge Adolphus Karibi-Whyte of Nigeria said he would rule later on the issue.

Imprisoned for months or years, inmates were beaten with steel cables and wooden and metal bars, burned with heated scissors, wrapped with fuses that were then lit and kept in vats of water, a 49-page indictment alleges. At least 11 died.

Women were raped, it says, and one man died after a badge with a Muslim party logo was nailed to his head. Some prisoners were forced to act like animals, or perform oral sex on each other. The indictment points to different roles the four had in the camp. Delalic, a corpulent, wealthy entrepreneur, became a Muslim military commander in 1992 in the region. Mucic, a Croat, was the camp's commander. Delic was his Muslim deputy and Landzo was a guard.

Delalic allegedly ordered attacks on several Serbian villages in the Muslim-dominated district of Konjic and set up the camp. He appointed Mucic as the camp's commander.

Some survivors have said that Mucic, who feverishly scribbled notes during most of Monday's four-hour session, tried to lessen their suffering but could not control the guards who carried out most of the atrocities.

There has been no evidence that Delalic or Mucic personally committed atrocities. Even so, they were indicted as men in charge who knew about the crimes and could have stopped them.

Landzo and Delic showed up yesterday with their heads shaved but dressed nattily in suits and ties. They are charged with personally killing nine people and directly joining in the torture.

Some survivors are disappointed that low-level authorities were charged while Muslim officials higher up have escaped scrutiny. Some told investigators they saw Bosnia's Muslim leader, Alija Izetbegovic, visit the camp in 1992. Though he never saw them or the conditions they were kept in, they contend he must have known about their misery.

By contrast, Serbs say, probes of atrocities committed by Serbs have led up the chain of command to the indictments of the top Serb leaders, Radovan Karadzic and Gen. Ratko Mladic.

Citadel cadets punished for hazing, harrassment

By Bruce Smith
Associated Press

CHARLESTON, S.C. — A male cadet at The Citadel was thrown out of school and nine others were given lesser punishments in the hazing and harassment of two female cadets, the military school said yesterday.

One cadet was cleared, and the FBI and state investigators continue to look into the women's allegations for possible criminal charges.

"The college made mistakes and individuals broke rules," interim President Clifton Poole said. "We have gotten the facts. We have heard the evidence, and we have punished those cadets who have violated regulations."

Of 15 male cadets who faced discipline, one was dismissed and one was given the next-most severe punishment: He is restricted to campus for the rest of the semester and must do 120 hours of marching with an unloaded rifle in the barracks courtyard. Eight of the cadets received lesser punishments, ranging from shorter marching tours and demerits to confinement to the barracks. Previously, three implicated cadets left school and one received marching and demerits.

Cadets Jeanie Mentavlos of Charlotte, N.C., and Kim Messer of Clover said their clothes were set on fire and cleanser was put on their heads. They also said they were forced to drink tea until they became ill, made to drink alcohol and forced to stand in a closet while being shoved and kicked last semester.

They didn't return to the state military school for the spring semester. The Citadel still has two female cadets. It began accepting women last June after a court battle.

"Hopefully this will bring to a conclusion a most painful chapter in our history," Poole said. "With these punishments, The Citadel has exhausted the remedies available to it under the college's published rules."

The school did not identify the punished cadets. The dismissed cadet can apply for readmission after a year.

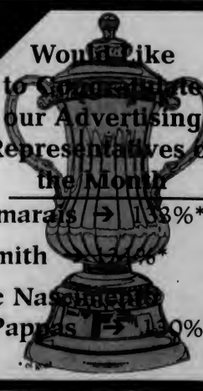
The disciplining of the 11 cadets came after private hearings held by school officials on March 1. The results were not released until yesterday.

Tim Kulp, Ms. Mentavlos' lawyer, said he still wants to know who in the administration knew what about the behavior of its cadets, and when.

"The administration was not trout fishing in Montana last semester," he said. "They were there and there are those who say they let it happen."

Paul Gibson, Ms. Messer's attorney, said the fact that nearly all the cadets implicated were disciplined "substantiates the allegations that have been made by our clients and shows that they are true."

ANNA FEDER \ COLLEGIAN



Large and in charge

The snow covered library is home to many students studying for mid-terms.

University of Massachusetts
Health Services and Department of Athletics
will host
a Cocktail Reception
in honor of
James Ralph, MD
retiring after 34 years of service
Saturday, April 5, 1997
6:00 - 8:30pm
Mullins Center, VIP Room
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
RSVP by March 21, 1997
$18.00 per person
For information call 577-5213

Summer Employment Opportunities
UMASS Camp Day '97
Student Union Ballroom
Tuesday March 11th
10:00am - 4:00 pm
For more information contact:
Student Employment Office
243 Whitmore Bldg. 545-1530

The Collegian Advertising Dept.
Would like to congratulate our Advertising Representatives of the Month
#1 Tim Desmarais → 138%*
#2 David Smith → 132%*
#3 Elizabete Nascimento
Angela Papas → 130%*

DAILY COLLEGIAN & UMass Five College Federal Credit Union
present
NCAA Tournament Preview
SPORTSExtra
8 pages filled with In-Depth Previews, Reviews & Tournament Action
Check it out, Thursday March 13th
Full Color Poster of Tourney Brackets
sponsored by: CAMPUS CLEAR

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Smeltzer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Presies Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Reform or punishment?

Editor's note: This is the second part in a two-part series on the local effects of welfare reform. The first installation appeared on Monday, March 3.

Most people from privileged economic classes think issues of poverty have nothing to do with them, that people who receive welfare and other government subsidies are some faceless, nameless "other" that lives "out there" in the inner cities or projects. But in fact, issues of poverty and access exist right here at this university, and people struggling for their economic survival rub shoulders every day with people who don't have the first idea what it means to experience hunger or the threat of homelessness.

Jennifer Fasulo

In theory, public universities exist to provide "the public" with access to advanced education after high school. But the reality of who actually attends universities reveals a much different and far less noble mission. Contrary to idealistic notions of education as a great equalizer, school systems in the United States primarily serve to reinforce social and economic divisions from one generation to the next. If this seems hard to swallow, one needs only to look at the class hierarchy which exists at every level of the educational system. Tracking doesn't end with public schools. With few exceptions, it's still the wealthy who attend private colleges; middle-class kids that go to universities; working-class kids that go to community colleges and poor kids that rarely make it through high school.

The University of Massachusetts Administration likes to wax poetic about the importance of multicultural education and diversifying the campus while steadfastly ignoring and resisting every attempt by student groups and unions to alter the structures and demand the funds necessary to begin making UMass an accessible university. This is why it fails to come through on the ALANA agreements or settle the GEO contract and would rather spend $20 million toward gaining acceptance in the American Association of Universities than two million dollars toward improving the enrollment of under-represented groups.

There are 867 women on TAFDC ("Transitional Aid to Families with Dependent Children) who attend UMass and countless more who survive through food stamps and other government subsidies. Contrary to popular myth, welfare does not pay for them to go to school. Women on welfare take out loans just like the rest of us who don't have a wealthy family to foot the bill of our education. The difference is that they are single-handedly trying to support a family and go to school at the same time. Single parents need support services that an individual does not, such as child care, transportation and health insurance for their children. These are services which the University does not currently provide. Previously, welfare provided a bare minimum of these resources, but the new regulations have put most students on welfare in immediate jeopardy of losing their education.

Under the new law, women are allowed two years of cash assistance before being cut off, regardless of whether they've completed their education or have any alternative means of supporting their families. Without the child care and medical coverage that welfare provides, low-income mothers cannot afford the time or costs of higher education. Additionally, the new "work fare" requirement, which requires women to perform 20 hours of "community service" in order to receive their welfare checks, is yet another nail in the coffin of low-income women's education.

The "work fare" requirement is one of the most punitive and reprehensible aspects of the so-called reforms. Since raising children is not recognized or valued as work in our society, women must be sent out to do "real" work in the public sector. But no other public sector work, not even minimum wage jobs, pays as poorly as welfare wages. The average monthly income for a family on welfare is 40 percent below the poverty line. In effect, welfare "reform" has created a new, legalized form of slave labor, expecting low-income mothers to work for practically nothing. Not only does this law punish and degrade low-income women for the "crime" of being poor and eliminate their right to stay at home and care for their children, it also makes it nearly impossible for them to pursue higher education. When the state legislature passed an amendment that would make it possible for recipients to use their school studies toward their "work fare" requirement, Governor Weld promptly vetoed it. The bitter irony is that while Weld expects women to pull themselves up by their proverbial bootstraps, he continually shoots down every option that might allow them to do so.

Since welfare "reform" was enacted, the drop-out rate of recipients at Holyoke Community College has risen to 75 percent. At UMass we don't even know what the drop-out rate is because there's no system in place to keep track of the of students by income level or socioeconomic status. The office of Institutional Research monitors enrollment levels by gender and "race" but not by income. It took low-income activists on this campus several months just to find out the number of students on TAFDC. UMass would rather low- income students remain an invisible population. That makes it easier for the administration to turn its head when low- income students are forced to drop out, one by one.

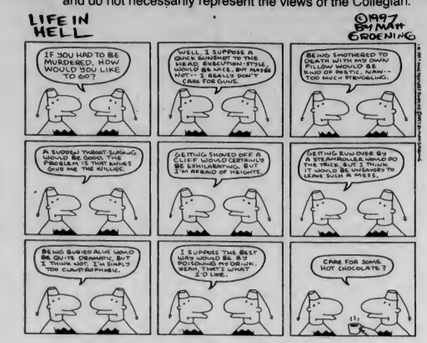
For those of us who care about the widening gap between the rich and the poor in this country and the rising tide of bigotry towards the most disadvantaged members of our society, we need to GET ACTIVE in the class struggles being waged on campus and in our communities. GEO, the graduate employee union, is in its 12th month of bargaining with the administration for its third contract. Two of the biggest issues on the table are access issues — affordable child care and affirmative action. In particular, GEO is fighting for a fully-subsidized child care center on campus (available to all low-income parents in the campus community, not just graduate student parents), substantially increased funding for the recruitment and retention of graduate students of color and the creation of a new fund for the recruitment and retention of poor and working class people, single mothers and immigrants. The latter fund is very significant because it represents a rare attempt to acknowledge and address the fact that class, race and gender oppression interact to create a variety of disenfranchised groups.

The administration claims that it is tough financial times and a tight budget which prevent it from addressing the dire need for affordable child care and other issues of concern for low-income people, yet we have all seen the money instantly materialize when it comes to something deemed important. Money for a multi-million dollar sports complex? We'll find a way. Money to institute a costly campus-wide student ID card? No problem. Money to pay out their own $100,000 salaries? You betcha. But a modest $300,000 pilot child care center to serve the needs of low-income students and workers? Sorry, we just don't have the funds."

The issue at hand is not about money, it's about priorities. If the administration saw access and affordability as top priorities, the money would be forthcoming. In fact, if the administration held creating an accessible and affordable university as a top priority, it wouldn't be continually up to students to raise the issues, come up with the proposals and fight for what should be a basic entitlement for all rather than an elite privilege for the few. Unfortunately, that is not the world we live in. Everything that the poor and oppressed peoples have won in this country has come from organized struggle. If everyone who cared about these issues took even a few hours a week out of their busy schedules to GET INVOLVED in fighting institutional oppression at UMass, we could turn this place around. Not everyone feels comfortable with the idea of political activism, but there are a variety of ways that people can contribute to creating change. Focus on helping in ways that you feel confident. If marching through the halls of Whitmore feels too intimidating, consider writing a letter. If letter writing is not your bag, consider an e-mail tree. If you're too technophobic, or don't have access to a computer, consider spending an afternoon tying up the phone lines. Think about postering your department or just raising the issues with friends and co-workers. Every little bit that we do makes a difference. It's our own apathy even more than the administration's obstinance that prevents us from having a socially and economically just University. If we could overcome that complacency, we'd have half the battle won. Please consider getting involved today.

Jennifer Fasulo is a member of the GEO Political Action Committee.

Letters to the Editor must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Mike Burke, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by e-mail to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu
Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style.



Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Below the surface

Do we have the faculty or conceptual tools to recognize racism or sexism when it is imposed upon us in a subtle manner? As a campus located in a supposedly liberal state, the University of Massachusetts at Amherst takes pride in its progressivism. It is "progressive" because it supports a number of cultural centers, a Jewish center, employs a number of kick-ass feminists, funds ethnic and women's studies as well as sexuality theory courses in order to address our most abhorrent social illness: oppression, whether based on race, gender, religious affiliation, sexuality or physical ability.

Oppression has been a social system encased in history, a lineage that extends further back than the existence of the United States as a nation. Narratives of Native American genocide provide the speech-act of such oppression.

Thousands of years later, we are now standing in the 20th century (soon to be 21st) and supposedly our school systems have taught us to recognize oppression and discrimination, using the data of historical writing. Supposedly we have come so far... and we have. Far enough to know that we have made strides to overcome the blatant forms of discrimination in this country (and beyond its borders). In other words, we no longer have those water fountains separated into "colored" and "white;" segregated schools are no longer sanctioned by racist laws; sexism is no longer sanctioned by domestic abuse laws. And how do we know this? Because affirmative action tells us so. That is the legislation that provides other speech act for our freedom from oppression. It sanctions us against discrimination on the basis of race, gender, religious affiliation, physical ability or creed. We have come so far now that we can now recognize oppression manifested in its worst form — the Rodney King incident, the police brutality exercised upon those Mexican immigrants, South African Apartheid, the brutal raping of Croatian women, the sex-trafficking of South and Southeast women.

And what if oppression is subtle? Do we have the mental and instinctive tools to recognize it then; or has this form of oppression become so embedded in our subconscious that we cannot or do not recognize it as an issue to be raised? Do we even dare label subtle discrimination as implicit oppression?

Camille Tuason Mata

Here are some scenarios. Read them and consider your method of analysis.

Case 1

A non-white woman (the sole non-white woman in the workplace) takes a break in between her fund-raising calls. She is entitled to this short break as is any other employee in the workplace. The white male manager puts his hand on her shoulder and queries her about her well-being, to which she responds that she is fine and proceeds to call. He then instructs her to simply go home if she does not want to work tonight. She tells him that she does want to work because financially she needs to work and continues to call. He remains behind her and then asks to see her in his office. "On what grounds?" she asks. He asserts his position as manager, but the non-white woman refuses to meet his command. He reaches over to hang up her phone, but she refuses to allow him to do this. She continues to call, then in the middle of a $50 pledge, her computer and telephone are shut off. Frustrated, she becomes angry and expresses this emotion verbally. She has not returned to work since, as a result of this incident.

Case 2

A non-white woman asks a fellow employee whether or not she can have some of his Brazilian nuts. Another employee (white and male) jests, "oh, you want some of his nuts."

She tells him pointedly, "That's sexual harassment," to which he replies, "I didn't go to the [sexual harassment] workshop." The workshop had been announced over a period of a week and a sign-up sheet was posted in the main traffic area of the workplace.

Case 3

A white man repeatedly asks a non-white woman on dates. He is not intimidating, but she does not welcome his offers, so she declines repeatedly. A sexual harassment workshop has been held to address instances such as this.

Case 4

Proposition 209 was passed in California by a committee composed of two white men, one white woman, and one non-white man. The proposition slammed down affirmative action as using "racial preference bias" to facilitate non- white applicants' entry into the university and professional school system. Affirmative Action is not all-inclusive of race and yet this proposition isolates and targets the racial aspect as being unconstitutional. The passing of this proposition was in conjunction with an increase of non-white students within the entire student body. There has also been an increase of women, but the gender element of affirmative action was not targeted.

Case 5

A white man joins a non-white woman at Bart's Ice Cream. "I'm surprised you're not at the rally," he says. He then describes the students at Goodell as terrorists because they blocked passage into an often-utilized building.

"Did you attend the rally at all, did you hear any of the speakers?" she asks him.

He replies, "I didn't need to go; I read the papers."

The rally has been described in the paper as a minority issue.

As University-educated individuals, we pride ourselves on being informed because we take theory and connect that theory to practice. We freely discuss these concepts in class, and feel confident in doing so because the University setting embraces the teaching of deconstructing paradigms, questioning unjust symbols thrown in our face via the media, films, books... then we leave.

We enter the workforce and are suddenly faced with scenarios similar to those outlined above. We are no longer within the haven of University progressivism. What action do we take to fight for our rights if we feel they have been breached? Can the legal system guarantee that all actors' awareness of race, gender, sex, religious affiliation, creed and physical ability has been raised into the consciousness to ensure justice? Can we comfortably assume this of employers, fellow co-workers, policy makers?

Upon reading the scenarios given above, what types of questions are put forth, what assumptions arise, what emotions are elicited? If the victim (a non-white woman) lodges a complaint, do we comfortably tell her, "you're reading too much into it?"

Camille Tuason Mata is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Let activism continue

To the Editor:

The takeover of Goodell was a clear demonstration by us, the students, that we demand that higher education be a democratic process, and that we reject a system in which the power elite dictates much of what goes on in our universities.

In our culture, the educational system is too much a form of indoctrination. Students who attain a certain "knowledge" and follow the "rules," are indoctrinated into the power structure, and are thus given the prominent, ruling positions in society. The power elite (i.e. the men in Boston), not only decide what we will learn — for example "marketable" knowledge such as science and technology which is deemed more important that social science— but they also decide who is allowed to learn. And Governor Weld has made it increasingly evident that he feels higher education should only be accessible to those of us who are from wealthy backgrounds.

What happened last week was so positive in the sense that we were setting an example of what it is to be students. As students, we are not passive receptacles who drag ourselves from class to class to be filled with information. Rather, we are active persuers of knowledge, imagination and creativity. We expressed, with great solidarity, that we are the ones who decide what we will learn (i.e. the demands for new academic departments), and that we decide who will be able to learn. The takeover was a very strong statement that everyone, including poor, working and minority students, should have access to higher education.

It was excellent to see that so many of us felt deeply for these issues. Please, let's use this as a springboard for more action. We must continue to have our message heard.

Dan Miller
Belchertown

Disgusted with Chancellor Scott

To the Editor:

I would like to publicly express my disgust at the conspicuous absence of Chancellor David Scott last week. While 200 students occupied the Controller's Office in Goodell, Chancellor Scott lied on a beach in Mexico.

Shame on you, Chancellor Scott.

The Chancellor's absence this past week is symbolic of the entire problem. David Scott does not have the basic respect for those who pay his salary even to listen when they raise their voices. I am afraid, Chancellor Scott, that if you refuse to listen to the students, the students will refuse to pay those big bucks.

For six days UMass students rallied peacefully, with dignity and respect, for their rights, and for six days the Chancellor ignored them. Why, Chancellor Scott, do you refuse us the dignity and respect we deserve? This university belongs to us, not to you, not to white men with powerful titles— but to the students. When we speak, we DEMAND that you listen. Shame on you, shame on your apathy. You disgust me.

On another note, I would like to express a deep gratitude to every single person who stood up last week and fought for student rights. To the heroic students who spent six long days inside Goodell, the people of Tent City who gave support to those inside, the thousands of students who came out peacefully to raise their voices, the students of the Outreach Committee who organized and responded to the needs of the students inside, the individuals and local businesses who contributed food and supplies, the Academic Support Committee and Five College community and departments and countless others who helped achieve this victory — you are beautiful and amazing.

We had a revolution for justice... how is your tan, Chancellor Scott?

Kristy
Am.

Arts & Living

Tuesday, March 11, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

With Private Parts, Stern masters yet another medium

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

PRIVATE PARTS
Directed by Betty Thomas
with Howard Stern, Robin Quivers, Mary McCormack
Playing at Hampshire Six Theater

Love him or hate him, Howard Stern is undeniably the king of all media. He has climbed to all new heights of mass exposure in order to infiltrate the American public with his crude, tasteless, trashy blend of pornographic humor... and isn't it great?

Private Parts, Stern's film biography based on his best— selling book, is a P.C. crusaders dream of loathing. The film appears on the surface as nothing more than excessive nudity and cynicism, yet somewhere, there exists a heart. Believe it or not, Private Parts has periods of endearment. Stern himself has admitted to making the film for his wife, Alison. The intensity of his compassion and admiration for her will shock you more than when he gives a listener the first radio-induced orgasm in broadcasting history.

Please do not let the love interest aspects of the story give you the wrong idea. Private Parts offers no apologies for the behavior that made Stern a god of radio. In fact, the film itself is an exploitation of all Stern's exploits, from his earlier work as a raunchy puppeteer at an nursing home up through the birth of his first child in 1985. Together with comedy producer extraordinaire Ivan Reitman (Stripes, Ghostbusters), director Betty Thomas (The Brady Bunch Movie) does nothing more than create an honest setting for Stern to describe the trials and tribulations of his bizarre life.

Private Parts properly chronicles the successes and failures of both Stern's private and professional career. However, the opening scene will, without a doubt, leave the audience a bit bewildered about the story's direction. The film begins with an establishing shot of John Stamos (Uncle Jesse of Full House fame) presenting an award to Fartman, a.k.a. Howard Stern. After descending from the ceiling to the stage, a very charming Fartman lets a big one rip, nearly knocking Uncle Jesse to the floor. Didn't Paramount already release this movie in the form of a cartoon called Beavis and Butthead do America? Granted, that film was great, but once a year is enough. Yet, everything seems to change when we hear the thoughts of Stern's discontent explaining with the most sincere embarrassment: "how did I get into this situation." At this point, not only is the scene saved, but a sense of faith is restored in the film's potential as a worthy biography.

The early part of Stern's youth is portrayed in flashbacks that appear all too similar to Woody Allen's Annie Hall. A young Howie sits in the passenger seat while his father continuously calls him a moron during the drive to work. Yet Stern's father, a radio engineer, is his son's inspiration to become a disc jockey. Eventually, Howard enrolls himself at Boston University where the focus is on his inability to meet girls. Somehow he manages to graduate with a communications degree, get married and work his way up from bad time slots on dingy stations to prime time NBC.

The film's highlights occur when Stern is in his most recognizable situations, surrounded by his real-life co-hosts with a microphone slightly banging into his gigantic nose. Here, Stern recreates his most controversial moments with the help of Robin Quivers, Fred Norris and Jackie "The Joke Man" Martling. The fact that none of them are actors is primarily the reason Private Parts works so well, members of Stern's team know each other and their comfortability is clearly expressed. During these scenes, we see a naked woman give Howard a back message, a friendly game of fill-in-the-blank with the best obscenity and driving his swiveling production manager crazy with an ongoing battle of the wits.

Private Parts is careful not to take itself too seriously in any given direction. Stern's most conservative rivals will hate themselves when they realize what a sensitive guy Howard really is. Although one may get a bit tired of the constant references to the unusually small size of Howard's penis, it is, however, impossible to hate this guy. After all, he is nothing but honest. Stern's brilliance is bringing out the hypocrisy that lies within each of us— including himself. Our society is not nearly as politically correct as we like to believe we are, and that is why Stern has had the highest rated radio show for years. He says the things that so many of us think about with so much confidence that we find him intimidating. Although the film is surely not ground-breaking cinema, it is one of the most inspiring comedies to be recently released. Stern is destined for the role of pop culture icon and this weekend's box office revenues will prove it. B

COURTESY C. C. SAAT

Howard Stern has risen the ranks to movie star status. His new film, based on his best-selling biography was number 1 this past weekend at the box office.

What's in Howard's future?

Jonathan M. Place

Will Howard Stern soften up? Will he take the Rosie O'Donnell Express Train to Niceville? These were the questions that crossed my mind when Rosie's show got such great reviews for being a genuinely nice talk show. Since people were getting sick of Letterman and Leno, could Stern fall to the same fate?

Don't even think about it. Howard isn't going anywhere, and certainly his image isn't changing. The only thing that has been altered is the perception of Stern since his recent box office success, Private Parts.

Stern has an audience which includes people who hate him, people who love him and people who just want to be entertained on their way to work. (Who else are they going to listen to? Definitely not Imus!)

I listened to his show on Monday, not only to hear how well his movie did, but to see how he acted about it. To my surprise, Stern was behaving himself, most likely because Joan Lunden was there from ABC's Good Morning America, doing a live broadcast about Stern's new film. But sooner or later, I knew Howard would not fail me — and he didn't. To make this short, it seems Lunden and Stern share the same workout gym, and pretty soon the conversation turned into how great of a figure Lunden has and her tight leotards.

Why Stern's show will never change is because he just spits out what is on his mind. He doesn't come into the radio booth with a script or a schedule. Certainly, if he knows a celebrity or an "I wanna get naked" lesbian is coming on the show at 10:00, he and the rest of his gang are prepared for that, but once they're on, it's no holds barred.

Howard even said it on Monday's show — "My real life is an act. I hate my real life, I love radio." Simply stated: on the radio he says whatever comes to mind, and not what people want him to say.

Outside of the station, Stern is a regular family guy, or at least as regular as Howard Stern can get. To make a comparison, he's like Deion Sanders — on the field, he's Prime Time Neon Deion, but off the field he dedicates his life to his family. Why is that so bad?

Stern truly believes that in the real world, all people behave the way others want them to. All he does on the radio is behave the way he wants to. Why do you think it took him six different stations in five different cities across the country for him to get what he wanted? Because he crossed the line and ventured into territory where no one even thought of treading.

Yes, it is safe to say, some of the things he does on the radio could constitute acting. But think about it— once you've hit upon something that is tangible and works, why deviate from your present course?

Being a morning disc jockey myself, I'm always looking for that certain something that can separate me from the rest of the pack. Stern found it, and ever since, the rest of the disc jockeys in this country are

Turn to STERN, page 6

A Branch Beyond
Silver Jewelry Specialists
Great Selection Low Prices
236 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 253-4997 Mon-Sat 11-6

TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER (413) 545-3217
Promo Night
Tomorrow March 12
Pub Style Menu
Weekly Drink Specials
Draft, MircroBrews, and Full Bar
HARPOON BREWERY
Monday - Friday 4-12:30
Saturday 3-12:30

Bucci
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Classes Start
Wed, March 12th
7:00pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
Shop Around & Compare
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!!

SUMMER CAMP COUNSELORS!!
OVER 100 POSITIONS OPEN IN BASEBALL, BASKETBALL, GOLF, GYMNASTICS, HOCKEY, LACROSSE, SAILING, SOCCER, SWIMMING, TENNIS, WATER SKIING
AMERICA'S PREMIER CAMPS
WINADU FOR BOYS
DANBEE FOR GIRLS
IN WESTERN MASS
SALARY/ROOM/BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!!
COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE
THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD
802 CAMPUS CENTER
10 AM - 4 PM
(WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL
800-494-6238

FAMOUS FOR 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
I always get Fish n' Chips at Pete's
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR 'ROUND
http://www.javanet/~mrburger/

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
TOKYO Roundtrip $799
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-Immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
212 986-8420
800-272-9676

The Textbook Annex reminds you to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, SOON!
Before Spring Break!
We are beginning to return unsold text books to the publisher.

Knowledge Grows Here!
Summer Session at Stony Brook
Terms start June 2 and July 14
260 courses in 40 subjects
Day and evening classes
Low NYS tuition
Live on campus or commute
Please send me the 1997 Summer Session or check out our web page at Http://www.sunysb.edu/summer/
Name
Street/Box No.
City State Zip
Telephone Area of interest
School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation
STONY BROOK STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK
Mail coupon or call 24 hours 1-800-559-7213.
E-mail: summerschool@ccmail.sunysb.edu
Or write: Summer Session Office, Dept. CN, University at Stony Brook, Stony Brook, NY 11794-3370

A.F. reunited for a set at Pearl Street

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

AGNOSTIC FRONT
Pearl Street
Sunday, March 10

Agnostic Front plays Pearl Street on their reunion tour and maybe 300 kids show up—pathetic! Okay so Agnostic Front isn't on Victory Records and they don't play three-mile-an- hour, chugga-chugga death metal, but that's still no excuse for all you pathetic souls not to show up. Agnostic Front is one of the bands that started this whole hardcore thing and it's disgusting and disrespectful that everyone into hardcore was not at the show last night.

Anyway, Agnostic Front ripped. Despite the five-year lay- off it was just like old times with Vinny Stigma (the godfather of hardcore for all you neophytes) laying down the chords; Rob Kabula prowling the stage; and, of course, Roger Miret going off like a rabid dog. As Agnostic Front pounded away with song after song, the crowd was whipped into a frenzy that culminated with the classic "Crucified."

Agnostic Front promised only to play songs off the first two albums and they kept their word. Classic songs like "Friend or Foe," "Victim In Pain" and "Blind Justice" had the crowd moving. While opening bands had to urge the crowd to dance, there was no need for that with Agnostic Front on the stage because the music solely provided the motivation.

If you missed the show because you were afraid that Agnostic Front could not match up to their past performances, you better wise up. Agnostic Front is back for real. How many bands can turn the entire upstairs at Pearl Street into one giant dance floor? You could hear every word sung by Miret reiterated by the crowd, even the kids not in front were singing along. It got to the point were Roger could have put down the microphone and simply let the crowd take over.

Agnostic Front also demonstrated their skills with some new songs. While it was hard to really judge the new songs, it can be said that they rip like old times, eschewing the more metalish approach bands are taking today in return for the old-school approach that made them famous.

The two highlights of the show were "Society's Sucker" and, of course, "Crucified." "Society's Sucker" was special because Roger's little brother Freddy Cricieon, lead singer of Madball, came out and sang along. The brotherly love shown on stage is one of the true representations of what hardcore is all about. Right before AF played "Crucified," Roger announced that it was being filmed for a documentary. Well, Roger proclaimed that the stage belonged to the crowd too and everyone took advantage of that. About half the people there stormed the stage, and as Roger and the chorus sang along, Vinny Stigma crowd surfed over everyone. In other words, it was hardcore Nirvana.

Besides Agnostic Front's amazing performance, the other highlight was provided by the kids who attended the show. A mix of skins, punks, rudeboys, old school and new school, as well as straight edge kids were all in attendance. Despite some stupidity that took place at the end of 25 ta' Life's set, everyone got along and there was actual unity in the pit. Everyone was dancing with respect for the people around them and if someone hit the deck people actually swarmed to pick them up. It was truly special to see a hardcore band bring together kids from all aspects of the scene together for one special night.

Agnostic Front put on one of the best hardcore shows of recent years. Sunday's show was about fun, kids coming together and forgetting their differences and problems. The show was primarily dancing and singing along to one of the all time best bands. Get a clue— put down the heavy metal records and go see a band like Agnostic Front who plays truly classic hardcore.

■ Stern

continued from page 5

trying to follow suit. I pity those followers, because if all they want to be is like Stern, they become less original and the true meaning of being a creative personality is lost.

Talk radio is a genre all in itself. You don't need good looks, you don't need a fancy car or a great looking wife. All you need is an idea and a dream. To put in Keyser Soze's words, "You just need the will, to do what the other guy wouldn't."

Howard has that dream and the will, and it's working better than he could have ever imagined.

There's nothing fake about having the No. 1 syndicated radio show in the country, publishing the No. 1 book (twice) and now having the current No. 1 movie. You may not like him, but you can't deny that he's original, innovative and will go down as the greatest radio personality ever to sail his voice across the waves.

Ba–Ba–Booey.

Jonathan M. Place is a Collegian columnist.

Kodo sets an inspiring mood

By Thang Vo
Collegian Staff

KODO
Fine Arts Center
Friday, March 7

On Friday night, the Concert Hall in the Fine Arts Center was filled with the rhythmic sounds of taiko, traditional Japanese drumming. Like a dream, the synchronized beat and fluid motion of the performer, Kodo, transported the audience to another place and time.

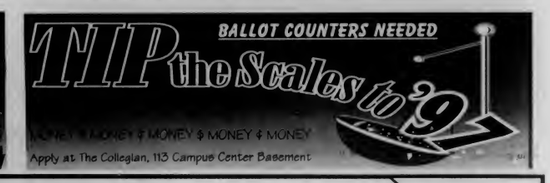
The group Kodo, from the Sado Island in the sea of Japan, stopped at the FAC on their continuous journey of the "One Earth Tour."

The word Kodo conveys two meanings. First, the word means heartbeat, the primal source of all rhythm. Secondly, the word can mean "children of the drum," a reflection of Kodo's passion to play with the simplicity and innocence of a child. Kodo's goal is not only to preserve Japanese performing arts, but also to create and learn new directions of spirited art form.

The songs varied in duration, with some lasting from six minutes to 15 minutes. Several songs started off with mild percussion sounds with a gradual transition to softer sounds, like that of a lullaby then gradually increasing to an explosive, eye-opening sounds of six different drummers. The instruments were not just restricted to drums. The use of cymbals, flutes and cow bells complimented the rhythmic beat perfectly.

All of Kodo's performances included the harmonious workings of many different drummers and the communication among the different performers created a harmonious state. This is representative of their belief that in order for the diverse people on this Earth to live harmoniously together, there must be a form of communication.

The final piece started out with a play between the cymbal and a large drum in a performance called O–Daiko. The performance then shifted to the Yatai–Bayashi when the same drummer from the O–Daiko performance joined two other drummers, a flutist and a cymbal performer in a display of precision and concentration for a finale.



With their creative style and an open mind to different sounds from around the world, Kodo's strong and lively beat will carry them throughout the big community that we call Earth.

COURTESY KODO VILLAGE

The Japanese percussion band, Kodo, played Friday at the Fine Arts Center.

UMass Best!

The Collegian Poll Rules:
1. Ballots must be dropped of at The Collegian office in the basement of the Campus Center or mailed to 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003.
2. No Xeroxed ballots.
3. One ballot per person
4. Ballots must be filled out with reasonable completeness. Ballots less than half of the blanks will be disqualified.
5. Independent Ballot Referees are hired.
6. Decisions of Ballot Referees are final.
7. All Ballots due by Thursday, March 13, 1997.

WIN PRIZES!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian's UMass' Best is intended to be a good natured contest among the local community. It is a fun poll based solely on UMass student opinions. This is not a harsh competition with results that have deep and lasting significance. Please do not take it as such, but rather as a basic published poll.

Ballot

Name: _____
Address: _____
Phone #: _____
Student ID#: _____

I. UMass Grub
1. Best Pizza Place _____
2. Best Sub Shop _____
3. Best Place to Go on a Date _____
4. Best Place to Eat if Your Parents are Paying _____
5. Best Ice Cream Shop _____
6. Best Chinese Restaurant _____
7. Best Italian Food _____
8. Best Breakfast (Hangover Cure) _____
9. Best Bagel Shop _____
10. Best Vegetarian Place _____

II. UMass Weekend
1. Best Liquor Store _____
2. Best Coffee Shop _____
3. Best Place to Start the Night Out _____
4. Best Place to Finish the Night Out _____
5. Best Shot _____
6. Best Beer _____
7. Best Drinking Game _____
8. Best Bartender (What Bar?) _____

III. Shops & Services
1. Best Grocery Store _____
2. Best Florist _____
3. Best Clothing Store _____
4. Best Gas Station _____
5. Best Bike Shop _____
6. Best Bookstore _____
7. Best Hair Salon _____
8. Best Place to Work Out _____
9. Best Tan Salon _____
10. Best Place to Buy Condoms _____

IV. Arts & Entertainment
1. Best Place to Hear Live Music _____
2. Best Local Band _____
3. Best Radio Station _____
4. Best Music Store _____
5. Best Place to Play Pool _____
6. Best Cheap Date _____
7. Best Video Store _____
8. Best Movie _____
9. Best TV Show _____

V. Unique UMass' Best
1. Best Thing About UMass _____
2. Best Apartment Complex _____
3. Best Class _____
4. Best Reason to Miss Class _____
5. Best Reason to Hand in a Paper Late _____
6. Best Professor _____
7. Best Place to Read The Collegian _____
8. Best Excuse for Not Graduating in 4 Years _____
9. Best Place to Study _____

FILL OUT A BALLOT FOR A CHANCE TO WIN A PRIZE!

Army joining Conference USA

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — After more than a century as an independent, Army broke with tradition yesterday and joined Conference USA.

Army will begin conference play in 1998, giving the league eight teams. Cincinnati, Houston, Louisville, Memphis, Southern Mississippi and Tulane are the current members, with East Carolina to begin play this fall.

"This is an exciting day," Army coach Bob Sutton said. "From a football aspect, we recognize that it will be a great challenge for us. We've played East Carolina before, we've played Louisville before, so we know the competition that we will be involved in. The challenge for us is to be able to do that week after week." There is one caveat: Army can withdraw from the conference in case of a national emergency.

The change, effective immediately, comes after more than a year of discussions. But the final decision came easily.

"We chatted on Friday, and it took about 30 seconds to get the vote," said Dr. Joseph Steger, chairman of the board of directors for Conference USA. "You must understand that to get presidents to unanimously do anything is a miracle. All of the colleges and universities are looking forward to this. I think it's natural." The move leaves Navy as the only service academy without a conference affiliation — Air Force is in the Western Athletic Conference. And it comes after one of Army's most memorable seasons. The Black Knights were 10-2 last year, losing only to Syracuse during the regular season and Auburn in the Independence Bowl.

It was the first postseason appearance for the Black Knights since they suffered a 29-28 loss to Alabama in the 1988 Sun Bowl. The Army brass said it hoped that joining Conference USA would boost the university's exposure and its chances of playing in the postseason more often. The conference champion gets an automatic berth in the Liberty Bowl, and Conference USA commissioner Michael Slive said discussions were underway for the conference to participate in other bowls.

Lt. Gen. Daniel Christman, superintendent of the academy, said he realized the move is significant for West Point and many of its alumni. But he said that joining Conference USA would create enormous opportunity.

"It will allow us to take the Army team to the heartland of America's Army," Christman said. "We will play all of our games away from Michie Stadium within a half-day's drive of many of the major installations of this great Army. Soldiers will have the chance to cheer, chant and maybe even chest-pump for the great old Army team."

Christman said the university sought feedback from its graduates and got plenty of it, most in favor of the move.

Ohio State dumps hoop coaches

By Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio State made sweeping changes in its men's and women's basketball programs yesterday, firing coaches Randy Ayers and Nancy Darsch.

Ayers and Darsch, both having enjoyed great success with their teams in the early 1990s, had two years left on their contracts. The men's team has gone 10-17 the last two seasons, including 5-13 in the Big Ten this past season. The women finished 12-16 and were 5-13 in conference play.

"These are terribly difficult decisions, but ones that I felt had to be made in the best interest of the university," athletic director Andy Geiger said after dismissing both coaches in separate meetings.

"I have the utmost respect and admiration for both coach Ayers and coach Darsch and their years of loyal service to Ohio State. However, it is necessary at times to make a change and I think we have reached that point with both programs."

Adding to the pressure on both coaches was the construction of a new $90 million arena set to open in the fall of 1998. Sales of seat licenses have lagged as both teams have suffered.

Ayers met with his team yesterday afternoon following his dismissal. It was not yet clear if Darsch spoke with her players. Ayers was 124-108 in eight years as coach. The firing came a day after the Buckeyes finished their season with an 86-81 loss in overtime to Michigan on Sunday.

Darsch is the winningest women's basketball coach at Ohio State, going 234-125 in 12 seasons. Seven times she took the Buckeyes to the NCAA tournament.

Under Ayers, the Buckeyes won Big Ten titles in 1990-91 and 1991-92 and both times were seeded No. 1 in the NCAA tournament. Ayers was The Associated Press national coach of the year in 1991. Darsch guided the Buckeyes to the national championship game in 1993, an 84-82 loss to Texas Tech that concluded a 28-4 season. But for both programs there have been few highpoints since. The men's team has had four straight losing seasons, something that had never happened in the 98 years the school has had a college team.

Over those same four years, the women's team never finished higher than sixth place in the 11-team Big Ten.

In 1992, Ohio State's men made it to the Southeast Regional final, losing to Michigan. Since then, almost all the news coming from the program has been bad.

The next year, the Buckeyes — having lost star guard Jim Jackson to the NBA a year early — went 15-13 and were beaten at home in the first round of the National Invitation Tournament.

In January of 1993, the NCAA began investigating the recruitment of Cincinnati player Damon Flint. Ohio State admitted to 17 violations. Flint ended up at Cincinnati, whose rise in national stature mirrored Ohio State's fall.

During the four losing seasons, there were continued problems off the court. Three players were charged with driving under the influence in the span of five weeks in 1994. Various assaults, misdemeanors and complaints led to the dismissal of prized recruits Greg Simpson, Gerald Eaker, Charles Killer" Macon, Jami Bosley and Scott Gradney. Two others, Derek Anderson and Nate Wilbourne, transferred to escape the commotion.

Ohio State went 5-31 in Big Ten play in 1994-96, losing 23 times by at least nine points and had back-to-back 10th-place finishes. At the same time, Darsch was having her problems.

She signed one of Ohio's most acclaimed high school players in Katie Smith. Smith helped the Buckeyes make it to the NCAA championship game as a freshman, but three disappointing years followed.

Despite luring Smith, Darsch was frequently criticized for not getting top players in Ohio. Among those who left the state were Ms. Basketball award winners Vonda Ward and Semeka Randall (both going to Tennessee) and Beth Ostendorf and Na'Sheema Hillmon (both to Vanderbilt).

In consecutive games during the 1996-97 season, Darsch's team was beaten at home by Purdue 76-63 and Penn State 83-66. Purdue's Jannon Roland and Penn State's Helen Darling, both Ohioans, had career highs in those games.

Trying 96–97' for Huggins and Bearcats

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — No one has more to prove in the NCAA tournament than the team that started the season at No. 1 and fell hard, never to make it back.

The Cincinnati Bearcats have failed to live up to their magazine covers, their rankings and their own hype — forward Ruben Patterson's promise of a national title.

As the tournament begins, the Bearcats (25-7) are in danger of going down as the biggest underachievers in coach Bob Huggins' eight seasons.

"We realize that now it's do-or-die," All-America power forward Danny Fortson said. "We talked a lot at the beginning of the year. Now it's time to put up."

Much of what they've put up so far has been indicative of a good team by national standards, a subpar one by Cincinnati standards: four double-digit losses, the most since Huggins' initial Cincinnati team in 1989-90.

—A 97-point game by South Carolina, the most points allowed by a Huggins team.

—Seven players suspended or benched. Point guard Charles Williams is suspended heading into the tournament while the university tries to resolve questions about his eligibility.

—A failure to win their conference tournament for the first time in six years.

—A 1-3 record against ranked teams and a home-court loss to crosstown rival Xavier, which was unranked at the time.

And it's not getting any better. Instead of peaking in March, as Huggins' teams usually do, the Bearcats are heading into the NCAA tournament with two losses in their last three games and more questions than ever.

Williams is out indefinitely while his junior college record is investigated. Damon Flint, who fills in for Williams at point guard, has a nasty eye bruise from practice. It's unclear what the backcourt will look like for a first-round game against Butler on Thursday.

"I'm not sure who we have," Huggins said. "I just left Damon and he had to get drops put in his eye and wear sunglasses just to watch the (tournament) draw. I think he can play, but...

"It's not ideal. I'd rather go in knowing what's going on." The guards are not even the biggest concern. There's more anxiety about this team's attention span.

"It's like over a period of time our concentration goes," guard Melvin Levett said. "One day we're on the same page, the next day it's bad. If we're on the same page, I don't think there's a team in the country that can beat us."

They haven't been on the same page very often — with each other or with Huggins. The dour head coach has been even more irascible this season, with most of his anger directed at the defense. Cincinnati rose to national prominence with its unrelenting, pressing style. Huggins has backed off such play because the players can't seem to grasp it.

Huggins knows only two ways to deal with imperfection: screaming and benching. He's done plenty of both and not gotten results. "It's just defense, really," said Patterson, who has been benched repeatedly for failing to play it. "There's no excuses for that. Coach yells at us and we all do it (play poorly). If we don't do it, we win."

■ NCAA

continued from page 10

It must be hard to recruit in the Big Sky Conference when all the best athletes have committed to the rodeo by the time they're 14.

Other than that, the brackets should be a breeze for the rest of the top teams. Kansas doesn't have to play anybody until the Elite Eight, where they'll probably see a fired-up Duke team. If they can avoid another choke-job (I still can't believe they lost to Syracuse), they'll cruise to Indianapolis. North Carolina will face nobody better than Villanova (I know, I know, that can't be too hard to find, right?) in the Sweet Sixteen, and Kentucky will probably see St. Joseph's in the third round.

My Final Four is a curious one. I have New Mexico escaping the East, because the Tar Heels are too hot, and can only cool down come tournament time. Kansas will go through the Southeast like Axl Rose goes through a bottle of Jack Daniels, their only real challenge coming from a Duke team that relies way too much on its perimeter game. The Midwest will see Cincinnati advance once the gaping hole UCLA and Minnesota leave, and the West will send Wake Forest out.

Why Wake Forest? I don't see Tim Duncan letting the Deacons lose, and Tony Rutland and Ricky Peral have to start hitting shots sometime.

The chances of this happening? Not very good. But I've resigned myself to an empty wallet a long time ago, and five bucks lost can't hurt someone who doesn't have five bucks to start with.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian Columnist.

"Diversity and Campus Media"

A panel forum designed to inform a diverse campus about opportunities and the inner workings at three University resources at work for the entire UMass community.

Panel Members

Massachusetts Daily Collegian Managing Editor
Chris Conner

Union Video Center Station Manager
William Sanchez

WMUA ALANA Affairs Director
David Ducille

A question and answer session will follow the panel presentations

Herter Auditorium
Wednesday, March 12
7-9 p.m.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APT. FOR RENT

Excellent 4 bedroom/2 bath apt. on bus line. Beginning 8/1/97. Call 253-6301 4 info.

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 318i BMW 100K miles, perfect exterior and interior. $2300 or B/O. 546-3830

1988 Ford Escort 5-speed, A/C, 119K runs well. $1800 or B/O. 533-8413

1977 Ford T-Bird good running condition, many extras. $450 Call 538-7936

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Jobs- Martha's Vineyard Island Food Products is now excepting applications for warehouse/dalivery positions Housing available for exceptional candidatas. Interviews will be held in Amherst on Wednasday, March 19. For mora info or application, Contact: Brian C. Smith, IFP, Box 4068 Vinyard Havan, MA 02568 (508)693-2030

Drivers Wanted Collage students, anyona to sall Good Humor Ice-craam from one of our vending trucks. Work outdoors this summer. Be your own boss. RTS availabla in your area. Earn $750 $950/weekly. Mala or Famala. Apply now. Call Mon.-Sat. 9am.-3pm. only. (203)366-2641

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Jobs for the Environment $2500-$4000/Summer Campaign for clean air and water

Protect endangered species Make A Difference Offices in 33 states Campaign To Save The Environment 1-800-75-EARTH

Cruise Lines Hiring Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel (Europa, Caribbaan, etc.) No experience necessary. (919)918-1767 ext. C180. (Member, Better Business Bureau CARE Program)

Alaska Employment Earn up to $3000-$6000+/month in fisheries, parks, rasorts, airfara, food/lodging! Gat all tha options. Call (919)918-1767 ext. A180

Guys- Be a counselor at our Capa Cod Summer Camp. We especially nead 1-2 guys to teach tennis. No need to be a pro, just basic skills. We also need drama, natura, and all sports Camp Wingate Kirkland is a coed overnight in Varmouth. Be supported in our craative and fun community. Call John (508)356-5816 to set up an interviaw or saa us at Camp Day, Tues. March 11 in tha Student Union.

Drivers Wanted Apply at Pinnochio's batwaan 2:00pm. and 5:00pm. No phona calls.

EMPLOYMENT

Silver Jewelry- Buy Wholesale Direct From Manufacturer- Sell To Students $99 Investment Brings You $400 Call (800)256-3491

Premiere Brother-Sistar Camps in Massachusetts On Campus Interviews Counselor positions for talented and energetic students in all Team Sports, aspecially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccar, Volleyball; 30 Tennis Openings; Also Golf, Archery, Riflery, Ropes and Rock Climbing, Weights/Fitness and Cycling; other openings include Performing Arts, Fine Arts, Figura Skating, Newspapar, Photography, Yearbook, Radio Station, Rocketry, Swimming, Skiing, Sailing, Wind surfing, and Canoeing/Kayaking. Top salaries, room, board, and travel. June 22nd-August 20th. Call for Information. MAH-KEE-NAC(Boys) 1-800-753-9118 DANBEE(Girls) 1-800-392-3752 Recruiters will be On Campus Tuesday, March 11th, 10am. to 4pm. at UMass Camp Day.

Visit The Animal Friendly Summer Camp booth on Camp Day, March 11th. Spend your summer on Capa Cod taaching children about proper pat care and tha anvironmant. Many counselor positions availabla. Also naad a cook!! Room and Board provided (617)426-9170

EMPLOYMENT

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Work in America's National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Our matenals uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3624 ext. N50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

Belchertown Recreation Dept. Seeking swim coaches (May-July) Experience preferad. M-F, EOE, ADA Call Beth, Day: (413)323-0419 Night: (413)967-4651

National Parks Hiring Plus Forest, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting Companies. Up to $12/hour. Nationwide Openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext R180

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St. - D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meat fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. CS0017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Take over lease NOW in Brandywine. Call Liz 549-9850

FOR RENT

College Kids Welcome to Capa Cod 1-5 bedroom homes for the saasgn. Raasonable rates. Honey Sperco (508)398-5367, (508)294-2857

Capa Cod group & summer rantals. Waterfront housas, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

Tickets on sale today! Join Susan Sarandon, Mandy Patinkin, and othars to "Calabrate the Childran of Resistance" Saturday, April 26th at John M. Greene Hall at Smith College. Special $8 student tickets availabla at Tix Unlimited at the Student Union.

Leather Jacket Black Classic Biker Style Jacket. Mens Size XL. "Wilson's" Leather. Thinsulate. Call 546-8733

Light Speed Natchez titanium 50cm. roadbika. Almost-naw Ridden outdoors once. Paid $1700. Asking $1350 or B/O. Call 253-8452

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Belated Birthday Harry! We love you! -Love Jax, Cookie and Lainey

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT 30 hours, $395 American Academy 1-800-868-Prep (please leave your name and number)

LOST

REWARD
Lost Gold Ringe
Call Lisa 546-2077

Black Bubble Jacket at Pruddy's Saturday 3/1. Please return. No questions asked. Keys and ID in pocket. Reward. 549-0909

MUSICIANS

Base Player Wanted for Rock Band- Potential to play out soon. Call Jason for details. 549-8743

MISCELLANEOUS

Pledged and didn't like it? Start your own Fraternity! Vata Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interesting in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to maka friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, e-mail 2BTau1@National.org -Or call Bratt Hrbeck at (317)334-1898

SEEKING FINANCIAL AID? Get the system to help find FREE MONEY FOR COLLEGE! Detailed profiles on 200,000+ individual rewards from private and public sectors. Call Student Financial Services (800)472-9575 ext. FS0017 (We are a research and publishing company)

Gorillagrams Birthdays, Anniversaries, Roses, Balloons, etc. Sand the Crazy Gorilla. We'll go anywhere, anytime. Student Rates: Call 256-0287

PERSONALS

DEBORAH,

I am an older sister with brown hair and eyes. Some of this is true, but some might be a lie

Phi LOVE,
Your Big Sis
I.M.L.

Happy Anniversary Douglas!

I can't wait to move in with you! I love You.

Love
Burpee

ROOMMATE WANTED

Two 21 year old males looking for 2 females to live off-campus with for the upcoming school year. Call Josh or Scott F. at 549-7128

SERVICES

Rental Probleme Questions about your lease/security deposit daductions? Questions about subletting/assigning lease? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Resumes: Written, Proofad, Printed. Polished, Affordable Packages. 548-7042

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amharst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

5 min. walk from campus. Fall Option. $280/month. Chris @ 549-8881

TRAVEL

Party Weekend in Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Party in Vermont For Spring Break Only $139. Over 15 collages attending. Free learn to Ski/Snowboard. Add $100 for 5-Day Lift Ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T Europe $169 O/W. Fly The World Dirt Cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week (413)786-7133-Partial kitchen

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Dorm Size Refrigerator Call 545-4538

Tutor for CmpSci 401 (501) Please call Greg 549-8969

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not accepted. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification (a misrepresentation is subject to criminal prosecution).
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors, resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES	HAPPY BIRTHDAY	ROOM WANTED
ANNOUNCEMENTS	HOUSES FOR RENT	ROOMMATE WANTED
APARTMENT FOR RENT	INSTRUCTION	SERVICES
AUTO FOR SALE	LOST	SUMMER SUBLET
COMMUNITY EVENTS	MUSICIANS	TO SUBLET
EMPLOYMENT	MISCELLANEOUS	TRAVEL
ENTERTAINMENT	MOTORCYCLES	TRANSPORTATION
FOR SALE	PERSONALS	WANTED TO RENT
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)	ROOM FOR RENT	WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, MARCH 11

Employment — The Student Employment Office is sponsoring its Annual Camp Day from 10 a.m.– 4 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Approximately 60 camps from the New England Area as well as the Mid-Atlantic states will be recruiting students for summer employment. Camps will be offering positions in all areas such as: counselors, lifeguards, arts & crafts, dance, theater, land and water sports, health and many others.

Film, discussion — Voices Heard; Sisters Unseen, a video presentation and discussion about domestic violence, including violence and silencing of lesbians, immigrant women, HIVpositive women and prostitutes. The event will take place from 5:30–7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room TBA. The event is free and sponsored by the Stonewall Center.

Lecture — "Sometimes Truth is Stranger than Fiction: The Missing Yemenite Babies Affair" lecture/discussion, led by Shoshana Madmoni, will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Hillel House Recreation Room.

Meeting — The Distinguished Visitor's Program will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 178. All are welcome and encouraged to attend. Call 545-0046 for more information.

Workshop — A meditation session will be held by the Ananda Marga Club at the Main Lounge of Butterfield Residence Hall at 8 p.m. This session will introduce attendees to basic meditation and Yoga techniques. There is no fee or registration. All are welcome. Please contact 253– 9553 for further information.

Workshop — The Women's Institute for African Rural Development presents a seminar workshop on "Eritrean Women and Development" at 7 p.m. in the 6th floor lounge of Thompson Tower.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12

Dance — An Israeli dance teaching session will be held from 8:30–9:15 p.m., and a review and request from 9:15– 10:00 p.m. in the Chadbourne Residence Hall basement. No experience required. Free. Sponsored by UMass Hillel.

Film — The Fourth Annual Multicultural Film Festival will screen I Can't Sleep, directed by Claire Denis, France 1195, at 7:30 p.m. in Gamble Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College.

Lecture — The Five College Program in Peace & World Security Issues will sponsor a talk by Kathi Austin on "Weapons Trafficking and Ethnic Conflict in Central Africa," at 7:30 p.m. in McConnell 103 at Smith College. Free and open to the public.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold their weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. All are welcome. A woman from the MSPCA will be speaking about shelter volunteering and how to get involved at this meeting.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will have a meeting in the Campus Center, room 802. All new members are welcome. For more information, and the meeting time, call Tim at 546–0562 or Kay at 546–1459.

Poetry — Spectrum Magazine is sponsoring a poetry reading at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space. Anyone interested in reading their poetry or prose should come to the Spectrum office located in 406E Student Union.

Theater — Revisionist History, an Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance presents original work, created and directed by Derik Cowan, '97 about archetypical characters caught in a bad situation who are reincarnated through the centuries until they can break out of their castes and find a solution to their dilemma. Performances are today and tomorrow, 8 p.m. in the Fayerweather Studio Theater, Amherst College. Admission is free, reservations are suggested. Call 542–2277 between 1–4:30 p.m. on weekdays or until 8 p.m. on performance nights.

THURSDAY, MARCH 12

Lecture — Dr. Bill Essman of the Psychology Department at UMass, will lecture on "Behavioral Models of Psychomotor Stimulant Drug Action: Focus on Nucleus Accumbens" in Tobin Hall, room 521B at 12:15 p.m. The lecture is part of the UMass Neuroscience and Behavior Program Noon Seminar Series.

Lecture — Sarah Wilcox, Ph.D. candidate in sociology in at UPenn, talks about "Constructing and Deconstructing Identity in the Politics of Lesbian Health." The event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. Sponsored by the UMass Stonewall Center.

NOTICES

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545-9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the Comparative Literature Department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to Department of Comparative Lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9201 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Band wanted — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently seeking a four piece band for the spring production of Fame. The band must include: keyboard, guitar, bass and drums. Great publicity possibilities. For more information call Heather at 549–3681 or Justin at 546–0460.

Coffee Shop — Student Valley Productions is holding a Coffee Shop in April. They are looking for any talent coming from the Five College area in music, songs, poetry, skits, comedy, etc. For more information, call Daisy @ 253–6514.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pliner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

FYI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Final exams -- The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 13 at http://www-urerg.admin.umass.edu.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

MEMBER O.C.M.P.
"WE ACCEPT ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
19 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

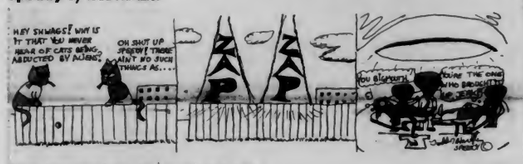
WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
SI DRINKS VODKA TONIC & ALWAYS $I BUD "LIGHT DRAFT

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 11, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	0	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	When Disaster Struck Connecticut			When Disaster Struck Connecticut			55 Flood
WFSB	3	61	News	CBS News	Ath.Journal.	Promised Land "Pre Motel"		"Something Borrowed, Something Blue" (1997)		Connie Sellecca.		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land "Pre Motel"		"Something Borrowed, Something Blue" (1997)		Connie Sellecca.		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle		Roseanne	Ellen (R)	Home Imp.	Spin City	Practice "Part I" (In Stereo)	News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.			★★ "Angel" (1994, Comedy Drama) Gloria Davis, Stephen Dorff, Mimi				News	Jenny Jones (In Stereo)	Late Show
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!		Mad Abo. You	Something So	Fraser	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV (R)		Blockbuster Entertainment Awards (In Stereo Live)				News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV (R)
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy		Mad Abo. You	Something So	Fraser	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld		★★½ "Blue Chips" (1994, Drama)		Nick Nolte. (In Stereo)		News	Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!		Mad Abo. You	Something So	Fraser	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	4	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer			Riverdance – The Show (In Stereo)				Lord of the Dance		Charlie Rose
WGGB	11	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight		Roseanne	Ellen (R)	Home Imp.	Spin City	Practice "Part I" (In Stereo)	News	Nightline
WSBK	12		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)	Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You			Blockbuster Entertainment Awards (In Stereo Live)				News	Martin	Mau Abo. You	Real TV (R)
WTBS	13		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos		★★★ "Dick Tracy" (1990, Adventure) Warren Beatty,				★★ "Big Trouble in Little China" (1986, Adventure) Kurt Russell,
A&E	14	22	Quincy "Accomplice to Murder"		Equalizer "The Last Campaign"			Biography: Sonia Henie		"Inspector Morse: Greeks Bearing Gifts" (1994) John Thaw		Law & Order "Life Choice"
CNN	15	24	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire		Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Monsyline
COM	16	30	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation		t Night Stand	t Night Stand	Comedy Club All-Stars II (R)		Jackpot	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	17	40	Beyond 2000	Next Step	Wings (R)			Wild Discovery: Waters		Mystery Univ.		World Wond.	Chopper Power: Vietnam	Wild Discovery: Waters
ESPN	18	60	Up Close	Sportscenter		NCAA Preview		NCAA Women: Legends of Hockey		Legends of Hockey			Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	19	32	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "When No One Would Listen" (1992, Drama)		Michele Lee	Living	Mysteries
MTV	20	31	Ren & Stimpy	Road Rules	Singled Out	Idiot Savants		Prime Time (In Stereo)		Silverchair Concert (In Stereo)		Buzzbill	World Tour (R)	Singled Out	Lovelina
NICK	21	29	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats		Secret of Alex	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moora	Phoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI	22	35	Twilight Zone	Darkside	Tims Trax "Little Boy Lost" (R)			Tekwar (In Stereo)		Forever Knight "Father's Day"		VR.5 "Control Freak" (In Stereo)		Time Trax "Little Boy Lost" (R)
TLC	23	28	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)		Treasures	America	Rogues Gallery "Bugsy Siegel"		War on Cancer-Killer		Treasures	America
TNT	24		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night			NBA Basketball: Houston Rockets at San Antonio Spurs. (Live)					NBA	"The Star Chamber" (1983)
USA	25		Renegads "Family Ties"		Highlander: The Series			Murder, She Wrote		Boxing: Dominick Cantar vs. Rocky Gannon. (Live)				Wings
HBO	26		Lifestories		★★½ "Seven Minutes in Heaven" (1986)			"PG-13"		★★ "Down Periscope" (1996) Kelsey Grammer,		Comedy Hour: R. Dangerfield		★★½ "Miss Evers' Boys" (1997)	Afre Woodard,
MAX	27		(5:30) ★★½ "The Hunt for Red October" (1990) Sean Connery,					★★★ "Fatal Games" (1992, Suspense) Harrison Ford, Sh.				"Somehows They Come Back Again" (1996) R			Erotic
SHOW	28		★★★ "Gremlins" (1984, Fantasy) Zach Galligan. (In Stereo) PG					Poltergeist		Poltergeist: The Legacy (R)		"Shower of Murders" (1996, Drama) Marla Ford. R		Red Shoe	Compromising

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Speddy By Todd Hartzler

First Impressions By Kenneth W.P. Scott

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
A club meeting is fertile ground for cultivating a new sweetheart. Share your secret aspirations at the beginning of a relationship—you might find a partner in an unusual pursuit.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
A friend's resistance to important plans you have made could signal the need for clearer communication. It would be unwise to simply escalate the argument; rather, step back and consider exactly what your friend has to say.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
If you feel that something unjust has occurred, don't hesitate to take legal action. You may do someone, or even yourself, a great deal of good. Get an expert's advice to help you through any sticky situations.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
An electronic gadget is a source of amusement for you and some close friends, but be aware of time passing—you may be spending more time playing than working. Take a walk outdoors to clear your mind for action.

LEO
July 23-August 23
In making a purchase this week, selecting the highest quality you can afford will save you money over the long run. However, maintain your budget, or you'll run short in the near future.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
If you're feeling unusually accident-prone, consider asking a younger friend for help. You may be able to arrange an exchange that is mutually beneficial between two antagonists.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Paying close attention to directions this week could be downright enlightening, as well as preventing a host of everyday snafus. Don't miss a single detail of the things that are presented to you.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Maintaining a strong sense of humor will help you ride your way past a number of difficulties this week. An obnoxious co-worker may have a hidden agenda that includes making trouble for you.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
The urge to compete dominates you early this week. Avoid the temptation to overachieve at work; you may spread yourself too thin, and step on a few toes in the process. Ask people how you can help, instead of barging ahead.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Making a plan and sticking to it is the best tactic to use this week, whether you want to advance your career or achieve a financial goal. Wonderful things are on the horizon for you, so be ready for them.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A period of stress and achievement may be coming to an end, but do not allow yourself to sink into a time of malaise. Bask in your accomplishments, but look to the future at the same time in order to be ready for even bigger things.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
A change in routine could be setting the stage for romance. Enjoy the tender affections of a person who truly cares for you. An awkward situation eases at work, as shifting politics realign your co-workers into a more cohesive group.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Will you shut up about how ironic this is?!"

Quote of the Day

"If you don't kow where you are going, any road will take you there."

–Abraham Lincoln

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

University* By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
TOP OWN GRINDER	Pinnapple Ham Steak
Beef, Ham, Turkey	Chicken / Rice Stuffing
Italian Sausage Grinder	Eggplant Parmesan
Hummus Grinder	Grilled Cheese

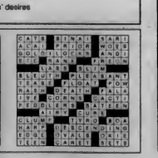
Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
TOP OWN GRINDER	Cavatelli Supreme
Beef, Ham, Turkey	Savory Stuffed Peppers
Italian Sausage Grinder	Pastabilities
Italian Tofu Ball Grinder

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Chicken Breast /Rice
Grilled Chicken	Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Burrito

Berkshire



LUNCH	DINNER
TOP OWN GRINDER	Hot & Spicy Wings
Beef, Ham, Turkey	Cavatelli Supreme
Italian Tofu Ball Grinder	Savory Stuffed Peppers
Meatball Grinder	Pastabilities

ACROSS
1. Freud's earliest stage
5. Disaster
10. Understand
14. Portion
15. Usefulness
16. Midwest state
17. Cigar producer
18. Championship
19. Portent
20. ___ standstill (2 words)
21. Profiter
22. Agree
24. Columnist James
26. Actress Bo
28. Harmonized
29. Part of a Civil War signature
30. Swiss mountain
33. Foolish
35. Search a suspect
36. Singer Clark
37. Thugs
38. Stop pedaling
39. "Walk Like ___" (2 words)
40. From ___ Z (2 words)
41. Juice variety
42. Our Man ___
43. Pölstat Creed word
44. Human beelows
45. Stone's throw
46. Conscience, sometimes
47. "___ on My Mind"
50. Curling items
53. Songbird
54. Stub spot
55. Volcano output
56. Swashbuckling Flynn
58. Extensive
60. Made a hole in one
61. Cheek brightener
62. Cultivated
63. Painter Shahn et al.
64. Ending for home or bed
65. Merely

DOWN
1. Author Wilde
2. TV's "___ 66"
3. Diplomat
4. Meadow
5. Detesting
6. Fanatic
7. Cistern
8. 10W40, e.g.
9. Most lucid
10. Newsstand
11. Alaskan city
12. TV lawyer Marshall
13. Desire
21. Radius, e.g.
23. Try to find
25. Bunbathers' desires
26. Madden
27. "Fur ___"
30. Respect
31. Dieter's request to the butcher
32. Confined
33. "___ Dream Can't I?" (2 words)
34. Defense gp.
35. Chanced upon
38. Police cars
39. There oughts be ___! (2 words)
41. Fruit tree
42. Material for a marker's tip
45. Did carpentry work
46. Prods
48. Emulate Jimmie Rodgers
49. Squalid
50. Tell all
51. "The ___ is to the swift" (Davidson)
52. Stove chamber
53. Forum robe
57. Degenerate
58. French street
59. Geneva-based UN agency

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Leold™ (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Solem Salloom ©1996

When I was at the supermarket I saw a person who looked exactly like me. I have seen him before.

For 20 minutes I followed him around the market ... at a safe distance. He was dressed like me and he walked like me. He wasn't wearing the same clothes I was wearing that day, but he was wearing the kinds of clothes I would wear.

When he got closer to the check out I quickly lined up behind him to get a better look. It was astonishing. I had found myself.

SPORTS

Tuesday, March 11, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Minutemen, Hawks battle in Springfield

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

Spring break travel update: for a great pre–vacation getaway, escape the snow and murk of Amherst and take an exciting road–trip to sunny Springfield. While you are there, soak up the rays and take in an early season match–up between the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team and the Hartford Hawks at Springfield College today at 2:00 pm.

MEN'S LACROSSE vs. HARTFORD

The Minutemen are 1–0, having disposed of the Fairfield Stags quite handily by a 22–3 tally. The Hawks are the next step in UMass' preparation for its schedule of Division I powerhouses. Traditionally, the Minutemen take on Virginia in one of their first contests of the season. This year, coach Greg Cannella has tried to prepare his team for the contest against the habitually potent Cavaliers.

But Hartford is not a team to be taken lightly. The Hawks have filled their own schedule with quality opponents, including No. 20 Rutgers, No. 12 Harvard, No. 24 Delaware, No. 13 Hofstra and the 11th ranked Minutemen.

"They have a very good team, a team that we were up 9–7 with in the fourth quarter last year in Springfield," Cannella said.

UMass beat Hartford last season 14–9, out–shooting the Hawks 42–31 in both teams' season opener. That was possibly the best unit of Hawks to date, posting the most wins in a season in team history. The squad that went 9–6 has lost six of its top seven scorers, but expects a group of transfers and an experienced midfield to pick up the scoring slack.

Keith Anzelone and Jason Clark have joined the Hawks, both coming off junior college success, bringing speed and versatility to the front line. Middie Charlie Fischer is one of two All–America candidates on the team and is expected to return as the Hawks' leading scorers after being runner–up for that position last season.

The Minutemen showed against Fairfield that it will take a strong offense to beat their experienced defense, but Hartford is capable of keeping the score down as well.

"All four of their defensive starters are returning, a goalie and three defensemen," Cannella said. "They're very strong defensively so it will be a good test for us."

The neutral site will be considered a home game for UMass, utilizing the turf playing surface while the Richard F. Garber Field awaits preparation for the Minutemen's first on campus home contest against Boston College on March 25.

"We're playing in Springfield, we've been down there a lot this year [in preseason practices and scrimmages] so we'll treat it like it's our home field," Cannella said. "We'll hope it works out."

The Minutemen will be in action on the road during spring break, against Virginia in Charlottesville on Sunday March 16 and against Hofstra in Hempstead, N.Y. on Saturday March 22.

The game will be broadcast live on WMUA from Springfield College, starting at 2 p.m. with pregame at 1:45. Jon Place and Matt Vautour will provide play–by–play and color commentary.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Jay Robbins and the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team face Hartford today at 2:00 p.m. at Springfield College.

Upsets rock NCAA Lax; Loyola, Duke tumbling

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

The world of NCAA Division I men's lacrosse has seen multiple upsets in the first week of action this season. Teams within the Top 25 polls have been shuffled and dealt up and down the charts, due to a rash of intertwined upset results. Here's a look at what has taken place thus far.

- Princeton was this year's top ranked squad in the preseason, collecting 31 out of a possible 47 first–place votes. The Tigers have defended their position well, recently pulling out a key 14–13 overtime victory over No. 2 Virginia in a rematch of last year's NCAA championship game. Todd Eichelberger scored his second goal of the contest at 1:32 of the sudden–death period to seal the win. Princeton is now 2–0, and the Cavaliers fell to 1–2 on the season.

MEN'S LACROSSE NOTEBOOK

Last year's NCAA finalists return two potential 60 goal scorers in seniors Mike Watson and Doug Knight, but it wasn't enough to beat the Tigers. Virginia will likely fall in the polls, but not out of the top 10.

- North Carolina has done its part to shake things up, dropping Loyola by a score of 17–11. The No. 11 Tar Heels are now 2–1 while No. 6 Loyola falls to an even 1–1. The Heels lost their first game 13–12 to Navy when they allowed two goals in the last 30 seconds.

The Midshipmen were ranked No. 18 before the upset. However, the future of the North Carolina program looks bright, with four goals coming from freshman Chase Martin. Martin's three goals in the first half gave UNC a 9–6 lead at the intermission, which they only built on after the break.

Loyola will likely fall out of the top 10. Their spot will probably be assumed by either Virginia or the winner of the upcoming Duke–North Carolina Atlantic Coast Conference meeting.

- No. 13 Brown knocked off No. 5 Duke in a 9–8 overtime struggle. Sophomore midfielder Jed Dewick scored with :20 left in regulation to tie it for the Bears. Just 2:05 into sudden death, Dewick struck again to seal the Blue Devils' fate. Falling to 2–1, Duke was outshot 36–22. Brown is now 1–1 and may break into the top 10.
- Perennial powerhouse Johns Hopkins fits into the mix as a strong No. 4 which could move up in the near future. The Blue Jays beat up on Rutgers by a 22–8 tally.

The Scarlet Knights were No. 19 before the loss, both teams' records are now 2–1. One huge factor in the game was Hopkins' control of the ball for almost the entire game, producing a 64–29 shot advantage.

- One of the most confusing teams so far this season has been Syracuse. The Orangemen, then the No. 3 team in the nation, dropped a huge upset to No. 10 Georgetown. Upon returning to their hospitable confines at the Carrier dome, they proceeded to whack Yale 18–8.

There is no better known home–field advantage in lacrosse, as the 'Cuse scored five goals in a period of two minutes to put the game out of Yale's reach. Another huge shot advantage came in this one, the Orangemen peppered the Bulldogs' cage with 51 shots, facing just 32 from Yale.

- The Massachusetts Minutemen set offensive and defensive records in their 22–3 win over Fairfield on Saturday. It was the first time since a 20–7 result at Boston College in 1994 that UMass had scored 20 or more goals in a game, and the largest offensive output since a 25–4 thrashing of St. John's in 1993. On the defensive side, the Minutemen allowed just two goals against Yale in 1995, while scoring 17 times themselves.

UMass Lacrosse

Massachusetts vs. Hartford

Today, March 11
2:00 p.m.
at Springfield College

John Kasselakis

NCAA Time; Xavier, Temple upset specials

Kids, we're screwed.

Yeah, we got in. The committee looked at our tough schedule, key wins over BC and Maryland and our previous tournament success and gave us one of the very last seeds.

But it was probably one of worst seeds in the dance. No.11 in the East? They might as well have said, "We think UMass is gonna get killed." By that token, they gave us the toughest No.6 seed, Louisville, and put us in the God– forsaken city of Pittsburgh, best known for steel, steel, air pollution and steel.

LUKE MEREDITH

But I tell you what. We can get into the Sweet Sixteen without too much of a sweat. We can beat Louisville, though it'll be tough. They have one of the most explosive players in America in DeJuan Wheat, but we have one of the best defensive players in America in Carmelo Travieso. If Travieso can stifle Wheat (who can be very, very streaky), and our frontcourt can dominate a weak Louisville inside game, we'll be playing New Mexico next Sunday.

The keys for the Minutemen? Tyrone Weeks and Lari Ketner establishing themselves in the post, Inus Norville giving quality minutes and a few key jumpers from Edgar Padilla. If we get that, we can win.

And then we get the Lobos. Sounds like a tough match–up, but getting New Mexico as the No.3 seed is a lot better than getting Wake Forest or Cincinnati, don't you think?

And if we beat New Mexico?

I won't go any further than that. Let's just see what happens.

Upset City...

Here's the skinny on who's going down before the weekend is out. California will lose to Princeton, but you already know that. The real upsets will come early, and often. This year's tournament is rife with parody, and there is a mass of teams at the top of the brackets that don't have overwhelming talent. We could have a Sweet Sixteen with as many as six or seven lower seeds. Some of my upset specials...

Miami (Ohio) over Clemson

Clemson has been on a tailspin since late January, and they really don't have an abundance of talent, or much of an inside game. Enter Devin Davis, the dreadlocked 6–foot–7 Miami senior, who could be the Dennis Rodman of the MVC (Missouri Valley, not Merrimack Valley, tough–guy). The Redskins pull off their second upset in three years (Arizona 1995), and Davis celebrates by kicking a cameraman in the groin.

Xavier over UCLA

Not in the first round, chief, so relax. They'll meet in Round 2, and Xavier will pound the Bruins. I'm telling you, guys, don't listen to those TV commentators like Dick Vitale telling you that UCLA is a lock for the Final Four. UCLA is overrated, and they don't have the team chemistry needed to make it to Indianapolis. The Musketeers, on the other hand, have that one thing people always scream about come tournament time. Great guard play. You heard it hear first, kids.

Temple over Minnesota

Once again, I look ahead and see an upset. Temple might have a bit of a scare from Ole Miss in the first round, but they'll get by. Minnesota is a weak No.1 seed, who played in a sub–par Big Ten, and are primed for an upset (See Purdue, 1996). Temple plays a tenacious defense, and with Rasheed Brokenborough providing much needed help on the offensive end, the Owls could make a run.

Texas over South Carolina

Of course, this also may never happen. But, since I never win the pool anyway, I'm taking a few risks this year. Texas is very talented, (Kris Clack is the best player you never heard of), and they've been tested in the NCAA's before, having almost beaten Wake Forest in the second round last year. South Carolina has had a great run, and they're the cute little favorite and all, but they don't have staying power.

College of Charleston over Maryland

I am not jumping on the Charleston bandwagon, but I am jumping off of Maryland's. The Terps have come down to Earth after a fantastic start, and have proven that you can beat them if you can shut down Keith Booth. LaRon Profit does scare me, but I don't see him taking over games in the tournament.

Montana over Kentucky

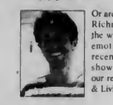
I'm just kidding, kids. I didn't even know they had basketball in Montana.

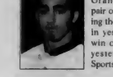
Turn to NCAA, page 7



KENNETH W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

It's tournament time, and many think that UMass can sneak out of Pittsburgh and into the Sweet Sixteen.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 100 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, March 12, 1997

We're all happy here!

Or are we? Jonathan Richman scanned the whole palette of emotions at his recent Iron Horse show. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Men's lax pluck Hawks

Senior Chris Grande scored a pair of goals including the game winner in yesterday's 7–4 win over Hartford yesterday (See Sports, page 10).

WORLD

With eye on economy Yeltsin empties cabinet

MOSCOW (AP)— President Boris Yeltsin ordered his Cabinet overhauled yesterday, following through on promises to shake up a government that has been unable to pull Russia's fledgling market economy out of its rut.

The newly invigorated Yeltsin, who last week castigated his government for lying "motionless" while the economy drifted, only guaranteed the jobs of two Cabinet members — Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin and his new top deputy, Anatoly Chubais.

Yeltsin gave Chernomyrdin a week to reorganize the government. He said it should be trimmer, with a smaller Cabinet and fewer ministries, although it was not clear how many officials would lose their jobs.

The Russian government has seemed rudderless since at least July, when an ailing Yeltsin won re-election to a second term and then dropped largely out of sight because of heart-trouble and a bout of pneumonia. Only in recent weeks has he appeared to be fully back in control.

NATION

Hearings begin for CIA Director designate

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director-designate Anthony Lake opened his confirmation hearing today with a vigorous defense of his integrity and a pledge to keep Congress informed monthly on key intelligence matters.

"If confirmed, my job will be to present the views of the intelligence community, and my own judgment — unvarnished and unprejudiced," Lake told the Intelligence Committee. "We must have an intelligence process of absolute integrity."

Lake defended himself on two fronts: his failure to sell energy stock for two years after being told to do so, and his failure to inform Congress of a secret U.S. policy change in 1994 that allowed Iranian arms to fly to Bosnia.

"I take full responsibility for not having sold these stocks earlier," Lake said. But Lake went on to quote the Justice Department settlement,which found no evidence that Lake deliberately concealed or misrepresented his financial holdings.

On the Iran-Bosnia issue, Lake said, "I have no apologies for the policy. But I do appreciate that it would have been better to have informed key members of Congress."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 35 LOW: 10	HIGH: 35 LOW: 15	HIGH: 35 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 10

With greater variety & options, meal plan price faces steep hike

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

The cost for the average University of Massachusetts meal plan is set to increase by 12.1 percent — an additional $220 — next semester, according to the Student Fee Budgets for the fiscal year 1998.

Currently the average board cost, based on a 14–meal plan, costs each student $1,812.00 — remaining unchanged from last year. For the academic year 1997–1998, board costs will reach $2,032.00.

Linda Kamik, Assistant Budget Director, explained that the increase is due to increased meal flexibility and significant improvements requested by students.

"There will be a change in the quality of food — fresh vegetables and fruits instead of frozen ones. Other changes are in the way students can use the board plan," Kamik said.

Marc Keners, Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) professional staff director, feels that a solution to the discontent with the food at UMass should be devised without charging students more money.

"The cost of going to school here is too much. The University needs to find a way to improve the quality [of food] without raising costs to students," Kenen said.

Out with the old, in with the new

Next September, the meal plans will no longer consist of the current 10, 14 and 19 meals a week. The plans will be renamed the UMass Basic Plan (160 meals per semester), the UMass Value Plan (224 meals a semester) and the UMass Deluxe Plan (unlimited dining hall access).

Commuter students will be able to take part in the commuter dining plan, available to non–resident students and staff only.

Meals will be deducted on a semester basis, not weekly as with the current plan. Therefore, students would be allowed to eat 20 meals in the dining hall one week and none the next, if they so choose.

All plans will allow students to eat in the dining halls on the weekends.

The UMass Basic Plan (formerly the 10 meal plan) is expected to be the most popular.

Students currently on the 10 meal plan will be paying an extra $152 next year, and increase of 9.5 percent. Students enrolled on the 14 and 19 meal plans will be paying a $220 (12.1 percent) and $170 (13.8 percent) increase respectively.

Ashoke Ganguli, Director of Auxiliary Services, feels that it is unfair to compare the new board plans with the current 10, 14 and 19 plans.

"The 10, 14 and 19 meal plans are history," Ganguli said.

These changes were based on the requests of students who wanted more flexibility and an upgrading of the actual dining services.

"Any meal a student doesn't eat one week, they can eat the next. Whatever student preferences are, we've been providing the best we can," Ganguli said.

While the UMass board fees will total just over $2000 next year, Ganguli claims that this is still $1200–1500 less than most other schools in New England based on the quality of food.

"I'm very confident we can compete dollar for dollar," Ganguli said.

Jason Vecchio, a SCERA student coordinator, however, is somewhat wary of the increase.

"My concern is always cost. I become concerned when an increase in fees occurs on campus. Throwing money at it isn't going to solve the problem," Vecchio said.

Peter Kilbourne, Associate Speaker of the Student Senate, is confident that the new board plan will allow students more flexibility and will serve students better than the current plan.

Kilbourne is also quick to point out that next semester will be a test, and the plan may then be revised and expanded based on the data and student input they receive.

"This is not a direct increase. It is a restructuring of the way the meal plan works. Old meal plans are non existent. Meals are being added, and becoming more accessible at the same time," Kilbourne said.

Cost versus quality

Kilbourne also stressed that although he is not in favor of the fee increase, the new plan does incorporate many of the improvements students have asked for.

"I'm not for the price increase. They've incorporated a lot of what we've asked them for. They [students] just see the price increase. You have to look at all that's going on before you assume they are trying to rip you off," Kilbourne said.

In a study conducted last fall by Student Affairs Research, Information and Systems (SARIS), 500 students were asked to rate their satisfaction with dining services.

When asked "how satisfied are you with the quality of the food provided by the Dining Services?" only 40 percent of the respondents claimed that they were either very satisfied or somewhat satisfied with the quality of food.

On Tuesday, March 18, the Committee for Administration and Finance will make a recommendation for this board plan. The full Board of Trustees will then vote on the plan when they meet April 2.

"This hasn't even been approved by Paul Page, so it could go higher," Kilbourne said.

Pennsylvania State University, considered to be a peer institution by the Board of Trustees, has board rates that have been increasing as well.

"Typically room and board rates go up an average of 3 to 4 percent a year," said Lynn DuBois, Assistant Director of Housing at Penn State.

Students there can chose from six different meal plans ranging in cost from $1,000 to $1,245 per semester.

If the UMass budget gets approved by the Board of Trustees as it currently stands, despite widely publicized roll backs in tuition, the cost of attending UMass for undergraduate residents, will be increased a total of $208 (2.2 percent) for the fiscal year 1998.

Chancellor Scott discusses diversity

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Chancellor David K. Scott issued a statement yesterday on last week's student takeover of Goodell Building at the University of Massachusetts.

Scott, who was in Yucatan, Mexico during the six–day occupation of Goodell, stated his support for the administration's response to the ALANA (Asian, Latin American, African and Native American) demands which prompted the protest.

"I have great faith in the University's management team and stand behind the agreed–upon settlement," Scott said. "I am especially pleased that procedures have been established that will allow us to do a better job in involving students in the budget and planning process, and that will keep open the lines of communication between the administration and students."

The Chancellor's management team consisted of Deputy Chancellor Marcellette Williams, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Tont Robinson, Vice Chancellor for University Advancement Royster Hedgepeth, Acting Provost Patricia Crosson, Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance Paul Page, Vice Chancellor for Research, Fred Byron and Fred Tillis of the Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Office.

"I especially support this institution's commitment to increase financial aid through both our budget process and through Campaign UMass," Scott said. "For us to have increased campus–provided scholarship money from $1.5 million in 1990 to more than $10 million this year itself proves commitment to low–income students."

The Chancellor particularly commended the decision to increase the population of students of color on campus to 20 percent — the demand which served as the foundation of the student protest in Goodell.

"I am also proud of our record in terms of issues of diversity on campus. I support our goal of increasing students of color to 20 percent — a percentage that is close to the percentage of students of color who graduate from high schools in the commonwealth."

The protesters in Goodell accused the administration of not upholding the 1992 ALANA agreement to increase the freshman and overall ALANA student population.

The students also accused the administration of not only doctoring the numbers for the freshman class in order that it appear as though they met the agreement, but also being a year late in attempting to fulfill said agreement.

"I believe that our long–time, often–stated goal of attaining 20 percent non–white students is socially and educationally responsible in light of demographic projections that indicate 25 percent of the nation's population is non–white and nearly 20 percent of the Massachusetts high school population is non–white, and both are going up," Scott said. "If predications are accurate, by the year 2000 one–third of the nation's population will be non–white."

During negotiations, administrators said they could not commit to a time frame by which the entire UMass student population of ALANA students would reach 20 percent, but estimated that it would happen within 5 years.

"Our goal, as a land–grant institution, is to serve the commonwealth — and the nation — and to be socially and educationally responsive to many diverse needs," Scott said. "I look forward to the

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN

Fenced in

Scaffolding seen through a metal fence in Amherst Center.

Goodell back to normal after takeover

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

Things are starting to return to normal for the employees of Goodell Building following the student occupation which lasted from Monday to Saturday of last week which disrupted, and even closed down, several offices' working environments.

The takeover affected various offices in different ways, slowing down or bringing to a halt many of the building's functions over the course of the six–day occupation of the Controller's Office.

The takeover came as a surprise to the workers in the building.

"My secretary came in and said she thought we were being taken over," said Tom Mathers, the associate controller for the University of Massachusetts Amherst campus. "I just told everyone to lock the file cabinets and shut off the computers and see what happens."

According to Mathers, the Controller's Office, which is located on the fourth floor (underground), is responsible for paying the bills, processing payroll, processing purchase orders and collecting grant monies, among other things.

On Tuesday, the second day of the takeover, Mathers was surprised to find about one–third of his staff in the office at work. At a meeting they decided, because they were on computers, it would be possible for them to conduct their business elsewhere and were dispersed around throughout the offices of the campus.

"It shocked me as to how smooth it went," Mathers said. "At the end of the week, 80 percent of our workers were doing their jobs in 10 different places. We were able to keep up with the day–to–day paper processing."

Even so, Mathers says that everyone was glad to get back into the familiar surroundings of Goodell.

Sandi Harris Graves, a clerk in the Graduate Records Office said that the workers in her office "heard the mass of students coming in [on Monday]," but were able to continue with their work through Tuesday afternoon.

After that, people who could work from their homes did the best they could and one was relocated to the Undergraduate Registrar's Office in Whitmore. The rest had to play the waiting game.

"It was difficult for us," Harris Graves said. "We had to wait for word as to whether or not we could return to work, so we were not free to make other plans."

Despite the ability for some offices to relocate, many people were aggravated by the disruption in Goodell.

"There are students here who work on an hourly basis who ran the risk of not being paid because they were forced out of work," Harris Graves said.

Supervisor of the Office of Graduate Records, Athena Morris said that students who were unable to access the office handled the situation well.

"The grad students were very understanding, they had a right to be upset. It was a difficult situation for everyone," Morris said.

Director of Graduate Admissions and Graduate Registrar Robert Swasey said that the rally couldn't have come at a worse time.

"We had a March 1 deadline for applications. We weren't able to receive and process applications," Swasey said.

Swasey said that nobody worked on the fifth floor on Wednesday, and that on Thursday he set up a satellite office in the Registrar's Office at Whitmore. By the time Friday came along, a half–dozen people were working in the office behind locked doors.

"We were able to get applications into the hands of the departments that would be making the decisions," Swasey said. "[The takeover] came at a very, very poor time for application processing, it will take three or four days to dig our way out of the backlog."

Most commented that the building itself was left in good condition. A combination of respect by the occupying students and a lot of work by the custodial staff ensured that the building was back to normal.

"The custodial staff did a great job," Morris said. "By the time we came back on Monday morning, the restrooms, hallways and offices were cleaned. The floor on the fourth floor was even waxed."

Vision 2000 attempts to promote equity of the sexes

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The New England Council of Land–Grant University Women is distributing its recently developed plan for acheiving gender equity at the six land–grant institutions this spring.

Entitled Vision 2000, the plan contains nine recomendations with subpoints detailing strategies for acheiving equity of the sexes.

The preamble of the plan states, "Vision 2000 is a call to our Presidents and Chancellors to ensure full and equitable participation by women in the New England Land–Grant Universities. Through nine broad recommendations, the document sets forth a vision of where women at our six institutions can and should be at the beginning of the next century."

The nine recommendations are to: foster accountability, base action plans on research results, implement diversity initiatives, promote family–friendly policies, encourage women's academic and career development, correct inequities in hiring, promotion, tenure, compensation and working conditions for women employees, establish and support women's centers, end gender–bias and discrimination against women in the curriculum and end sexual harassment and violence against women.

Some specific requests include having student evaluations of courses include measures of gender equity in course content and classroom environment, integrating scholarship on and by women and using content and pedagogies that are women–friendly in all General Education classes, eliminating significant gender differences in achievement of tenure for members of the faculty, including gender equity as an important consideration in the planning and budgeting for facilities, staffing and programs and providing campus–based child care.

Carol Wallace, director of the Everywoman's Center and a member of the University of Massachusetts' delegation to the New England Council, said that the fall 1993 report entitled "The New Agenda of Women for Higher Education at UMass" from the Faculty Senate Council on the Status of Women was the inspiration for Vision 2000.

"Let me start by saying that a couple of years ago, women from the six state land–grant schools got together to form this council," Wallace said. "We approached the Council of Presidents for funding and they endorsed the plan [for the council].

"Between 1990 and 1993, the Faculty Senate Council on the Status of Women at Amherst did an agenda for women [at UMass]. UMass proposed that the New England Council develop an agenda for women for the land grants. We formed a set of nine recomendations as a comprehensive agenda representative of all women on campus," Wallace said.

Forty women from the six schools worked together to construct Vision 2000.

"The exciting thing was the collaboration between faculty, staff and students. Those kind of collaborations do not happen often enough," Wallace said. "I feel like it is a real model for what is possible — not just for gender equity, but for any issue."

According to Wallace, the plan will be distributed to campus organizations such as the Student Government Organization and Graduate Student Senate shortly.

"We're looking for grassroots support before we present Vision 2000 to the presidents next fall. Our plan is to go national and publicize this as a model for others schools or consortiums," Wallace said.

Wallace also said that she would be working to incorporate Vision 2000 into Chancellor David K. Scott's Strategic Action Plan.

"The intent of doing this kind of work is to improve things for women. I think it is really important to begin with a comprehensive plan. The critical things is to implement the plan. I see Strategic Action as critical in operationalizing it," Wallace said. "I will be working to get this incorporated in the Strategic Action Plan.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Mike Burke
Copy Editor: Lisa Oliveri
Photo Technician: Lauren Kosky
Production Supervisor: Marc Dionne
Production Staff: Dan Bodah, Matt Guilmette

Gov't seeks regulation to help students

BOSTON (AP) — A measure to protect students from high-pressure credit card companies is making its way through the Legislature once again.

"College kids, particularly on limited if any income, are sucked into getting a credit card like it's funny money," said Rep. Harold M. Lane Jr., (D-Holden), sponsor of the measure. "It's bad enough they end up with the debt they have from college, but they end up then with a credit card debt on top of it," he said.

Under his proposal, the Higher Education Coordinating Council would create rules governing credit card companies' access to all state colleges and suggest those rules to private schools. The measure met with the approval of the Legislature's Education Committee yesterday and now requires the approval of the full House and Senate, as well as Gov. William F. Weld.

The proposal has gotten out of committee in the past, but has not gotten full approval.

■ Scott

continued from page 1

challenges ahead, and to working together — faculty, staff and students — to continuing the real work of this campus, that of developing more complete and integrative human beings, and, through them, to create a better, wiser world."

The Chancellor did not specifically comment on the student demands, nor the administrative commitments, which were deliberated on item-by-item for five days of negotiations — such as child care, late fees on semester bills, ALANA recruitment of students and faculty or ALANA support programs.

"A number of large, complex issues are involved here, and as is generally the case in these matters, things shift and changes occur. Events such as those of last week make us sharpen and recrystalize [sic] our focus," Scott said.

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN

A draining day!
Melted snow and rain dripping from a drain pipe in Amherst.

Springfield College holds anti-PC sit-in

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD — In a backlash against political correctness, about 60 Springfield College students mounted a campus sit-in yesterday to demand that the school restore its old nickname, the Chiefs.

"When the Chiefs were taken away, the morale of the school dropped," said Joel Farrior, a sophomore who helped organize the protest. He contended that the new nickname for the college sports teams, the Pride, was chosen "because of its political correctness."

After a brief rally outside Marsh Memorial, the students marched into the building and sat down in the foyer outside the office of President Randolph Bromery. From a balcony, they had strung up a 6-foot-high banner that said: "Hear us, listen to us, and respect us!" Some protesters wore "Springfield Chiefs" sports caps. The protesters said they want to restore the old nickname "without any Native American stereotypes." One protest leader, Mike Sciucco, said the new Chiefs nickname would connote leadership and strength.

The symbol for the old nickname was an Indian's head with a traditional headdress. Some at Springfield College complained that the name and image reflected racial insensitivity. The campus dropped both the Chief nickname and symbol in 1996 and began calling itself the Pride.

However, students voted last year to restore the old name. Sciucco said students had tried unsuccessfully in past days to persuade the administration to support restoring the old name. In a move that surprised the protesters, Bromery emerged from his office shortly after their sit-in began yesterday and engaged them in a discussion. He told them that he doubted their assertion that the old nickname could be brought back without suggesting American Indians.

"I know if we went out in the country and said, 'Chiefs,' and didn't say anything else, the first thing that would come to their minds would be Indians," Bromery told the students.

He also rejected their demand that the issue be decided by a binding vote of students, faculty, administrators and alumni. "You don't need a president then," he said.

However, he vowed to work with the students to expedite decision making. He said representatives of campus groups would consider the issue and make a recommendation to him.

Bromery, who is black, suggested with a wry smile at one point that they consider "Black Panthers" as the nickname. He then told them that, in all earnestness, he would prefer using some kind of animal as a nickname.

After about 45 minutes of discussion, the protest leaders said they were now satisfied that the administration is listening to them and doing its best to fulfill their requests. They called off the rest of the protest, which was initially supposed to end at midnight.

"This is student empowerment, and this is what college is about," declared Sciucco.

The issue of a sports nickname is an especially important one at Springfield College, a 3,000-student private school nationally known as an incubator of athletes, coaches and other sports professionals.

In 1891, instructor James Naismith invented basketball at the school. Three years later, William Morgan, a graduate of Springfield College, invented volleyball in nearby Holyoke. Other colleges with Indian and other nicknames have sometimes changed them out of worry about potentially insulting stereotypes. In 1993, student activists at the University of Massachusetts demanded that the school drop its Minuteman sports logo, a reference to the celebrated militiamen of the American Revolution. The activists said the symbol is militant and sexist.

While initially considered, the demand was later dropped in the face of an outcry from other students and alumni.

UMass had adopted the Minuteman mascot after an uproar over the school's previous name, The Redmen.

Knowledge Grows Here!
Summer Session at Stony Brook
Terms start June 2 and July 14
260 courses in 40 subjects
Day and evening classes
Low NYS tuition
Live on campus or commute

Please send me the 1997 Summer Session catalog or check out our web page at Http://www.sunysb.edu/summer/
Name
Street/Box No.
City State Zip
Telephone Area of interest
School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation
STONY BROOK STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK
Mail coupon or call 24 hours 1-800-559-7213.
E-mail: summerschool@ccmail.sunysb.edu
Or write: Summer Session Office, Dept. CN, University at Stony Brook, Stony Brook, NY 11794-3370

SPRING BREAK STARTS THIS WEEK AT PRUDDY'S
NO COVER WEDNESDAYS
$1.00 MILLER BOTTLES & BEST DRINKS AND SPECIALS AROUND
THIS WEEK WE'LL BE GIVING MONEY AWAY SO YOU CAN HAVE MORE PESOS TO SPEND ON SPRING BREAK.
* FOOD * TROPICAL DRINKS * FRIENDS *
OPEN WEDS. THRU SAT. ~ 9:00PM TO 1:00AM

EDUCATION MAJORS!!
DON'T JUST WORK THIS SUMMER, COME GROW PROFESSIONALLY AT AMERICA'S PREMIER BROTHER/SISTER CAMPS
WINAKU FOR BOYS
DANBEE FOR GIRLS
IN WESTERN MASS
SALARY/ROOM/BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!!
COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE
THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD
802 CAMPUS CENTER
10 AM - 4 PM
(WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL
800-494-6238

TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
PROMO NIGHT BEGINNING AT 9:00
TOC HOURS & ADDRESS
A LONG BOTTOM
HARPOON BREWERY Boston, MA Since 1987 INTO BREW... & TO SERVE!
HARPOON PROMO
ON-FRI 4-12:30 SAT 5-

DAILY COLLEGIAN & 5 UMass Five College Federal Credit Union
present
NCAA Tournament Preview
SPORTS Extra
8 pages filled with In-Depth Previews, Reviews & Tournament Action
Check it out, Thursday March 13th
Full Color Poster of Tourney Brackets
sponsored by: CAMPUS CLUB

Zoo Disc Ultimate fundraises for tourn.

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

Zoo Disc Ultimate, the University of Massachusetts ultimate Frisbee team, has embarked on its annual frisbee- selling fundraiser in an attempt to raise money for a trip to the National Ultimate Frisbee Tournament in Davis, Calif.

The team, which was founded in 1968, is ranked seventh nationally and takes part in weekend tournaments all over the northeast region. Zoo Disc won the national championship in 1986 and reached the finals in 1987, but has had less success in recent years.

The team hopes to rise to the top again with the help of its new coach, a man the team refers to as "Jethro," who played ultimate frisbee professionally and also serves as the director of the English Department at Greenfield Community College.

"We practice almost every day," said Nathan Rogers, a junior accounting major who is a member of the team. "Jethro has us doing sprints out there."

With the fundraiser, the team hopes to make enough money to support a trip to the national tournament, where it may compete with elite ultimate Frisbee teams from across the country.

The Frisbees, which come in three varieties — white, teal and glow in the dark — are priced at $6, $7 and $9 respectively and will be available in the Campus Center Concourse this week. They are adorned with the traditional Zoo Disc star, this year with a butterfly in the middle. After this week, they will go on sale again when the weather improves.

According to Rogers, the team's biggest rival is Williams College, who went to the Nationals last year. Rogers expects the Zoo Disc outfit will meet their nemesis in the Yale Cup at Yale University in New Haven, Conn. and at the Clockwork Orange, a tournament hosted by Princeton University.

Recently, they went undefeated in a tournament at Lehigh University, where they notched victories over Cornell, the University of Vermont, Haverford University and Lehigh.

Rogers said that Zoo Disc is open to any University student who is interested and who can handle the sprints in their practices.

"Anyone who wants to come and play is welcome to come. Especially freshmen and sophomores, because we want to train them. They're our future," Rogers said.

The Zoo Disc unit is considered a club sport and, according to Rogers, receives inadequate funding.

"We're being sponsored by Bueno y Sano [restaurant], so we all have orange Bueno y Sano shirts. The University doesn't give us much money, but we're hoping that our ranking will help us in that department," Rogers said.

WWII internment camps subject of current appeal

By Laura Myers
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Latin Americans interned in U.S. camps during World War II because of their Japanese heritage appealed to President Clinton yesterday to let them share the financial redress made to Japanese-Americans.

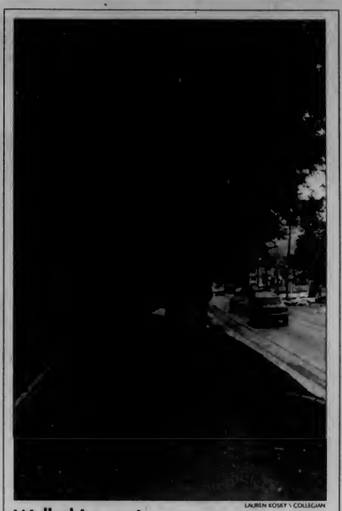
"I don't want your sympathy. I want justice," said Alice Nishimoto, 62, who was held for 2 1/2 years with her Peruvian family at a camp in Crystal City, Tx. "We all deserve an apology. We need our dignity."

Under a little-known World War II program, more than a dozen Latin American countries shipped 2,264 citizens of Japanese heritage, mostly from Peru, to U.S. internment camps for possible barter with the Japanese for American prisoners of war. No such direct prisoner exchanges took place, although about 800 internees were "repatriated" to Japan during the war. After the war, many of the Latin internees weren't accepted back home; they went to Japan or stayed in the United States.

Rep. Patsy Mink, (D-Hawaii), said the program "casts shame on this country."

At a news conference, Nishimoto and two other former internees — all U.S. citizens now — displayed 4,000 signed form letters to Clinton from American, Peruvian and Japanese citizens. The letters urge Clinton to issue an executive order to compensate Japanese-Latin Americans who have been denied because they weren't U.S. citizens when they were interned.

"This callous denial of redress is inexcusable when it is undisputed that it was the U.S. government who forced the Japanese-Latin Americans to be brought here for incarceration in camps and forced prisoner exchange with Japan," the letter says in part. "Please act now, and don't make them wait another day for justice long overdue."



The White House had no comment on the group's request. Mink and Rep. Xavier Becerra, (D-Calif.), are supporting the new redress claims and said if Clinton doesn't act, lawmakers will likely introduce legislation to seek compensation for the Japanese-Latin Americans interned.

"This is a true story that belongs in the believe-it-or-not chapter of American history," said Becerra. "It seems to me that any time a government believes it can barter for human beings, it must pay a price."

A class-action suit seeking redress was filed last August against the U.S. government in federal court in Los Angeles on behalf of Japanese-Latin Americans interned by the United States beginning in 1942.

But the lawsuit is expected to take years and the prospects of winning are slim. Myron Marlin, a spokesman for the Justice Department, said Congress wrote the Civil Liberties Act of 1988 to allow compensation only for internees who were U.S. citizens or permanent residents at the time.

Meantime, the act, which provides $20,000 in redress for up to 125,000 internees, expires in August 1998, closing the door on claims.

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN

Walk this way!
Strolling down the evergreen lined sidewalk on Main Street in Amherst.

White House's 1996 entertainment bill over $1M

By James Rowley
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The cost of entertaining donors and other private citizens at the Clinton White House surpassed $1 million in 1996 — three times the amount in President Bush's last year — but taxpayers were fully reimbursed, administration officials testified yesterday.

Seeking to capitalize on recent revelations about Democratic donors staying overnight or attending coffees at the White House, Republicans repeatedly pressed the officials to explain how they classified political events and nonpolitical ones.

"That's the real issue," said Rep. Jim Kolbe, (R-Ariz.), chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee that held the hearing. "You can be sure that some things they are saying are nonpolitical... any common-sense person will say, 'This is really political.'"

Kolbe said he would ask congressional auditors at the General Accounting Office to review the White House's entertainment accounts, which have not been audited since 1991.

Officials for the National Park Service, which maintains the White House compound, testified that the cost of political events at the White House — coffees for Democratic donors, dinners and other events — totaled $592,587 for fiscal 1996, which ended a month before the election.

That was more than twice the $261,186 tab that Bush and his Republican supporters ran up during the last election year of fiscal 1992.

The Democratic National Committee, the Clinton/Gore campaign or other political groups reimbursed the government the full amount for the various events, which included 51 coffee klatches with donors, the officials said.

The Clinton White House reimbursed an additional $454,278 it billed a variety of sources for other private social events at the White House, the officials said.

Kolbe demanded to know how much of that money came from the Clintons personally to reimburse the government for 938 overnight guests.

Many of the guests were big-money Democratic donors, rewarded nights in the White House under a plan approved by Clinton. He instructed aides to identify donors who had given $50,000 and $100,000 and wrote: "Ready to start overnights right away."

"I can't imagine the president has reimbursed for 938 individuals," Kolbe said. He said he wants to determine whether the DNC or some other group paid the cost of housing Clinton's guests.

The White House has said the Clintons reimbursed the government for those expenses, but those payments are not reflected in the figures supplied to Kolbe's Treasury, postal and general government subcommittee, aides said.

Kolbe said he wants to know who reimbursed the government for nonpolitical groups. He also wants the White House to supply more information for overtime paid to White House maids, butlers, cooks and other support staff who assisted at these events.

Budget figures show that overtime for White House staffers increased from $845 million in fiscal 1992 to $1.2 million in fiscal 1996. In addition, overtime for housekeeping employees whose services are reimbursed by outside groups, increased from $134,000 to $294,000 between the same periods.

Fun, fun, fun, fun, fun, too, too.

with Collegian Graphics

GET STRANDED
AT THE ONLY BEAD STORE IN AMHERST
A STORE WITH A GREAT VARIETY AND SELECTION OF BEADS, SEMI-PRECIOUS, EUROPEAN GLASS & VENETIAN GLASS, WOOD, CLAY & FACETY BEADS
ALSO AVAILABLE AT AUGUST THE FIRST, GREAT GIFT IDEAS
August the First
197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst Ma. 01002, 413-256-0276

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
TOKYO $799
Roundtrip
Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Euroilpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply
Customs-immigration taxes apply
Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required
PRISM TRAVEL
142 Mercer Ave., NY, NY 10012
212 986-8420*
800-272-9676
* in NYC

American Heart Association
Ignore chest pain and it'll go away.
If you have chest pain, get medical help immediately. Otherwise when the pain stops, your life could too. To learn more, contact your nearest American Heart Association at 1-800-AHA-USA1 or online at http://www.amhrt.org
This space paid for as a public service.
©1992 The American Heart Association

JIM CARREY
TRUST ME.
LIARLIAR
IMAGINE
OPENS MARCH 21. HONEST.
www.universalpictures.com

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
COMING March 26
OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan (888) 211-OCMP
Present
Dining Out
and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates call 545-3500

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadareva Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

My own private protest

Last week hundreds of UMass students launched a protest that drew attention from all over New England. Last year, as a UMass student, I launched a protest that was considerably less conspicuous: I left UMass and began my senior year on domestic exchange at the University of Georgia. On the surface, these two protests may not seem related, but in a very real sense, they were reactions to the same situation.

Wendy Darling

A firm believer in public higher education, I came to UMass because I was offered an academic scholarship and because I had faith in the University's ability to provide me with the education I needed. At first I was pleasantly surprised. My professors were excellent and the university environment introduced me to a wide variety of new ideas, people and cultures. UMass was not at all the garbage heap I had been led to believe it would be.

Slowly, however, the problems of the University began to creep in on my vision of paradise. Many of the buildings were truly decrepit. Outside, the campus was spotted with grassless fields, mud ruts and sickly trees. Because of their small numbers, many African-American students were tokenized in and out of the classroom. The University's computer resources were practically inaccessible to the average student. Food at the dining halls was often inedible. Whitmore was an impenetrable fortress of forms and voice mail hotlines. Through all of this, the expenses on my semester bill kept going up and up and up. If I had not been on scholarship, I would have been in quite a pinch.

Eventually, not even the academics were satisfying to me. The journalism department, from which I am seeking my degree, was (and most certainly still is) obviously woefully underfunded. Its office in Bartlett Hall was tiny and crowded with books and boxes the department had no place to store. Professors worked in what seemed to be converted study carrels. Many courses listed in the official catalog were taught only infrequently, mostly because the department was so understaffed. Even worse, several times I fought tooth and nail to make it into a course only to find that the professor was incompetent — and that I couldn't drop the course because there were no other courses in the department that could take its place.

I became fed up with other aspects of campus. I was sick of hearing from overzealous liberals and idiotic rightwingers. That so many socialists were actually greedy, money-centered children astonished me. GEO was about to kill me with its endless politicizing and pretentious grandstanding. After living on the 2 in 20 Floor for four semesters and serving as Collegian Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues editor for three, I had absorbed and espoused enough radical queer jargon to last me a lifetime.

Finally, however, I had had enough of the politics, the protests, and all the rest of it. I wanted peace and quiet. I wanted a place where things just happened normally. People weren't going to be so picky about everything, so pig-headed. People would just get on with it instead of chewing everything over and making a fuss.

Here at the University of Georgia, I have found that place and, what's more, a place that is free of almost every problem that bothered me at UMass. The buildings on this campus are both handsome and exceptionally well-kept. The grounds of this campus must be seen to be believed — giant magnolias, flowers everywhere (they never stop blooming!), neat lawns and absolutely no trampled paths in the grass. The African-Americans who attend this university are able to live their lives with a great deal more confidence and support than those I knew at UMass. There are more than a dozen student computer labs on campus, all connected to the Internet and supplied with the latest equipment and software available. The labs and accounts are all free. Dining hall food is delicious, plentiful and operates on the all-you-can-eat, as-often-as-you-want plan. The school of journalism is extremely well-funded and provides an amazing array of resources and excellent courses for its students and the community at large.

If I were not a domestic exchange student, I believe the administrative side of this university would please me as well. This school seems to be a tight and well-run ship, where money is not wasted, but instead handled with great care. As for tuition, if I had been a Georgia resident, I would probably have been able to attend this university for next to nothing. In this state, a lottery supports a program that allows any high school graduate with a G.P.A. of 3.0 or greater to go to a state college or university at practically no cost — assuming they keep up their grades. Even if I had not received this scholarship (and 97 percent of the freshmen here do) or even if I had been an out-of-state student, my bills would not be nearly as high as the average UMass student's.

There is one final "problem" absent at UGA. That, my friends, is student activism. With so much to be satisfied about, is it any surprise that students don't protest? There are no rallies, no takeovers. The newspaper is incredibly bland. There are no flyers papering UGA's "Campus Center." If there are radicals or activists there, they are speaking against the wind and a crowd of screaming football fans besides.

The students at UMass have a lot to complain about. I suggest that they do just that and do it as loudly and as often as they can. Instead of running off to some other public university like I did, they should fight for changes at the one they're at. They deserve better than this and so do the people who come to UMass after them. May the struggle eventually lead to victory!

Wendy Darling is a Collegian columnist on domestic exchange from the University of Georgia in Athens, GA.

Sizing up the Sison situation

A key hearing in the Dutch deportation case of Professor Jose Maria Sison will be held on March 19 in Amsterdam. Under pressure from the American and Filipino governments, the Netherlands is trying to expel Jose Maria Sison, a leader of the Philippine revolution. Prof. Sison is also serving as chief political advisor to the National Democratic Front of the Philippines (NDFP) in their negotiations with the Government of the Republic of the Philippines and was the founding Chairperson of the Communist Party of the Philippines.

Chris Johnson

Around the world, revolutionaries, radicals and bourgeois-democrats have rallied to Sison's defense. Already, 10,000 signatures and letters have been sent to the Dutch government protesting the proposed deportation. Rallies held at the Hague in the Netherlands and outside Dutch embassies and consulates have been held in Manila, Los Angeles, New York, Brussels, Berlin, Oslo, Milan, Toronto, Vancouver, San Francisco, Tokyo, Hong Kong, Sydney, Melbourne and Wellington. After spending a decade in solitary confinement under the fascist U.S.-backed Marcos regime, President Aquino canceled his passport while he was abroad in 1988. Sison applied for political asylum in the Netherlands and was granted political refugee status by the Dutch Council of State in 1992.

The U.S. interest in hurting the Filipino revolution is huge. The Philippines has long been a dependable semi-colony for U.S. imperialism, providing raw materials, cheap labor and a market for U.S. goods.

U.S. imperialists directly control enterprises in the Philippines worth over $1.66 billion and account for more than half of the foreign capital invested in the Philippines, with 80 percent of earnings being repatriated. Since 1898, the United States has had a large military presence in the Philippines protecting its interests there and throughout Southeast Asia. Until recently, the largest U.S. military bases outside within U.S. borders were in the Philippines. From 1987 to 1990 the United States gave the Republic of the Philippines $1.3 billion in military aid. U.S. aid accounts for 83 percent of the Philippines military budget.

Both the Philippine and U.S. governments would like to see Sison deported from the Netherlands to the Philippines where he would face incarceration or death from paramilitary organizations.

In addition, a Sison deportation can only be designed to disrupt the negotiations between the revolution and the government, as these negotiations are being held in the Netherlands and Sison is an important advisor to the revolutionaries.

Despite the Council of State refugee ruling, the Dutch Ministry of Justice has called Prof. Sison a "terrorist" and accused him of several crimes he supposedly committed while being held in solitary confinement by the Marcos government. These vague and untrue charges are based on falsified and secret "evidence" supplied by the U.S. and Philippine governments.

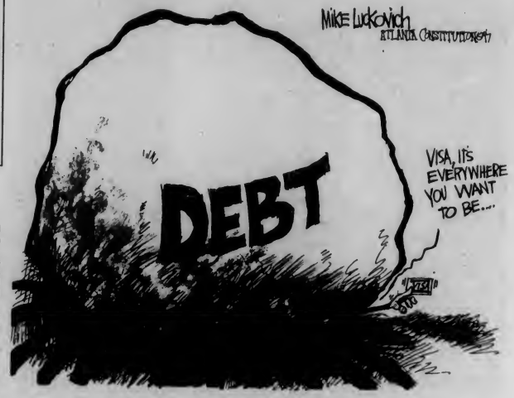
As part of its psychological warfare campaign, the Ramos regime in the Philippines is trying to lure Sison back with a promise of a legislative post.

Careful readers of history will remember that bourgeois-democrat Benito Aquino was lured back to the Philippines by dictator Marcos in the '80s, and then was executed on the airport tarmac. Comrade Sison has no intention of falling for the same trick by the fascist Ramos regime in the Philippines.

In addition, Ramos' offer also inadvertently contradicts the charges by the Dutch Ministry of Justice: Surely a "terrorist" would not be offered a seat in the legislature?

The Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League (RAIL) is organizing to stop the deportation of Professor Sison as part of a campaign in support of the Philippine revolution. We call on all progressive minded people to work with us to expose the treachery of the reactionaries and fight within their system to win legal battles while continuing the struggle and building revolutionary institutions of the oppressed

Readers can send letters protesting the unjust decision of Ministry of Justice to: the Dutch Ministry of Justice to be sent to: The Ministry of Justice, Postbus 30127, GC S-Gravenhage. The Netherlands.



Chris Johnson is a member of the Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Lost in paradise

Luke Meredith

A status report on the life of Luke Meredith:

I'm broke.

It's been snowing for three days. I don't like that.

I have a 10-page paper due in two days. I haven't started that paper. Of course, that's not as bad as the fact that I haven't bought the books yet.

I have, and this is the God-awful truth, $5.92 to my name, and nothing more than three boxes of Stop and Shop pasta, one box of Mac and Cheese, a case of Ramen noodles and some raspberry "drink mix" from August in my cupboard.

Being Luke Meredith ain't too fun these days.

Topping off the stickiness that is my life right now is the knowledge that I am going nowhere for Spring Break. Now, I don't know if the Amherst Chamber of Commerce read my column last week, or they just called up Fleet, checked my account and assumed the obvious, because last night they sent me a funky little brochure in the mail.

(They didn't really, but let's just pretend they did and have some fun, okay?)

It was called, "A Tourists Guide to Spring Break in Amherst." It had a picture of "Reggae Man," the guy that plays the steel drum in every smiling, standing on a sandy white beach with the sun shining in the background. I was intrigued, because it looked like a good time, and I didn't even know we had a sandy white beach in town. Must be Northampton, I thought. Anyhow, I decided to take five minutes and check this thing out.

Here's what I found...

There were a few blurbs about sights to see, like the Lord Jeffrey Amherst Manor, Amherst College and the Mullins Center, stuff like that. But on the back page, there was a curious little article about, "What to do when you're in Amherst." Sounded innocent enough, so I read on. There were five tips, all followed by a little info. I was shocked at what I saw, and repeat them only to warn you. It's a public service I give to you, because I love you guys. (Does that make me a public servant?)

Get hammered with the Townies...

I couldn't believe it.

"Shake your college doldrums away by throwing a few back with the locals," it read. "See how the other half lives, and learn all you never knew about possum, K-Mart and the logistics of paternity suits. Just check out Mike's Westview on a weeknight, and grab the guy in the "Kansas is Big Cock Country" hat, and start chatting away. You'll be entertained for hours!"

To see such a thing in the brochure was appalling. I figured it couldn't get worse. But I read on. I was intrigued.

Spend a day at the Campus Center Pond...

"Bring the kids to the Pond for a fun filled day of sun, sand, water-skiing and chicks. The scenic beauty of the cement skyscrapers in the background, the swaying of the trees as they dump their leaves in the crystal clear brown water and the bubbling springs of the sewer grates all lead to a day you'll never forget. Bring bread, feed the ducks!"

Feed the ducks? What kind of incentive is that? This thing was nuts.

Cruise all the bus-stops for chicks...

This one blew me away. I had to read it.

"Don't let the PVTA take your dream girl away," the brochure read. "Take the top off the convertible, cruise the strip of Amherst and just shout out to any girl you see at any one of our 9,000 bus-stops. If it doesn't work, just turn around and do it again. Don't get discouraged, because you can cruise uptown 37 times in an hour, according to case studies. Just another benefit of the quaint surroundings of the Pioneer Valley."

Could they do that? I was amazed.

Smoke pot and stare at the wall...

A rainy day suggestion, I think.

"When the weather isn't up to par, just head over to the first dred-locked kid you can find and pick up some "reefer." There are plenty of walls in the greater Amherst area to stare at, but if that doesn't get you going, pick up a Slinky and watch it slink down a staircase. We here at the Chamber of Commerce recommend that highly."

This was the final straw. I was floored, but they have me convinced. I'm spending Spring Break in Amherst.

But why do old people always call it "reefer?"

After exploring my options, and having such a helpful brochure at my disposal, I decided I'll spend most of Spring Break testing the last proposal. I've even ordered a Slinky and one of those "Magic Eye" posters, so I'll have plenty to stare at. Let the fun begin.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

McManus & Lemar must be removed!

To the Editor:

We, the members of the Board of Student Businesses, are outraged at the recent flyers that have posted by Brian McManus and R.J. Lemar. The flyers state, "Save Antonio's!" When people tell you that privatization is bad for this campus, they're trying to tell you that Antonio's shouldn't be allowed to serve pizza and compete with the [Dining Commons]. This is a complete misrepresentation. We are highly offended that candidates are able to run on non-issues and falsehoods in an attempt to win votes. The same candidates have also stated on other flyers that they are the only pro-privatization candidates that want to protect student businesses. However, McManus and Lemar have not attended any of the Board of Student Businesses meetings or informed us of how they plan to protect student businesses and their customers.

The Board of Student Businesses is asking for respect and true information regarding the issue of privatization. We are asking that the Antonio's flyers be removed and flyers apologizing for the false information be put in their place. We are also calling for the removal of their nominations for SGA president and Student Trustee. We cannot allow students to falsely advertise in an attempt to win votes if it is simply false information being given to the constituents. This is inappropriate and unethical. We must have standards and rules that will not allow something like this to ever happen.

Lorin J. Zimter and the Board of Student Businesses

Privatize one step at a time

To the Editor:

I think that both sides of the debate on privatization on campus have equally good points. Unfortunately, neither side has evidence supporting their predictions. I suggest the University perform a study by allowing one outside company to rent space in the Campus Center for one semester or one year. They should define the space, then open it up to bids from local businesses. They can choose a business based on how much they will pay for the space, and how many students they plan to employ. Certainly one business can't produce all the negative effects that the opposition to privatization fears, nor can it produce all the good effects the proponents expect. However once we have some information on the actual effects here at UMass, we can revisit the debate.

Robert S. Huss, Ph.D. Dept. of Chemical Engineering

Hooray to all!

To the Editor:

Hooray for the student activists who reminded the University administration that they must be ever more vigilant in striving for social justice!

Hooray for the Collegian, its reporters and editors who could teach the forth estate a thing or two about reporting a story!

Hooray for the University that negotiated with the students and provided a safe environment for them by surrounding them with friendly police.

And Hooray for the University that not only talks the talk but walks the walk by striving to create a climate of community diversity and social justice on its campus!

Last week's demonstration should be celebrated and honored. It was student activism and University reaction at its best. How sad that the media once again misses the story.

Barbara and David Schneider Marblehead

Letters to the editor should be typed, 400 words or less, and signed with contact info (phone number, email, address) for confirmation purposes. Send them to Mike Burke c/o Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Cntr, UMass, Amherst MA 01003 or email them to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Multicultural Affairs

Wednesday, March 12, 1997

The students united...

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Roughly 1,500 demonstrators outside of Goodell showed their support for the protesters inside.

A note from the Editor

The Goodell student takeover will go down in history as a reminder of the power that students united can possess. Never before had there been a gathering as diverse, organized and consistently strong as the one we all witnessed last week. It is in our best interest that we do not forget the reasons for uniting and the cause of our struggle, so that those who follow us as students of this University will be able to stand that much closer to justice.

While all of these students of color may seem to back up Chancellor Scott's drive for diversity, it is also an affirmation that the Chancellor's "multiculturalism" is merely a facade. Hundreds of students would not protest under a banner that reads, "we are not your poster children, Chancellor Scott," if it were true. Nor would the Chancellor act to institute an Honors College at the expense of students of color if he were sincere.

Together with the ACTING Provost Patricia Crosson and others, the Chancellor has developed a plan to include a Commonwealth College with our University in order to bring prestige and honor to our school. However, in doing so, many of the fledgling plans for ethnic studies will never even be given a chance to exist.

To give an example of the blatant bias present, the ACTING Provost has insisted on offering Dutch language courses. Often they have to be cancelled for not attaining an enrollment of more than five (the required minimum). At the same time, the ACTING Provost refuses to actively support Asian American and Latin American Studies while attempting to completely abolish the Indigenous Education/ Native American focus of study program out of the School of Education. Clearly, because of the desire among students of color to have these programs, it would be a lucrative decision for the University to fund these studies.

The desire is everywhere. Currently, there are students working arduously to implement an Asian American Studies Program. The graduate students who run the courses are already overworked and receive no stipend for their contributions. And the demands of the Asian students on this campus is immense for each semester the classes are filled.

The question of implementing these ethnic studies programs was one of the demands given to the administrators on March 3rd, at the Goodell Takeover. Its response given by the ACTING Provost Crosson was inaccurate and incomplete showing her lack of concern for the voices of students of color.

The commitment given to the Goodell student protesters by the University should also be a concern of ours, for it will play into how the continuing negotiations pan out. What the students involved must remember is that we are now walking on administrative territory, where the glamour of a administrator's catered dinner and smile of a vice chancellor can lend students into a drunken state. Thus making it easy to forget the cause of the students involved in Goodell as well as the cry of injustice that resounded throughout the world.

For those who may not know it, the Graduate Student Senate has sponsored a UMass Student Takeover web page (http://www-vms.oit.umass.edu/~gss/takeover.html) which chronicles the articles written by the Collegian and other press. With over a thousand hits so far, from as far away as Singapore, Hong Kong, and universities and colleges across the United States, as well as the U.S. Congress, Massachusetts State Senate, and U.S. Military. The page has been able to provide instant access on the development of the student takeover and the progress of the students demands on financial aid and Affirmative Action. In addition, a number of letters of support from organizations and other individuals are included as well as a list of those who provided material support for the struggle.

— Christine Soh

...WILL NEVER BE DEFEATED!

Where the blame lies

Lisa Chiu

One of the hardest things I had to do last week during the Goodell takeover, was put on my reporter's face. I sat through over 70 hours of meetings with the administration completely silent. I quietly observed as major campus events unfolded before my eyes.

As a journalist I covered the facts. But as a student and person of color, I knew the struggle and the pain of the students only too well. I knew what it meant to be the only person of color in your classes and one of few in your workplace. I now understood how hard it is to try to make significant progressive changes at this University — just so that someone else won't have to go through what you went through — only to be stopped in your tracks. I knew the necessity and the gravity of the situation inside of Goodell.

When I sat through the negotiations and listened to the language of the administration, I was not only angry but completely disheartened at the total lack of compassion for the fact that the students felt so disenfranchised that they had to take over a building in order to be taken seriously.

Despite what Whitmore may tell you, there are distinct individuals who are completely against a diverse and multicultural university. And since the administration tried to divide and conquer the students so well last week, its only fair that I be allowed to divide up the administration today.

Key figures of blame in the UMass administration

• Acting Provost and Vice Chancellor for Academic Matters, Patricia Crosson (annual salary $115,876):

Seventy percent of the UMass budget goes towards Crossons's office. She in charge of all the colleges and their Deans, the academic budget as well as several other areas. Throughout the negotiations, she was said to be one of two staunch opponents to the demands. Not to mention the fact that the student negotiation team inside Goodell gave her a unanimous vote of no confidence.

Acting Provost Crosson also supported International Programs Director, Barbara Burn in a Faculty Senate meeting last semester.

Burn has been criticized by several students of color for failing to diversify her office, the International Programs Office (IPO), continuing to use the word "foreign" to describe international students from the Third World, as well as treating Third World international students with less care than European international students.

Burn was quoted in the October issue of the Graduate Voice in an interview with Voice reporter and graduate student from India, Ali Mir, as saying, "First, we [the IPO] continue to use the term Foreign instead of International... We are not committed one way or another. But see, I am an international person. You [Ali Mir] are a foreign person. International includes Americans and the term therefore is ambiguous." Again, Acting Provost Crosson supported these statements.

But behind all of the racism of the Acting Provost, is her emotional wants as well — she really wants to be the actual Provost. And since her position is being decided upon as this article is being written, it was crucial for her to remain in good light to the Administration. In order to meet the students' demands, she would have had to take funding away from her deans. Taking funds away from her deans would mean that they will not support her in the position that she is seeking. Essentially, her job was on the line, and in order to insure that she still had a strong running, she completely ignored the demands of the students inside of Goodell. Her job meant more than the students.

• Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance, Paul Page (annual salary not available, but roughly between 115,000 – 130,000):

Vice Chancellor Page was also a staunch opponent to meeting the students' demands along with Acting Provost Crosson. Page's rationale was money. As Vice Chancellor of finance, he knew that giving in to any of the student's demands would mean less money to other areas on campus that he deemed more important. His concern for not favoring the student's demands, other than failure to see the need for more diversity and multiculturalism on campus (a large part of it), was monetary.

Case in point; he hires Elizabeth Dale as the Director of Business and Facilities Services of the Campus Center. She was the administrator who dealt with all the controversy surrounding the apprehension of a black man who was accused of stealing, and later found innocent. Dale's background is in Hotel management. She has never had a job which dealt with students or student services. Her job, under the supervision of Page, is to make sure that the university is a financially profitable place, not whether students of color are being discriminated against.

Facilities in the Campus Center are currently operating with half the number of student staff than before — saving the university roughly $100,000, at the students' and workers' expense. At the same time, Page is willing to spend $80,000 on a private management company in Utah, who recommended a chemical detergent last year, which left several employees severely ill.

Privatization of the University is also Page's pet project. He is known to be anti-union and in support of bringing in private management and corporations. What this means to working families and students are clear.

• Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, Tom Robinson (annual salary $108,649):

The biggest reasons why Robinson deserves blame is because he was the key administrator who was actually here in 1992, while administrators such as Chancellor David K. Scott and Deputy Chancellor Marcellette Williams were not. He saw the students concerns and needs, and during negotiations he continued to state that the university has done a lot for students of color. It was no wonder that he ran or was sent out of town on some pressing assignment by the second day of negotiations inside of Goodell. The Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, afraid of students? No way.

And then there is his history, last spring he told the Collegian that he felt the 20 percent figure for entering freshman was "unrealistic" since the demographics of Massachusetts high school seniors did not represent a 20 percent ALANA. One would think he's never heard of out of state students. Robinson also blamed the Native American students on campus for not following up on the re-naming of Columbus Day, one of the agreements of '92. Not to be outdone, he also blamed area schools for failure to establish the Upward Bound Program an item on both the '92 agreements and the demands of '97.

• Chancellor, David K. Scott (annual salary $149,999)

After a week of vacationing in the Yucatan, Scott returned yesterday and issued a statement which does not specifically address even one of the student demands in Goodell or the administrative commitments to the students. Scott's blame is clear — failure to even come back to UMass while its multicultural agenda was crumbling before the public eye, failure to address the student demands after he came back and above all failure to do anything about any of his top administrators who clearly do not want or care for a real diverse and multicultural UMass. Scott should remember that you're only as good as the company you keep.

Lisa Chiu is a Collegian columnist.

Keep up the fight

Deepika Marya

On March 3 this year, when a group of students decided to walk into the Controller's Office in Goodell and stop work, it was a wake up call for the administrators. They realized that matters had come to a head and a resolution was in the waiting. The students called it a "peaceful demonstration" against the callousness and injustices they went through many times over. It was a call to the attention of faculty and administrators what students need for a place of learning to be congenial to its purpose. The following days intensified the take-over, students on this campus and other colleges recognized the violation of student needs and came out to support those who were occupying Goodell. This was a protest against the priorities of the University.

Negotiations began on the very day occupation began. There were few assumptions the students had related to administrators truly understanding what the students wanted and why we went about demanding the way we did. Civil disobedience has been an expression of protest that is non- violent and yet powerful enough to draw the attention of all around.

Since task forces and committees rarely end up resolving anything, to get somewhere we decided to sit and wait until agreements were written down. We wanted to separate the strands; student's needs and perception of student's needs. First, the University claims to attend to its customers but in a slip-shod manner, with a lackadaisical attitude, with a nervous twitch that tells them maybe its not that important for students to be satisfied and have faith in an institution of learning. Our demands have been fractionally met (financial and otherwise) and negotiations will go on perhaps the rest of the semester regarding the unmet demands. So the fight is not over. We have begun to talk about trust and faith with the administrators but we are far from it because we have a long way to go regarding our needs.

The negotiating team is a group of ALANA and non- ALANA students who reflected the needs of certain communities on campus. They decided on the action of non- action (occupying Goodell) and their conviction attracted other students to join in. The faith students put in us, those few who are negotiating for the rest is crucial when we are starting discussions. Those who we were fighting against while we were in Goodell remain the forces that we must combat in the days ahead. Let the wake-up call not turn into a false alarm. The University is still not accessible to low income families; students of color will still have to hard a fight to get in; and a good education remains the privilege of the few. It will be a shame to lose momentum or sight of what we went into Goodell for, or what we have received. We should remember theirs was a good faith gesture indicating that the administrators were willing to listen.

The week long demonstration inspired many on the outside and inside of Goodell to hope for a better tomorrow. Yes, hope is eternal but some of us made it seem real. That hope balanced with sound strategies and plans for the future will bring us closer to where our friends and supporters want us to be and want to see themselves.

Resistance has led to victory and failures. This time we are on the threshold of victory. Let the administration realize at every meeting what they ought to have given as necessities. The time to celebrate is not yet, what we did at Goodell was remarkable but we have yet to see the follow up to the Initial gesture of good faith and trust from the administration. And as we go through the coming months let us not stop telling ourselves — the students united will never be defeated.

Deepika Marya is a UMass graduate student.

A testimonial to not forget

Justin Beatty

GOODELL...

The word still has an eerie ring to it for me. It was because of the administration that I spent more time in that building last week than I spent in any other single building on campus in the past month. Still, I want to thank the administration for putting the students of this campus in a position so that they could come together to attempt to right what we see as affronts to our situation. For the first time in my years here at the University of Massachusetts, I saw hundreds of students put energy and love into standing up for themselves and for others.

At about 8:30 a.m. on Monday, I got a call from my friend reminding me about Monday's rally at the Student Union. He told me after I arrived to be ready for the next step. I immediately knew what he meant because we had been through this kind of thing before.

As members of the Native American Students Association in particular and as members of the ALANA community, we know we all have responsibilities to ourselves and to each other. At 10 a.m. we would take Goodell. I had just enough time to get our drum, with the help of another friend an ALANA ally, and get back to Goodell. I can say that taking the building was the easy part.

After we were inside, I began to realize the ramifications of what we had done. It wasn't the fact that there were no showers, or just a single phone to use. It wasn't the lack of food or bedding that was hard to deal with. It was the waiting, the not knowing how the administration would respond. Would they try to throw us out? Would they try to stall? Would they give us a non-committal proposal as they had done so many times in the past? No, there was something different about this time. The love and feeling of community spread like wildfire. All 190-plus of us inside worked hard to keep our spirits up, to comfort and respect each other because it would have been hell if we didn't.

The University played the waiting game and on a small level it worked. We were frustrated with their inaction and some began to get discouraged. This is when you see who has what it takes to go the whole way. Some students left, in the middle of the night, because they couldn't take it anymore. By the same token so many more snuck in and showed us that the work we were doing was not in vain.

The generosity of the community at large was an inspiration to many of us and enlightening as well. I can't describe the feeling of watching hundreds of students crying out, "NO JUSTICE! NO PEACE!" in support of our actions.

It was an emotional roller coaster. From anger, to frustration, to sadness, to happiness, to aggravation, to boredom, to fulfillment, and back and forth again. I heard the words love, community, support, unity, generosity, rights, us, we, togetherness and one of my personal favorites... bureaubonics, more in this past week than in almost all of my 24 years of existence. These small words hold more meaning for me than the action of taking over the building itself. I made new friends, the saying "necessity makes strange bedfellows" comes curiously to mind, this I will never forget. I reaffirmed old friendships and squashed beefs I had with people I didn't get along with.

It's hard when the Johnny come lately's claim to have a better plan than the people who had been involved from day one. It's hard when you see the leaders frazzled at times. But we showed the administration and ourselves, that we are not cattle to be herded along to financial slaughter. Instead we are a community that can and will stand up for ourselves, putting our differences aside and making things happen in a positive fashion.

I don't ever want to forget the love and support I was shown. If we don't forget, we will be motivated to work harder, to better ourselves, our respective communities and the community as a whole. In the words of ATCQ... Keep It Movin!!

Much love.

Justin Beatty is a UMass student.

Arts & Living

Wednesday, March 12, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

No substitute for Who's reissues on MCA

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

In the great Holy Trinity of British rock, the Who have always placed a distant third. During the '60s, when the Beatles were redefining popular music and the Rolling Stones were setting the precedent which nearly every rock band since has followed, the Who were dismissed as merely the loud band that smashed their instruments. To write them off as such is criminal; the Who's output during the latter half of the decade matches that of their contemporaries in creativity and ranks as some of the most innovative and exciting rock music ever made.

Finally, though, the Who are getting the respect they deserve. MCA Records is in the process of rereleasing the entire Who back catalogue; unlike their shoddy '80s issues, the new versions feature digitally-remastered sound, exhaustively thorough liner notes and as many bonus tracks as the discs can hold. At long last, the Who's peak years of 1965 to 1970 are being fully documented in all their glory.

During their first couple of years as a band, the Who primarily released singles. However, these Pete Townshend– penned records

"1967 will forever be known to rock historians as the year the Beatles released Sgt. Pepper. However, in a perfect world, it would be known as the year of The Who Sell Out."

included the amphetamine–driven, Mod anthems, "I Can't Explain" and "Anyway, Anyhow, Anywhere," the satirical and perverse "Substitute," "I'm A Boy" and "Happy Jack," and their feedback–laden manifesto, "My Generation." The lack of musical sophistication was compensated by excessive energy and attitude (at this point, the Who were still living up to their "Maximum R&B" tag).

The Who Sings My Generation, their debut album, is an uneven mixture of James Brown covers, surf–rock instrumentals and pop nuggets like, "Instant Party (Circles)" and "The Kids Are All Right." Look for the expanded reissue later this year.

By late–'66, though, the Who began to emerge as something more than just another beat group. Their second LP, A Quick One, features the menacing, "Run Run Run," the gorgeously snide, "So Sad About Us" and an ace version of Martha and the Vandellas' "Heatwave." Each band member contributed songs; bassist John Entwistle established his macabre persona with "Boris the Spider" and "Whiskey Man," drummer Keith Moon contributed the bizarre "Cobwebs And Strange" and Townshend unveiled his self– styled "mini–opera," the ambitious "A Quick One (While He's Away)." The rerelease doubles the album's length, featuring such oddities and obscurities as an acoustic, "Happy Jack," the "Batman" theme, the surf–o–licious "Bucket T" and "Barbara Ann" and a truly apocalyptic medley of "My Generation" and the patriotic British anthem "Land Of Hope And Glory."

Nineteen Sixty–Seven will forever be known to rock historians as the year the Beatles released Sgt. Pepper. However, in a perfect world, it would be known as the year of The Who Sell Out. Anchored by the devastating single, "I Can See For Miles," Sell Out is at once a spoof of the marketing of teenage pop culture, an expose of the seedy underside of romance and a staged pirate radio broadcast. With fake ads for Heinz Baked Beans, Rotosound guitar strings and Odorono deodorant sandwiched between such classic tracks as, "Armenia City In The Sky," "Tattoo," "Rael 1&2" and "Mary Anne With The Shaky Hand," this is probably the Who's most listenable and certainly their most enjoyable album.

All of Townshend's operatic and thematic pretentious of the mid–'60s culminated in 1969 with the infamous Tommy. Album, movie, Broadway play — you name it — Tommy is the project most often associated with the band. The "deaf, dumb, and blind" pinball wizard's story is actually pretty sedate on record; for the first time, the Who released a largely acoustic album. However, as later live performances would prove, Tommy would clearly benefit from the band's dynamic live show as well as the sheer power of Townshend's overdriven guitar.

The Who were arguably the best live rock act of the '60s — their performances at the Monterey Pop Festival, Woodstock and the Stones' Rock N' Roll Circus can attest to that. Managing the difficult task of bludgeoning out extremely loud music with dexterity and a surprising amount of grace, the band had an innate sense of timing and focus. Two new releases of shows from 1970, Live At Leeds and Live At The Isle Of Wight Festival, document the Who at the height of its power.

Leeds was originally issued the year it was recorded; however, the original release only featured five tracks with the snap–crackle–and–pop sound of a bootleg. MCA's 1995 reissue, though, features a pristine audio track as well as a total of 14 songs. In addition to the rhythm and blues/rockabilly standards, "Fortune Teller," "Young Man Blues" and "Summertime Blues," a good number of their early singles are also performed. The 15 minute long "My Generation" is an awe inspiring jam which touches upon some more vintage R&B shouting as well as, "See Me, Feel Me, Touch Me, Heal Me" from Tommy before careening back to its chaotic starting point. It must be heard to be truly understood — words can't do it justice. Absolutely incredible.

Live At The Isle Of Wight (released on the Columbia/ Legacy label) one–ups Leeds with the inclusion of the full Tommy opera. Complete with Townshend's sardonic "assemble the orchestra" introduction, this live version illustrates the endless possibilities of the simple guitar/bass/drums line–up. Vocalist Roger Daltrey never sounded so good, and rarely has since. Moon was also at the top of his craft; his talents behind the traps had yet to be diminished by booze and drugs. In short, this was the Who's finest hour. The following year, they would release the bloated Who's Next and embark down the steep road of artistic decline.

Although all of the albums mentioned here are well worth the money, perhaps the best place for the casual or novice Who fan to start would be with My Generation — The Very Best Of The Who. All of the band's early singles are represented (including the late–'60s gems, "Pictures Of Lily" and "Magic Bus"), as well as much of their prime '70s material. A far more interesting album, though, is the budget–priced soundtrack to the documentary The Kids Are All Right.

Featuring a few studio cuts and a slew of live rarities, Kids is essentially a live best–of compilation. However, the pricey boxed set 30 Years Of Maximum R&B devotes far too much space to the Who's patchy later work, and many of the "rare" tracks advertised have since been released on the deluxe reissues discussed here. The bottom line, though, is this— check out some of these albums! They contain great music from a great band at the height of their power and creativity. Very few artists have matched the standards set by the Who at their peak.

Richman croons in Noho

By Matthew Ludvino
Collegian Correspondent

JONATHAN RICHMAN
Iron Horse Music Hall
March 11

NORTHAMPTON — As he stood downstairs at the Iron Horse before the show, staring numbly at pictures of low key performers who had graced the music hall at one time or another, Jonathan Richman looked more like a vagrant than a pop phenomenon, with his tattered red shirt, and worn out blazer. He has the saddest eyes I've ever seen, even on stage where he seems happiest — stretching and contorting the English language to the bemusement of the audience, telling dead–ended anecdotes in his nasal drawl, and warming the crowd with simple love songs.

Richman is a complete showman, and remains the final word in low–fidelity pop music. He strolled somberly on stage, mumbled something about warming up with a couple of instrumentals and belted into a quiet set of music. His drummer, Tommy Larkin (subtle, cool and unaffected) relentlessly tapped out a steady rhythm under Jonathan's clean '50s guitar sound, and infectious crooning.

Richman is the center of attention at any given moment, and has maintained what could only be described as an anti–rock–and–roll aesthetic. His amplifier is minuscule, his drummer is discreet to the point of non–existence and all eyes remain glued on Richman.

You never quite know what will creep into a Richman set, as he seems to work according to whim. This evening featured obscure murmurings about Neil Armstrong and U.F.O.'s, bursts of the worst guitar distortion in the world (a joke that worked every time), and instrumental versions of "Sex Machine" and "Moon River."

What no one In the Iron Horse seemed to understand, is that Richman is neither a comedian, nor an amusing lounge act. He is a songwriter who composes some of the catchiest dance songs around. Just watching Richman move (some might even say he has the most graceful hips in show business) should have ignited a frenzy of movement. The tables should have been cleared, partners chosen and a dinner theater turned into a dance–hall. But alas, the Iron Horse would never allow such folly, and Richman fans had to remain content in their seats.

Richman moved through two sets of material in a manic fit of moods and tempos. Aside from the standard crowd pleasers, "Vampire Girl," "Lesbian Bar," etc., he whirled through an eclectic mash of songs like, "Van Gogh," the oddly sardonic, "Let Her Go Into the Darkness" and of course his boyish ode to the "Fender Stratocaster." But officially at 9:15, Richman broke my heart. The recent divorcee sang a song called "Best Friend" and I swear his eyes were welling up, as he sang sweetly about loss. But regardless, Richman did his best to fool the audience, and the showman sang one last song, a cappella before he said "good night" and blended quietly into the crowd.

Tonite Retro Nite Music of The 70's and 80's

Weekly Drink Specials

Amaretto Sour 2.00 16oz

Southern Comfort & Coke 2.00 16oz

Red Dog 16oz Drafts 1.50

Rolling Rock 12 oz Bottles 1.50

Appetizers & Nachos 1/2 Price 3-5 and 7-11

No Cover Charge

fun•food•spirits THE PUB

15 East Pleasant St.

Read the Massachusetts Daily Collegian ONLINE!

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

updated nightly

RESPIRATORY THERAPIST

Full-time, 32 hour night position available for certified Respiratory Therapist. Thurs., Fri., and Sat. nights. Hours flexible. Therapists perform all respiratory care procedures, draw and analyze blood gases, set up and monitor sleep apnea studies (will train), perform ventilator care and assist on Code Blues.

Requires two years of college, 6 months to one year experience, and MA licensed CRTT or RRT.

Part-time position also available.

HISTOTECH Part-time

HT (ASCP) registered or eligible needed for 20-hour position in modern automated histology lab. Duties to include embedding, microtomy and special staining

Send cover letter and resume to Human Resources Department, Cooley Dickinson Hospital, 30 Locust Street, Northampton, MA 01061-6001. An equal opportunity/ affirmative action employer. We do not discriminate.

Cooley Dickinson Hospital

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE

50% Off!!

Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.

Classes Start Wed, March 12th 7:00pm Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst

Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover

1-800-U-CAN-MIX

Act Now! Space Limited!!

STUDY THIS AD

This is not a test...It's an opportunity. An opportunity to manage a fun, productive team while establishing relationships and gaining experience for the future. Examine these benefits:

- Hours designed around your class schedule
- Full time hours available during semester break
- $500 Hiring Bonus
- Learning management skills you can use for a life time
- Advancement opportunities after graduation
- Positions available in Easthampton, Northampton, Hadley

The prerequisites? Ambition, effective people skills, proven leadership ability, and good academic credentials. If you think you can make the grade, send/fax your resume or apply in person at: Burger King: attn: Bob Turner, 353 Russell St., Hadley, MA, 01035 Fax: 413-527-7654

"Working Together...To Be The Best"

F.P.S. Inc is an Independent Franchisee of Burger King Corporation.

25 CENTRAL

young, hip clothes

downstairs, Thornes Marketplace Northampton, MA 586.8017

Redefine the Summer Months.

Attend Brandeis University Summer School

Give your summer new meaning. Make it a summer you'll never forget. Soak up the knowledge that will get you ahead.

Earn credits...explore new interests accelerate your degree

ASK ABOUT OUR EARLY ENROLLMENT DISCOUNT!

As a summer school student, you will be taught in small classroom settings by regular faculty. This means you are assured the same high standards of excellence enjoyed by our students during the regular academic year.

And because we're conveniently located near the junction of Rte. 128 and the Mass. Pike, you will spend less time in the car and more time learning.

To receive a Summer Bulletin, call the Brandeis Summer Program Office at 617-736-3424, FAX us at 617-736-3420 or reach us by e-mail: summerschool@logos.cc.brandeis.edu.

Check out our offerings on the Web: http://www.brandeis.edu/sumsch/Rabb.html

- 9th Annual Brandeis Summer Music Festival
- Archaeological Field Research in Israel
- Brandeis in Cracow
- Intensive Hebrew Language Institute
- Law, Medicine, and Health Policy Program
- Liberal Arts
- Premedical Sciences

hello, 545.3500

Collegian Classifieds will make you smile. 545-3500

Carter Family reissues revisits country's past

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

THE CARTER FAMILY
Give Me The Roses While I Live: Their Complete Victor Recordings 1932–33
Rounder Records

One of America's first song craftsmen, A.P. Carter, along with his wife Sara and sister–in–law Maybelle, created a sound from Tennessee that pre–dated the bluegrass music that Bill Monroe later invented in Kentucky, but had the same overall feel of life's dependence on religion, lonesome feelings and yearnings for home but a more gentle way of getting it across. The press back then gave it a new name, as it was something a little more homey and soulful than most American folk. They called it country music.

Rounder Records' commendable multi–disc series tracing the Carter Family's rise to popularity from the late '20s to the early '30s is now on its sixth volume. This disc is filled with the same elevated three–part harmonies and Maybelle's invented style of bass picking on the acoustic guitar that graced the previous five volumes. Though in '32 and '33, there was division amongst the family, which somehow didn't actually break up or affect the line–up of the group — Sara and A.P. divorced.

Back in the hills of Tennessee in those days, divorce was still something quite taboo, but the rocky marriage between the lead arranger of the Carter Family's adapted material and their lead singer just could not follow the local norms and Sara, especially, felt the marriage had no more to offer anyone. Not that she wanted to break up the group, though.

Just because there was never much love in the recording room, there was still room for some love songs, and Sara lent her stern voice to the mid–19th century courtship tune, "Sweet As The Flowers In May," "The Winding Stream" and "The Spirit Of Love Watches Over Me."

Also, religion was a deep current in the musical flood of the Family as they were, after all, from the bible belt. "Will The Roses Bloom In Heaven" questions what's on the other side, and "I Wouldn't Mind Dying" testifies that they'd welcome death a lot sooner if they found that there was nothing after, and despite their riff, Sara and A.P. take a tremendous duet on this song. "The Sun Of The Soul" mourns religious apathy with passively rocking guitar. "The Church In The Wildwood" also graces the magnificent three– part harmony between Sara, A.P. and Maybelle.

With the Carter Family, we see what country music once was — a deep testimonial, confessional and haunting music as sublime as the blue haze over the Smoky Mountains. B+

COURTESY MERCURY RECORDS

ERIN GO BRAGH
Celebrate St. Patty's day a week early with the rollicking Irish folk–rock of Black 47, tonight at Pearl Street In Northampton.

■ mosby

continued from page 10

Minutewomen. Mosby shared her thoughts on what to expect for the rest of the season.

"There's still room for improvement, and right now we are ranked 15, and I still have several tricks that I haven't done in competition yet, so if I can get those into the routines, we can definitely improve our scores and in the rankings," Mosby said.

"The strongest aspect of the team is probably spirit — how we are able to go into a meet and just pull each other on and really do our best, even if it's not our best day,"

Another important factor, said Mosby, is the coach, Dave Kuzara.

"I like Dave a lot, of course having a new coach takes some getting used to, but we get along great, and I trust him to make the right decisions for me. We work well together," Mosby said.

"Dave is very important because I think one of his strongest points is his recruiting and that's how we get all the good gymnasts in here. That's what makes up the whole team, right there, so I'd say that's pretty important.

"Also, in the gym he gets everyone going and he always knows what to say," Mosby said.

Mosby said that she considers herself a real team–player, and enjoys being able to cheer for everyone. But being part of a team can also be a lot of pressure, where scores don't just count for yourself. So far, Mosby has made a smooth transition from competing individually, to competing with a team.

"I felt a little bit of pressure, especially if you are up towards the end of the line–up, and if there has been a previous fall already and you know that you have to hit," Mosby said. "I'm still not fully adjusted to it, but it's coming along.

"I guess Dave expects me to do all–around in most meets and as long as I go out there and hit, everything will fall into place," Mosby said.

Though it's only her first season, Mosby has commanded everyone's attention, especially from the UMass fans.

"Fans have been great. It's really neat to do gymnastics and have everyone there cheer you on, then when you are walking around campus the next week to have people recognize you and know who you are," Mosby said.

And for those who don't know who she is, there's no doubt Mosby will be making lots of noise in the years to come.

Hit Jackpot!

No risk gambling... Gift Certificates

We want you and your votes to be heard!

BALLOT COUNTERS NEEDED

TIP the Scales to '97

MONEY $ MONEY $ MONEY $ MONEY $ MONEY

Apply at The Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement

UMass' Best!

The Collegian Poll Rules:

1. Ballots must be dropped of at The Collegian office in the basement of the Campus Center or mailed to 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003.
2. No Xeroxed ballots.
3. One ballot per person
4. Ballots must be filled out with reasonable completeness. Ballots less than half of the blanks will be disqualified.
5. Independent Ballot Referees are hired.
6. Decisions of Ballot Referees are final.
7. All Ballots due by Thursday, March 13, 1997.

WIN PRIZES!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian's UMass' Best is intended to be a good natured contest among the local community. It is a fun poll based solely on UMass student opinions. This is not a harsh competition with results that have deep and lasting significance. Please do not take it as such, but rather as a basic published poll.

Ballot

Name: _____
Address: _____
Phone #: _____
Student ID#: _____

I. UMass Grub
1. Best Pizza Place _____
2. Best Sub Shop _____
3. Best Place to Go on a Date _____
4. Best Place to Eat if Your Parents are Paying _____
5. Best Ice Cream Shop _____
6. Best Chinese Restaurant _____
7. Best Italian Food _____
8. Best Breakfast (Hangover Cure) _____
9. Best Bagel Shop _____
10. Best Vegetarian Place _____

II. UMass Weekend
1. Best Liquor Store _____
2. Best Coffee Shop _____
3. Best Place to Start the Night Out _____
4. Best Place to Finish the Night Out _____
5. Best Shot _____
6. Best Beer _____
7. Best Drinking Game _____
8. Best Bartender (What Bar?) _____

III. Shops & Services
1. Best Grocery Store _____
2. Best Florist _____
3. Best Clothing Store _____
4. Best Gas Station _____
5. Best Bike Shop _____
6. Best Bookstore _____
7. Best Hair Salon _____
8. Best Place to Work Out _____
9. Best Tan Salon _____
10. Best Place to Buy Condoms _____

IV. Arts & Entertainment
1. Best Place to Hear Live Music _____
2. Best Local Band _____
3. Best Radio Station _____
4. Best Music Store _____
5. Best Place to Play Pool _____
6. Best Cheap Date _____
7. Best Video Store _____
8. Best Movie _____
9. Best TV Show _____

V. Unique UMass' Best
1. Best Thing About UMass _____
2. Best Apartment Complex _____
3. Best Class _____
4. Best Reason to Miss Class _____
5. Best Reason to Hand in a Paper Late _____
6. Best Professor _____
7. Best Place to Read The Collegian _____
8. Best Excuse for Not Graduating in 4 Years _____
9. Best Place to Study _____

FILL OUT A BALLOT FOR A CHANCE TO WIN A PRIZE!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Congratulations to the New Members of Alpha Chi Omega! Welcome Katie, Shannon, Jennifer B., Ali, Leanne, Amie, Gina, Liz, Laney, Nicole, Susan, Beth, Cathy, Jamie R., Katie S., Jennifer S., Marianne, Jamie S., Kimra Love, The Sisters of AXO

Excellent 4 bedroom/2 bath apt.

FOR RENT

on bus line. Beginning 8/1/97. Call 253-6301 4 info

1985 318i BMW 100K miles. perfect exterior and interior. $2000 or B/O 546-3830

AUTO

1988 Ford Escort 5-speed, A/C, 119K, runs well. $1900 or B/O. 533-8413

Loving, responsible, non-smoker

EMPLOYMENT

to care for 2 year old infant sons in South Hadley home. Refarances required! 536-1899

Summer Jobs- Martha's Vineyard Island Food Products is now accepting applications for warehouse/delivery positions. Housing available for exceptional candidates. Interviews will be held in Amherst on Wednesday, March 19. For more info or application, Contact: Brian C. Smith, IFP, Box 4068, Vineyard Haven, MA 02568 (508)693-2030

Summer Jobs for the Environment $2500-$4000/Summer. Campaign for clean air and water Protect endangered species Make A Difference

EMPLOYMENT

Offices in 33 states
Campaign To Save The Environment
1-800-75-EARTH

Cruise Lines Hiring Earn up to $2000s/month plus free world travel (Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary (919)918-7767 ext C180. (Member, Better Business Bureau CARE Program)

Alaska Employment Earn up to $3000-$6000+/month in fisheries, parks, resorts, airfare, food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

Silver Jewelry- Buy Wholesale Direct from Manufacturer- Sell To Students. $99 Investment Brings You $400. Call (800)256-3491

Drivers Wanted Apply at Pinocchio's between 2:00pm. and 5:00pm No phone calls

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Work in America's National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors Call (206)971-3624 ext N5018 (We are a research and publishing company)

Baichertown Recreation Dept. Seeking swim coaches (May-July) Experience preferred. M-F, EOE, ADA. Call Beth, Day: (413)323-0419 Night: (413)967-4651

National Parks Hiring! Plus Forest, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting Companies. Up to $12/hour. Nationwide Openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext. R180

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted

EMPLOYMENT

"Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group. 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

Take over lease NOW in Brandywine. Call Liz 549-6850

FOR RENT

College Kids Welcome to Cape Cod 1-5 bedroom homes for the season. Reasonable rates Honey Sparco (508)398-9367, (508)394-2857

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-8000

Leather Jacket Black Classic Biker Style Jacket. Mens Size XL

FOR SALE

"Wilson's" Leather. Thinsulate. Call 546-6733

GRE / GMAT
30 hours, $395

INSTRUCTION

American Academy
1-800-808-Prep
(please leave your name and number).

REWARD

LOST

Lost Gold Rings
Call Lisa 546-2011

DRUMMER WANTED

MUSICIANS

Punk/Ska Band 25 Liars needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryan 665-9112

Bass Player Wanted for Rock Band- Potential to play out soon. Call Jason for details. 549-8743

MISCELLANEOUS

Pledged and didn't like it? Start your own Fraternity! Veta Beta Tau is looking for man to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, e-mail ZBT@IBT.National.org. Or call Brett Hirbeck at (317)334-1898

SEEKING FINANCIAL AID? Get the system to help find FREE MONEY FOR COLLEGE! Detailed profiles on 200,000+ individual rewards from private and public sectors Call Student Financial Services: (800)472-3575 ext. F50017 (We are a research and publishing company)

Gorillagrams
Birthdays, Anniversaries, Roses, Balloons, etc. Send the Crazy Gorilla. We'll go anywhere, anytime. Student Rates. Call 256-0287

PERSONALS

Alyssa, I have brown hair and eyes. This clue number four is not a lie. Phi Love, Your Big Sister

PERSONALS

Joel, I'm from Jersey, you are too. Sit back and wait for your next clue. Love, Your Big Sister

Nikole, I'm from N.Y., so are you. Do you even have a clue? Phi Love, Your Big Sister

Stephanie, In clue number two I told you a few lies NOT about my hair, but maybe about my eyes. Phi Love, Your Big Sister

Jamie, Have you figured it out yet? Do you know who? Or should I give you another clue? LML Your Big Sis

Kate, We have lots in common as you shall see. In just a few days, we'll be a family! Phi Love, Your Big Sister

ROOMMATE WANTED

Sis
Looking for female to share an apartment with starting Fall '97. Call Nikki 549-4484

Female to share large bedroom in Puffton. Available ASAP $197.50/month. Call 549-4757 or 665-2067

Two 21 year old males looking for 2 females to live off-campus with for the upcoming school year. Call Josh

SERVICES

or Scott F. at 549-7128
Resumes: Written, Proofed, Printed. Polished, Affordable Packages 548-7042

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free

SUMMER SUBLET

testing and assistance. 548-1906
5 min. walk from campus. Fall Option. $280/month. Chris @ 549-

TRAVEL

8881
ALTERNATIVE SPRING BREAK Explore Nature/Salf 5 Days Music Dance Sports Meditation. Vegetarian Meals Missouri Ozarks $155 Renaissance Universal (800)896-2387

Party Weekend in Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Party In Vermont For Spring Break Only $138. Over 15 colleges attending Free learn to Ski/Snowboard. Add $100 for 5-Day Lift Ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T Europe $169 O/W. Fly The World Dirt Cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Looking for used UMass Alumni Directory. Mark (413)746-4695

Dorm Size Refrigerator Call 546-4538

Tutor for CmpSci 401 (501) Please call Greg 549-8969

Savings that Work!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12

Dance — An Israeli dance teaching session will be held from 8:30-9:15 p.m., and a review and request from 9:15-10 p.m. in the Chadbourne Residence Hall basement. No experience required. Free. Sponsored by UMass Hillel.

Film — The Fourth Annual Multicultural Film Festival will screen I Can't Sleep, directed by Claire Denis, France 1195, at 7:30 p.m. in Gamble Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College.

Lecture — The Five College Program in Peace & World Security Issues will sponsor a talk by Kathi Austin on "Weapons Trafficking and Ethnic Conflict in Central Africa," at 7:30 p.m. in McConnell 103 at Smith College. Free and open to the public.

Lecture — Alexandrina Deschamps, from the UMass Women's Studies Department, will lecture on "Starting from One's Experience: Another View of the Epistemology of Insideness in Feminist Social Research" from 12:15-1:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174-176. Part of the Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold their weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. All are welcome. A woman from the MSPCA will be speaking about shelter volunteering and how to get involved at this meeting.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will have a meeting in the Campus Center, room 802. All new members are welcomed. For more information, and the meeting time, call Tim at 546-0562 or Kay at 546-1459.

Poetry — Spectrum Magazine is sponsoring a poetry reading at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space. Anyone interested in reading their poetry or prose should come to the Spectrum office located in 406E Student Union.

Theater — Revisionist History, an Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance original work, created and directed by Derik Cowan, '97 about archetypical characters caught in a bad situation who are reincarnated through the centuries until they can break out of their castes and find a solution to their dilemma. Today and tomorrow, 8 p.m. in the Fayerweather Studio Theater, Amherst College. Admission is free, reservations are suggested. Call 542-2277 between 1-4:30 p.m. weekdays or until 8 p.m. performance nights.

Video — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space will hold a "faces of art" video series on Pierre Bonnard at 4:30 p.m.

Workshop — A workshop for planning a University Center 2000 will be held from 11 a.m. - noon in the Campus Center, room 802, and from noon-1 p.m. in the UC office in the Campus Center. This workshop will address Food Services. Anyone interested in contributing to creating a vision for the future of University Center should attend the meeting.

THURSDAY, MARCH. 13

Lecture — Dr. Bill Essman, Psychology Dept, UMass, will lecture on "Behavioral Models of Psychomotor Stimulant Drug Action: Focus on Nucleus Accumbens" in Tobin Hall, room 521B at 12:15 p.m. Part of the UMass Neuroscience and Behavior Program Noon Seminar Series.

Lecture — Sarah Wilcox, Ph.D candidate in sociology at UPenn, talks about "Constructing and Deconstructing Identity in the Politics of Lesbian Health." The event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. Sponsored by the UMass Stonewall Center.

FRIDAY, MARCH. 14

Lecture — James A. Simmons, from Brown University psychology department, will speak on "Dynamics of Perception by Acoustic Images in Echolocating Bats," in Morrill Science Center II, room 319 at 4 p.m. Part of the UMass Neuroscience and Behavior Program Seminars.

NOTICES

Elections — Elections for Student Government President, Trustee and local area government positions have been rescheduled to March 26 and 27 due to the student takeover of Goodell last week. Polling locations to be announced.–

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon-2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545-9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one-acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well of Perception by Acoustic Images in Echolocating Bats," in Morrill Science Center II, room 319 at 4 p.m. Part of the UMass Neuroscience and Behavior Program Seminars.

Band wanted — Amnesty International is looking for a Jazz Band to play for its upcoming fundraiser this spring. If interested, call the Amnesty office at 549-1925 or Babz at 546-3105 as soon as possible.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule is available on the World Wide Web at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577-5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577- 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPIRG, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information; including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Collegian Classifieds: They work! 545-3500

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Member O.C.M.P.
"we accept all major credit cards"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

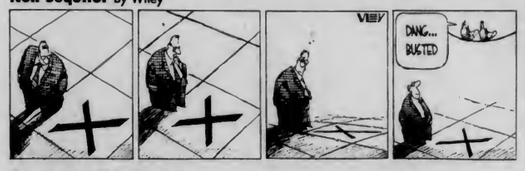
2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN/Headline News
25	BET
26	BET on Jazz
27	UCTV
28	The Learning Channel
29	TV Land
30	Comedy Central
32	Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 drinks Vodka Tonic & always $1 Bud "light draft

Due to technical problems, we are unable to bring you tomorrow's TV listings...

...the Collegian regrets any inconvenience.

Bruno By C. Baldwin



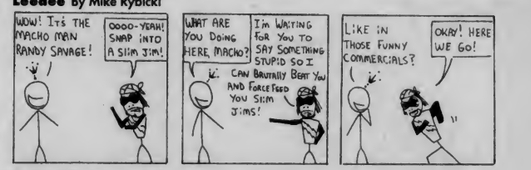
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

F. umpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Speedy By Todd Hartzler



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

University² By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH: Chicken Breast, Ravioli Alfredo, Sloppy Joe
DINNER: Beef Fajita, Fried Shrimp Dinner, Lentil Chili, Masquite Chicken

Worcester

LUNCH: Grilled Chicken, Rotini, Tomato Sauce, Ratatouille
DINNER: Beef Fajita, Fried Shrimp Dinner, Tofu Fajita, Pastabilities

Hampshire

LUNCH: Hamburger, Chicken Cutlet, Barbecued Pork, Rolls and Buns
DINNER: Beef Fajita, Baked Ziti

Berkshire

LUNCH: Grilled Chicken, Rotini, Tomato Sauce, Ratatouille
DINNER: Beef Fajita, Fried Shrimp Dinner, Tofu Fajita, Pastabilities

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Focus on the small things you can do that will make big improvements over the long run. Home remodeling, small gestures to loved ones, quitting smoking or starting a sensible program of diet or exercise could all be steps in the right direction.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Slashing away a hefty nest egg could be the first step toward accomplishing something wonderful. A new romantic horizon unfolds, revealing possibilities you may not have imagined.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Making commitments comes easily this week, and pays off in the form of increased trust and intimacy. Extra understanding is needed from a friend who's hurt. The healing process may take longer than anticipated.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
A distant person's message confirms a decision you made recently. A companion has a happy surprise—a real celebration may be in order. The weekend is good for social gatherings—you really enjoy the role of host.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Although a sweetie demands an explanation for something innocuous, don't condescend to them. That would only feed their insecurity. Instead, calmly repeat the story, and address the underlying fears that are the real culprits.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
If you're planning an unusual business venture, use the early mornings this week to maximize your productivity. Networking helps you stabilize your finances, and may help you launch something really spectacular.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
An "iffy" romance is well on the way to a resolution. Pushing for a certain outcome, one way or the other, could prove chancy, so exercise restraint and patience. Donate some of your time to a worthy charity for an energy boost.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A good week to make a major purchase you've been thinking of for awhile. Spending time with a group could be the key to putting a new spark in your social life. You might even develop a new relationship.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
A sibling may have some private news to discuss—this would be a great time to reach out and call them. Pay close attention before offering your advice—they may just want a willing ear.

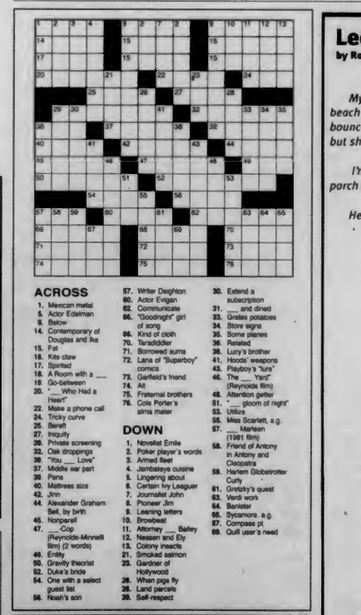
CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
A person with a thrifty streak has a lot to show you this week. Pay close attention and then apply what you learn. Planning ahead will pay off in the near future.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A riotous amusement or gathering means a fitting climax to a generally exciting and happy week. Don't try to host it, however—you'll enjoy it much more if you don't have to clean up afterwards.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Shopping in an unusual place yields exciting bargains for your home. Avoid forcing your way through a barrier—there could be more to the situation than meets your eye. This is a time for waiting, not action.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

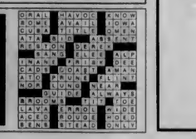


Dinnertime for working parents is reduced to its most basic form.

Quote of the Day

"Doctors can bury their mistakes, architects can only advise their clients to plant vines."

–Frank Lloyd Wright



ACROSS

1. Mexican metal
5. Actor Edelman
9. Below
14. Contemporary of Douglas and Ike
15. Fat
16. Kite claw
17. Spirited
18. A Room with a ___
19. Go-between
20. "___ Who Had a Heart"
22. Make a phone call
24. Tricky curve
25. Beret
27. Iniquity
29. Private screening
32. Oak droppings
36. "You ___ Love"
37. Middle ear part
39. Pans
40. Mattress size
42. Jinn
44. Alexander Graham Bell, by birth
46. Nonpareil
47. ___-Cop (Reynolds-Minnelli film) (2 words)
49. Entity
50. Gravity theorist
52. Duke's bride
54. One with a select guest list
56. Noah's son
57. Writer Deighton
60. Actor Evigan
62. Communicate
66. "Goodnight" girl of song
68. Kind of cloth
70. Tarradiddler
71. Borrowed sums
72. Lana of "Superboy" comics
73. Garfield's friend
74. Alt
75. Fraternal brothers
76. Cole Porter's alma mater

DOWN

1. Novelist Emile
2. Poker player's words
3. Armed fleet
4. Jambalaya cuisine
5. Lingering about
6. Certain Ivy Leaguer
7. Journalist John
8. Pioneer Jim
9. Leaning letters
10. Browbeat
11. Attorney ___ Bailey
12. Nessen and Ely
13. Colony insects
21. Smoked salmon
23. Gardner of Hollywood
28. Whan pigs fly
35. Land parcels
39. Self-respect
30. Extend a subscription
31. ___ and dined
33. Grates potatoes
34. Store signs
35. Some planes
38. Related
39. Lucy's brother
41. Hoods' weapons
43. Playboy's "lure"
46. The ___ Yard" (Reynolds film)
48. Attention getter
51. "___ gloom of night"
53. Utilize
55. Miss Scarlett, e.g.
57. ___ Marleen (1981 film)
58. Friend of Antony in Antony and Cleopatra
59. Harlem Globetrotter Curly
61. Grotzky's quest
63. Verdi work
64. Banister
65. Sycamore, e.g.
67. Compass pt.
69. Quill user's need

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Leold (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

My Aunt Phyllis blew up our beach ball in the spring. We bounced it around all summer, but she died at the end of August.

I'm gonna leave it on our porch forever....

Her breath is in that ball.

Lax shoots down Hartford Hawks

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

SPRINGFIELD — The stage was already set long before either the Hartford or the No. 14 Massachusetts men's lacrosse teams arrived at the Benedum Field at Springfield College yesterday.

Last year was the first meeting between these two squads, and the Hawks, an up and coming Division I program, took it to the Minutemen hard and early. UMass squeaked out a 14–9 victory late in the fourth quarter. With its starting goalie and three close–defensemen returning, redemption was on the minds of the Hawks.

This year wasn't any different; in fact, the Hawks, for the most part, outhustled the Minutemen to every ball, tracking down 35 groundballs to UMass' 26. Once again however, late in the fourth quarter, it was UMass who pulled out a victory, 7–4.

"They've got a stingy defense and some really good solid offensive players who were real legitimate scoring threats," junior goaltender John Kasselakis said.

Massachusetts	7
Hartford	4

The shockingly low score can be directly attributed to the stellar defense on both sides of the field. Both goalies, Kasselakis for UMass (18 saves), and senior Chris LaMonica who had 21 saves for Hartford stood on their heads making unbelievable saves.

The Hawks' defense completely shut down UMass' sophomore John O'Connor after he torched the Stags of Fairfield, Saturday, with four goals, hardly allowing him to get a quality shot on net, let alone a goal.

"I just think Hartford's a real good team. They deserve all the credit they're given," Cannella said.

JEREMY R. ADAMS / COLLEGIAN

Junior Mike DelPercio winds up before scoring the seventh goal in yesterday's win over Hartford.

Senior co–captain Brendan Glass had a quiet game, even though he tallied two goals of his own. Apart from the goals, LaMonica stood tall against Glass' shots, but most went wide.

UMass got on the board first, when Mike DelPercio stepped up in the open flat and unleashed the hounds. His shot whipped past LaMonica high into the net and set the tempo for the rest of the game.

But the Hawks answered back when junior midfielder Jason Clarke spun around senior defensemen Greg MacDonald and fired a shot past Kasselakis. But MacDonald improved and never allowed Clarke to get by him again.

"I think they're a good group [Hartford's attack unit]. They're a young group but they're solid. No. 11 [Keith Anzelone] was a junior college All–American, he's just as good as anybody, and No. 13 [Clarke] is one of the best stickhandlers I've seen," Kasselakis said.

With just under six minutes left to go in the first quarter, UMass went up 2–1 when Chris Grande, after trekking the perimeter for 20 seconds, ran it up the middle himself and sent a blistering shot past LaMonica.

It looked as if the Minutemen would put the Hawks away when Brendan Glass scored a pair of goals in the second quarter to make it 4–1. This was the first time in the game UMass looked to have the contest in its grasp.

It was not to be. Hartford went on a 3–1 run over the second and third quarter, to bring the game within one.

During this time, the Hawks controlled the tempo of the game, and got to more ground balls in the middle of the field.

At 4:26 left in the fourth, senior midfielder Casey Costello cranked a goal of his own which was the turning point for the Minutemen. DelPercio got an insurance goal to put UMass up, 7–4, to close out the scoring.

"But really you've got to give all the credit to the defense and the goalie, they were a surprise today," Cannella said.

Even though the Minutemen seemed to struggle at times, their experience and work ethic carried them to victory. Cannella will likely use this game as something to build on as they head down to Virginia to face the No. 5 Cavaliers.

Defense key in UM win

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

SPRINGFIELD — Lacrosse is a high scoring game — usually.

When two of the most experienced defensive teams in New England meet for an early season game on an icy wet field, this is not always the case.

The Massachusetts men's lacrosse team's win over Hartford was hardly a shoot 'em up. Rather than bringing out the "Mike Tyson early and often" offense used to destroy Fairfield, 22–3, this past weekend, the Minutemen settled into a chess match of a defensive game. Both teams had their chances to control the momentum and establish offensive dominance, but neither team's defense was willing to break down long enough for that to happen.

For about 15 minutes spanning from midway through the first quarter to the same point in the second, the Minutemen owned both ends of the field. Massachusetts goalkeeper John Kasselakis saw just six shots in the second quarter, and UMass goals numbers two through four were scored in that time.

Hartford had its finger on the game's pulse for a short while in the third quarter, when it mounted a comeback effort and appeared to be in position to tie the Minutemen for the first time since 5:50 in the first quarter when Chris Grande scored to put UMass up 2–1.

After Grande notched his second tally of the game to give the Minutemen a 5–2 edge, the Hawks stormed back to 5–4.

Hartford maintained the pressure, controlling a seven minute span before Casey Costello took it upon himself to beat two defenders and crank a shot top right from 10–yards out on the left side.

Aside from each team's limited dominance, the matching strong defensive units kept the pace at medium–to–slow. The Minutemen said that a higher scoring game would have been to their own advantage, but they were happy with the close–game experience.

"That's the tempo that they wanted, we play a similar tempo," UMass coach Greg Cannella said. "That's the tempo we want to play, especially when we go down to play Virginia this weekend.

"We're not going to go up and down with them, we're going to try to slow it down a bit [against Virginia]."

Kasselakis agreed with Cannella, saying, "The lower the score was the more it played to their advantage.

"Our D kept everyone out nice and far and I got good reads on all their shots. Those they scored were right in front of the crease," Kasselakis added.

The most important thing about the game being a nail–biter is that the Minutemen have both a wide–open style contest and a pitchers' duel under their belt going into the more intense portion of their season.

"We were in a tight game in the third quarter, our guys played well and came up with some big plays and we won the game," Cannella said. "People look past a game like Hartford but the coaches knew [they would be a strong opponent]. I'm not surprised right now, maybe the guys will ready themselves better [for Virginia]."

Look at west, like Habs, killed by charging Hasek

It's a good thing I'm not a comparative literature major. It has come to my attention that both Iorma Kansanen and myself have been neglecting the western philosophical argument when we should shed enlightenment on the entire league. We've talked at length about eastern and central thoughts, but the NHL's Pacific rim has been neglected. No more, it causes bad karma and I no longer feel at one with the NHL. The eternal hockey Tao will escape me no further.

• Do you know the way to San Jose? Good, because the playoffs don't. This team, which showed so much promise after making runs in the 1993 and 1994 playoffs, awoke this morning as the worst team in the NHL with 53 points, even behind the Bruins.

Oh, and this adds to the disheartening news that planet Al Iafrate is injured and out for the season. If this news is at all stunning to you, I have a bridge for sale. Yeah, real cheap too. It's hardly shocking that a man who spent three years under contract with the Bruins and played only a handful more games than Clark Donatelli, C.J. Young or myself, finally gets shipped out of town and can't play one full year.

Outside of Owen Nolan and Eddie Belfour, San Jose has the talent level of the Spice Girls. Oh, sure, it's their great singing talent that has us guys going nuts over them. Ask me, well off the record, sometime to tell you what I want, what I really, really want.

• Former Los Angeles Kings owner Bruce McNall started serving his prison sentence on Monday and most of the rest of this team should join him in the slammer for impersonating a hockey team.

What ever became of the 1993 Cup finalists? The guys on Yawkey Way have the curse of the Bambino and the folks in Englewood might forever be cursed by Marty McSorley and his illegal stick.

Stephane Fiset is one of the greatest backups in the NHL, but as he graphically demonstrated in Quebec, he is not a quality starter. Much like Chris Terreri, he performs his best when he isn't on the ice 60 times a year, just as some pitchers work best out of the bullpen or as a fifth starter.

Furthermore the Kings' popularity trails the Ducks. In the trendiest, most what–have–you–done–for–me–lately town on this continent, the Kings are Jerry Lewis to Anaheim's Jim Carrey. Same schtick, vastly different Q ratings.

I've been to both the Pond and the Great Western Forum. The former is a suburban palace right near Disneyland, while the latter is a dump in a ghetto. One team is owned by a Fortune 500 company, the other by a group shakier than the San Andres Fault. Whether you're a fan or free agent, which would you rather associate yourself with in this fair– weather town? The silver and black lacks.

The Canuckleheads made a deal early Sunday morning that might push them past Calgary and into the playoffs. Esa Tikkanen will rejoin the remainder of the New York Wayne–ger chapter of the Oiler alumni association, along with Russ Courtnall, in exchange for Brian Noonan and Sergei Nemchinov. No analysis of this dead–even deal will be offered here, just felt like passing it along.

• Did you see what Dominik Hasek did Saturday night? Deepest apologies philosophical ones, but this eastern event must be mentioned. It's like the Yin–Yang of Comlli factions, and to maintain the natural balance and harmony of nature, this column can't be completely yang.

On Hockey Night in Canada this Saturday, with much of the puck-head community watching Buffalo's game in Montreal, Hasek made the mother of all poke checks.

Tied 3–3 in overtime, the Sabres were badly caught in a line change and one could see a Vincent Damphousse break–away developing all the way from behind his own net. The speedy vet flew through the neutral zone before being upended just before the blue line by a black streak.

Hardly a modified Foxtrax puck, sporting his team's cool new black road uniform, Hasek charged 75 feet from his own net and, sliding like Pete Rose, upended Damphousse at the neutral zone face off dot. It saved the game, but it's hard to believe that Sabres coach Ted Nolan whole heartedly supported the move afterwards.

Parting is such sweet sorrow... but not in the case of spring break. Drink it up for a week and hope when we return your team will be talking about drinking from the Holy Grail and not some Hawaiian country club's 19th hole.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

Mosby an all–around team asset

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

For someone who excels in her sport, Mandy Mosby got her start in gymnastics in a most unusual fashion. She didn't go to the gym because of the love for gymnastics, nor did her parents push her to join. She did it for a t–shirt.

Though she took gymnastics for a few months when she was three, it wasn't until the age of seven that Mosby became serious about the sport.

"I was seven when I started, I went back because my friend took gymnastics and they were offering a free t–shirt to anyone who brought a friend, so she took me along so she could get a free t–shirt," Mosby said. "And that's how I started."

Not quite the scenario you'd expect from such a star.

Dressed in an olive sweatshirt and pair of jeans, Mosby's laid–back appearance was a stark difference from the serious gymnast she is when she is competing. She spoke casually, and at times, very shyly, about her athletic career, UMass and her team.

Growing up down South

A Georgia native, Mosby began her career at Gwinnett Gymnastics Center, where she has trained all her life. Almost immediately, the owner recognized her talent.

"I moved up very quickly," Mosby said. "The owner of the gym had me in his classes and he put me on pre–team as soon as he could and I actually started working out with the teams a year before I could compete, because I wasn't old enough."

A four–time Georgia State Champion, one of Mosby's goals when she was growing up was making the national team, and when she accomplished this last year, she said it was a dream come true.

Last year Mosby was also able to do something many young gymnasts would have loved, work at the 1996 Summer Olympic Games in Atlanta. She ran scores for gymnastics, and according to Mosby, that experience inspired her to do more with gymnastics.

"I never got to be in the Olympics, but it was like I lived the dream by just being there. When you're young, everyone has that dream, but by the time I was 12, I realized it pretty much wasn't going to happen," Mosby said.

The college experience

In order to train more seriously, Mosby would have had to leave home, which she decided not to do. Instead, she focused more on her future.

"I always knew I wanted to go to college," Mosby said. "When I was 11, I considered moving away from home to train, but there was never any question that I would go to college, even if I moved away."

Mosby was one of the top recruits in the nation in gymnastics, wanted by schools such as Florida, Auburn, Arizona, West Virginia and UMass. According to Mosby, there were various reasons why she came to UMass.

"It was more of an up and coming program which I liked," Mosby said. "I liked that better than coming in and having the expectations of being the best already. I liked coming in and proving to people that we are good, you know."

According to Mosby, collegiate gymnastics is a lot more fun and laid–back than club gymnastics, but certainly not easier.

"You have to compete just about every weekend here, whereas before, I competed every three to four weeks. So it's more about keeping yourself healthy here and still being able to do everything," Mosby said. "But everyone has always told me how much fun college gymnastics is.

"I didn't know what to expect coming in, but it's been fun. Especially the meets, with all the cheering and the whole team situation. Before it was more for myself, but it's like we're all here for the same goals so we all support each other while we're working out and in the meets," Mosby said.

Depending on the day, Mosby said, her favorite event is floor, and she certainly does shine on that apparatus. So far this season she has scored a career best of 9.90, which ties her with current teammates, sophomore Denise Johnson and senior Lianne Laing for second best in UMass history. Mosby is also on the UMass record books in second place for the balance beam with a 9.90 and third place in the all–around with a 38.800.

It's hard to believe that she's only a freshman.

Fitting in with the team

This year has been one of the best for the

Turn to MOSBY, page 7

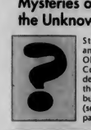
LISA M. OLIVERI / COLLEGIAN

Freshman Mandy Mosby strikes a pose on the balance beam.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 101 · New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 · Thursday, March 13, 1997

Coming to the end of the road

All–America candidate Micheie Warrington is one of three women's lax seniors from Ridley, Penn. looking to close her career on a winning note (see Sports, page 14).

Mysteries of the Unknown

Stars and Ghosts and Scientologists, Oh Myl The Collegian tries to demystify some of the stuff that goes bump in the night (see Arts & Living, page 5).

WORLD

Gangs seize arms in Albanian insurrection

TIRANA, Albania (AP) — The gunfire of anti–government insurgents pressed closer yesterday to the capital, where gangs carried off weapons from two military sites and Western embassies organized evacuations.

Preparations for a showdown appeared to be taking shape, with gangs apparently supporting President Sali Berisha taking guns from a vacated military academy in Tirana, the capital. Police did nothing as the men calmly walked out with AK–47 automatic rifles slung over their shoulders.

Hours later, state television reported that a group of people had stormed the Ydzeriset barracks in a Tirana suburb yesterday night and seized weapons. It was unclear whether they were supporters of Berisha.

The unrest came as Bashkim Fino, a 35–year–old Socialist from the southern town of Gjirokastra, was getting a first look at the difficulties facing him as prime minister. He acknowledged it was impossible to force rebels to put down their looted weapons. Looters stormed an arms depot near the industrial city of Elbasan, 22 miles southeast of Tirana, and carted away automatic weapons — adding to the cache of guns and munitions seized by mobs the past two weeks.

NATION

Clinton's plan may give more to Mass.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's transportation plan would provide Massachusetts with about $580 million per year in highway funds, a reduction from this year's level but more than offered by competing plans.

"With regard to funding for the Central Artery project, this is the best credible plan in town," said Rep. Joseph Kennedy (D–Mass). The $580 million is about $130 million more than the lowest level of federal aid assumed in the state's December study on the Central Artery/Third Harbor Tunnel. The project's estimated cost is $10.4 billion.

Northeastern lawmakers welcomed Clinton's plan because it is much more friendly to their region than competing plans such as "Step 21," proposed by House Majority Whip Tom DeLay (R–Texas). Currently, states get money out of the highway trust fund based on need, a system that greatly benefits the Northeast. DeLay wants no state to receive more than it contributes, an approach that would cost the northeastern states hundreds of millions of dollars — or even billions — per year.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 35 LOW: 20	HIGH: 40 LOW: 25	HIGH: 45 LOW: 35

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword.....page 13
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 12
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 14

Sawyer talks to UMass students on his spiritual battle with AIDS

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

Steve Sawyer is a 21–year–old male who would be a senior at Curry College this year. He would be thinking about finding a job after graduation. He might even be considering whether there is a woman in his life whom he could someday see himself marrying.

However, due to an infected donor pool of blood, Steve will never be able to achieve these dreams.

Sawyer, on his second visit to the University of Massachusetts, in connection with the Campus Crusade for Christ, talked to an assembly of approximately 250 individuals last night.

Sawyer's reason for speaking was not, as he said, "to give an update on AIDS," but to bring inspiration and hope for those suffering, as he has learned to do in his own life by finding a relationship with God.

"It's amazing when your dreams get torn away from you. It causes you to face things with a different perspective," Sawyer said.

In explaining the sequence of events of his disease, which started when he was in high school, Sawyer explained the emotions and attitudes he felt in dealing with his illnesses.

Sawyer also shared three main lessons he has learned from his experience: the vast majority of what we encounter is beyond our control, we often allow circumstances to control our attitudes and behavior towards life; and hope can bring joy despite any circumstance.

Sometime between 1980 and 1985, Sawyer received the infected blood and developed hepatitis B and C, as well as the HIV virus. He needed the blood transfusion for his hemophilia, a genetic blood clotting disorder.

Sawyer explained how he was finally getting over the limitations hepatitis had on him when he was told he was HIV positive. He was able to fight off the hepatitis B but the hepatitis C has given him cirrhosis of the liver, so that the organ is now becoming scar tissue.

Sawyer said his first response to his disease was denial, which he compared to a scene in the movie, Monty Python and the Holy Grail. He said his attitude was like that of the knight who fought King Arthur. The knight, despite losing all of his limbs refuses to admit to his losses and continues to fight. Sawyer admitted that his denial, which came in the form of destruction and anger, was not as humorous as Monty Python's example.

The problem with denial, Sawyer said, is that it builds up inside of you until it explodes, as happened to him.

As a senior in high school, Sawyer's T–cells (the white blood cells that fight infection in the body) dropped to 230. In comparison, an individual diagnosed with AIDS has a T– cell count of 200 or below. Sawyer recalls "looking in the mirror and at someone who was dying."

Sawyer's turning point came to him in a gradual sequence of events. Sawyer's father, who described the family as "Christmas Christians" at the time, told his son that the only one who could help him at this point was God. Sawyer, who was not even sure he believed in God, decided to pray. Not long after, his T–cell count jumped up to 365 and Sawyer became healthier.

However, Sawyer said he still felt reservations about God until he went on to Curry College. At Curry, Sawyer met his best friend and roommate Brent, who was a devoted Christian.

It was with Brent's encouragement and practice that Sawyer began to attend Campus Crusade for Christ meetings. And it was there, Sawyer said, that he found the hope and inspiration which was lacking in his life.

Sawyer said he realized he had been pushing away God's love, which he described as the greatest love in the universe, all of which is free. The inspiration Sawyer acquired from his new relationship with God didn't heal him completely but it brought him a strength from within, which has, as Sawyer said "kept me going for one and a half years longer than doctors thought."

Sawyer's talk brought a great deal of religion into his presentation, but not in a way which it is often referred to. Sawyer said he views religion not so much as being part of a particular denomination but as having a relationship personally with God.

Sawyer used the analogy, "Just because you're born in a garage doesn't mean you're a car, so just because you're a Christian doesn't mean you're religious."

Despite Sawyer's encouragement of forming a relationship with God, he did not focus on trying to convince the audience.

He said, "I'd feel I was rippin' you guys off if I didn't offer you the love of God, but I'm not trying to shove it down your throat."

It was clear Sawyer made an impact on his audience, as during the question and answer period when one undergraduate, Helen Martinelli, a senior psychology major, shared how after previously feeling confused about her own religion, found Sawyer's insights inspiring and uplifting.

Sawyer now spends most of his time speaking on campuses across the nation. His T–cell count is presently about 179 and he no longer takes medication since he said it only makes him feel worse.

Sawyer said he has no idea when his time will come, but that due to his relationship with God, he has an assurance about death.

As Sawyer said, "I would rather have AIDS at 21 and be dying with Christ, then never have him at all."

As far as the eye can see...

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Afternoon shadows produced an interesting image at the Fine Arts Center yesterday.

Scottish sheep cloner takes stand against human testing

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Scottish scientist who cloned an adult sheep told Congress yesterday "it would be quite inhumane" to try the technology on people. A senator told him and a rapt hearing audience that human cloning is sure to come "and I don't fear it at all."

It is wrong and "demeaning to human nature" for government to try to stop or limit human cloning experiments, said Sen. Tom Harkin (D–Iowa).

"Human cloning will take place and it will take place within my lifetime," he said. "I think it is right and proper... It holds untold benefits for humankind in the future."

Ian Wilmut of the Roslin Institute in Edinburgh, Scotland, said that since the world learned he and colleagues had cloned an adult sheep named Dolly, there has been an explosion of speculation about cloning of humans.

But Wilmut said human cloning is not practical, possible or ethical. "Similar experiments with humans would be totally unacceptable," he said.

"I don't see any reason why we would want to copy a person," said the scientist. "I personally have still not heard of a potential use of this technique to produce a new person that I would find ethical or acceptable."

It took 277 attempts to produce Dolly, said Wilmut, and some of the failures resulted in defective lambs that died quickly after birth.

"It would be quite inhumane to contemplate using these techniques at this stage," he said.

Though he agreed with Harkin that "it is not possible nor even desirable to attempt to regulate the way that science progresses," Wilmut said legislators should address "the question of the individuals who will be involved, the children who would be involved."

Harkin, in a short speech that dropped the entire Senate hearing room into attentive silence, said governments should not try to slow the march of science, even for a technology as ethically troubling as human cloning.

He said it was wrong for President Clinton to issue an order to stop all federally funded human embryo research and for Sen. Christopher S. Bond (R–Mo.) to propose legislation to make the research ban permanent.

He compared these government efforts to the 17th century punishment of the astronomer Galileo, who advanced Copernicus' theory that the Earth orbits the sun, instead of the other way around.

"I think to attempt to limit human knowledge is demeaning to human nature," said Harkin. "What nonsense. What utter, utter nonsense to think that somehow we are going to hold up our hands and say stop.

Several senators and two witnesses applauded Clinton's order to ban human cloning research for 90 days while the whole issue is considered by the National Bioethics Advisory Commission.

"There are aspects to life that should be off limits to science," said Bond. "We must draw a clear line. Humans are not God and they should not be allowed to play God. It is morally repugnant."

Dr. Harold Varmus, director of the National Institutes of Health, said science is not technically ready to even attempt human cloning research, even if it were permitted. He said there are technical answers about the process that can only be answered with animal research.

Varmus, however, urged that legislation on cloning be carefully drawn so that beneficial genetic research would not be affected. He said research into cloning could teach science how to control genes and manipulate them to combat disease and illness.

Wilmut said researchers at his lab are manipulating genes in sheep now and that within two years "there will be animals that produce, in their milk, proteins that can treat human disease." He said cloning technology could be used to develop treatments for hemophilia and cystic fibrosis and to help control the protein thought to cause "mad cow disease" and its human analog, Cruetzfeldt–Jakob disease.

Such technology, Wilmut said, may help science learn how to cause some human cells to regress developmentally to a point where the DNA could be easily changed to correct a genetic flaw. Such cells then could be returned to a patient to treat specific illnesses, such as blood disorders.

It may be possible, Varmus said, to use cloning technology to learn how certain genes could be "turned on" and caused to make useful tissue. That could lead to growing of bone marrow in a lab to treat a cancer patient.

Harkin challenged Varmus and Wilmut to tell of any human cloning research they knew of. Both scientists said they knew of no such research.

"It is unlikely," said Varmus, but "it is possible."

SGA argues over money allocation

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

After much debate at last night's Student Government Association (SGA) meeting, the senate voted to give $2,000 from its finance reserves to both the UMass Dance Team and the UMass Men's Volleyball Team for national competitions.

There was controversy as to whether money should be given to the volleyball team after it was revealed that there was only approximately $5,000 in the finance reserves at the beginning of the meeting.

The SGA Finance Committee starts each semester with $15,000 to allocate to causes as they see fit. The requests must pass through the committee and the senate body.

Sen. Dan Kittredge (Central Area) felt that had he known the limited funds left in the finance reserves before he voted to give the dance team any money, he would have voted for a lower sum for each.

"I would have liked to know how much money we had before we gave $2,000 to the dance team," said Kittredge.

Other senators felt that it was unfair to give the two teams different amounts, regardless of the balance of the reserves since the requests were so similar.

"We very easily gave them [the dance team] money. If we don't show our support to the volleyball team, what does that say of our body as a whole?" said Sen. Carl Litsch (Commuter Area), member of the Finance Committee.

Numerous amendments were proposed to decrease the amount of $2,000 given to the volleyball team, but were voted down. Many senators felt that it would be unfair, and they would be receiving less money simply because the dance team motion had been voted on first.

"We shouldn't be punishing the volleyball team because we didn't do our homework earlier this evening," Sen. Paul Ferro (Southwest Area) said.

The senate voted in support of giving the Volleyball Team $2,000 after reaching a narrow quorum.

Both the Dance Team and the Volleyball Team claim to have made efforts to raise a portion of the money themselves.

"We spend a lot of money to go to tournaments every weekend, so the money has been spent," said Rob Settembro, co–president of the Volleyball Team.

Also passed last night was a motion that a report be presented concerning the representation and attention given to the needs of the disabled community, the gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender community and welfare parents here at UMass.

The motion proposed that it be enacted that the Office of Student Affairs develop methods to recruit and retain members from these groups.

Sen. Ferro spoke against this motion, with the opinion that the gay community specifically should not be given special privileges.

"My vice with this motion is that it singles out people based on sexual practices," said Ferro.

Other motions passed included a unanimous vote for lockable display cases to be placed in the Cape Cod Lounge for art students to show their current work, a reduction in the rates of Body Shop fees, and a motion to allocate at least one student position on the Chancellor's Executive Advisory Committee.

Turn to SGA, page 2

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Geological findings

Undergraduate geology majors Jim Dutcher (standing) and Mike McCormic calculated the strata of the stairs at Morrill Science Center for a class yesterday.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor: Mark McGrath
Photo Technician: Jennifer Jutras
Production Supervisor: Josh Sylvester
Production Staff: Leon Latino, Sam Smullin

Springfield College ralliers protest change of nickname

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD — Their sit-in over, a group of Springfield College protesters say they are now ready to work with the school president to try to restore their teams' old nickname, the Chiefs.

"When the Chiefs were taken away, the morale of the school dropped," said Joel Farrior, a sophomore who helped organize Tuesday's protest. He contended that the new nickname for the college sports teams, the Pride, was chosen "because of its political correctness."

After a brief rally outside Marsh Memorial, about 60 students marched into the building Tuesday and sat down in the foyer outside the office of President Randolph Bromery. From a balcony, they had strung up a 6-foot-high banner that said: "Hear us, listen to us, and respect us!" Some protesters wore "Springfield Chiefs" sports caps.

The protesters said they want to restore the old nickname "without any Native American stereotypes." One protest leader, Mike Sciucco, said the new Chiefs nickname would connote leadership and strength.

The symbol for the old nickname was an Indian's head with a traditional headdress. Some at Springfield College complained that the name and image reflected racial insensitivity. The campus dropped both the Chief nickname and symbol in 1996 and began calling itself the Pride.

However, students voted last year to restore the old name. Sciucco said students had tried unsuccessfully in past days to persuade the administration to support restoring the old name. In a move that surprised the protesters, Bromery emerged from his office shortly after their sit-in began Tuesday and engaged them in a conversation. He told them that he doubted their assertion that the old nickname could be brought back without suggesting American Indians.

"I know if we went out in the country and said, "Chiefs," and didn't say anything else, the first thing that would come to their minds would be Indians," Bromery told the students.

He also rejected their demand that the issue be decided by a binding vote of students, faculty, administrators and alumni. "You don't need a president then," he said.

However, he vowed to work with the students in an expedited process of decision making. He said representatives of campus groups would consider the issue and make a recommendation to him. Bromery, who is black, suggested with a wry smile at one point that they consider "Black Panthers" as the nickname. He then told them that, in all earnestness, he would prefer using some kind of animal as a nickname.

After about 45 minutes of discussion, the protest leaders said they were now satisfied that the administration is listening to them and doing its best to fulfill their requests. They called off the rest of the protest, which was initially supposed to end at midnight.

"This is student empowerment, and this is what college is about," declared Sciucco.

The issue of a sports nickname is an especially important one at Springfield College, a 3,000-student private school nationally known as an incubator of athletes, coaches and other sports professionals.

In 1891, instructor James Naismith invented basketball at the school. Three years later, William Morgan, a graduate of Springfield College, invented volleyball in nearby Holyoke. Other colleges with Indian and other nicknames have sometimes changed them out of worry about potentially insulting stereotypes. In 1993, student activists at the University of Massachusetts demanded that the school drop its Minuteman sports logo, a reference to the celebrated militiamen of the American Revolution. The activists said the symbol was militant and sexist.

While initially considered, the demand was later dropped in the face of an outcry from other students and alumni.

■ SGA

continued from page 1

The committee currently does not include any students.

SGA elections for president and student trustee as well as area government positions has been postponed to Wednesday and Thursday, March 26 and 27.

A debate has also been scheduled for Tuesday, March 25, in the UVC studio. The time is tentatively set at 6 p.m. The debate is open to the public.

Voting will take place from 11 a.m.–2 p.m. each day and then will reopen between 4:30 –7 p.m.

Polling stations for Orchard Hill Residential Area students will be located in the Franklin Dining Hall.

Students living in Sylvan and Northeast Residential Areas will be required to vote in Worcester Dining Hall.

Residents of Southwest South (Cance, John Quincy Adams, Pierpont, Moore, Patterson, MacKimmie, Washington and John Adams Residence Halls) will vote in Berkshire Dining Hall, while residents of Southwest North (Thoreau, Coolidge, James, Emerson, Kennedy, Melville, Prince and Crampton Residence Halls) will vote at Hampshire Dining Hall.

Commuter and Greek Area students are required to vote in either the Newman Center or the Hatch.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Off in the distance...

Joshua Martin, a junior history major, surveyed the Haigis Mall yesterday afternoon.

Correction

The photo caption for the photo on page two of the March 10 paper was incorrect. The band pictured was Somebody's Land Blues, another band at the event.

The Collegian regrets the error.

GOT A TIP ?

IF YOU KNOW OF A NEWS STORY HAPPENING ON OR OFF CAMPUS, CALL THE COLLEGIAN NEWS DESK AT 545-1762

Student Affairs Special Services and Undergraduate Registrar

Important Information For Seniors Commencement Program Listings

The names that will be listed in the Undergraduate Commencement Program book will be based on seniors of record/Class of 1997 as of Thursday, April 3, 1997.

Because of printing deadlines, it is unlikely that names can be added after that date. However, if you are eligible to graduate, your graduation status is not affected even if your name is not listed.

You must immediately contact a member of the "Senior Staff", Undergraduate Registrar's Office (207 Whitmore, 5-0555):

1. if you are unsure of your eligibility, have not declared a major, and/or anticipate changing your date of graduation;

2. if there was an error in the recent mailing from the Registrar's Office concerning your diploma name and/or graduation date, and you have not corrected it;

3. if you did not receive the mailing and are expecting to have all degree requirements completed by May 25, or by September 1.

Copies of the Undergraduate Commencement information brochure were mailed at the end of February. Copies are available at the Visitors Center.

NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY

COLLEGE FINANCING 101

Each year thousands of college students are forced to drop out. The problem is not with their academic standing, it is their financial status. They can't pass or CLEP out of "College Financing 101". The Massachusetts Army National Guard has over $21,000 available to each student who qualifies. Through programs such as the Montgomery G.I. Bill and 100% Tuition Waiver, students can concentrate on grades, not bills. The Tuition Waiver is good at 28 participating state colleges, community colleges and universities.

All it takes is about two days a month and two weeks a year. Serving your country and community today can help build a better tomorrow.

For more information about the Massachusetts Army National Guard call today:

1-888-NGPRIDE
(1-888-647-7433)

MASSACHUSETTS
BE ALL YOU CAN BE NATIONAL GUARD YOU CAN

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Over ~500~ Microbrews
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines

St. Patrick's Day Specials
Guinness Pub Draught Cans 4-pk $14.99
Killian's Irish Red & Wilde Honey 12-pk bottles $8.99
Harp Lager 6-pk $4.99
Jameson Irish Whiskey 750 ml $14.99

Beer Specials
Busch 30-pk cans $11.99
Busch Lt. 30-pk cans $11.99
Lite 30-pk cans $14.99
Icehouse 12-pack bottles $6.99
Red Dog 12-pack bottles $6.99
Bud Dry case bottles $9.99

1/2 Keg Specials
Killian's $65.00
Guinness . . $125.00

Liquor Specials
Captain Morgan Spiced & Coconut $8.99/750 ml
Luksusowa Polish Vodka $9.99/750 ml
Jagermeister $8.99/375 ml
Jack Daniels $11.99/750 ml

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Kegs - Taps - Mixers - Mini Kegs - Beer Glasses

253-5384
Rt 9 East College Street
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E

~ NATIONAL/ INTERNATIONAL ~

Peru to alter current rape laws

By Lynn F. Monahan
Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — When 14-year-old Juana was 10, her stepfather began raping her. He continued to do so for three years while her mother worked as a live-in maid in the home of a wealthy family. Her mother found out last year when Juana became pregnant and told her what had happened. Juana's stepfather was jailed, but he offered from his cell to "fix" the whole situation: he'd leave his wife and marry Juana.

He had hoped to take advantage of a Peruvian law dating to 1852 that lets rapists go free if they marry their victims. But he drew a four-year sentence after a local women's group convinced Juana that her stepfather's offer would not solve her problems.

That law was expected to be stricken from Peru's penal code today, when Congress takes up a Justice Committee bill. Women's groups and others say it's about time.

"Imagine a woman marrying an unknown man who had hurt her. The punishment was for the woman. It's absurd," said Congresswoman Martha Hildebrandt, one of the bill's supporters.

A 1991 addition to the old law also allows co-defendants in a gang rape to go free if one of them marries the woman, a provision Hildebrandt called "grotesque."

Attorney Gina Yanez of the Manuela Ramos women's group said eliminating the law would be an important victory for women and for Peruvian society.

She said the case of Juana, a poor child living in Lima's Villa Maria del Triunfo barrio, is far too common in Peru, where at least 25,000 women are raped a year. "She could be any girl by any name in Peru," Yanez said.

Yanez said Peruvian society overvalues virginity, and Peruvian women often feel they have lost their worth once they are no longer virgins. Relatives also pressure young women who have been raped to consent to marriage to "save the family honor."

In a country where nearly 50 percent of the population is poor, rape victims sometimes are coerced with money into marrying their attackers, she said.

Congresswoman Beatriz Merino, who introduced the repeal measure, said it would eliminate a law that "offends the dignity of women."

She said under the proposed law, rape is redefined as a "crime against liberty" instead of a "crime against honor that could be rectified through marriage."

After much debate, the Justice Commission voted unanimously Tuesday to get rid of the old law. If the new law is approved as expected by the full Congress, rapists no longer will be able to use marriage to escape punishment.

For many Peruvians, the change is long overdue.

"The rapist is an aggressor. How can you let him get off by marrying the victim?" asked homemaker Ana Maria Tejeira. "He'll just continue raping her while they're married."

Israel may offer different concessions

By Karin Laub
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel refused yesterday to reverse plans to build on war-won land in Jerusalem or improve a West Bank troop pullback offer, but suggested concessions on other issues could get peace talks back on track.

U.S. Ambassador Martin Indyk told Israel's foreign minister he expected more generous Israeli troop pullbacks in September and in March 1998, when he said "significant" chunks of land should be handed over.

Israel decided last week to surrender 9 percent of the West Bank to Palestinian control in the first withdrawal — one-third of what the Palestinians expected.

The decision — coming soon after Israel angered Palestinians by approving a Jewish housing project in historically Arab east Jerusalem — triggered a crisis in which the Palestinians warned of a possible uprising against Israel, and Yasser Arafat refused to take phone calls from Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. The West Bank troop pullback, scheduled for this week, has been put on hold because the Palestinians have refused to accept it, Foreign Ministry spokesman Yigal Palmor said.

"We can't go through with the plan unless the Palestinians agree to accept the territory from which we redeploy," he said. King Hussein of Jordan, Israel's best friend in the Arab world, wrote an unusually harsh letter to Netanyahu, underscoring Israel's growing isolation.

"My distress is genuine and deep over the accumulating tragic actions" by Israel which have made peace more elusive, the king wrote.

Israel radio said Netanyahu, who was on his way back from Russia, would convene his Cabinet today to discuss the crisis. Arafat has invited foreign diplomats, including the U.S. consul general in Jerusalem, to a conference Saturday in Gaza City to air Palestinian grievances.

Israel, which was not invited, angrily complained the conference would violate a peace accord stipulation that disputes should be resolved in a manner agreed to by both sides.

"I'm getting fed up with the idea that everything we do is a violation of the agreement, and everything the Palestinians say is in compliance with the agreement," Netanyahu said in Moscow at the end of a three-day visit.

Foreign Minister David Levy told Indyk yesterday that the Americans should not take part, an Israeli official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Indyk said U.S. consul Edward Abington would attend, but he assured Levy the gathering would not replace talks between Israel and the United States.

The United States reportedly pressed Israel yesterday to delay construction of 6,500 apartments for Jews in east Jerusalem, the sector claimed by the Palestinians as a future capital. Abington said the United States remains unhappy over the planned housing project and "never stopped discussing the issue" with the Netanyahu government.

The Palestinians won broad support yesterday within the U.N. General Assembly in New York as speakers from throughout the world called on Israel to reverse its decision on the construction. Indyk did not raise the issue in his meeting with Levy. However, he told Levy he hoped the West Bank territory to come under Palestinian control will be expanded significantly, a source close to the meeting said, also on condition of anonymity.

Markets propose eliminating price tags

By Jean McMillan
Associated Press

BOSTON — Supermarkets want to get rid of the price stickers on individual groceries as they go high-tech, but consumers say they need them to comparison shop and watch for scanning mistakes. At a hearing before lawmakers yesterday at the Statehouse, supermarket industry officials said paper labels make for inconsistent pricing and added labor costs. That ultimately leads to higher prices for the consumer.

They are asking for permission to conduct a two-year pilot test in which they would replace stickers in about a dozen stores with an electronic shelf label. The new labels, similar to a digital clock, would display a product's price on a small screen mounted to the shelf.

Because those electronic labels would be updated at the same time a store's price-scanning system is updated, there would be little chance of discrepancies between the shelf price and the register price.

"There's virtually no chance for a manual error," said Paul M. Patrick, vice president of ERS, a Connecticut-based company that makes electronic pricing systems for supermarkets.

Patrick also argued that Massachusetts is behind the times: 44 states do not require individual pricing. Stop and Shop uses the electronic pricing system in 34 of their stores in Connecticut. But some, including the man who authored the law to require the individual pricing, say the new system would take away a shopper's ability to compare prices and add up what they are spending as they travel up and down the aisles.

They also argue it would make shoppers less aware of prices in the home where the product would no longer show a price. Edgar Dworsky, a former assistant attorney general in the consumer division, now with the Massachusetts Consumers' Coalition, said he helped draft the original law calling for the individual pricing in 1987.

He said he would be in favor of stores using the electronic pricing on shelves, but not at the expense of individual pricing. He said a survey done by the coalition supports this idea. A few shoppers asked yesterday about how they felt about the proposal seemed to echoed the survey results.

Michael Goes, 43, of Lowell, a stock clerk at a computer manufacturing company, said he doesn't want the prices on items eliminated.

"I think it's easier. I would like both. I go with basically what's on the box itself. There are many times they run a different price, and it's not usually what it says on the shelf," he said.

"I would probably prefer it on the box. In case I don't remember what the price was on the shelf, I could always pick it up and look at it," said machinist Bruce Herrick, of Billerica, 39.

Christopher P. Flynn, president of the Massachusetts Food Association, said a typical store has 25,000 items and has more than 3,000 price changes a week. He said stores would be more apt to put items on sale if they could just press a button and not have to affix all new labels and signs indicating the sale price.

Florida prepares as 300 criminals get out of jail

By Lisa Holewa
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Mitchell Sexton fatally stabbed his father with a double-edged knife and used an electrical cord to hang the body from the handle of an exercise bike.

Norman James Eastman beat a 2-year-old to death for vomiting in his Corvette, punching the child so hard that the youngster's bowels ruptured.

Johnny L. Yearby led a gang of teens who cornered a homeless man in a courtyard and beat him to death with a baseball bat as he yelled, "Why are you doing this to me?" They picked over his body, even removing his shoes to look for money.

The men were among 300 rapists, robbers and other felons freed this week from prisons across the state in one of biggest mass releases of violent lawbreakers in Florida history. Two hundred more will probably be released on Monday, and an additional 2,200 will go free in the coming months and years.

The convicts left prison on Tuesday because of a U.S. Supreme Court decision last month that restored "gain time" — time off that the state automatically granted to prisoners to relieve overcrowding, then took away.

"A hell of a lot of innocent people are going to be robbed, raped and murdered," Lee County Sheriff John McDougall said yesterday. "How many people are going to have to die in order to pay for this blunder?", .

Four killers from his county in southwestern Florida were among the prisoners released, including Sexton, who was sentenced in 1988 to 22 years for murder.

Corrections Department officials hurried yesterday to notify local police about the freed convicts, while six members of the agency's victim-assistance office phoned and wrote victims who had asked to be told if their attackers ever went free. State law allows victims to ask that they be notified if a criminal is about to get out.

The inmates were given $100 and were either turned over to relatives or given a bus ticket to the Florida destination of their choice.

One of those released was David Bombay, who robbed gas station owner William True of Largo, Fla., in 1986.

"He shouldn't get out early, but as long as he stays out of trouble good for him," True said. "I believe in second chances. If they get a second chance, and they blow it, well, shame on them and back they go."

House Speaker Dan Webster, a Republican, said he will introduce legislation that would force any of the released prisoners convicted of another crime to serve all the "gain time" they were awarded in addition to whatever they get for the new offense. "These guys are hardened criminals and are going to revert to their old ways," he warned.

The state introduced "gain time" in 1983. In some cases an inmate could earn up to two months of credit for every month served. About 4,000 inmates who earned gain time had been released by 1992.

State Attorney General Bob Butterworth revoked automatic gain time in 1992 to prevent violent inmates from leaving prison early. The U.S. Supreme Court, however, ruled the state must keep its word.

ALANA GRADUATE STUDENT FORUM

"Beyond Ebonics"

A Conversation with

Dr. Orlando Taylor
Dean of the Graduate School
Howard University

and

Dr. Walter Wolfram
William C. Friday Distinguished Professor
North Carolina State University

Dr. Harry Seymour (Moderator)
Chair Department of Communication Disorders

Date: Wednesday, March 26, 1997
Place: Room 101 Campus Center
Time: 11:30 am - 1:30 pm

SPONSORED BY:

Afro-American Studies
ALANA Graduate Student Network
Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity
Communication Studies
Communication Disorders
Graduate School
Graduate Student Senate
Linguistics
Women of Color Program
English Department

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Celebrating Ireland and its heritage

Bob Dunn

So, what are you doing on St. Patrick's Day?

Let me guess. You and a bunch of your buddies will head off to the nearest bar, which if it wasn't before, will have suddenly "become" Irish overnight. It will be adorned with paper shamrocks and leprechauns, it will offer specials on Guinness, Harp or that perennial, distinctively "Irish" favorite, Budweiser or Natural Light dyed with green food coloring, a true Irish delicacy. The walls will have "Erin go bragh" written across them, and I'm willing to bet about half of the crowd will have no idea what it means.

You and your friends will get good and loaded, raise a few pints to the Motherland (whether or not you're of Irish descent) stumble home, throw up and spend all day Sunday nursing a hangover.

Well, if these are your plans, bully for you.

I used to enjoy St. Patrick's Day a lot more (in fact, there's one particular celebration in San Francisco that's singularly infamous among my circle of friends), but in recent years my sense of world consciousness and national pride has gotten the better of me.

The first place I noticed it was in store windows and ad campaigns across the country. Grinning, green-garbed, grotesque little dwarfs with red hair, buck teeth, big ears and little green bowlers atop their heads while guarding pots o' gold at the end of rainbows. Aside from Native Americans and the Irish, is there any other ethnic group that has to be inundated with stereotypical caricatures in the mass-market these days?

Do we see stereotypical portraits of Mexicans hanging from the windows of convenience stores during El Cinco De Mayo? Are we subjected to demonized sketches of Hasidim during Passover or Yom Kippur? Do we have to stare at disturbing, minstrel-esque pictures of African Americans around Martin Luther King Day or during Black History Month? We don't and shouldn't be, but apparently no one sees a huge problem with plastering leprechauns everywhere you look as a marketing tool.

The second place I noticed a problem was in steering the holiday away from national pride and a celebration of Ireland's patron saint and toward an excuse to go out and get s—faced, reinforcing the notion that all of those of Irish descent are a bunch of "drunk Micks."

Well, regardless of what cereal, soap and beer companies would have you believe, the sons and daughters of Ireland are not a grinning bunch of drunken leprechauns whose sole ambition in life is to become a tough-talking priest or a Boston beat cop.

We are the children of Kings and poet–warriors. We are the descendants of those proverbial "barbarians at the gates" who helped to topple the Roman empire. We are the keepers of wisdom and knowledge that was lost after the fall of Rome. We are the long-lost relations of those that were left to starve by the British occupiers who could never have been bothered to aid their own colony. We are the children of those who came to this country to find a better life for themselves and their families only to be told that they "need not apply" for work, or that both they and dogs were to keep off the grass simply because of their heritage.

We are part of an artistic and literary history that spans back to The Book of Kells, through the time of James Joyce and continues today with authors like Frank McCourt relaying the stories of their forbears to the rest of the world.

We're kindred to kings like Brian Boru and to patriots like Bobby Sands and Michael Collins, who dreamed of the day that Ireland could raise its sons and daughters out from under the thumb of British rule.

So, when Saturday night comes around, go ahead and celebrate. Raise a pint if you want, swill the green beer if you must, but don't let the revelry get in the way of the larger picture. While you're out, try to remember those who have gone before, that the day should be about pride in one's ancestry and one's heritage. Remember the continuing fight for true Irish independence; that we are a proud people with a rich heritage; that we shouldn't have to have that heritage trivialized and ridiculed once a year, rather it should be revered and celebrated. Try and remember that when you're out Saturday night.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Where snakes slither to cool off

C. Taylor Connor

I must leave soon.

Scratch that — I must leave now.

This year's Spring Break couldn't have come at a better time for me and the majority of my friends and colleagues. With a departure for Arizona scheduled for 7 a.m. Saturday, I'll be one of the last of the fleeing to scurry to some sunny destination.

Yet even those leaving Thursday or Friday have already been dusted by people who jumped the holiday gun — hell, I know at least one guy who's already been to Mexico and back.

(Man, I can't imagine how his pals are going to explain that whole kooky Goodell thing to him.)

As for me, I'm bound first for Tucson, then to Phoenix for the latter half of my six-day retreat. Though a virgin to the Southwest, I became quite strangely and irreverably drawn to the premise of flying out to Arizona.

That is, of course, until I heard about the toilet bowl thing.

Now, my father only had one outward phobia — besides that of his children growing up too fast — of which I was acutely aware: the fear of snakes.

I remember watching him attempt to subtly cringe when the family went to see Raiders of the Lost Ark. When the Parent's Day visitors at Chestnut Hill Academy entered the science classroom, Dad always seemed to find the seat farthest away from the garter snakes' terrarium. And he always seemed to stay in the car or have an errand to run whenever I had to pick up fish food for my fish.

(Hey, smarty pants — yes, you would think it's pretty obvious that fish food would be for fish, failing to take into account that I have a little sister and little sibling conscience.)

But now I think I owe the big guy an apology. While the average legless reptile on the East Coast is not a nasty- natured bearer of venomous death, those in Arizona are a totally different story.

Rattlers. Real live rattlers.

Rattlers, as I was informed by a friend who should have paid better attention to the saying "Ignorance is bliss," have this pesky habit of curling around the cool porcelain base of toilets when they overheat.

I'm not a man who doesn't understand that the laws of probability are on my side. Had I opted to camp out in a log cabin in Maine for optimal writing solitude, bear warnings most certainly would have come my way from a number of my New England chums. But at least there might be the opportunity to see that furry mother coming, perhaps giving me sufficient time to play dead or, more realistically, soil my khakis and collapse from a heart attack like the tough guy I am. That I could handle.

I am almost wholly assured, however, that even the most clever and undersized of adult black bears would be hard-pressed to slink its fat, hairy keister under and around the Tidy Bowl Man's kingdom without detection. This is not so in the rattler scenario.

> "When the Conner colon informs the Conner anus that the bowel bobsled team is ready to compete in the Poop Olympics, there is a tried and true series of events that must occur. I must first grab a magazine, preferably one whose spine I've not yet creased."
>
> C. Taylor Connor

When the Conner colon informs the Conner anus that the bowel bobsled team is ready to compete in the Poop Olympics, there is a tried and true series of events that must occur. I must first grab a magazine, preferably one whose spine I've not yet creased. Then, whether at home or away, I will lay down four strips of paper across the four corners of the toilet seat. Finally, I will drop trou and sit, and somewhat like a bathroom version of Captain Picard, I will allow Number Two to take the bridge.

